puerile negation as this, is, in fact, the fruit of combined forces. Earnest desires controlled by a strong will, powerful passions curbed by intrepid resolution, ardent enthusiasm guided by firm wisdom, manly energy steadied by a resolute purpose, warm impulses directed by unwavering principles —these are the materials out of which an equanimity worthy of the name is fashioned.

THAT BLESSED HOPE

By W. H. H.

Read II Kings 2

"Looking for that blessed hope" (Tit. 2:13). "There is laid up * * * a crown of righteousness * * * (for) all them that love his appearing" (2 Tim. 4:8).

In order that we may love his appearing it is important that the blessed hope of rapture inspire us. A study of the conditions preceding Elijah's translation in 2nd Kings 2, may reveal some steps essential to this "blessed hope."

1. Salvation from Sins of the Flesh (James 1:21).

Elijah went with Elisha from Gilgal" 2 Kings 2:1). Gilgal received its name from the fact that there the reproach of Egypt was "rolled away" by circumcision (Josh. 5:8, 9). There also they first partook of the Passover in the Promised Land (Josh. 5:10). It would seem, therefore, to commemorate salvation from the bondage of Egypt, a type of this world, and separation from all fleshly lusts and desires displeasing to God.

2. Placing Devotion to God above Home and Family Ties (Luke 14:26).

"So they went down to Bethel" (2:2). This place "was called Luz (meaning separation) at the first" (Gen. 28:19). Here Abraham finally literally obeyed God's comand, given in Gen. 12:1, to separate himself from his kindred; for here the strife between herdsmen took place and Lot withdrew toward Sodom (Gen. 13:6-9). It was here also that Jacob spent the first night of separation from his father's house and people, and where he found the place of "separation" to be the "House of God," "the gate of heaven." This marks a further step in consecration, where we let go of whatever of the loving ties of friends and kindred that may tend to hinder or obstruct spiritual growth. This is the evangelistic consecration.

Many shrink from this step. To be released from habits and the enticements of lust and evil is frequently desired; but to be separated from some essentially good things, and those we love and venerate, that we may go on with God, is a different matter. Do we stand the test? If so, we find the place a "Bethel," "House of God" and "gate of heaven."

3. Victories through Faith and Praise and Results Devoted to God Alone. Example, Acts 3:16

"So they came to Jericho" (2:4). Jericho stands for victories won by the shout of praise through faith, when there is not an outward indication at the time. Further, everything, man and beast and property was to be devoted to the Lord—absolutely nothing for themselves (Josh. 6:17, 18), not even the pride of being instrumental in the victory. A candidate for the "blessed hope" is expected to believe for mighty victories, and to give the shout of praise in advance; but absolutely all the fruits of the victories must be dedicated to God—not a "shoe lacthet" belongs to him.

4. Dead to All out of God (Gal. 2:20).

From Jericho they went to Jordan (2:6-8), which they miraculously crossed at a point near its mouth where it discharges into the sea of death There no natural life can endure—a place exemplifying the death of self, and life alone in God.

5. Go On Communing with Him (Gen. 5:24).

"And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked" (2:11). They have left the Land of Promise behind. Even the rewards promised in the word for faithfulness are no longer the motives for their journey. Their only thought, to commune with him and please him.

Please note in all this journey Elisha has accompanied. Elisha means, "God is salvation." You can rest assured our Savior is always a partner in all this journey; in fact he has gone before and now returns in Spirit to guide, comfort and encourage. And as "Enoch walked with God and * * * was not;" so may we trust that as we go on with him, the glory of his chariots will appear and we be caught away to meet him at his coming.

TEN THOUSAND PER CENT

"And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's, But he shall receive an hundred fold now in this time * * * with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life" (Mark 10:29, 30).

There are many who are troubled about what they will have to "give up" if they become Christians. Some may have to give up time, money, so-called friends, position, worldliness, and all conscious sin. It is wise to sit down and "count the cost."

It is also wise to sit down and count the gain, for our Lord promises "an hundred fold" for everything given up for him. There are many investments offered in this world, but none can ever yield as great a return; and many investments bring only loss, and sometimes eternal loss. Any good company that can pay ten per cent can easily find investors, but here is one that pays ten thousand per cent. "now in this time," and throws in eternal life as a bonus. In fact, besides eternal life it pays more than ten thousand per cent. The ten thousand per cent. is only the guaranteed dividend for this life. Who is there who has given up anything for his sake and the gospel's that will not be glad to testify that he has done "much more than this," and that the half can never be told? How can any one be held back from giving up all and accepting Christ?

It must be remembered that this wonderful promise is not made simply to those who give up, else there would be the fostering of a selfish spirit and many would yield just for the gain. Jesus says, "for my sake and the Gospel's," and his promise holds, and the ten thousand per cent. comes only when we do not have the thought of personal gain but of what we can do for him and his cause.

It is past comprehension and, in the light of this text, past computation to discover how any Christian can hesitate, even for one moment, to make any sacrifice or surrender for the sake of Jesus. But satan blinds the eyes of God's children as well as he blinds the eyes of the children of the world so that some hesitate, and some even refuse to yield all, and thus sell their birthrights for less than a mess of pottage.

We must not omit the two little words, "with persecutions." If you are really God's child and follow along your Lord's pathway, you must needs suffer that you may be conformed to him. Note also that the word "persecutions" is in the plural, which indicates not one trial, but many. God will make all the plurial trials an occasion for a greater percentage of blessing. These trials will but add salt and savor to all that he gives. They will also discipline and enlarge us and make us able to receive and appreciate all his ten thousand per cent. of blessings now and eternal glory hereafter. —Sel.

CAUGHT IN A NET

Many are caught in some net or snare of the enemy, and see no way of deliverance.

There are different kinds of nets and entanglements. There is one of indulgence in strong drink or drugs. There is another of lust. There is another of dishonesty. There is another of wrong companionship. There is another of hurtful reading. There is another of worldly and sinful pleasure. There is another of greed for gain and joining in the wild pursuits of the same. How many are the nets of satan, and how many are enmeshed in them! It is sad that some become so enmeshed that they do not desire to be delivered, and others, discouraged, feel that there is no hope of deliverance.

We bring you a mesasge of hope. Jesus came to bring "liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound." Call upon him. He will not turn you away. "Him that cometh * * * he will in no wise cast out." He will "make a way of escape" for you, whether you can see a way out or not (1 Cor. 10:13).

It is not too late to make a start Godward. God has a net. It is the Gospel net. Its meshes are such that he can reach you and hold you. He even casts his net right in the devil's net and snatches prey from satan. Yield to him, he will deliver you, he will forgive you all. Truly repent. He loves you. Trust him and he will save you now. Trust him and he will deliver "from the snare of the fowler," and he will restore your wasted years (Joel 2:25). He will make your life full of joy, because you are free. He frees you and you are free indeed (John 8:36).—Record of Faith.

THE HARDENING OF PHARAOH'S SEART

First and Secondary Causes

The reason of Pharaoh's fatal obduracy was that "the Lord hardened his heart." It seems to me that it is necessary, first of all, to recognize the Orientalism of this expression. It was a peculiarity of the Hebrew mind that it took no account of "secondary causes." This appears conspicuously in the Biblical account of Creation. The Western mind, following the scientific method, recognizes the operation of physical laws, and investigates the processes of the world's long and gradual evolution. The danger here is that we are apt to forget that physical laws are, in Dr. Martineau's phrase, simply God's "personal habits," and to rest content with mere "secondary causes." The attitude of the Oriental mind was precisely the opposite. It took no account of "secondary causes," and regarded creation as an immediate opperation of God. Where the man of science recognizes a long process of evolution, the Hebrew saw the fiat of Omnipotence. "He spake, and it was done; He commanded, and it stood fast" (Psa. 33:9). Of course, there is here no contradiction. It is merely a difference of view-point; and each attitude has its danger. If the modern attitude lends itself to a materialistic reign of law, the Oriental tended toward an irrational riot of the miraculous. Another instance of the Jewish disposition to overleap "secondary causes" is that frequent phrase, "The Lord spake unto me, saying." It does not signify a divine epiphany or an audible voice. A Hebrew had his perplexity resolved in a purely natural fashion—by some providential dispensation, the counsel of a friend, the illumination of prayer, or the like; and he recognized it as a divine message. His account of it was: "The Lord said unto me," or "An angel of God appeared unto me."

Now see how this applies in the case of Pharoah. The Hebrew historian ignores all "secondary causes," and refers directly to God. But there were secondary causes, and he actually indicates these. He says not only that "the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart" Exod. 4:21; 7:3, 13; 9:12; 10:1, 20, 27; 11:10), but that "Pharaoh hardened his heart" (8:15, 32; 9:34). Here are both the "secondary" and the "first cause." The "secondary" was Pharoah's wilful obstinacy, and the "first" was God's consequent judgment. When the historian says that "Pharoah hardened his heart," he takes account of the secondary cause; and when he says that "the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart," he overleaps the secondary in characteristically Hebrew fashion, and goes direct to the first cause. There is a precise and instructive parallel in the story of Lydia's conversion (Acts 16:14). There it is written that "the Lord opened her heart;" and if we ask why the Lord should have shown her this special favor and left other hearts unopened, the answer lies hard by, and it is that Lydia "heard," or rather "was a hearer of," the Apostles—that is, she attended regularly at the place of prayer and paid diligent heed to their teaching. Lydia opened her ears, and the Lord opened her heart; Pharoah closed his ears, and the Lord closed his heart.

This further you will observe, if you look at St. Paul's argument in Rom. 9, that he had a particular reason for quoting that Old Testament passage in all its grimness. He designed to beat down the arrogance of the Jews. They built their assurance of God's inalienable favor on the fact that they were children of Abraham. God had promised to be the God of Abraham and his seed after him, and he could not break his promise. The Apostle meets this by pointing to the rejection of Esau notwithstanding that he was a son of Abraham, and hence he infers the absolute sovereignty of God. "He hath mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth." Of course, he hardens only those who first harden themselves; and St. Paul would have made this clear had he been dealing with troubled souls and not with arrogant Jews.—DAVID SMITH.

PRAYER

Our Father, we commend to thee all whom we love, especially any that may be in any trouble or sorrow, pain or sickness of body or perplexity of mind, or distress of circumstances. Thou knowest the many sorrows that thy servants have to carry. Thou knowest of whom and of what each of us may be thinking. Be near to us as we wait before thee to forgive all our sins and to quicken and help us. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

VACATION NOTES

The brethren in Cleveland usually grant us a vacation once a year. With their usual kindness, they gave us vacation privileges this summer with place and time for our own selection. After due preparation, accompanied by son and wife, we left the city Monday, September 13, for Salem, O.

After a most enjoyable ride we arrived in Salem on time, and went at once to the home of Brother and Sister Chas. Moore. In every sense of the word, their home was our home while we were in Salem. We made day calls with Sister Ella Knowles and her father, Brother and Sister Townsend, Brother and Sister Buckman, etc. We enjoyed the brethren and sisters in Salem thoroughly. Brother Carey Buckman, a young brother, was under a small cloud, as he faces the prospect of a small surgical operation, but aside happy.

Let details alone. Persons who tell all they know are sure to tell a great deal they do not know. They tell tales, gossip, gabble, and talk, talk, talk; they speak of things they do not half understand, so they inevitably misrepresent matters which they discuss.

Persons who accept the hospitalities of a home, and repay the privileges enjoyed by unfriendly private criticism, tittle-tattle, and gossip, are ignorant of good breeding, defy the word of God, and are unfit for the society of God's people. A brother in love with the Lord Jesus Christ and his brethren would as soon have a skunk in his home as a gabbling, tattling visitor, who tells all she knows and guesses at or invents the rest.

The formation and proportions of the skull and bones of the ape most like man, are totally different from those of man. Will monkey-headed professors of different skeptical universities, please take notice? In the gorilla, the high crest on the skull, which is also found in the hyena, is absent in man. Again, in bulk of brain, there is an unbridgable gulf. If the capacity of the brain of the anthropoid ape be taken at ten, that of man, even in his savage state, is twenty-six; that is, nearly twice as much—a very important fact when it is known that any appreciable diminution in the brain of man is certain to be accompanied by idiocy.

"The gifts and calling of God are without repentance" (Rom. 11:29). In the Greek there is no noun in this text which corresponds to the word "repentance." The only nouns which occur in Rom. 11:29 are "gifts," "calling," "God." The two words, "without repentance," are used to represent one Greek word, and that word is an adjective plural—ametameleta, which means unrepentable. In the Greek of Rom. 11:29 the words are arranged in the following order: "(For) unrepentable (things are) the gifts and the calling of the Deity." It may be true that the gifts and calling of God have come to us independent of our repentance, as the superficial interpret this text to teach; however that may be, Rom. 11:29 does not tell us so. What the passage does teach us is this: the gifts and calling of God are things not subject to reconsideration: they are unrepentable, unchangeable, irrevocable things.

Do not get the habit of running to the doctor for every little ill. Doctors have very little power in healing disease. Nature alone can heal, therefore attend to cleanliness, wholesome food, outdoor exercises, etc. The best physicians are Dr. Diet, Dr. Quiet, and Dr. Merryman. If you get sick, send for one of these.

By correspondence and personal interviews, many brethren and sisters have enquired of us if their baptism was valid, as they were baptized into the "name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit." To all such we say: Since it was Christ's injunction that believers of the gospel should be baptized in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit (Matt. 28:19), and since he had "all power in heaven and on earth" to command, there is every reason for supposing that this formula of inducting men into the all-saving name was literally carried out by the apostles, the ones sent to do the work. "Baptized into Christ," and "baptized into Jesus Christ," phrases so frequently met with in the book of Acts, are only the abbreviated expression of the "name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit;" for Christ came in his Father's name, and was the name of the Father, manifested in the Son by the power of the Holy Spirit. In the one form the whole story of Christ is expressed in detail. It tells how the Father was manifested in the Son, first by his supernatural conception of the Holy Spirit, and second, by his resurrection and glorification by the same Spirit of the Father. After this amplified explanation, its repetition became useless, and accordingly in the book of Acts we have the matter expressed in a summarized form, which better suits the convenience of after reference, or description, "baptized into the name of Christ." In the actual administration of baptism, however, it is best to employ the amplified formula. This is only saying that the fuller and not the briefer form should have the preference. We always use a formula something like this: "Upon your public confession of faith in the gospel, consisting of the things concerning the kingdom of of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, agreeable to the commandment of Christ, you are hereby baptized into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, for the remission of your sins." "The things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" is a divinely inspired statement of the subject matter of the gospel (Acts 8:2), and we prefer it in its plentitude rather than some fragment about Jesus being the Son of God, or that Jesus is Christ. Half a loaf is better than none at all," to be sure; but why live on crumbs of the gospel when the whole loaf of unleavened bread God has graciously provided? And why use the formula, "baptized into Christ" when that name has been amplified as the "name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit?" The use of this elaborated form of "the name has the effect of keeping to the front; as a matter of initial apprehension, and makes conspicuous as a fundamental principle, the great fact that God was manifest in the flesh of Christ by the begetting power, and afterwards by the indwelling presence of the Spirit of "the Father, of whom are all things" (1 Cor. 8:6). To exalt Christ and extol him, apart from God his Father, is to ignore and belittle his Head—an unseemly thing to do, as unseemly as to extol and magnify man, apart from Christ, who is his Head (1 Cor. 11:3).

THE DEVIL: IS HE A PERSONAL BEING?
Article No. 13

Our Trinitarian friends tell us that there is only one God, the living and true God. In the same breath they tell us that there are three persons in the God head: the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one God, the same in substance, equal in power and glory.

We ask humbly for an explanation, how three persons can be one person and one person three persons, all being one and equal to each other. We receive this answer, "It is all a mystery." If it is a mystery to explain the Being who is one person and yet three persons, how will our friends attempt to explain the being they believe to be a person, a fallen angel cast out of heaven from the immediate presence of God who, according to their reasoning, is a person, and yet four persons in one? If it is impossible to explain "The Trinity," we are not surprised that they are so grotesque in their description of "The Quadrinity" or a personal devil, for in Rev. 20:1-3, he is described as "The dragon, that old serpent which is the devil, and satan, and bound him a thousand years." Now if satan is an individual being; how could he be a dragon, a serpent, a devil, and a satan? How could one distinct being be four distinct beings?

Some one may say, he assumed all these forms. This cannot be true literally. He cannot be a dragon and an old serpent, too. He must be one or the other; he cannot be both. When we recognize this principle as the Bible clearly teaches that "satan" is an adversary, and may present itself in the form of a man, an angel, or a condition of mind adverse to the spirit of a sound mind, we see the beauty of significance of the figure. When we realize that the devil is really the sensual part of man's nature, which the "old serpent" represents; and that no mere serpent tempted Eve, our minds begin to comprehend what satan really is.

The great struggle in the human heart is truth, represented by the messengers of Michael, overcoming the personal prinicples in man, lust represented by the serpent. The mission that Jesus came to fulfill was to preach and ultimately establish the kingdom of heaven here upon earth, and thus deliver man from the power of the state of mind adverse to righteousness, which condition is absolutely essential to his own happiness, and the happiness of all. "But seek you first his righteousness and kingdom; and all these things shall be superadded to you" (Matt. 6:33, Diaglott).

Study Paul's epistles. It is amazing the stress he lays upon the necessity of transforming our minds. All the time it is something about the mind, summed up in Rom. 8:7, 8, 9, 10. "Because the mind of the flesh is enmity to God: for the law of God it is not subject, nor, indeed can it be, those then, who are in a sensual state are unable to please God. But you are not sensual, but spiritual, because the spirit of God dwells in you. But if any one possess not the spirit (mind) of Christ, he is not of his. And if Christ be in you, the body indeed is dead as to sin; but the spirit is life as to evidence that the earth is a symbol of democracy is also found in the clay of the metallic image of Daniel, chapter 2, Job says: "I also am formed out of the clay (chap. 33:6). The last phase—the feet and toes of the metallic image, is a mixture of iron and clay. The clay symbolizes democracy, and the iron royalty. The United States, South America, France, and Switzerland, are all "clay" nations, with England and all of her colonies, more democratic than royalist. The clay of the image is broken to pieces by "the stone" that smites the image. By this we learn that the clay was formed into democratic nations. The counterpart to this prophecy is found in the condition of the world today, also that the "earth" in symbol is democracy.

BROTHER CONAWAY'S ARTICLE ON SPIRITUALISM REVIEWED

To the Editor of The Restitution,

Dear Brother: I am jotting down a few thoughts awakened by reading Brother Conaway's article on Spiritualism, in the hope that, if you find them useful, they may find a place in The Restitution.

Of spiritualism I know practically nothing and am writing on the assumption that our Brother's account of it is correct. It is his treatment of scripture that I wish to speak of, as that is the important thing.

Our brother after a somewhat detailed description of his subject uses these words (speaking of two intelligent beings): "One dominates and controls, the other is subjective to this control. Mediumship without mental domination is a scientific impossibility. Mediumship, then, we conclude is nothing more, nothing less than spiritual hypnotism." A little further on in his article he says: "In extreme cases he is wholly out of touch with his physical sensory organs and is then under absolute control of the operator's will."

Now of spiritualism all this may be true, but when our Brother applies this to the angels, and tells us that this is the mighty power that they employ in dealing with men, I feel that I must register a very grave dissent. He calls it the power of persuasion, but here he uses the wrong words: If I chloroform a man and carry him off a prisoner it is not true that I persuaded him to come.

From the garden of Eden to the last chapter of Revelation the Bible teaches that man's will is free. When men render to God free and willing service because they appreciate the glory and beauty of his character, and bow before him as an humble expression of the adoration of the heart, they give glory to God. This would not and could not be true if their actions were the result of angelic hypnotism, as explained by our Brother. I wish to say here that I do not think that our Brother meant to say just this; but the unfortunate thing is that he has said it; and though reluctant to criticize, I do not like to let it pass as the teachings of the Church of God.

In the garden of Eden we find that both angels and the serpent had access to the first human pair; but how can we accept the theory that they were both expert hypnotists, and could at will subject Adam and Eve to their absolute control? Would we not be forced to conclude, if this were true, that the serpent was the most expert operator? The results leave us no other choice. I submit they were not hypnotized by either angels or serpent; their wills were free.

Referring to our Brother's letter, we find him teaching that angels are spirits and spirits are angels. The bad angels, we are told, are devils. Do not let us make the mostake of going back to Eden, and because we find that the serpent is a devil (false accuser) and a very bad devil at that, of jumping to the conclusion that he is therefore an angel. This would be putting him in the wrong class. God classes him with beasts and cattle. He is therefore a beastly devil, not an angelic devil.

Now let us put the matter into question form:

Question—Where are the beasts and cattle of Adam's time?

Answer—All returned to the dust.

Question—Where is the serpent of Eden?

Answer—With the rest of the beasts and cattle of Adam's time—in the dust!

Referring to our Brother's statement that bad angels are devils, I think that he has overlooked a very important fact in this connection, that is: that the angelic time of probation is past. The good angels are deathless; the bad angels are all dead, long centuries ago! In proof of this statement, I submit the following.

2 Peter 2:4: "God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell." We read that God spared not his Son but delivered him to death. Again we read that he spared not the old world. In each case the expression means death; so when we read that God spared not the angels that sinned, I submit it indicates their death.

When our Lord tells us in Luke 20:36 that the angels are deathless, he takes no account of the angels that sinned, they having passed out of existence long before. If we deny this, then our Lord should have qualified his statement, restricting it to good angels only, else we have deathless sinners—something I cannot admit. From Hebrews 1:14 we learn that all the angels are ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for those that shall be heirs of salvation. If all angels are thus employed, certainly none of them are devils.

Now while I believe in personal devils and admit the possibility, though not the probability of a superhuman devil; I positively deny the existence of angelic devils. My reasons I have already given. All angels are deathless, therefore all angels are good; they are employed in the service of God, not in opposing him.

I think that a little more care on the part of brethren writing on this subject would prevent much misunderstanding. Satan means adversary, and devil means false accuser; these words are not names of individuals as James or John; they are character names, such as thief, liar, murderer, etc. They do not identify an individual, but rather they indicate a line of conduct. Now as a thief or a liar is always a person, so satan or devil are always personal. I quite agree wit hour Brother when he says that they have size, weight, color, can evolve thought,, etc.

Referring to Judas (John 13:2), the devil put it into the heart of Judas to betray Jesus. It is quite evident that this is a design that required thought; and we cannot have thought without a thinker. It might have been Judas himself that conceived the design, though the language seems to indicate that the suggestion came form without.

Luke 22:3: "When satan entered into Judas." Here the language is somewhat different. Satan got inside of the man. The orthodox immaterial devil might do this, but for the satan that has size, weight, color, and occupies space, it is more difficult! The language is slightly figurative, and it seems to me that a little common sense will help us out here. James 1:12 tells that every man is tempted when he is drawn away by his own lusts, and inticed. This is the source of temptation (not spiritual hypnotism), and it applies to "every man," which would include Judas.

When Judas joined the disciples he may have had friendly feelings toward Jesus, but he was a thief, and soon found there was not much money in the job; and Christ's teachings and pure life were a continual reproach to him, and soon developed hatred. When Judas indulged hatred and allowed it to rule in his mind, he became an edversary or satan. Satan entered into him when he allowed hatred to control his actions. We next find him going to the devil (the false accusers of Christ), and asking how much they would give for the apprehension of Christ. The devils were glad, and as they slipped the silver into his pocket they may have put some bad suggestions into his mind; such as, you can do it in the dark and make a safe get away, etc. Returning to the last supper he is pointed out by Jesus as a traitor. This was the limit; he determined to carry out his evil purpose at once; and the betrayal followed.

In all this I see no existence of a superhuman devil about whom we know nothing. The practical lesson that we emay learn from this is the danger of looking away in the distance for some superhuman devil, and never noticing the human devil right at our elbow. They are to be found everywhere. The most dangerous are those that get inside, those lusts for evil things. If we can thoroughly master these we are in good shape to overcome those without.

In closing I wish to say that I have tried to speak the truth in love. If any felt hurt at anything I have written, pray forgive me. I have tried to be useful to the household of faith. May our kind Heavenly Father give his blessing.

JOHN PARKER.

Death, according to popular theology, is a very desirable event, and yet none of its adherents seem to long for it! Although it is said to be the "friend" that Jesus sends to call us to his arms, they make frantic efforts to keep out of its grasp and remain in this world of sin and sorrow. Strange that they should prefer the worse rather than the better condition. The reason of it all is that this system of theology teaches that death is but a change: that when men die they are really alive, and so do not die at all. Now can a man be dead and alive at the same time? To ask the question is to answer it.—Messiah's Advocate.

Knowledge must be learned; it cannot be passively taken. Unless the mind works for its living, it will always remain poor; neither gifts nor legacies, neither houses nor lands can enrich it.

ABOMINATION

Extreme hatred; detestation; disgust.

For that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God (Luke 16:15). What is highly esteemed among men? Gold, silver, riches, and to be honored with a worldly office. Will God esteem thy riches? No, not gold, nor all the forces of strength (Job 36:19). The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever; the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether. More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold (Ps. 19:10). If I have made gold my hope, or have said to the fine gold, Thou art my confidence * * * I should have denied the God that is above (Job 31:24, 28). The trial of your faith is more precious than gold (1st Pet. 1:7). I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel (Acts 2:33). The tongue of the just is as choice silver (Prov. 10:20). How much better it is to get wisdom than gold: And to get understanding rather to be chosen than silver (Prov. 16:16). Receive my instruction, and not silver, and knowledge rather than choice gold, for wisdom is better than rubies (Prov. 8:10, 11). A little that a righteous man hath is better than the riches of many wicked (Psa. 37:16). They that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts. The love of money is the root of all evil (1st. Tim. 6:9, 10, 17, 18).

Soul, thou has much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall these things be which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasures for himself, and is not rich toward God (Luke 12:19, 21). So he that striveth for riches, and doeth anything whereby he is praised of man, is doing that which is abomination in the sight of God. When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him. Better is a little with righteousness, than great revenues without right (Prov. 16:7, 8). They that are in the flesh cannot please God. We ought not to please ourselves. Let everyone of us please his neighbor for his good to edification. For even Christ pleased not himself (Rom. 8:8; 15:13). I please all men in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved (1st Cor. 10:33). Without faith it is impossible to please God (Heb. 11:6). Whoever does not please God is an abomination in his sight: whoever has no faith in God, nor the gospel, is abomination. All that do unrighteously are an abomination unto the Lord thy God (Deut. 25:16). If I pleased man I should not be the servant of Christ (Gal. 1:10). Every one that joins secret orders please men, but they cannot be the servant of Christ. Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whatsoever, therefore, will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God, and an abomination in his sight (James 4:4). If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me, before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love its own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you (John 15:18).

God is angry with the wicked every day. The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all nations that forget God (Psa. 6:11; 9:17). All these are an abomination unto the Lord; but they that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing; no good thing will be withheld from them that walk uprightly. They are highly esteemed of God, O, Lord of hosts, blesesd is the man that trusteth in thee (Ps. 34:10, 84:11, 12). He that turneth away his ear from learning the law, even his prayer shall be abomination (Pro. 28:9). If we please men we are abomination in the sight of God. But if we please God, we do that which is not esteemed among men. But it brings to us the greatest of all rewards, "eternal life."

CHIPS

Every time the closet of your neighbor is open a little do you strain your neck to peek, and then afterward strain your tongue in talking about it? Do you ever stop to think that some day a tragedy may take up its abode in your home? Can't you think that some day the tongue of slander may cut you like a sharp sword, and the whispers of your neighbors be like gall to you?

How glad and frisky the dog looks when he is kindly spoken to!

Friends may be born, but our own goodness will determine how long they will last.

Many a heart is hungry for kind words. They cost nothing.

Don't say "it can't be done." The chances are you will find someone doing it.

All followers of Christ in point of service should be up with the lark, not out on one.

It is much easier to teach twenty men what to do than to be one of the twenty doing it.

No difference how little we may love our neighbors we can see no reason why they should not have a kindly feeling for us.

ALMUS ADAMS.

EVIL SPEECH

Never believe, much less propagate, an ill report of a neighbor without good evidence of its truth; never listen to an infamous story handed to you by a man who is inimical to the person defamed, or who is himself apt to defame his neighbors, or who is wont to sow discord among brethren and excite disturbance in society. Never utter the evil which you know or suspect of another till you have an opportunity to expostulate with him. Never speak evil of another while you are under the influence of anger, but wait till your spirits are cooled down, that you may the better judge whether to utter or suppress the matter.

BIBLE TERMS DEFINED

SHEOL (Heb.). Found 65 times in Old Testament. Is translated "hell" 31 times, "grave" 31 times; "pit" 3 times. Some philosopher describing "sheol" says it is a place of quiet repose where all are conscious. The Bible says:

Feelings are a most important and necessary part of human nature. Out of them spring the joy and the beauty of life. But they never can yield their best results unless they are under the control of reason. Pope says, "The ruling passion, be it what it will, the ruling passion conquers reason still." He who succumbs to this rule within his breast must part with his reason, manliness, independence, and must forfeit the happiness and the power of conferring the happiness which comes from well-regulated social intercourse.

Excessive devotion to business may be best treated, not by attacking the excess, but by opening up the many claims of family and society, of health and general intelligence, of private wellbeing and public duty, that are inevitably left unfulfilled. If the absorbed man can but be led to appreciate the importance of these claims, and to realize his own relation to them, he will of himself cease to be absorbed.

Correct speech is such an indisputable mark of a lady or gentleman that it cannot be too often repeated that the true standard of pronunciation is one in which all marks of a particular place of birth and residence are lost, and in which nothing appears to indicate any habits of intercourse other than with the well-bred and well-informed wherever they may be found.

It is beautifully remarked that a man's mother is the representative of his Maker. Misfortune and mere crime set no barriers between her and her son. While his mother lives a man has one friend on earth who will not desert him when he is needy. Her affection flows from a pure fountain and ceases only at the ocean of eternity.

We ought not to wait until we feel right before attempting to do right. We ought to say kind words and do kindly acts deliberately, even when we should not say and do them instinctively and impulsively.

Faith, like light, should ever be simple and unbending; while love, like warmth, should beam forth on every side and bend to ever necessity.

Place before children nothing but what is simple, lest you spoil their tastes, and nothing that is not innocent, lest you spoil their hearts.

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John [illegible]); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:51-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of Rom. 10:14-17, and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke [illegible]), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

JUSTIFICATION BY FAITH

(Concluded)

Romans 3:25 contains help to a clearer understanding of this truth than is possible to obtain throught studying its definitions, for it opens the way for us to connect it with our individual life and experience, and thus obtain an intimate understanding of what God means by "justification by faith."

"Whom God has put forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood (belief in Christ's death), to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, throught the forbearance of God; to declare, I say, at this time his righteousness, that he might be just and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus." These two verses show that justification because of faith or belief in the teachings and life of Christ, is identical with "remission of sins that are past." A little reasoning shows us clearly the exact time at which this remission of sins that are past, took place. It was at baptism. Just the moment we submitted to the there initial steps leading to salvation, repentance, belief, and baptism, all our sins that were past, the commission of which placed us under the death sentence, were lumped together, and God remitted each and every one. As he says in Rom. 4:7, he covers them up; and in verse 8 he does not impute or count them against us; and in Isa. 43:25 he blots them out, or as David prays in Psa. 25:7, he remembers them no more.

In a few words, then, the moment we repent, express our belief in Christ, that is in his teachings, and render to him the first act of obedience, which he requests in the new life we are to lead, by being baptized, God says he overlooks our past sins; and this can mean nothing more or less than that he sets aside the sentence put upon us by law, and that we stand before him justified, accounted righteous, as free from the claims of the law as though we had never sinned.

We can base our claim to this freedom from the condemnation of the law only on this manifestation of God's mercy and love designated in words as "justification by faith." Works can never be the basis of man's claim to freedom from the death sentence (or to justification). Works can become such basis only when we can show and prove a perfect record of good works devoid of the least mistake. This, according to Rom. 3:11, 12, no one can do, so it is necessary to accept justification, setting aside of the death sentence, as an extension of God's mercy and favor. Humbly admitting that we are innately unrighteous, and that our right to life can be based only on God's accounting us righteous, is putting on God's "breast plate of righteousness," which Eph, 6:1-14 places among the necessary parts of the armor which can withstand the wiles of the devil.

God's dealing with Abraham is an example of justification by faith set before the world by God. Romans 4 read in connection with Romans 5:1 shows clearly that Abraham was justified by faith but the expression used most prominently in the account is "imputed righteousness," that is, "accounted righteousness." Abraham could not be pronounced by God as literally and truly righteous because he, like all human beings, was weak and and imperfect in his very nature; but God could and did account him as though he were righteous, and therefore free from the death sentence because he placed implicit trust and faith in God's integrity and promises, and God could no more betray such faith placed in him than a true human friend can betray the confidence of one weaker than himself. This unfailing faith and confidence in God very naturally resulted in "works" on the part of Abraham. Absolute confidence in a friend and service to that friend, are inseparable. If the friend receives no service we have no faith in him, no matter how loudly we may proclaim it.

The true meaning of "justification by faith" can be brought yet closer home by comparing our individual case to that of a transgressor of civil laws who has been brought to judgment, and then pardoned. It is proven beyond a doubt that he is guilty of transgressing a law of the land, and as far as the law is concerned, there is no hope of his escaping the penalty. The law is uncompromising, and extends not the least shadow of mercy or pardon. All the hope it can hold forth is "Do and live, or "Not do and die." This is justice based on the law according to the letter. It does not take into consideration motives, environment, natural, inherited weakness, or any thing but the commission of the wrong. But there is a higher form of justice which takes into consideration all that the law does not, and whose verdict is according to what is read in the heart and mind. This justice is based on love. Although the transgressor of civil law sees no hope or mercy in the law, he being actually guilty, yet there is one avenue of escape, and that is through the extension of mercy and pardon by the judge. If the judge, out of his kindness of heart and love for his fellow beings, extends pardon, generally on some conditions to be complied with by the wrongdoer, he has overruled the justice based on law and the criminal is free from the law. He is accounted righteous and treated as a righteous person in that the penalty no longer hangs over him. He is justified without works, or proof that he was right in reality.

Just so every accountable person stands at some time before the great judge, God, a condemned transgressor of his laws, and not one place in all God's laws can we find the slightest provision for escaping its condemnation, death. We would be hopelessly under law, under its condemnation, if it were not for the fact that God in his love for us extends to us his mercy by offering to pardon, forgive or justify us from our sins on condition that we place our whole faith or trust in him, which would mean a willingness to obey whatever he commands; for if we really trust anyone we are willing to obey implicitly all he says. The first three acts of obedience, which God requires of those who would seek freedom from the law are repentance, belief, and baptism. We may wonder just why God should make belief in his gospel truths and baptism conditions to be met before he will justify us, that is, set aside the penalty for past sins. Why should not true sorrow for our wrong doings and an honest desire to do better, be a sufficient condition to be met? But belief in the gospel and baptism are for our good. So why should we not obey them as well as repent? It is the knowledge of and belief in the gospel that is the very foundation of our faith or confidence in God. No other truths, and certainly no error, will germinate in our minds genuine faith in God. The gospel truths of the coming kingdom and resurrection also develop and increase our love for God awakened in our hearts through gratitude when he extended to us his merciful offer of justification by faith. It is from the hope embodied in these truths that we are given strength and courage to keep in the narrow way.

Baptism symbolizes or acts out in figure the great truths which give us hope, and when obeyed with a thorough understanding of its meaning, it serves to press home, as nothing else can, the great lesson that we must die to sin and rise to walk in newness of life and that death or crucifixion of self must begin now this side of the grave.

If God should justify us, that is, set aside the penalty for sin, and account us righteous without first requiring us to have a knowledge and belief of his gospel truths, it would be like putting out to ocean a repaired ship without any means of guiding it through the dangerous places. It would not be long until such ship would be in a worse condition than it was at first. It is the beautiful hope of the gospel, of the coming kingdom and resurrection that keeps us headed steadily toward the great goal, eternal life.

Wherein, then, does belief in "justification by faith" prove a means of salvation, a means of bringing us daily nearer the standard, which is reached in fulness only at the resurrection? Justification by faith rightly and fully understood, cannot help but awaken gratitude, for this truth, perhaps as no other truth can, reveals to us the greatest manifestation of God's mercy and love. Gratitude is bound to beget love, and love is God's great purifying principle. 1 Cor. 13 tells plainly what love enables us to do. From it we receive strength to do things and to sacrifice the flesh nature, which would never be possible if we simply knew God's laws which say, "Thou shalt," and "Thou shalt not."

As we learn more and more of what God has done for us, our gratitude and its companions faith and love, grow stronger and stronger, and the more willing we are to lay off more and more of the flesh nature. A belief on any truth can become a means of salvation only as the truth awakens and keeps alive gratitude and love. These principles are what makes the Christ mind active, and through this activity it grows and develops until we have the personality of Jesus instead of the personality of the first man, Adam.

ARE DEVILS THE FALLEN ANGELS?

(No. 1)

As much is being said about the personality of the devil, I wish to add a few lines to the discussion. I wish to be understood as believing that there is not only a personal devil, but plenty such beings; and it seems that most of your scribes are with me in this belief. Two passages are quoted as proof that angels fell or rather sinned:

1. "And the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day" (Jude 6).

2. "For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment" (2nd Pet. 2:4).

We should notice here that the Greek word from which "hell" is translated is "tartarus." This word is used only once in the whole Bible, and has been defined in various ways. According to Liddell & Scott, the word meant at first, "A dark abyss as far below hades as earth is below heaven;" later, "The nether world, generally, like hades, or the regions of the damned." T. S. Green: "In mythology, that part of hades where the wicked were confined and tormented." Mr. J. B. Rotherham translates "For if messengers that sinned God spared not, but consigning (them) to the lowest hades, to pits of gloom delivered them up, for judgment to be kept."

With this set of definitions, and this translation, those angels must be in a place where there is "no knowledge, wisdom, nor device," as the Bible puts it. Some have claimed that "tartarus" is our atmosphere, and that the sinful angels are floating around in it, and are the demons of New Testament fame; but I think the true definition of the word is against such an idea. The later Greek referred to by Liddell & Scott is the Greek of New Testament times, and that shows that tartarus and hades had the same meaning. Rotherham then must be about right in his translation of the word. The text also seems to confirm this view. They were "in chains," which means to be bound, according to definitions. They would not be very much bound if they are running over our earth and flying in the air. They are "under darkness," which fits the Bible definition of hades (Job 17:13). I have been unable to find in God's book a single passage that states that those angels are alive now. The tempter in Eden could not have been a sinful angel for several reasons:

1. He is called a serpent: "Now the serpent was more subtile than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made." Are angels serpents?

2. The curse placed upon the serpent: "And the Lord God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this." Done what? Caused man to sin, as all will agree. "Thou art cursed." Then the serpent was cursed, not because he had sinned as an angel, but because he had tempted Adam and Eve. Let us stick a pin here. One writer seems to teach that the curse placed upon the serpent was that he should be destroyed at the end of human probation. Then such a curse had not before been placed upon him, and if he was a fallen angel he was not sentenced to destruction before. It would seem strange that God would fail to sentence an heavenly sinner, when he is so strict about those of earth. If the devil was the serpent, he was not cursed till he had tempted our first parents; that was the cause of his curse, and hence the cause of his fall. All fallen beings are cursed in God's sight, and "the wages of sin is death," so the serpent must now die.

But let us read further: "Thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life." This would teach that at least one sinful angel is doomed to crawl around on his stomache; if the serpent was the devil, and the devil was a fallen angel; then he is not floating through the air as some teach. He also must be a dust eater, for "dust shalt thou eat." Do fallen angels eat dust? If so, they are far below fallen man. But the Bible does not say, "Thou are cursed above man," but above the beasts, which makes quite a difference; for the beasts have not man's curse resting upon them.

Some one will contend that the devil—the fallen angel—was in the serpent, but that will not help the case any unless God talked to the serpent when he should have talked to the devil; for the sentence was to the serpent, not something in him, just as the sentence was to Adam, not an immortal soul in him. To say the devil was in the snake is to say God said nothing to him at all; it was the serpent that talked to Eve. "And the serpent said unto the woman" (Gen. 3:4). Shall we change it to read, "And something in the serpent said," etc? Do you suppose such change would please God? Paul, like Moses, teaches that it was a serpent that tempted Eve: "But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtility, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity of the truth" (2 Cor. 11:3). Then let us leave it as God does, and be absolutely safe.

In Revelations twelve we read: "And there appeared another wonder in heaven; and behold a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads. And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth." "And the great dragon was cast out, the old serpent, called the devil and satan, which deceiveth the whole world; he was cast out into the earth, and his angels with him" (verses 3, 4, 9). Here you may say is the devil cast out of heaven, and his angels with him, and he is called the old serpent; this is positive proof that he and his angels fell from that high estate. But be not so fast, dear brother. If this is your devil, and he is a fallen angel, he is a seven headed and ten horned monster, with a tail large enough and long enough to drag one third of the stars of heaven; and if that large, how could he get into Judas (Luke 22:3)? Eating dust must agree with him. John gave the book of Revelations to show God's people things to come, not things of the past (Rev. 1:1). And here we have proof that this serpent had not been cast out of heaven when John wrote the Revelations; and this makes it clear that the angels that sinned, mentioned by Jude and Peter; for these were not yet cast out. But if Adam and Eve had seen a seven headed, ten horned monster like this, I doubt if they would have tarried very long to converse with him; they would, if like their decendants, get away as fast as their feet could carry them. The dragon never existed; it was only a symbol, and represents Paganism under the Roman Empire. In the 20th chapter, we have the same symbol except it is there bound with a great chain, and cast into the abyss, or out of the earth, not hades where the sinful angels had been cast. Then the proof so far is that the devil of Eden and Revelations is not a fallen angel. The angels mentioned by Jude and Peter were bound when cast out, but this dragon devil is to be bound at the beginning of the thousand years of Rev. 20. That is, one is now bound; the other is to be bound. Then they are not the same beings; they could not be.

J. J. HECKMAN.

THE FISKE—MOORE DEBATE

Proposition: Man is wholly mortal and is unconscious in the interval between death and the resurrection.

John Fiske, Jr., affirms. J. H. Moore, denies.

Brother Fiske's Fourth Article

Is man a soul? "Every soul that will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed" (Acts 3:22). Here man is called a "soul." If he is a soul, was he not a lifeless one before the infusion of the breath, and a dead one after its withdrawal? If the breath did not make Adam a "living soul," what did? The Hebrew word for soul is nephesh chayiah. It occurs thirteen times in the scriptures; eleven times applied to beasts and twice to man. Are we then to conclude that animals have immortal souls? We must, if nephesh chapiah means immortal spirit. "Let the earth bring forth nephesh chayiah after his kind" (Gen. 1:24). Here the brutes are said to be "living souls." Here is Coverdale's rendering, "Let the earth bring forth the living souls every one after his kind, cattle, worms, and what has life upon the earth." Do you desire other "quotations?" Rev. 16:3 says these souls "died," and we must accept it. One meaning of soul is body. Listen: "There were certain men who were defiled by the (meth nephesh) dead body" (Num. 9:6; also 2 Chron. 20:24-25; Psa. 79:2; 110:6). If chayiah nephesh means living soul, then meth nephesh would mean "dead soul." The noun, "nephesh," is the same in either case. The difference is in the meaning of the adjective which modifies the noun, soul. In all these texts where "dead body" occurs, read "dead soul," and you have the idea as expressed in the Hebrew. Have the dead two souls; one dead and the other alive? "There is a natural body * * * and so it is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul." Paul here teaches that a "natural body" is a "living soul;" do you accept it? Josh. 11:11 says these souls are "destroyed," and I ask you to believe the record.

Your statement about "conjunctive word" in Josh 11:11 is mysterious. Explain. That man as far as life and consciousness is concerned is in the same state as he was before creation, Psa. 146:4 plainly teaches. His breath goes to God, and he returns to dust, and all his thoughts perish. No more thinking for him. If the spirit is a person, then did not Adam pre-exist for his spirit came from God (Eccl. 12:7) I might add that the spirit could never "return" to God unless it came from him. Return means to go back again. "Breath did not establish consciousness." Rev. 11:11. Did not the "breath of life from God" restore these prophets to life and consciousness? Is there any thing else spoken of as entering them. Why is the immortal soul left out? "Do not find ruach in Ecc. 3:19; 12:7," yet it is there just the same, and my argument holds good. "The body does not think." Then is it not wrong to say it no longer "envies, hates, loves, nor knows," if it never did exercise those functions? "It has a thinker." If so, it is the "thinker" that exercised these functions, and hence in death has lost them, and not the body. "He farms with a stick." Who is the farmer, the "he" or the stick? "The body knows with the spirit." Who is the thinker, the "body" or the spirit?" The sentences are similar in construction. If it is possible to "impair the spirit so it can not think" through some fault of the brain, then when the brain is destroyed, can it think? "David fell on asleep;" was he in heaven? "David is not ascended into heaven" (Acts 2). If not him, then no one.

The departed spirit is not asleep for the reason it is the breath. "Spirit of God in my nostrils" (Job 27:3). This "spirit of God" returns to him. It is not a person, for it is in the "nostrils." "Heaven is in hades." "Hades was cast into the lake of fire." Is not your paradise destroyed? "Fallen asleep in Christ is perished." This and the other results spoken of are all based upon the proposition, "If Christ be not raised." So the points you raised do not destroy my arguments. If all the saints before Christ were "asleep in heaven" how could they "perish" if Christ's body be not raised? Were they not eternally saved? Paul teaches to have "Christ in you" is to have "the hope of glory." Then to have "the hope" in us is to have Christ. This "hope" to the consecrated Christian is renewed daily. Christ personally dwells in heaven. It is "by faith" he dwells in us (Eph. 3:17). And it is this "faith" or "hope" that is "renewed" (Col. 3:10). If the inward man is the soul immortal, would it need renewing? If the spirit is immortal, then the wicked have him. But where are they said to have him? Its always "inner man," never men; why is it never in the plural? In speaking of Psa. 6:5: do you think that sheol means the grave? Num. 3:10; "me" stands for nephesh, hence it is proper to render it "soul" as in the margin. "Let my body die;" would that not prove the mortality of the body?" "Let my soul die:" would that not prove the mortality of the soul? All die, hence, Jno. 11:26 has no reference to the natural death. There is a second death beyond the resurrection for unbelievers. But the death James alludes to is the second death. Ezek. 18:19 and Jas. 5:20 are to be taken literally. To the righteous it "has no power," for they then shall "never die." If a sinner repents he will not die the death. The Hebrew word for soul is Nephesh, and is rendered "man" (Ex. 12:16); "pleasure" (Deut. 23:24); "fish" (Isa. 19:10); "mind" (Gen. 23:8); "heart" (Ex. 25:9); "creature" (Gen. 1:21); "body" (Lev. 21:11); "person" (Gen. 14:21); and "life" (Gen. 1:20).

Try to read "immortal soul" instead of these renderings, and note the results. Beasts have souls (Num. 31:28; Job. 12:10). Souls are "born" (Ex. 12:10); "die" (Ezek. 18:4); Go to the grave (Psa. 89:48); raised from there (Acts 2:31); have blood (Jer. 2:34); "breath" (Josh 11:11); are slain (Josh. 10:28); "eat" (Lev. 7:20); "expire" (Job 31:29, margin); "burnt" (Isa. 47:14, margin); "fast" (Psa. 35:13). But the soul is never said to be immortal. The soul goes to the grave (Job 33:18—28—30; Psa. 16:10; 30:3; 49:15; 89:48; Isa. 38:17; Acts 2:31). What an imposing array of testimony! In our next we'll pursue the scriptural use of Spirit.

Mr. Moore's Fourth Reply

Mr. Fiske says, "Is man a soul?" Answering, I will say, when spoken of as an individual, as the whole man, he is sometimes called a soul, as in Gen. 2:7; Prov. 25:25, Isa. 58:10; Ezek. 22:25; Rom. 13:1. These passages speak of him as an individual, as both soul and body together. We will try a passage or two, and see if the "man," as Mr. Fiske speaks of him, is the "soul." "And what his soul desireth, even that he doeth" (Job 23:13). "He," who? As Mr. Fiske is trying to display some of his scholarship, I want to ask him if this "he" doesn't refer to the one that obeys the first party. If so, the second party, body, obeys the first party's desire, and the first party, the "soul," "desireth," and "he," the body, "doeth."

If I am wrong, please correct me. I could refer you to a great many passages, but will only ask you to explain the following: Psa. 34:22; 62:1; 103:1; 104:1; 116:7, 8; Matt. 10:28; 16:26; Mark 16:34; 1 Thess. 5:23; Heb. 4:12. Please give us an exegesis of these passages. Your question, "is man a soul?" If you speak of the body, no; but he has a soul, according to the above passages. And that the soul is not the body, nor is it the breath.

You ask "If man was not a lifeless soul?" No, he was not. He had no soul or spirit till he began to live. A man with your ability, if you will stop to consider, will see that the broad sense of the word "death," is separation. The breath gave life to the animal part of man, the body, but did not make the spirit. And you want to know "If the breath did not make Adam a living soul, what did?" Answer, God did.

My worthy opponent is interpreting the Hebrew for you and trying to make you think according to my claims, the animals have "immortal souls!" I am inclined to think we had best leave out Hebrew, Greek and Latin in our debate, and use our own language. Let us use the interpretation of those who are better scholars than I am, and fully as good as my worthy opponent. If we cannot get the evidence from the translation and evidence of scholars known by the world we had best stop our debate. But I can get plenty of evidence on my side, translated before my opponent was born, hence, I have no inclination to stop till we run the propositions to a finish.

He brings in his Hebrew, and applies it wrongfully. I am going to call on Mr. Fiske to try his "nephesh chayish" with 1 Thess. 5:23 and Heb. 4:

I admit beasts are living souls, or have brute intellect. But their soul, or spirit is not immortal. The brute was created after their various kinds, not immortal. And man after his kind, and is immortal. "Living" and "ever living" doesn't mean the same. Mr. Fiske says, to use "body" instead of "soul," and you have the idea expressed." Let us try it. "Destroy both soul and soul" (Matt. 10:28). "And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one (body) soul." That your (body) soul and body be preserved" (1 Thess. 5:23). If you can give sense in the above passages by using "body" where "soul" is used, let us have your sense.

You say, "his breath goes to God." I deny it, and call for the chapter and verse. The spirit did come from God, but it is not the breath. Therefore the spirit returns to God, but the breath goeth forth, or back to the atmosphere that we breathe (Psa. 146:4).

If the body does not think, and I agree with you that it does not, what is its thinker? When the body's thinker is gone from it, and the body is dead, and the dead know not anything. The man and beast have "all one breath," but man's spirit goes up, and the beasts spirit goes down. (Eccl. 3:19). My opponent has strained his points and twisted them around, claimed the insufficiency of God's word, and therefore, has to deny the difference Solomon makes in spirit and breath. Mr. Fiske in trying to prove that the spirit is the breath, brought a wrong proof text when he refered to Job 17:3. He quotes a part of it to prove his point, and leaves out the part that condemns him. He quotes this part, "Spirit of God in my nostrils." I suppose he aims to prove by this, because it is in his nostrils, that it is his breath. Now let us have the whole verse. "All the while my breath is in me, and the spirit of God is in my nostrils." Will you please answer me whether the spirit or breath is the same here, or not.

Your arguments on, "Fallen asleep in Christ are perished," prove nothing for what ever. The purpose of this language is, that if, the Sadducees claims were correct, the Apostles' arguments were false (1 Cor. 15:18). All kinds of birds, beasts, and fish, including man, have an animal life. that is sometimes called "soul." Because all these have a life, that man could not give.

You say Jno. 11:26 has no reference to the natural death. It doesn't matter what death it refers to, it is a life they had at the time of their existence here on this earth; hence, if it doesn't die it is immortal, which is never dying, lives on and on. I am glad to see you admitting, and trust by the time we get through, you will accept the whole truth.

You are correct, the second death hath no power over the righteous, for as Christ said, "whosoever believeth in me shall never die." We believe while on earth, therefore, there are some here that will never die.

EXPOSITION OF 1 PET. 1:4

It has been a question in some minds how to understand the phrase, "reserved in heaven," thought to be applied to the inheritance, etc., in 1 Pet. 1:4. The translation of this passage from the original is very defective. It will be seen in its true light by the following translation of it, which is from the Syriac by Prof. Murdock, which is the "oldest translation of the New Testament extant:". "Blessed be God, the Father of our Lord Jesus the Messiah, who in his great mercy hath begotten us anew, by the resurrection of our Lord Jesus the Messiah, to the hope of life, and to an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and unfading, which is prepared for you in heaven; while ye are kept by the power of God and by faith, for the life that is prepared and will be revealed in the last times."

The "hope of life," is the matter under consideration, and we are begotten to it by the resurrection of our Lord Jesus the Messiah; but the apostle, unwilling to be understood that this "hope of life" was all the saints quickened to, by the resurrection of Jesus, adds: "And to an inheritance, incorruptible, undefiled and unfading!" And then, concerning the "hope of life," affirms, "it is prepared for you in heaven." That this is the true idea of the text, is proven by the language of the next verse, which is: "While ye are kept by the power of God and by faith for the life that is prepared, and will be revealed in the last times." This is in perfect harmony with what Paul said to the saints at Colosse: "Your life is hid with Christ in God," hence it is "reserved," and "when Christ, who is our life, shall appear in glory." Therefore, we are "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savious Jesus Christ," to consummate all the "promises made of God unto the fathers," and to give us life and the kingdom.

FILIAL LOVE

There is not on earth a more lovely sight than the unwearied care and attention of children to their parents. Where filial love is found in the heart we will answer for all the other virtues. No young man or woman will ever turn out basely, we sincerely believe, who has parents respected and beloved. A child affectionate and dutiful will never bring the gray hairs of his parents to the grave. It is seldom the case that a dutiful son is found in the ranks of vice, among the wretched and degraded. Filial love will keep men from sin and crime. There never will come a time, while their parents live, when their children will not be under obligations to them. The older they grow the more need will there be for assiduous care and attention to their wants. The venerable brow and frosty hair speak loudly to the love and compassion of the child. If sickness and infirmity make them at times fretful the younger folk should bear with them patiently, not forgetting that time ere long may bring them to need the same care and attention. Filial love will never go unrewarded.

It is one of the most promising traits of human nature that heroic unselfishness always enkindles the enthusiasm of mankind.

EDITORIAL

Not to go to church on Sunday is to let what one likes to do master what he ought to do, and is as if the office boy should boss the manager.

Don't worry about your slips and falls, indiscretions and mistakes, my brother. Only worms are free from falls, and they have to crawl all their lives.

It is all right to have an aim in life. But many brethren "aim" to subscribe for The Restitution, and to help the truth in many other ways; but they spend so much time in "aiming" that the game always gets away.

We are sorry to report that three of our number are sick and in hospitals: Sisters Lorie Ross, Bessie Boyle and Hattie Sanford. We miss them from our meetings and pray God to soon give them back to us in average health.

Value and valor, as has often been been pointed out, are derived from the same root, and therefore it is something more than a flight of the imagination to say that which is most valuable is that for which men will dare most. Conversely, that which costs nothing is nothing valuable.

In adverting to the doctrine of endless torture, Dr. Dick candidly expresses his conviction in these words: "When I consider the boundless nature of eternity, when I consider the limited duration of man, I can scarcely bring myself to believe that the sins of a few brief years are to be punished throughout a duration that has no end."

Bro. A. Wallace Mason, of 28 Clinton Avenue, Fredonia, N. Y., writes: "I am disengaged until April and I can, if the Lord wills, go anywhere in the United States and preach the gospel. I have had long experience in connection with the truth, and can speak every night when desired. I am also an old hygiene physician."

The brother whose sole claim to Christianity lies in the orthodoxy of his faith, and who expects to be saved on that account alone, substantially pleads his case before the Lord in words like these: "It is true, O Lord, that I have violated all thy commandments; but then, I held no absurd or heretical opinions in regard to them. I have done wrong, but have believed right. Save me for the correctness of my faith."

Jerusalem may yet become the most important city of the whole earth. If a world-peace court should be established there, it would spring into prominence at once. Mohammedans, Jews and Christians all reverence Jerusalem as a holy city. It is the only city in the world that the three great religions of the world reverence alike. A supreme court among the nations established there would command special reverence throughout the world.

Love, amid the other graces in this world, is like a cathedral tower, which begins on the earth, and at first is surrounded by the other parts of the structure. But at length rising above buttressed wall, and arch, and parapet, and pinnacle, it shoots, spire-like, into the air, so high that the huge cross on the summit glows like a sparkle in the morning light, and when the rest of the pile is enveloped in darkness. So love here is surrounded by the other graces, and divides the honors with them; but they have felt the wrap of night and of darkness when it will shine luminous against the sky of eternity.

The Editor and Sister Huggins spent a very happy day in Salem, O., Sunday, November 7th. We always return from Salem feeling built up and encouraged in the way of life; for while the believers there are few in number, they are all lovers of the truth. While there, we had the pleasure of baptising two intelligent believers of the gospel: Namely, Mrs. Martha Coy and her son, Ralph W. Coy, both formerly Disciples. There is still another item of interest in this report which it gratifies us much to give, and that is that Sister Coy's husband is learning the truth rapidly, and consequently our sister indulges the good hope of soon having him with her as an heir of eternal life and the kingdom of God. Sister Coy lives hard by Bro. and Sister Moore, who have rendered her and her son valuable assistance in arriving at an accurate knowledge of the things concerning the kingdom and name of Jesus Christ. We can see a general improvement among the brethren and sisters in Salem, both in earnestness and diplomacy in publishing the gospel of life among those who know it not; and we pray God to bless them copiously in all their efforts to glorify him, and to assist in the great work of taking out and preparing a people for the coming of the Lord.

WHAT LANGUAGE DID ADAM SPEAK?

Prof. Bush, the distinguished Hebraist, in his "Notes" on Gen. 11:1, "And the whole earth was of one language, and of one speech," has the following interesting remark:

"The language there spoken therefore was in all probability the language of Noah, and the language of Noah can scarcely have been any other than that of the antedeluvians; and that this was the Hebrew cannot well be doubted if we consider that the names of persons and places mentioned in the early history of the world are as pure Hebrew as the names of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, or those of Solomon and Malachi. Thus Adam, Eve, Cain, Seth, Abel; Eden, Nod, Enoch, etc., are all words of purely Hebraic form, structure and signification, and there is not the least evidence of their being interpretations, as some have suggested, of primitive terms."

NOTHING TO DO

"If Christ has died for me, what have I to do? I have nothing to do. Suppose I owed a man some money, and that I was put in jail until I could pay, and that some kind friend came and paid my debt, and then went to the governor of the jail and said, 'Haven't you a prisoner here called Richard Weaver?' 'Yes.' 'Well, I have paid his debts. I have the receipt here and I want him to come out.' What should I have to do? Why, I should have nothing at all to do, except to thank him * * * And so there is nothing whatever for you to do, for Christ has done it all and God commendeth his love to us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us. Christ has paid all the debt, and now it is finished; * * * and Christ is become the end of the Law for righteousness to every one that believeth * * * Glory be to God, everything has been done by the blood of my dear Savior * * * Justice has been satisfied, and pardon has been purchased for the chief of sinners. The Lord help you to believe it. You must take God at his word" (Editorial in The Witness).

Nothing to do! Then why did Peter on the day of Pentecost, command the inquirer to "repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins?" When they inquired, saying, "What shall we do?" why did he not answer, "You have nothing whatever to do, for Christ has done it all. Christ paid all the debt?" Nothing to do! and yet Saul of Tarsus was exhorted by Ananias to arise and be baptized and wash away his sins, calling on the name of the Lord. "Nothing to do!" and yet Paul says to the Romans: "Know ye not that * * * his servants ye are to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness * * * Ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered unto you. Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness" (Rom. 6:16-18). Paul says, in his letter to the Hebrews, that Christ "became the author of eternal salvation to all that obey him" (Heb. 5:6), and yet we have nothing to do! "Nothing to do," says The Witness. "Be not deceived," says Paul. Gal. 6:7, 8: "God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit, shall of the spirit reap life evelasting." Nothing to do! and yet we are exhorted by one Apostle to run with patience the race set before us (Heb. 12:1), and by another, to add to our faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity; to give all diligence to make our "calling and election sure" (2 Pet. 1:5-10). And finally, the Lord Jesus himself, the Redeemer, says to the redeemed: "Blesesd are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter through the gates into the city" (Rev. 22:14). And to his disciples and the multitude he said, in reference to do-nothing professors: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into Kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven." If we have nothing to do, why was the "slothful servant," in the parable of the "nobleman," condemned for doing nothing, and the other servants rewarded for doing what they could in the service of their Master? (Matt. 25:14-30; Luke 19:12-26).

"MORTAL RESURRECTION"

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I have just received and read The Restitution, and regret to see you refer to our belief in the mortal resurrection to judgment of those who are responsible to God, as one of some "reiterated Christadelphian fallacies." Being a Christadelphian, and believing your position in this matter to be entirely unscriptural, I am sorry I have contributed to the pages of The Restitution, and therefore, if you have not already commenced the publication in your paper of my article on "Preaching the Truth," I would like to ask you to refrain from doing so. If, however, you have already commenced the publication of it, I must request you to be sure to retain the headline, namely: "The experiences of a Christadelphian preaching the truth as it is in Jesus."

I regret to write this, but you can readily appreciate my position and how it would compromise my attitude toward the truth. I would be glad to discuss the question with you, for I am sure there is nothing more clearly taught in the scriptures than the mortal resurrection from the dead of those who are responsible. Assuring you that this is written with regret, and hoping you may see the matter as I see it, I wish to remain,

Your brother in the service of the Master.

WILL BROWN.

Editor's Reply

The above criticism is on an article in The Restitution of September 28, 1915, entitled "Emergence Versus Resurrection." Bro. Brown says be is a Christadelphian, and adds that he is "sorry" he has contributed articles for publication in The Restitution. His sorrow grows out of the presumption that contributing to our paper identifies him "with those who hold false doctrine." Perhaps the publication of the above letter will be sufficient intimation that the brother is not "identified" with us. Only two or three words more:

1. The articles by Bro. Brown on "Preaching the Truth" were being printed in The Restitution in serial form before the author requested us to "refrain from doing so." Their publication, therefore, with the author's full consent, clears us from all evil meddling in the matter. Soon as we find a natural break in his articles we shall stop printing them, out of deference to his request.

2. He requests us to "be sure to retain the headline, namely: "The experiences of a Christadelphian preaching the truth as it is in Jesus." Here again we have innocently crossed the desire of our brother; for in preparing the copy for the printer, we changed the word "Christadelphian" to "Believer." We hold as a principle of doctrine, that where the Bible speaks, we speak; where the Bible is silent, we are silent. We are not able to find the word "Christadelphian" in the Bible, either in English or the original tongue. The word "believer" is of frequent occurrence in the Holy Book, so we exercised the editorial right of substituting the word "believer," a scriptural term, for "Christadelphian," an unscriptural one. Christadelphian is a name without divine authority; some man must have invented it. We point blank refuse to allow any man, however good he may be, to have dominion over our faith (2 Cor. 1:24).

3. Bro. Brown's declaration espousing "mortal resurrection" is a surprise to us. His words are: "I am sure there is nothing more clearly taught in the scriptures than the mortal resurrection from the dead of those who are responsible." When we read this statement we could hardly believe our own eyes, for in The Restitution of September 28th, another Christadelphian wrote: "The coming forth from the grave is one thing, and the resurrection, either of life or damnation, to which they come forth, is quite another." This Christadelphian avers that the dead come forth from the grave mortal; and their resurrection afterwards, "quite another thing," confers upon them immortality. Editorial criticism of this "reiterated fallacy" called forth fire from Bro. Brown, as witness above letter. But in coming to the defense of his brother, he repudiates his brother's theology and denies his distinctions concerning emergence and resurrection; for while he believes in mortal emergence and immortal resurrection, Bro. Brown believes in "mortal resurrection." Christadelphians, from Dr. Thomas and Bro. Roberts down, believe in mortal emergence; there never has been and there is not one today, Bro. Brown excepted, but what believes in immortal resurrection. Bro. Brown is the only Christadelphian in the world who believes in "mortal resurrection." He is welcome to this unusual distinction.

4. Bro. Brown wants to discuss the question with us. Well, we are always ready to defend the truth, and have no objection to meeting Bro. Brown either in an oral or written discussion. As "mortal resurrection" is not a Christadelphian doctrine, we doubt if Bro. Brown could get a periodical published by his people to give room for the discussion. We, therefore, suggest an oral discussion conducted in part upon the Socratic Method. If a written debate is preferred, and room for its publication can be obtained in a Christadelphian paper, we shall be pleased to give space for it in The Restitution, provided the Christadelphians will accept Bro. Brown as a representative brother, and agree that he speaks and defends their faith in affirming "mortal resurrection." Bro. Brown will find, however, when he ascertains the general faith of the Christadelphians, that they will repudiate his theory of "mortal resurrection," and will stand bythe Editorof The Restitution in maintaining immortal resurrection for the saints.

BEREAN COLUMN NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

Edited by Leota B. Hanson, 3401 Magnolia Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Ye cannot serve God and Mammon. Jesus says: "No man can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

The above verse teaches that we cannot serve God and have our hopes set on the uncertainty of riches. The man who trusts inthe uncertainty of riches cannot serve God, because he cannot walk in his ways. The way to receive earthly things is not the way to receive heavenly things.

The man who loves and serves God will separate himself from all worldliness and pride; he will be heavenly minded and walk as near as possible in the paths of righteousness. Christ will be seen in his ways and heard in his words. The godly character will be conveyed to others through him. He will watch his thoughts, words and acts, and when he makes a mistake he will be sorry and ask God to forgive him, and try not to make the same mistake again.

Dear Bereans, let us examine ourselves to see which master we are truly serving. May we all serve God that we may be glorified and receive all things when Christ returns to the earth to make all things new.

Your sister,
JENNIE TOWNSEND.

Patience

In James 1:4 we read: "Let patience have her perfect work." And why? "That ye may be perfect, wanting nothing." I'm sure we find every day the greatest need of patience. We find it gives us renewed courage and faith to press on in our Christian journey toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Again, in James we are admonished to be patient unto the coming of our Lord; to watch and pray. How very pleasant to have our thoughts run in so pleasant a channel! Yes, to be watchful, to be prayerful and be patient. In such an hour as ye know not the Lord cometh. When we read of the patience of Job, through his trials and tribulations, and his wonderful faith and trust in God, we are led to believe it to be one of the greatest graces a follower of Jesus can have. In Acts 14:22 we read that we, through much tribulation, enter into the kingdom. Then we have great need of patience. Let us put forth every effort to grow in those graces. We also have the prophets of old, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, who have been in sufferings and afflictions, and through patience become victorious. So we find the apostles and disciples strengthened and helped through good works and patience.

Paul, especially, has given such beautiful letters of admonition to the Corinthian brethren, and to those various places where he was with them. 'Tis so comforting to read them; and all done through Christ and for him, and the good of mankind. May the good work continue.

A SISTER.

David and Goliath

The Philistines and Israelites waged war against each other. The Philistines, and also the Israelites, were on mountains and there was a valley between them. A champion walked out of the camp of the Philistines, whose name was Goliath; his height was sixcubits and a span. He had a helmet of brass upon his head, and had on a coat of mail; the coat weighed five thousand shekels of brass. He had brass upon his legs, and a target of brass between his shoulders. The staff of his spear was like a weaver's beam. His spear head weighed six hundred shekels of iron. A man bearing a shield went before him. He cried to the army of the Israelites to send a man to fight with him, saying: "If he be able to fight with me and kill me, then we will be your servants; but if I prevail against him and kill him, then shall ye be our servants and serve us."

When Saul and all Israel heard these words, they were afraid. Jesse, the father of David, told his son to take an ephah of parched corn and ten loaves to the camp of his brethren. He told him to take them to the captain and their thousand; to see how they fare and take their pledge. David rose early in the morning and, leaving the sheep with a keeper, went to the trench of the Israelites and shouted for the battle. As he was talking with his brethren, Goliath came and spoke the same as he had before. All the Israelites were afraid and ran from him, and they told David the king would enrich and give his daughter to the one who should kill him. David said he would go and fight Goliath and the Israelitestold him he was but a youth, and not able to fight such a great warrior; and David told how a lion and a bear took a lamb out of his father's flock. He told how he had hit the lion and knocked the sheep out of his mouth; and how, when the lion came after him, he caught him by the beard and killed him. He said if he had killed the lion and the bear, he would kill the Philistine who had defied the armies of the living God. David said as the Lord had delivered him out of the paws of the lion and the bear, he would deliver him from the hands of the Philistine. Saul told him to go, and the Lord would be with him. Saul armed David with him armor, and David said he would have to put it off because he had not proved it. He took his staff and went to the brook and chose five smooth stones, and took his sling and went to meet the Philistine. Goliath came, and a man went before him bearing his shield. He asked David if he was a dog and cursed him by his gods. He told David to come to him and he would give his flesh to the fowls of the air and the beasts of the field. David told him that he came to him, not with a sword and a spear and a shield; but he came in the name of the God of Hosts. David told Goliath that he would smite him, and the Lord would deliver him into his hands. He took a stone from his bag and slung it and hit the Philistine in the forehead and killed him. He cut off the giant's head, and when the Philistines saw their champion was dead, they fled and the Israelites pursued them. David took the head of the Philistine and brought it to Jerusalem; but he put his armor in his tent.

ALBERT WILLIS, 12 Years Old.

THE FIRE OF GEHENNA

The texts which speak of the punishment of the wicked in hell fire,where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched, are supposed by some to form an insurmountable objection to the doctrine of the final and utter destruction of the wicked. So far from that being the case, however, we conceive those very texts proven in the most conclusive manner that the wicked are "to be punished with everlasting destruction" so that "they shall be as though they had not been."

The original word in these texts translated hell, is Gehenna; a word, says Dr. George Campbell, that "never occurs in Septuagint Greek, nor in any classic author in the world." It was never employed by our Lord nor any of his apostles in addressing Gentiles—it was confined alone to the Jews—hence we are to look to that source only for the meaning of the phrase.

The word is derived from "Ge," which signifies a "valley," and "Hinnom," a man's name: "The Valley of Hinnom," south of Jerusalem, "once celebrated for the horrid worship of Moloch, and afterwards polluted with every species of filth, as well as the carcasses of animals, and dead bodies of malefactors, to consume which, in order to avert the pestilence which such a mass of corruption would occasion, constant fires were kept burning." (—Greek Lexicon.)

Whatever was cast into this fire was to be destroyed, not preserved: utterly destroyed. If any flesh fell outside the fire the worms devoured it, so that nothing there escaped utter destruction. In the time of our Lord's ministry the Pharisees used these circumstances to denote the punishment of the wicked. Does any one believe their original design in doing so could be any other than to express an entire extermination of the wicked. We doubt not, at first, that was the only idea that could enter their minds, whatever idea might afterwards have been attached to it by perverted imaginations. We conclude our Lord used the word only in its primary signification, which was that of utter destruction, and not preservation: and we do not see how a Jew could understand him in any other sense. This being the case, it is one of the strongest texts in the Bible to disprove the common theory of the eternal preservation of the wicked in indescribable torments. The impenitent and incorrigible sinner, like the filth about Jerusalem, and the dead bodies of animals and men, if not entirely consumed and destroyed, would keep alive the plague in the universe; hence, they shall be "cast into the fire of Gehenna—hell fire;" or be utterly and totally destroyed: therefore, fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in Gehenna—hell.—(Matt. 10:28). Just so certain as the filth about Jerusalem, and dead carcasses were utterly consumed in the burning fire of the Valley of Hinnom, so certainly will God destroy the entire being of the incorrigible sinner, so that the universe shall be clear of these plague spots; then shall be fulfilled that which is written. Rev. 5:13: "And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, blessing and honor, and glory and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever." Not a creature shall be left in cônscious existence but what shall join in ascriptions of praise to God and the Lamb. Glorious time—happy hour! May you and I, dear reader, be of that happy number.—Selected.

BURDENS

Mental burdens will be far more easily borne if they are placed, as much as practicable, out of sight. When we gaze upon them they increase in size. When in our thoughts we emphasise and dwell upon them they sometimes grow almost unbearable. It is well enough to face trouble when it comes to us, to measure it and know its weight, that we may summon up courage and strength sufficient to endure it; but, this done, let us place it where it may no longer be in constant sight; let us carry it manfully and bravely, but not drag it to the light, to dwell upon its weight, and to claim sympathy for being obliged to bear it. When the emphasis of life is laid on the cheerful and attractive side its real burdens will be borne lightly, happiness will abound and be diffused, and the value of life be multiplied tenfold.

EXPERIENCE

To do the same thing over and over again for years without heart or improvement may indeed be called experience; but it is a profitless one. Some people who are proudest of boasting of their experience have the least reason to be proud of it. To have spent ten or twenty years in the same pursuit does not, of itself, entitle a man to respect and honor; but to have spent as many months in steadfast progress, to have brought to bear upon his employment all his past training, to have put into it fresh thought and renewed vigor, to have made experiments, studied methods, and planned improvements—that is an experience we justly esteem.

Old age is the night of life, as night is the old age of the day. Still, night is full of magnificence and for many it is more brilliant than the day.

No woman can be a lady who would wound or mortify another. No matter how beautiful, how refined, how cultivated she may be, she is in reality course, and the inmate vulgarity of her nature manifests itself thus.

When we are studying and pursuing excellence we are ensuring durability; and the more thoroughly the idea of durability enters into our work and guides our lives the more valuable will be the one and the nobler and happier will be the other.

A man or woman in high health, with good spirits and full of energy, is an immediate source of happiness to those with whom he or she associates. They cannot resist the infection; they are cheered, animated, and encouraged, their energies are called forth, and a positive good is conferred upon them without either effort or self-denial upon the part of the giver.

The more deep and thorough our knowledge on any subject the more humble is our estimate of that knowledge. We then see heights to which we have not attained and depths that we have not fathomed. Compared with these, our actual knowledge seems small and shallow. But when we merely skim the surface of a subject we have no such measure to gauge ourselves by, and our small attainments loom up to our view in most exaggerated dimensions.

The things which constitute the true charms of a home cannot be bought or secured by the labor of hirelings. It is only the mistress of the house, the wife and mother, through her love and union of interest with her husband and children, who, guided by her affection, will labor to bring that charm about her household which springs from systematic labor, scrupulous neatness and economy, a finely-appointed table with food daintily prepared and served with exquisite taste.

A failure establishes only this, that our determination to succeed was not strong enough.

The Restitution

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF
The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26), the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-55); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20), and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). — ROBERT G. PRAYER.

O Lord, our gracious Father, we thank thee that we have a strong city, with walls and bulwarks appointed by thee, and that thou dost let even sinful men like us enter and dwell in peace and safety. Help us, we beseech thee now, to draw near unto thee. May our minds be stayed on thee, and may we each possess always the perfect peace which thou dost give to them that trust in thee. We thank thee for all by which thou dost make such trust more easy for us, we thank thee even for the darkness which drives us to thee, as well as for the light which draws us. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

"PREACHING THE TRUTH"

A Narrative Reciting the Experiences of a Believer Preaching the "Truth As It Is in Jesus."

William Brown.

"I can assure you, Mrs. Berea," said Paul, "that these passages do not support the doctrine you advocate any more than the other passages you have quoted, and are just as easily explained. The fact is, Mrs. Berea, that it is not a Bible doctrine at all; it is found in the Church Hymnal, and in the Confession of Faith, but not in the Bible. The teaching of the Bible is entirely different and it is stated in simple language, such as a child might readily understand. Suppose we go to the Bible to find an answer to the question, Where are the righteous to be recompensed or rewarded? What answer do we find? Listen: The righteous shall be recompensed in the earth, much more the wicked and the sinner. (Prov. 11:31). Now here is a plain, simple, straightforward statement which cannot be gainsaid or denied; it tells us that the righteous are to be rewarded here on earth, (not in heaven). The Lord speaks to us again through Solomon and he tells us (Prov. 10:30), that 'the righteous shall never be removed: but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth.' You see, Mrs. Berea, the righteous are not simply to receive their reward on the earth and then depart to some other sphere of existence; they are not to be taken to heaven aften they have received their reward at the judgment, but, according to this inspired statement, they are never to be removed from the earth."

"I have heard that passage interpreted quite differently," said Mrs. Berea.

"You have? I would like to hear what your interpretation is," said Mr. Stephanas.

"Well, I have always heard it explained to mean that in every land and in every generation God would root out the wicked and allow only the righteous to dwell in peace in the land."

"But surely, Mrs. Berea, you cannot accept such an interpretation. The facts are so manifestly against it that I don't see how any one could believe it. Is it not a fact testified to by all history that since the days of our first parents, the wicked have been in the ascendency in the earth and the righteous have been few and feeble and oppressed, and their consolation has always been that God would some day interfere in the affairs of men and take the earth out of the hands of the wicked. But he has not done so yet as we can see by looking at the condition that exists in the earth today. Surely, Mrs. Berea, you will not contend that the wicked do not inhabit the earth today, and that only the righteous dwell in it?"

"Well no, Mr. Stephanas, I can see that the interpretation I have advanced does not harmonize with the facts, in fact, as you were speaking, there occurred to my mind some instances in which the very opposite condition existed on the earth; for instance in the first century after Christ the righteous were destroyed and removed by being thrown to the wild beasts; burned at the stake; hewn to pieces, and in many other ways tortured and destroyed; those who escaped the tortures and deaths did so only by concealing themselves in dens and caves and wild places of the earth. In those days the righteous were removed and the wicked did inhabit the earth, and I am free to admit it has been so to a certain degree in every age, and in fact it is easy to see there has never been a time when this statement of Solomon has been fulfilled."

"Well, I am pleased to hear you say so, Mrs. Berea, because it will help you to accept the truth of the matter when it is brought to your notice. You will remember, Mrs. Berea, that it is recorded of the disciples of Christ that they asked him on one occasion to teach them how to pray, and he taught them that prayer which has come to be known as 'The Lord's Prayer,' and among other things in that prayer he instructed them to pray, 'Thy Kingdom come: thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven.' Mrs. Berea, to what extent do you think God's will is done in heaven?"

"Why perfectly, absolutely," said Mrs. Berea.

"Well, do you think this prayer will ever be answered, and that God's will be done in earth as it is in heaven?" asked Mr. Stephanas.

"I suppose it must be so, for Christ would not teach his disciples to pray for something which it was not God's will to grant," Mrs. Berea replied.

"Then you are ready to accept the fact that there is a time coming when God's will is to be done on earth, perfectly, absolutely."

"It must be so; there seems no escape from that conclusion."

"Well then, when this takes place, as it assuredly will, what will be the character of the earth's inhabitants?"

"Why I suppose they will be righteous, otherwise God's will could not be done perfectly," replied Mrs. Berea.

"Exactly so, before this petition in the Lord's prayer can be fulfilled the earth must be filled with a purely righteous population; the wicked must be eradicated. God's will could not be done on earth as it is in heaven if there was one wicked person on the earth; so that a time must come when the wicked will not inhabit the earth, and as Solomon says concerning that time and the righteous population, 'The righteous shall never be removed.' "

"I must confess, Mr. Stephanas, you argument is very strong. I seems impossible to escape the conclusion you have arrived at."

"I have only presented a little of the evidence which the scriptures contain. Listen to the words of the Psalmist: 'For evil doers shall be cut off, but those that wait on the Lord shall inherit the earth' (Psa. 37:9). How long are they to continue their inheritance of the earth? Listen: 'The Lord knoweth the days of the upright and their inheritance shall be forever' (Psa. 37:18); again, 'The righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever' (Psa. 37:29); and again, 'Wait on the Lord and keep his way; and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land; when the wicked are cut off thou shalt see it' (Psa. 37:34). The fact is, Mrs. Berea," continued Paul, "that the whole purpose of God as it is rendered in the Bible, is the filling of the earth with the glory of God (Numbers 14:21). Now when we"——

"Pardon me, Mr. Stephanas," interrupted Miss Hamilton, "but I am deeply interested in the statement you have just made. Some time ago in the course of my reading I came across the passage you have just quoted; the exact words are: 'But as truly as I live all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord.' I suppose I must have read it many times before, but it had never impressed me as it did on the occasion of which I am speaking. This was, perhaps, because on this particular occasion I happened to be in a meditative mood and after reading stopped to reflect and ask the question, How? When? I thought over it a great deal, and I remember one night after retiring that I could not sleep for thinking about it, but I could not find an answer to the question, 'How is the earth to be filled with the glory of God?' In the morning I asked father about it, and was reproved by him for troubling myself about such unprofitable questions. I have been trying to forget about it ever since, but your remark a moment ago brought it all back to me again. I hope you will not consider me rude for interrupting you in the midst of your remarks; really I couldn't resist the moment you mentioned that matter, and now, if Mrs. Berea won't mind and you are willing, I would like to hear your theory of the matter."

Mrs. Berea nodded assent, and all turned their eyes in the direction of Paul Stephanas and waited his answer.

There was no hesitancy on his part. "I wish to say, first of all," said he, "that I have no personal theory of the matter."

A look of disappointment came into the face of Doris Hamilton.

"I'm so sorry," she said, "I thought you could explain it to me."

"And so I can, I am thankful to say, but not by any theory of my own," replied Paul. "I sincerely hope that none of you will think me so foolish as to sit here and waste both your time and my own relating my own theories and opinions. Human opinions and theories on matters of religion are worthless. I have long since cast mine away, and any knowledge I now have of the subject is not original with me, but is copied direct from God's book of explanation, the Bible. I will be very much pleased, Miss Hamilton, to direct your attention to God's own answer to the question, 'How is the earth to be filled with the glory of the Lord?'

"The question is very simple when you permit the scriptures to speak for themselves. The Psalmist, or rather God through the Psalmist, gives us a key to the answer. He says, 'Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me; and to him that ordereth his conversation aright will I shew the salvation of God' (Psa. 50:23). According to this passage, glory to God is generated by the offering of acceptable praise to him. Now we have already noticed that Christ taught his disciples to pray, 'Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven.' When this prayer is answered we will have in the earth a righteous population which, by praising God continually, will filll the earth with his glory. We have a prophetic forecast of the spirit ofthat great day in the 96th Psalm. Here are some of the expressions in the psalm: 'O sing unto the Lord a new song; sing unto the Lord all the earth; sing unto the Lord, bless his name; shew forth his salvation from day to day. Declare his glory among the heathen (i.e. nations), his wonders among all people. Give unto the Lord, O ye kindreds of the people, give unto the Lord GLORY and strength. Give unto the Lord the GLORY due unto his name; bring an offering and come into his courts.' When this great day arrives, the prophetic song which the angels sang at the birth of Christ will then be fulfilled: 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.' "

"Then you think it to be a mental rather than a physical glory," said Miss Hamilton.

"It is both mental and physical," replied Paul. "There is not only the glorythat comes from the ascription of praise and thanksgiving, but there is also the effulgence of glory that will radiate from a multitude of glorified beings."

"What do you mean by 'glorified beings,' Mr. Stephanas?" asked Miss Hamilton.

"I mean beings, men and women, who have been made immortal, equal to the angels so that they cannot die any more (Luke 20:36), who have been made partakers of the Divine Nature (2nd Peter 1:4), and who have been raised to splendid honor in that glorious age (Psalm 149). You will remember, no doubt, that when Paul went down to Damascus to persecute the saints, that Christ appeared to him on the way and the light that shone round about him was so great that he was struck on the ground by it and was blind for several days; the glory of that light was too much for Paul's mortal eyes, but the apostle John tells that in the great day that is yet to come we shall all see him as he is, for we shall be like him (1st John 3:2), that is, we shall be immortal, of the Divine Nature, the same as he is now, and therefore able to behold his glory. Paul tells us plainly that Christ is coming 'to change our vile body and fashion it like unto his glorious body (Phil. 3:21). Then you will remember no doubt that when Moses went up into the Mount to talk with God, that when he returned to the Israelites his face shone with such effulgence of glory that the people could not look at him until he put a veil over his face to subdue the glory. Now this was merely a slight reflection of the Divine glory, and yet it was more than mortal people could stand. Peter tells us that we are to be made partakers of the Divine Nature. It will then be not a mere reflection of God's glory that we will have, but it will be in us, a part of our nature: we will be filled with it. Then then of the glory that will fill the earth when it is filled with a population that will be full of the glory of God, because partakers of his nature. I suppose the Apostle Paul must have had this in mind when he said: 'For I am persuaded that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us' (Romans 8:18). The Psalmist also refers to it when he says, 'Let the saints be joyful in glory, etc., (Psalm 149). I consider this outward glory however the least important."

"Why do you consider it the least important?" queried Miss Hamilton.

"Because," answered Paul, "it is but the outward manifestation of God's pleasure toward us because of that other glory which we possess and which is in reality God's greatest achievement with the human race, namely, a godlike character. God can at any time send forth a great burst of glittering light that would be more than humanity could bear. This he could do in a moment, but it has taken ages to produce the refined, beautiful, and godly characters who will be the permanent possessors of the earth and God's adopted children. They are like the precious stones: they have been dug out of the rough quarry of sinful flesh. You will remember perhaps that the ark ofthe covenant was covered within and without with pure gold. This teaches us the order of God's work with us: we must first be made glorious within like the King's daughter in the 45th Psalm, and then we will be made glorious without by God in that great day soon to come. The glory then that is to fill the earth is a glorious people who will make its hills and valleys ring with acclamations of his praise saying: 'Thou are worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power, for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.' But now I must go. I see I have stayed much later than I had expected to," said Paul, arising to go.

"We have been so deeply interested that we did not notice the time," said Miss Hamilton, "and I want to thank you for explaining that passage to me which has puzzled me so."

"I sincerely hope, Miss Hamilton, that you will see your way clear to accept this scriptural explanation of how the earth is to be filled with the glory of God," said Paul. "You see," he continued, "if the modern idea is true, that the righteous at death go to heaven, and the earth is to be destroyed, then these things so fully elaborated in the scriptures can not be true, and God is made to be the author of confusion. I think though, that none of you would take the stand the Bible is false, therefore 'the meek shall inherit the earth and dwell therein forever.' Well good night, Mrs. Berea."

"Good night, Mr. Stephanas, and come again."

Timothy accompanied Paul to the door and when he shook hands with him as he was leaving, he said: "Mr. Stephanas, I wish I had your knowledge of the Scriptures; it was most edifying to listen to you tonight."

"Well, I am sure the Scriptures are no special possession of mine, Mr. Berea," answered Paul, "you can, if you will, obtain a soul-satisfying knowledge of the Divine Word."

"Well. I don't know," said Timothy, "I have been reading my Bible all my life and yet I don't seem to know very much of what it really contains."

"That is because you have been studying it without the key," said Paul.

"I was not aware that there was a key," answered Timothy.

"Well there is a key," said Paul, "and without its possession the Scriptures remain locked to the enquirer. Some time when we get an opportunity I will show you what I consider to be the key to unlock the Scriptures. I must not keep you standing out here any longer. Good-night, Mr. Berea; I hope I shall see you again in the near future."

THE "TEMPLE OF GOD"

"Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy. For the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are" (1 Cor. 3:16.17).

Every one who has a taste for the beautiful, the grand, the majestic, the sublime, has been filled with wonder and admiration at the magnificence and splendor of Solomon's temple, as described by the historian. Yet with all its antique grandeur it has fallen. Its lofty domes and turrets are level with the dust. Time, save in the annals of history, has nearly obliterated it. Few of the present age have ever seen the place where it once stood. The lofty cedars of Lebanon, the fir tree, the precious stones, the silver, the gold and the grass mingled, lie buried beneath its ruins. Solomon too, with all his wisdom, has fallen. He sleeps while ages roll by.

If we admire the temple of Solomon, how much more the temple of God. It is to be built of perfect material: that which will stand the fire It will be tested (or tried), and should there be wood, hay or stubble, they will be consumed; but the gold, the silver, and the precious stones, will shine more brightly after the dross is drawn off. Now, the spurious material shines with borrowed luster. Gold may shine, or cast a reflection upon hay, without return; but when that which is imperfect is removed, and gold, silver and precious stones perfected, adorn the temple of God, the symmetry, the beauty, the effulgence, the splendor, the magnificence of architectural skill will be perfected also as gold shines upon gold, the reflection is doubled, the whole temple will be illuminated; unrivaled in brightness, in perfection, in honor.

Can mortal man attain this lofty, this enviable, this noble position? There is one way, and but one. "Straight is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." The Saviour says, "Strive to enter in the straight gate." He also says "Many will seek to enter in, and will not be able." All our energies must be put forth if we would enter there. Alas, too many are seeking to enter the easiest way possible; whispering to themselves all is well, I have been buried with Christ in baptism, that is all that is necessary. Take care! Christ says, "Strive." Paul says, "So run that ye may obtain." Again he compares the Christian to a warror, Tells him to "fight the good fight of faith."

There are various ways and means by which the temple of God may be marred. If we pull down where we should build up, our own garments become spotted. An unkind word spoken thoughtlessly, to a brother or sister, will often cause grief and sometimes alienation. Harsh rebuke to those in error will fill the eyes with dust, when a mild application of truth would have affected a cure. The healing properties of the Word are misapplied (or not applied at all), consequently the object is not attained; the temple is marred, and God dishonored. There is a fault somewhere. If the word is a perfect furniture," it must be in those who profess to be (but are not) governed by it; but as no one is perfect, let us strive to be governed by the Word of God. John says: "Little children, love one another." If we see one falling behind, give them a word of good cheer; if we think or know they are off the track, let us take them gently by the hand, and endeavor by the truth, to lead them back. If we succeed (and we shall, if the right course is pursued, nine times out of ten), we have gained a brother, God is honored and the adversary confounded.

Let us look at the opposite course a moment. Instead of a word of encouragement, we give a look of contempt, and in our own strength and dignity, with scourge in hand, attempt to drive them back. Human nature revolts; we have lost our labor and our brother. Does not the cause of the Redeemer bleed at every pore when such a course is pursued? Yes, verily. The "temple of God" is marred, and Paul says, "If any man defile the temple of God, him will God destroy." We can not be too careful. The Savior says: "Take heed lest ye offend one of these little ones that believe in me." The "strong must bear the infirmities of the weak." Feed them with the truth, that they may grow thereby. "But," says one, "suppose they will not eat, what then?" You have done your duty; their blood will be upon their own heads. "By their works shall ye knowthem." If we ever come off conquerors, we must overcome, for to those only is the promise given. If we wish to occupy a permanent position in the temple of God, we must strive for it. The crowning gem in our diadem will be faithfulness and obedience. The greatest incentive to human ambition is placed before us,—"the Kingdom of God," unparalleled in honor, in wealth, in splendor and in durability. Look at the petty monarchies of earth. See with what zeal, energy, assiduity and untiring ambition their aspirants pursue that course which is best calculated to obtain success. If any person presumes to call in question their right to the throne, their ancestral pedigree is diligently searched, and if they find their names recorded in lineal or royal descent, they move forward with a firm reliance upon the record, and will sooner suffer death than lose their royalty. In many cases their efforts are worthy of imitation.

Would it not be well for us to look over our ancestral pedigree, and see where our names are recorded? If we are not of royal descent, we cannot claim an heirship. Let us awake to this matter. Investigation is what we want; truth the result. Those only who bear the name, can wear the crown. If we would be lively stones in the temple of God, we must work. There is no neutral ground. We are either for or against. The Kingdom may be ours. Who will have it?

MRS. E. D. NICHOLS.

THE TRINITY

The article by R. H. Judd in The Restitution of November 2, gives the Bible teaching on the unity of the God of Israel so plain that no student of the word of God needs to have any doubts on the subject. And we cannot conceive how any man could, by adding to the record, make the oneness of the Diety any more emphatic. The doctrine of the Trinity involves so many absurdities that no reasonable man should tolerate it.

If Christ was God, how could he die? And if the Holy Spirit is God, how shall we account for Paul's omission to mention him in his salutations to all the churches? To the Romans, he says: "Grace to you and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ" (Rom. 1:7).

This is the substance of Paul's saluation at the beginning of each letter in all of his epistles to the churches: "James, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes scattered abroad, greeting:" James in substance agrees with Paul, both knowing nothing of a third person in a fabled Trinity.

Peter says: "Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord" (2 Pet. 1:2). John declares: "Truly our fellowship is with the Father ,and with his Son Jesus Christ" (ch. 1:3). And in the Revelations he says: "Grace be unto you, and peace, from him which is, and which was, and which is to come: and from the seven spirits which are before his throne; and from Jesus Christ" (ch. 1:4-5).

Here we have three sources of blessings, but of only one is it affirmed that he was, is, and is to come. The seven spirits are before the throne of the ever-living one. If they were Diety, equal with the Father, they would be on the throne. They are a part of the setting of his throne.

In Pope's Essay on Man, he says: "Vice is a monster, of so henious mein, to be hated, has but to be seen: but, seen so oft, familiar with her face; at first we pity, then embrace." Familiarity with the doctrine of the Trinity has taken away its heniousness in the minds of its votaries; notwithstanding, it flatly contradicts the plain testimony of the Old and New Testaments. It violates the principle of the first commandment from Sinai: "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." The violation of this commandment brought dire calamities to the children of Israel. The doctrine of the immortality of the human soul is fruitful in its evil consequences; it is the foundation of the doctrine of purgatory, and of eternal torment; but it is not "the mark of the beast," because the belief in the immortality of the soul was taught in Egypt before the rise of "the beast," and therefore cannot be its mark. A political or eceleisastical power must first exist, before it can have a mark to distinguish it from other powers. The foregoing objection does not hold when applied to the doctrine of the Trinity, for "the beast" was the originator of that doctrine. Gibbon informs us that "The prelates of the third century imperceptibly changed the language of exhortation into that of command. . . . . The bishops were the vicegerents of Christ, the successors of the apostles, and the mystic substitutes of the high priest of the Mosais law." "Theodocius was the first of the emperors baptized in the true faith of the Trinity . . . . and as the emperor ascended from the holy font, still glowing with the warm feelings of regeneration, he dictated a solemn edict, which proclaimed his own faith, and prescribed the religion of his subjects."

"It is our pleasure that all the nations, which are governed by our clemency and moderation, should steadfastly adhere to the religion which was taught by St. Peter to the Romans; which faithful tradition has preserved; and which is now professed by the potiff Damasuc, and by Peter, bishop of Alexandria, a man of apostolic holiness. According to the discipline of the apostles, and thedoctrine of the gospel, let us believe the sole Diety of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; under an equal majesty, and a pious Trinity. We authorize the followers of this doctrine to assume the title of Catholic Christians; and we judge that all others are extravagant madmen; we brand them with the infamous name of Heretics; and declare that their conventicles shall no longer usurp the respectable appellation of churches. Beside the condemnation of divine justice, they must expect to suffer severe penalties, which our authority, guided by heavenly wisdom, shall think proper to inflict upon them."

This extract can be found in any edition of Gibbon under the "Orthodox Edicts of Theodocius." "The beast" represents the empire, and Theodocius is the head of the empire. And by virtue of his position as emperor of the Roman world, puts forth the doctrine of the Trinity as a "mark," dividing the Catholic Christians from Heretics. Of those who refuse to subscribe to the doctrine of the Trinity, the emperor says: "We brand them with the infamous name of Heretics." A brand on cattle or horses is a mark showing who they belong to. That the doctrine of the Trinity is "the mark of the beast" of Rev. 13:16; 14:9; 15:2; 16:2; 1920, I have no doubt. By consulting those references the reader will see the importance of the doctrine.—Geo. Francis.

REPORT OF BRO. ANDERSON'S VISIT TO VIRGINIA

Editor Restitution: The writer having received a request to go to Virginia and hold a meeting, left home October 27, and arrived at Maurertown October 28. We were met at the station by Bro. J. E. Boyer, who took us to his home, where we met his son and daughter, and found a good home during the meeting, which we held in the Church of God, near Maurertown. The meeting began that evening and continued till November 4.

On November 2, we went to the Shenandoah river and baptized Beulah V. O'Neal, Clara E. O'Neal, Mary C. O'Neal, David T. O'Neal, John E. O'Neal, Robt. E. O'Neal. These young people are brothers and sisters in the flesh and are all in high school. Their parents, Bro. John R. and Sr. R. V. O'Neal are both members of the Church of God.

We left Maurertown at the close of the meeting and went to Dry Run, sixteen miles south of Maurertown, where we held a week's meeting.

We had large crowds at this place, and the very best attention. On Sunday, November 7, we baptised Sister Sarah R. Coverstone, daughter of Bro. James A. Coverstone. Sister Coverstone is a trained nurse and is working in Washington, D. C. The meeting closed November 10. We reached home the 12th and found all well.

J. H. ANDERSON.

MARRIED.

Mr. Ray C. Allard, youngest son of Bro. G. P. Allard, of Gladbrook, Iowa, and Miss Mabel D. Alpen, daughter of Mr. Henry Alpen, of the same place, were united in marriage by the undersigned in Marshalltown, October 30, 1015. After the ceremony, the young couple, accompanied by Miss Leta Allard, sister of the groom, and Mr. George Stauffer, motored to Ames for a short stay, after which they returned to Gladbrook, where they will make their future home. Mr. Allard is an electrician.

The Silence of Friendship.—Only real friends understand silence. With a passing guest or ceremonial acquaintance you feel under an obligation to talk; you make an effort to entertain him as a matter of courtesy; you may be tired or weak, but, no matter you feel you must exert yourself. But with a very dear and intimate friend sitting by you there is no feeling of the kind. To be sure, you may talk if you feel able, pouring out all sorts of confidences, relieved and refreshed by the interchange of thoughts and sympathies. But if you are very tired you know you do not need to say a word. You are perfectly understood, and you know it. You can enjoy the mere fact of your friend's presence, and find that does you more good than conversation. The sense of that present and sympathetic affection rests you more than any words. And your friend takes it as the highest proof of your friendship and confidence, and probably never loves you so vividly as in these still moments. No matter that twilight is falling and that you cannot see each other's faces—the presence and the silence are full of brightness and eloquence, and you feel they are enough.

"The immortality of the soul is neither argued nor affirmed in the Old Testament" (Bishop Perowne).

"The doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and the name, are alike unknown to the entire Bible" (Olshausen).

Time, when yet before us, seems to advance with show, tardy, leaden feet; no sooner is it past, than we discover its wings.

"Hope in death can only spring from the principle of immortality, and this principle has no root save in Christ" (Principal Tullock).

"So Mr. Jones gave $5,000 to the church at his death, did he?" was asked of a minister the other day. The answer was: "I did not say he gave it, but he left it; perhaps I should more explicitly have said that he relinquished it, because he could no longer hold it." The distinction needs to be kept in mind: one only gives when living; he "relinquishes" at death.—Selected.

"Brother Brown," remarked his brother-in-law boastfully, "left $50,000 when he died." Brother Jones held up his hands in surprise and exclaimed, "What a pity!" "What do you mean?" queried the half-insulted brother-in-law. "I mean just what I said," replied Brother Jones, "for surely it is a pity, when Brother Brown neither spent his money for himself nor for any one else—that he should have left his $50,000 behind him; for he will never hear of it again."

"The true faith putteth the resurrection, which we are warned to look for every hour. The heathen philosophers, denying that, did put that the souls did ever live." "And ye, in putting them (the souls of the dead) in heaven and hell and purgatory, destroy the arguments wherewith Christ and Paul prove the resurrection. . . . If their souls be in heaven, tell me why they be not in as good case as the angels be and then what cause is there of the resurrection? (William Tyndale).

There are so any isms today that are rife, from the lack of Bible knowledge. Russellism cannot make any headway where men are well read in the Bible. When I began to preach, a copy of Russell's book, "The Plan of the Ages," fell into my hand, and I gave it a close reading, and I thought it was pretty good, and I so told my wife. So I decided to re-read it, and verify every quotation in its context. I began the work in real earnest. But I had not gone far till I discovered the unfaithfulness of the writer. Scraps of Scripture were used whether it was speaking about the subject he was on or not. So I soon convinced myself that Russell was not a safe guide in Bible reading. Since then I have followed him pretty closely, to find that he is one of the worst perverters of the truth that it has ever been my lot to read after.—J. W. Chism.

IS THE SPIRIT OF MAN A PART OF GOD?

If the spirit of man is a part of God, and the spirit is substance, then God must be substance. And if God is substance, and substantial souls are separated from him, then.

1. God must be divisible, and susceptible of diminition.
2. All the millions of souls subtracted from God's substance, must have diminished it correspondent to the aggregate of all the matter enter into the composition of these souls.
3. God must therefore be much smaller in his substance than before this subtraction took place, unless the addition of material has been equal to the subtraction.
4. That which can be added to or subtracted from, is limited in its extent, and changeable in its nature, and consequently corruptible, mutable, and susceptible to decay and death,—not infinite, and therefore not God.
5. If the intelligent part of man is a part of God, then God has committed all the sins that ever cursed the world. He has been arrayed against himself in all the wars which have rolled an ocean of blood over the earth, and filled the world with widows and orphans—has enacted laws to punish himself for crimes which he has committed; and for which he alone is responsible.

If this story be true, then God is the only responsible being in the universe. It converts man into a mere machine, acting only as he is acted upon; and therefore no more responsible for his actions than a saw mill or threshing machine.

THE FATHERHOOD OF GOD.

There are two senses in which God is represented in the Bible as being a Father, viz:

1. sA the author of man's present animal life.
2. As the author of his spiritual life.

Acts 17:28 refers to man's present animal life, which is derived from God, is evident from the 25th verse in the same chapter, and speaking of the same thing: "Seeing that he giveth to all life and breath." Also verse 28: "For in him we live and move and have our being." That is, by his power. Mal 2:10, is of the same import. "Have we not all one Father? hath not our God created us?"

These texts only prove that God is the Father of all creation, not by natural generation. It no more follows that because God created man, and gave him life, that therefore he imparted to him a part of his own nature, than because he created and gave life to beasts, birds and fishes, that therefore, they too are a part of God.

As far as adoption into the family of God is concerned, those only are heirs who believe and obey the Gospel (Gal. :8, 26, 27; Rom. 8:14, 17). Those only who are led by the teachings of God's spirit, into faith and obedience, have the testimony of the Spirit bearing witness with their spirit (or mind), that they are the children of God, heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ, having received the "spirit of adoption, whereby they can say, "Abba Father."

Such, and such only, are called the sons of God. These will be "delivered from the bondage of corruption, to the glorious liberty of the sons of God" (Rom. 8:19, 24). Such only are promised the Divine life, which will be the incorruptible nature and the immortal life (Rom. 1:23; 1 Cor. 15). Those who do the works of God are called the children of God; but those who do the works of the devil are called the children of the devil (John 8:41, 44; I John 3:9, 10). Christ said to the wicked Jews, "If God were your Father, ye would live me" (John 8:42). Thereby teaching that God is not the Father of any except such as love his Son.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Bro. Huggins:

In gladness of heart I take the pen to write you a few words of appreciation for your untiring efforts toward the salvation of my daughter Lilly. Words fail to express my gratitude for all you have done for me and mine. I can only say, may the Lord bless you and yours; and give you of his choicest blessings.

I also desire to thank all the other brethren and sisters who have assisted in any way toward this end. Either by deed or words, for "The word spoken in due season, how good it is." For many years it has been my prayer that all my children would embrace the truth, and now that they have done so, I pray God to keep them faithful unto the end. And not only faithful, but earnest workers, that others by their efforts may be led into the light of precious truth. I would offer a word of encouragement to other mothers who have children not yet in the truth. Keep on praying, do your best to set them a good example. God is faithful that promised.

We read, "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy." If we do our part, bearing the cross patiently, God will surely bless us with good results, in his own good time.

Oh, may the Lord help us all so to live, that when Jesus comes we shall hear his welcome voice saying: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

With Christian love from
SISTER ELIZA N. BLYTH.

MOSAIC AND NAZARENE TEACHING CONCERNING GOD.—No. 1

In turning to the Bible, which we regard as the only reliable source of information concerning God, we are met by the inquiry of Zothar, the Naamathite, saying, "Wilt thou find out Eloahh by searching? Or to perfection, wilt thou find out Shaddi? The height of the heavens, what wilt thou do? Deeper than the grave, what wilt thou know? The lengthening out is more than the earth's measure, and broader than the sea" (Job 11:7-9). The subject is indeed great, for God is great; and when we come to contemplate it aright, we are led with the Apostle to exclaim, "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable his judgments, and his ways past finding out! For who knows the mind of the Lord? Or who becomes his counsellor? Or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed to him again? For out of him, and through him, and for him are all things. To him be glory for the Aoins. Amen" (Rom. 11:33-36).

To Zothar we reply, that "by searching" through the height of the heavens, or the depth of the unfathomed abyss, we cannot find out Eloahh-Shaddai. "That known of God is made manifiest among men; for God makes manifest to them (for his invisible things from the creation of the world being understood by the works are discerned, both his ever-existing power and diety), that they be inexcusable" (Rom. 1:19). But to discern this by a contemplation of the heavens, earth and sea, is not to "find him out to perfection." They proclaim an ever-existing power, and that this power is superior to "corruptible man;" and is, therefore, incorruptible power; or, as we say, God. But while they proclaim this, they do not reveal the mode of his existence, the place of his throne, his mode of thinking, his character, purpose, and so forth. The wisest of men who have speculated upon these apart from a written revelation, have only become vain in their imaginations; and, though professing to be wise, become fools. They have thought to define God; and in so doing, have imagined that he was such an one as themselves. But all their speculations have been stamped with the seal of his reprobation; for both the Old and New Testaments testify that "the world by wisdom knew him not" (Psa. 14:1, 2; Rom. 3:11).

God delights in stimulating the intellect of his creatures. In revealing himself, therefore, to them, he manifests himself mysteriously. "It is the glory of Elohim," says Solomon, "to conceal a word; but it is the glory of kings to search out the word." A word is concealed when it is enigmatically expressed; and it is the glory of those whom God has chosen for his kings in the future government of the world, to search out the wisdom he hath hidden from the wise in their own conceit. "The world by wisdom," saith Paul, "knew not God; . . . but we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, the hidden, which none of the chiefs of this Aion knew; for had they known, they would have crucified the Lord of glory" (1 Cor. 1:21; 2:7, 8). Paul was sent to turn the Gentiles to the knowledge of the true and living God, and in so doing taught them the mystery which it was the glory of the apostolic proclamation to explain or reveal. Hence their preaching came to be styled, "the revelation of the Mystery," and is alluded to by Paul, who taught "the Gospel which God had promised through his prophets in the Holy Scriptures." In Rom. 16:25, "To him that is of power," says he, "to establish you according to my Gospel and the preaching of Jesus anointed; according to the revelation of a mystery concealed during Aoinian times, but now made manifest, also through the prophetic writings according to the commandment of the God of the Aoin, for obedience of faith made known for all nations; to God only wise, through Jesus anointed, to him be the glory for the Aoins. Amen."

This mystery, which, as we see, was the burden of the apostolic preaching, was a great enigma—an enigma, dramatically, as well as doctrinally, explained. "Without controversy," says Paul, "great is the mystery of godliness—God manifested in flesh, God justified in Spirit, made visible to messengers, preached among nations, believed on in the world, received again to glory" (1 Tim. 3:16).

It would be premature to go into the consideration of these six points of godliness. It is sufficient just now to bear in mind that they exist; and constitute integral parts of God-manifestation as far as at present developed.

We proceed to remark that Paul, as well as Moses, declares, that "there is no other God but one;" for having so said, proceeds to remark: "For though there be that are called gods, whether in the heaven, or upon the earth (as there are gods many and lords many), but to us there is one God, the Father, out of whom are all things, and we for him; and one Lord, Jesus Anointed, through whom are all things, and we through him. Howbeit the knowledge is not in all" (1 Cor. 8:4-7).

Here, then, we have good authority for saying, that in the universe there are many gods and many lords; but that over and above them all is One Supreme, who is styled "the Blessed and Only Sovereign, the King of kings, and the Lord of lords; the only one having deathlessness, inhabiting light unapproachable, whom no one of men hath seen, nor is able to behold" (1 Tim. 6:15). He is God of gods, whose existence be himself admits in saying to Israel, "I am Jehovah, thy Elohim. . . . . There shall not be to thee other Elohim above me."

Thus far Moses and Paul are in agreement. They both teach One Supreme God, and the existence of others beside; but that these others were not to be made objects of worship by dwellers upon the earth.

Now Jesus of Nazareth is perfectly Mosaic in his teaching upon this subject. When a certain scribe asked him, "Which is the chief commandment above all?" he answered in the words of Moses, so often referred to by the Jews of our day, when disputing the claims of Jesus, saying, "The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel; Jehovah our Elohim, is one Jehovah. And thou shalt love Jehovah, thine Elohim, with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength; this is the first commandment. And the second is like: as, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandments greater than these." "Well, Teacher," said the scribe, "thou hast said the truth; for God is one, and there is no other but of him." (Mark 12:29, 34).

But at this stage of our inquiry it behooves us to pause and to look into the signification of certain words brought before us in these and other passages of the Sacred writings. This is the more necessary, because the names of God which occur in the Bible are not arbitrary sounds; and one of the chief imperfections of the English authorized translation, or rather version, is the slovenly manner in which all the names by which God has been pleased to make himself known to his people, have been rendered, after the fashion of the Septuagint, by the two words, "Lord" and "God."

These words do not convey the ideas of the Spirit in its use of terms. "Lord" is of Saxon origin, and signifies monarch, ruler, governor, something supreme or distinguished. The word to which it answers in the Septuagint and New Testament is kurios. Under this word Parkhurst says, "Plutarch informs us, that the name of Cyrus, who in Isa. 44:28; 45:1, is called koresh, did in Persic signify the Sun. "This name, then," continues Parkhurst, "seems an evident corruption of the Hebrew word for the sun; and as the sun is manifestly the great ruler in material nature, and the idolators of several nations accordingly worshipped him under the title of melec, the King, and Baal, the Ruler, Lord, so from the same word may, I think, be deduced the Greek kuros, authority, and, kurios, lord; and even the wordkuro, to exist; for it was a heathen tenet, that the sun was self-existent. Thus, for instance, the Orphio Hymn calls him self-born."

But, if this be the radical idea of kuros, it fails to represent the meaning of Ail, Eloahh, Elohim, Shaddai and Yekowah; for all of which it is often, or rather, most frequently, and almost generally, used. The word Adon, is properly enough rendered by "Lord," in the singular; but not the other words, for which it should never be used. Elohim, Shaddai and Adonia, are plural names of God, and require terms of the same number to express them.

The common use of "God" in the English language is as little justifiable as that of the word "Lord." "God," in Saxon, signifies good; a meaning which cannot possibly be extracted from any ofthe names recited above. God is indeed good, exclusively so, as we are taught by Jesus himself while in the mortal state. In this sense, he refused to appropriate the word "good," saying to one who styled him so, "Why callest thou me good? No one is good except one, that is God" (Matt. 19:17). Jesus was free from personal transgression, and therefore, in character good; as he did not refer to character, he could only have had reference to nature, or to God as substance. He is good in the sense of being deathless or incorruptibility itself; which, when Jesus refused the term, did not define the nature o fthe Spirit tabernacling therein, was encumbered with. "In me, that is, in my flesh," says Paul, "dwells no good thing." God, then, whether in the sense of moral, or of material goodness, while it is a term expressive of the truth, is not a translation of any of the words before us; and when used in their stead, leaves the mind in the dark concerning the things they were intended to convey.

To Mechizedec and Abram the alone Good One was known as Ail Elyon, Most High Ail, which teaches by implacation that there were Ailim of inferior rank, station and power. Melchizedec, King of Jerusalem, was the priest of the Highest Ail, whom he understood and proclaimed to be konai, Possessor of the Heavens and Earth. In Gen. 14:22. Abram is made, by transcribers, to call the Most High Ail by the name Yehoway; though we are expressly told in Exod. 6:3, that Abraham did not know him by that name. He knew Ail, and he knew Shaddai; but with any superior or divine being of the name Jehovah he had no acquaintance. The name has no doubt been substituted for Abon, Lord or Ruler, which the Most High is by virtue of his being the owner, or sole proprietor, of the heavens and earth. The use of the word Jehovah is evidence that Genesis was compiled at least 430 years after the events of chapter 15.

Abram. the Hebrew, spoke the language of Moses. This is evident from the narrative, and the name applied to altars and to God by his immediate family. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob all called upon the possessor of the heavens and earth by the word Ail Shaddai, which, in Gen. 18:1, he bestowed upon himself, saying, ani-ail-Shaddai—"walk before me, and be thou perfect;" and in verse 3, it says, "and Elohim talked with him;" and Ail told him through Elohim, that he would be to him lai-lohim, "for Elohim and his seed after him" (Verse 8).

As often as this word ail passed before his mind. the idea of power, might, strength, would stand out in bold relief. "It always," says Gesenius, "presented to the Hebrews the idea of strength and power." Nebuchadnezzar is styled in Ex. 31:11. ail goyim, the Mighty One of nations; and in Isa. 9:5, Messiah is termed Ail givbor, the Mighty Warrior.

Shaddai is plural, and comes from the root shaddah. to be strong or powerful. Shaddai signifies mighty or powerful ones. Several appeared to Abraham and three of them at one time condescended to partake of his hospitality. Their power is tremendous when they choose to exert it upon the wicked, as in the instance of Sodom and Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, cities of the Plain; but towards "heirs of salvation" they are ministering spirits, beneficent and good (Heb. 1:14, 13:1).

But why were these Shaddai so powerful that they could stand by cities, and send them at a word into the abyss profound? Was it by their own power, or by the power of another? By the power of another certainly; even by his power who is higher than they; and who, being possessor of the earth, hath alone the right to lay its cities in heaps, and sweep it with terror and distress. And because this is a fact, therefore, the possessor of the heavens and the earth announced himself to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob as Ail-Shaddai, or THE STRENGTH of the Powerful Ones, whose might he had witnessed in the destruction of the Plain.

In this sense, namely that of Power Increate, being the strength of creatures formed by it, we find Ail associated with other words than shaddai. In Gen. 33:20, it is testified that Jacob erected an altar, and called it Ail Elohai Israel, rendered in the margin of the English Bible, "God, God of Israel. An altar, mizbaach, is a thing to sacrifice or present offerings upon from zahvach, to kill, etc. It was regarded as "Most Holy," so that whatever touched the altar was sanctified, or made holy (Exod. 29:37). The blind fools, as Jesus styled the Rabbis of his day, had reversed this, and by making the altar of no account, (Matt. 23:18), destroyed its typical and sanctifying character. In the days of the patriarchs and prophets, the typical altar was temporarily sanctified; but in the days of the apostles, and consequently now also, Jesus is the sanctifier, as Paul teaches in Heb. 2:11, saying, that "Both he that sanctifieth, and they being sanctified are all out of one (Father)." And in Heb. 13:10-13, he plainly identifies Jesus as the sanctifying altar of which none have any right to eat who hold on to the types rejecting the things they shadow forth.

Now Jesus was one and the Father was another. "I can of mine own self," said he, "do nothing." "My doctrine is not mine but his that sent me;" and it is written in the law of Moses, that the testimony of two men is credible. "I am the one who bear witness of myself and the Father who sent me, (the other witness) he beareth witness of me" (John 5:30; 7:16; 8:17, 18). Here then, are two personages. The Father by himself being Ail, or power, but when associated with the Son of Man, who, when so associated, was powerful—"anointed with the Holy Spirit and with power—he was Ail Eloahh, the Power mediately manifested; the power being one, and the medium of manifestation another Eloahh.. "It is in the Ail Yahdie power of my hand," said Labon to Jacob, "to harm you; but the Elohim of your father forbade it."

Now, the altar erected by Jacob was typical of those referred to in the title he bestowed upon it. When the Spirit descended upon the Apostles, and shone through them holding forth the Word of Life confirmed by power, there were many other Elohim in Israel. They were full of power, and therefore full of Ail, as Jesus promised they should be, saying, "Ye shall receive power of the Holy Spirit coming upon you" (Acts 1:8). And when Jacob poured oil upon the pillar-stone of Baith-All, he represented this anointing of the Elohim of Israel with All. The marginal reading of the title of Jacob's altar expresses nothing of this. "God, God of Israel," is an unmeaning phrase; rendered after the Saxon version of "God," it is "Good, Good of Israel!" But with the premises before us, we interpret the altar as typical of the Power of the Powerful Ones of Israel in sacrificial manifestation.

Another word applied to Power Increate, and improperly rendered "Lord," is Eloahh. It occurs fifty-six times in the Old Testament, of which forty-one occur in the book of Job. It is used four times in the Psalms; only twice by Moses; once by Isaiah and Solomon; three times in Daniel, and twice in Habbakuk. It is not in all these places applied to the Most High. In Daniel it is applied to that power in the Little Horn's estate, or dominion, which enforces the adoration of "Guardian Saints;" and in Heb. 1:11, zu kokaho lailoho—informs us that the Chaldeans shall offend in taking his power for his Eloahh. And Job, in speaking of him that provokes Ail, says, in Job 12:6: "Who carries Eloahh in his hand," that is, he calls the sword in the hands of the violent, his eloahh in the sense of its being his power.—John Thomas, deceased.

OBITUARY

Maud Adams Leische

With sorrow we are called upon to record the death of Sister Maud Adams Liesche, daughter of Bro. and Sister Almus Adams, of Omaha, Nebr. Sister Liesche was born in Gifford, Iowa, January 11, 1883, and died at her home near Omaha, Nebr., November 1, 1915, aged 32 years, 9 months and 20 days. She leaves her husband and four children; her father and mother; six brothers—W. E., Raymond, Glenn, Esco, Leo and Clair; and two sisters, Mrs. Alta Thursh, and Mrs. Elsie Strong, all of Omaha.

Her parents moved to southwestern Nebraska when she was a year old, where they remained until 1901, when they came to Omaha. Here she became the wife of Mr. August Liesche on November 4, 1903. Sister Liesche was a woman of unusually high ideals. Caring but little for the pleasures and attractions of the world, she devoted her time and attention to her family and her church. She was baptized in 1909.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was conducted from her home by the writer, assisted by Bro. W. L. Crowe. The sincere sympathy of all goes out to Bro. and Sister Adams and family, and to the bereaved husband and little ones who are left to weep. G. ELDRED MARSH.

TALKATIVENESS

Talkativeness is utterly ruinous to deep spirituality. The very life of our spirit passes out in our speech, and hence all superfluous talk is a waste of the vital forces of the heart. In fruit growing it often happens that excessive blossoming prevents a good crop, and often prevents fruit altogether; and by so much loquacity the soul runs wild in bloom and bears no fruit. I am not speaking of sinners, nor of legitimate testimony for Jesus, but of that incessant loquacity of nominally spiritual persons—of the professors of purifying grace. It is one of the greatest hindrances to deep, solid union with God. Notice how people will tell the same thing over and over—how insignificant trifles are magnified by a world of words; how things that should be buried are dragged out in gossip; how a worthless non-essential is argued and disputed over; how the solemn, deep things of the Holy Spirit are rattled over in a light manner—until one who has the real baptism of divine silence in his heart, feels he must unceremoniously tear himself away to some lonely room or forest, where he can gather up the fragments of his mind, and rest in God.

See the evil effects of much talk. First it dissipates the spiritual power. The thought and feelings of the soul are like powder and steam—the more they are condensed, the greater their power. The steam that if properly compressed would drive a train forty miles an hour, if allowed too much expanse would not move it an inch; and so the true action of the heart, if expressed in a few Holy Spirit selected words, will sink into the minds to remain forever, but if dissipated in any rambling conversation, is likely to be of no profit.

Second, it is a waste of time. If the hours spent in useless conversation were spent in secret prayer or deep reading, we would soon reach a region of soul life and divine peace beyond our dreams.

Third, loquacity inevitably leads to saying unwise, or unpleasant or unprofitable things. In religious conversations we soon churn up all the cream our souls have in them, and the rest of our talk is pale skim milk, until we get alone with God and feed on his green pastures, until the cream arises again. The Holy Spirit warns us that in the multitude of words there lacketh not sin. It is impossible for even the best of saints to talk beyond a certain point without saying something unkind, or severe, or foolish, or erroneous. We must settle this personally. If others are noisy and gabby, I must determine to live in constant quietness and humility of heart: I must guard my speech as a sentinel does a fortress, and with all respect for others, I must many a time cease from conversation or withdraw from company to enter into deep communion with my precious Lord. The cure for loquacity must be from within; sometimes by an interior furnace of suffering that burns out the excessive effervescence of the mind, or by an over-mastering revelation to the soul of the awful majesties of God and eternity, which puts an everlasting hush upon the natural faculties. To walk in the Spirit we must avoid talking for talk's sake, or merely to entertain. To speak effectively we must speak in God's appointed time and in harmony with the indwelling Holy Spirit.—Selected.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 3 26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 26); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-55); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13: 3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). THE NATURE OF THE LAMB'S BRIDE.

"And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone: I will make him an helpmeet for him. And out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air; and brought them unto the man to see what he would call them; and whatsoever the man called every living creature, that was the name thereof. And the man gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field; but for man there was not found an help meet for him. And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon the man, and he slept; and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof; and the rib, which the Lord God had taken from the man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man. And the man said, This is now bone of my bone, and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called woman, because she was taken out of man. Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh" (Gen. 2:18-24).

St. Paul writes in the New Testament: "Wives, be in subjection unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife, as Christ also isthe head of the church, being himself the Savior of the body. Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the Church, and gave himself up for it; that he might sanctify it, having cleansed it by the washing of water with the Word, that he might present the Church to himself a glorious Church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish. Even so ought husbands also to love their own wives as their own bodies, even as Christ also the Church; because we are members of his body. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother and shall cleave to his wife; and the twain shall become one flesh. The mystery is great: but I speak in regard of Christ and of the Church" (Eph. 5:22-32).

I will read one more passage: "And a voice came forth from the throne, saying, Give praise to our God, all ye his servants, ye that fear him, the small and the great. And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunders, saying, Hallelujah: for the Lord, our God, the Almighty, reigneth. Let us rejoice and be exceeding glad, and let us give the glory unto him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And it was given unto her that she should array herself in fine linen bright and pure; for the fine linen is the righteous acts of the saints. And he saith unto me, Write, Blessed are they which are bidden to the marriage supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, These are true words of God" (Rev. 19:5-9).

You see the close connection between these passages: they all speak of one thing, that most holy relationship in human life which binds together man and wife. Ifthere be any type and antitype in the Bible, then Adam and Eve are the type of Christ and his church.

All human relationships are types, and so are relationships in nature, e. g., the vine and the branches. The parables of our Lord Jesus Christ were not invented by him, but were laid up for us in nature by the Father and the Son. Thus things of earth speak to those who have open ears, and show to open eyes God's meaning behind them all. The earthly will vanish away; all that can be shaken will be shaken (Heb. 7: 26-28), that the things behind them, which cannot be shaken may appear. "The things which are seen are temporal," they shall pass away; "but the things which are not seen are eternal," they shall never pass away (2 Cor. 4:18).

Looking closer into the first portion taken from Gen. 2, you will see God had a double purpose in making the whole creation pass in review before its king. First, the Lord God said, "It is not good that the man should be alone." But there was no companion meet for Adam, able to respond to him.

A human being needs one answering to him, capable of fellowship with him in mind and heart, in views and prospects; some one who can thoroughly understand him and share his interests. A wife is neither a servant nor a slave, but a companion. Adam himself must seek and choose the companion who is to share his life.

One of the deepest needs of the human heart is to find in Christ the only heart which can fully answer its longings for what is pure and noble, and deliver it from what is impure and ignoble.

God's second purpose in bringing all creation before Adam was that, even if he should fail to find his meet companion, he should at least take possession of his kingdom. When the Lord Jesus Christ met Peter, he bore the name of Simon, which man had given him. Jesus, with one look sounded the man, and took possession of him. A true name can be given only by one who sees through and through. A name which does not represent character is

A false name.

Jesus gave Simon his true name: "Thou shalt be called Peter; however weak and uncertain thy character may be, I will prove my Divine power to make thee a man of rock; thou shalt be Peter." Before the Fall, Adam was confirmed in his position as king by the very fact that, with one look, he was able to understand the deepest meaning of God in the creation of everything. Fowl or beast or whatever it was, he named it according to what it was, and thus took possession of it. Therefore, his guilt and his fall were so deep, because he let himself be induced by his own subject, of which he had taken possession by naming it, to discuss God's command. At that moment he threw away his gift of ruling power, and became subject to the serpent over which God had given him dominion.

Adam sought in vain; throughout his kingdom there was not found an help meet for him. And if the first Adam turned away with horror from the very thought of associating with himself any created being of another order than himself, unable to share his life, do you think the second Adam would be content to associate with himself a being who is not of his own order and nature?

If it was the Apostle Paul's ambition to present the Church as "a chaste virgin" to Christ, do you think the Holy Ghost would be content to take the Church as she is, and offer her to Christ? Paul's ministry failed to bring out in the Church the full divine character, do you think that death will do more than the Holy Ghost was able to do through the blood of Christ and the Word of God, ministered by such a man as Paul?

Never ,brothers; but our God can wait. He could not raise up Israel as a whole to the standard of his calling: "I am a husband unto you (Jer. 3:14); I have chosen you out of all the nations to enter into a special covenant with you" (we see the Old Testament uses the word "adultery" in speaking of his people's sin). Well, the Lord will show, in coming ages, that his gifts and calling are without repentance (Rom. 11:29). If the people of Israel as a whole, failed him, and he was still faithful to a remnant, do you think that if, in this time of parenthesis, the Church also fails him, he will forsake the Church altogether? Never. But the Lord will not treat her as a servant or a slave, he will always respect her freedom: "Stir not up, nor awaken love, until it (or she) please" (Cant.2:7; 3:5; 8:4).

He cannot wed a Bride who must be forced to follow Him.

Let us carefully follow Holy Scripture in all this. I am sure there are already firstfruits, a cloud of witnesses, true members of the Church and of the Bride who have been waiting through centuries and ages, till the last member is made ready, and the Holy Ghost has succeeded—and he will succeed—in carrying some at last straight to the throne .to be the first sheaf of the great harvest (Lev. 23:10).

Jesus Christ has been "made unto us Wisdom from God; both Righteousness, Sanctification and Redemption" (1 Cor. 1-30 marg.), that our spirit, soul and body may be sanctified through and through, in such a way that God may be justified before the universe, in carrying straight to glory, without dying, those who have been made ready for the coming of Christ. Even the longing after sanctification becomes a miserable thing when it leads to nothing further. It is like a helmet without a spike, or a soldier without a helmet. The helmet is the hope of salvation; a salvation which is yet to come (compare Eph. 6:17 and 1 Thess. 5:8). Christ will "appear a second time . . . to them that wait for him, unto salvation," that salvation, "the redemption of the body," of which Rom. 8:23 speaks.

You think, perhaps, you may return to the same condition as man was in before the Fall? The Lord never brings a Chirstian, through restoration, to the point where he was before, but deeper down and higher up; a ploughman does not turn always in the same furrow. The problem of restoration is wonderfully deeper than we can understand or conceive. In all your longings for purification and sanctification, you turn in a circle, so long as you seek to find satisfaction in your progress. Have you fully discerned the glorious prospect that we are called, justified, sanctified and glorified, not for ourselves, but because

One is waiting for a companion made meet for Him?

For this he suffered and died.

No angel or archangel was meet to be his companion; she must be taken out of himself. He took on him our flesh, our human nature, that God might be glorified in raising man out of the human into his Divine nature. "He hath granted unto us his precious and exceeding great promises; that through these ye may become partakers of the Divine nature" (2 Pet 1:4). "His divine power hath granted unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness," that we, who are by our first nature a daughter of earth, may become a daughter of heaven, in whom the King of kings may recognize his heir-meet.

I own that if the son of an emperor should cast his eyes upon a girl of lower social rank, her first thought would be: "Do you deceive me?" Afterwards she might be puzzled: "Why should he think of me? But then she might consider his character, and if she came to the conclusion that he was true, and in full possession of his senses, after the first intoxication of the glory of such a position, the consciousness would dawn upon her that such a man had chosen her, and this would for ever purify her horizon, and separate her from all which she had clung hitherto. She would have but one thought—to answer the expectations of him who called her. Believing that he would raise her to his own level, the question of her position would disappear before that other question: "Can I so love him that he may not be disappointed in me: can I answer the expectation of such a man?" "Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear; forget also thine own people, and thy father's house; so shall the King desire thy beauty" (Ps. 45:10).

Has that vision, "The King claims me for himself," ever risen on your horizon? And can you continue to pursue your own interests even in God's service? Can you still yield to murmuring, strife and ambition? Can you have a thought which is not for him, or which unfits you to be a member of the Bride of the Lamb. Jacob served seven years for a wife, "and they seemed to him but a few days, for the love he had to her" (Gen. 29:29). King Jesus gave his life for his Bride; is it too much for him to expect of you that

You should purify yourself for His Sake?

You do not find it a ceaseless necessity to purify yourself from everything which the Spirit shows you to be wrong or unnecessary that you may become pure in your own eyes; it is simply because you have understood the divine call to be a member of the Bride. Because Christ cannot associate to himself a bride who does not fully bear his own image, he will take you from crucible to crucible until he sees himself in you. "The woman is the glory ofthe man" (1 Cor. 11:7), the Bride isthe glory of Christ. More fully, from day to day the character of Jesus Christ comes out in her, and the human gives way to the divine. As the living creatures above cannot cease, night or day, saying, "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord God, the Almighty" (Rev. 4:8), so the Bride by her whole life says uninterruptedly, in unison with the Spirit, "Come" (Rev. 17:17).

Must the Lord Jesus be still kept waiting age after age; or, do you think he will at last decide to come whatever may be the state of his Church? No, my brethren, the Holy spirit is faithful; he will succeed in forming a Bride acceptable to Christ, to the glory of God the Father.

And do you know that the whole universe is waiting for this? The whole creation is groaning and travailing in pain together, waiting for the revealing of the sons of God (Rom. 8:19-23). Many will come from the east and from the west, from the north and from the south, while children of the kingdom shall be shut out: "The last shall be first and the first shall be last." If the Church should not awake, the creation itself by its groaning would stand accuser against a Church that would rise to her high calling. The whole creation is in earnest expectation, waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God; and shall those sons of God continue to lead a miserable Christian life, in which the human and Divine are mingled, which can never satisfy the Lord, and which hinders the Spirit's ministry in its highest and central object?

The whole universe is in suspense, but it shall not wait in vain. A Bride shall be presented to him, blameless even in his flaming eyes, and shall enter the Father's house, where she shall be with him forever and ever in the most holy place, "in the midst of the Throne."—O. S.

MOSAIC AND NAZARENE TEACHING CONCERNING GOD—Concluded.

Moses and the Prophets teach One self-existent, supreme fountain of Power, Ail, who is Spirit, and self-named "I Shall Be," or Jehovah; that this ONE JEHOVAH-SPIRIT POWER is "God" in the highest sense, and constitutes the "Godhead," or Father in Heaven; that is the Springhead of many streams, or rivers of spirit which assumes organic forms, according to the will of the Jehovah-Spirit Power, and that when formed after the model, archetype, or pattern presented in His Own Hypostasis or Substance, they become Spirit-Elohim, or Sons of God; and are Spirit, because "born of the Spirit," emanations of the formative Spirit being out of him. The Spirit-Elohim are also "God;" nevertheless they are created. They are formed out of and by that which is uncreated. They are Spirit-Forms, the substance of which (spirit) is eternal; while the forms are from a beginning. Each one is a God, in the sense of partaking of the Divine Nature, and being therefore, a Son of God.

Now if we understand this, we shall be able to discern the force and beauty of the expression, Jehovah-Elohim, which occurs frequently in the Hebrew Scriptures. Jehovah is the name of the Uncreated Power, Elohim, the organizations of that Power after its Image and Likeness whether they belong to the sun, moon and stars of the universe, or to Israel. Hence also the beauty and fulness of the phrase, "I am the Mighty Ones, that formed the earth and made it—I, Jehovah, and none beside"—ani-hu ha-elohim; ani yehowah.

If we comprehend this multiplication and manifestation of Divine Unity, many obscure passages in the English Version of Moses and the Prophets are easy to be understood; and the mind is prepared to understand the otherwise abtruse teaching of Jesus and the Apostles concerning "God." And I would here remark, that in making a new translation of the Scriptures into English, the original words, misrepresented in the Common Version by the Anglo-Saxon words "Lord" and "God," should be left untranslated, but printed at the beginning of the book, a literal definition of the words be given, without regard to "theology," or "plurals of majesty or excellence." The English reader might then be able to perceive how no man has seen God at any time; and yet that Jacob had a personal encounter and wrestle with God; and that Moses talked with him face to face.

When then, we read, "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness," we find Moses teaching the contemporary existence of a plurality of Gods before the creation of man; but we do not, therefore, find him teaching a plurality of Eternities in One Eternity, or Three Gods in One Godhead. This is the notion, not of Moses and the Prophets, who positively declared the contrary; but the crochet of the Old Man of the Flesh, who, professing to be wise, became a fool, "and changed the truth concerning God into a lie." Paul and Moses agreed in this, as we have shown before, saying, "There be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, as there be gods many and lords many." There is consequently no room for dispute on this point. Paul affirms the plurality of gods, and Moses shows that they existed before the creation of man.

But then, both Paul and Moses teach that there is One who is supreme over them all. This is Ail who created them, and who is alone to be an object of adoration, not with the blank amazement of superstition; but of an adoration in an earnest belief of his promises, and willing and loving obedience to his commands. Of this supreme God it is, that Paul says, "There is none other God but one." He is the only Head of the Universe, who will permit none to take precedence of himself in the affection and adoration of his creatures. He does not, however, manifest himself to all the intelligences who reside in the sun, moon, stars, and earth, through the same medium. To us on earth he presents himself, not through Gabriel, but through Jesus as the medium of manifestation,—incipient manifestation, for the manifestation is not yet complete,—"To us there is but one God the Father, out of whom are all things, and we for him; and One Lord Jesus Anointed, on account of whom are all things, and we through him."

Down to the third verse of the second chapter of Genesis, the creation of all things is affirmed of "God," that is, of Elohim or gods. But from the fourth verse to the end of the third chapter, where the Divine power is mentioned, it is not simply "God," but "Lord God," that is, Jehovah Elohim. The Common Version would merely indicate by prefixing Lord to God, that the Lord God and the supreme God. But if this were admitted, we should be unable to reconcile the saying of John and Jesus and Paul, who all declare that "no man hath seen God at any time" (John 1:18; 6:46; 2 Tim 6:16). Now Adam and Eve saw and conversed with the Lord God; and multitudes saw Jesus. But, we remark, that "Lord God" is not used by Moses to express Power Increate Unveiled, or Ail; but as a word-combination synonymous with "Spirit of God" of Gen. 1:2, or literally Ruach Elohim, Spirit of Gods, or Mighty Ones—the One Spirit veiled in the Mighty Ones through whom he made all that was made.

This Spirit was the Father-Spirit, but what was his Name? This was not known until 2163 years after the creation. Adam, Enoch, Noah, Shem, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, were all unacquainted with the Name of the Spirit. "I was apparent," said the Spirit, "to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob as Ail Shaddai; but my name, Ieue, was not known to them." This name consists of four letters printed in small capitals, and styled in Hebrew yod, hay, wav. It is sometimes styled the quadriliteral name, because it consists of four letters. The pronunciation of these letters does not affect the meaning of the word. Jehovah is the pronunciation authorized by the Masorites, who from superstitious motives, declined to mention the name according to its true pronunciation. It is doubtful whether in Exod. 6:3, the name was originally written, for we find in chapter 3:14. it is written Aeia, which without the points may be pronounced, aya, with the English sound of a. The probability is that the Masorites have substituted Ieue all throughthe Bible for Aeia. Be this as it may, the latter word is the name, three times used in Exod. 3:14, which the Spirit conferred upon himself. In his address to the Sanhedrin, Stephen told them that "there appeared to Moses in the wilderness of Mount Sinai, an Angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in a bush; that that the Voice of the Lord came to him, saying, I am the God of thy fathers" (Acts 7:30). This was a Spirit-Manifestation. The Messenger was a Spirit—a Son of Power—but not the Supreme Power, "whom no man hath seen at any time;" but an organized spirit body through whom the Supreme Power by his Spirit conversed with Moses; and with whom he was veiled. The words of the messenger were the Voice of the Spirit that came to Moses; so that when we read what was spoken, we do not read the words of the angel, but the declaration of the Spirit by whom he was angelized, or sent with a message.

Moses was commanded to return to Egypt, from which he had fled forty years before, and to go to his oppressed countrymen, and tell them that "the Elohim of their fathers" had sent him to deliver them from the power of Pharoah. Though they served the gods of the Egyptians, they had not forgotten their own history. They would remember the three Elohim that visited Abraham and partook of his hospitality (Gen 18:1-5), and which is termed "Jehovah appearing to him." They would not have forgotten about their departure to Sodom, and how Lot invited two of them to sojourn with him, saying, "My lords, turn in, I pray you;" and how they said, "Jehovah hath sent us to destroy Sodom." The vision of Jacob's Ladder was not forgotten; in which he saw angels of Elohim—messengers sent of Elohim—of their number, and above them all, at the top of the ladder, Jehovah; and he said, "I am the Elohim of Abraham thy father, and the Elohim of Isaac" (Gen. 28:13). They would remember this, and consequently not be ignorant of the existence of a plurality of Mighty Ones. But these Mighty Ones were not the Mighty Ones of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; they were only the official spirits who performed service for them as heirs of salvation; for he that stood at the top of the ladder, above all the ascending and descending Elohim, said, aui Yehowah, Elohai Avrahhaham, "I Jehovah Elohim of Abraham." Moses knew that they were acquainted with the many Mighty Ones of their history; and that consequently, if he should present himself to them as a messenger of Elohim, they would say to him, "What is his name?" As if they should say, "We have heard of many gods, what is the name of him who sends you?" As Joshua says, they were worshippers of other Gods than Jehovah at the time Moses went to them; Moses was aware of that, and therefore felt the importance of being made acquainted with the name of Him who sent him, that he might be able to answer their question should they ask it.

Under these circumstances the Spirit imposed upon himself a name, and embodied it in a Memorial, by which he was to be known henceforth. Some 430 years before, he had said to Abraham, ani All Shaddai, "I the strength of the Mighty Ones (Gen. 17:1): i. e., All those Mighty Ones of whom you have heard, who were engaged in forming the heavens and the earth: and who recently confounded the speech of all the earth, and are about soon to overwhelm Sodom and Gomorrah—I am the Power by whose spirit they did it all; therefore, "walk before Me, and be thou perfect."

This was a great principle established in the minds of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Moses—that it mattered not how many Mighty Ones they might see, or have interviews with, they were not objects of worship for them; but were themselves Created Powers, whose existence, glory and might, were all of Him, the Uncreated and Eternal Spirit. They, then, were not the Elohim of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.--The Spirit claimed this for his individual self. Not that there were one, two, three, or a multitude of Elohim of Abraham then actually existent in the Spirit or Godhead; but, it was the pleasure of the Eternal Spirit, that there should at a future period be a multitude of Abrahamic Elohim, who shall constitute a Divine Family; and not a whit inferior to "the Sons of the Dawn, the Sons of God," who shouted for joy when they beheld the result of the worders of the Creation-Week. Hence, the Eternal Spirit, in imposing upon himself a name, selected a word which should point towards this wonderful future Manifestation of Spirit. There had been previous manifestations of spirit; and the then already existent Elohim were its fruit. But now a new manifestation was predetermined—a manifestation of Elohim, or Sons of God, out of human flesh and spirit.

With reference to this, "Elohim said to Moses," i. e., they who delivered the words of the spirit; the Eternal Spirit sent them to say for him, "I shall be who I shall be: tell Israel I shall be has sent me, Moses, unto you. I shall be the Mighty Ones of your fathers, the Mighty Ones of Isaac, and the Mighty Ones of Jacob; this is My Name for an Olahm (Aion, or Millennium), and this My Memorial for a generation of the race" (Exod. 3.13, 15).

The memorial in its simplest form is ehyeh asher ehyeh, "I shall be who I shall be." Asher, "who," the relative pronoun in this memorial, is both singular and plural, masculine and feminine. It will, therefore, stand for "ten thousand times ten thousand," as well as for two or three. The other two words of the memorial are the first person singular, future tense of the verb "hayah," "to be." In this memorial, the Eternal Spirit is the "I," and the Elohim of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, are the "who," of whom it is memorialized they "shall be." The reader will observe that it is not "I shall be who tihyenah they shall be;" for, although "who" refers to a plurality, that plurality when developed, is but the manifestation of the One Eternal Spirit.

When this Spirit-Manifestation is developed, is constitutes "the Name for an Olahm." The word "olahm" signifies anything hidden. The Name is multitudinous, embracing "ten thousand times ten thousand, andthousands of thousands" (Dan. 7:10; Rev. 5:11). At the head of whom is he who is "altogether lovely" (Cant. 5:16): nevertheless, all One Spirit, out of whom and for whom "they are manifested."

This Name was not apocalypsed or revealed in the Mosaic Olahm. It was verbally defined, and in that definition we find "Name" and "Glory" used synonymously. Moses said, "I beseech thee show me Thy Glory;" and the Spirit replied, "I will make all my goodness pass before thee; but canst not see my face; for there shall no man see me and live" (Exod. 33:18, 20). Glory and Goodness in Spirit-organization constitute the Name of Ehyeh. It was verbally proclaimed in the words, "Ehyeh or Jehovah, Jehovah Ail, merciful and gracious, long suffering and abundant in goodness and truth, keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that will not clear (the disobedient), visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children unto the third and fourth" (Exod. 34:6). "Thou shalt worship for ail no other; for Jehovah, whose Name is Jealous, a jealous Ail is he" (ver. 14). In passing, we would remark, that this Jealous Name was presented in vision to Ezekiel, in whose writings it is styled, "the Image of Jealousy"—"the Glory of the Elohim of Israel" (Ezek. 8:3, 4).

In Exod. 24:10, Moses tells us, at least the Common Version does, that he and seventy-three others "saw the God of Israel." We should err, however, if we supposed that he meant Ail, the Uncreated Spirit; "no man can see him and live." He says, they saw "the Elohim of Israel"—depositories and embodiments of the Eternal Spirit who shone out in glory in the presence of the Elders. The appearance under the feet of the Elohim, whose feet were also the feet of the Spirit, and therefore, styled "His feet, was as it were a paved work of a sapphirestone, and as it were the body of heaven for clearness." The whole was a Spirit-Manifestation, and illustrative of what is yet to appear in the midst of Israel, when the Elohim of Abraham, constituting the Name of Ehyeh, shall be apocalpsed on Mount Zion.

This was precisely the relation of things before the formation of the Adams, first and second. Before Adam the First, there were thousands of Elohim, yet only one Eternal Spirit. The Name of those thousands was not Ehyeh, or Shall Be; but, as implied elsewhere, Howeh, we-Howeh, "He is and He was," as manifested in the "multitude of the Heavenly Host," was praised, in having glory ascribed to Him in the highest heavens" (Luke 2:13, 14).

In regard to a Name being representative of a multitude, we may refer the reader to the fact, that the Name of Ehyeh is even now comprehensive of all the Saints, living and dead; for every one who believes the promises, and the things concerning Jesus; and is immersed into the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, is "in God the Father and in the Lord Jesus Anointed" (1 Thess. 1:1), and Christ is in him by faith (Eph. 3:17). He is thus "in the name" which is named upon him, and of the Elohim elect, "waiting for the adoption, or redemption of the body," which results in "the manifestation of the Sons of God," at the Olahm, for which they are prepared.—JOHN THOMAS, Deceased.

THE BEAUTY LOVER'S CREED

"I believe in beauty as the manifestation of triumphant life. I believe in looking for beauty everywhere, watching for it, searching for it in the great and in the small, in the unusual and in the commonplace things of this wonderful world. I believe in working for beauty always, planning for it, trying for it in the making of all that has to be made and in the doing of all that has to be done. I believe in living the beautiful live, a life in right relation to the lives of others and in harmony with the eternally unfolding life of God."—Henry Turner Bailey.

There are families who endure miseries untold because they live beyond their means, because they wish to dress and visit and entertain as neighbors do who have tenfold their income. Of this narrow and vulgar ambition a brood of sordid and unwholesome things are born. It is impossible that children shall develop symmetry of character in houses where life is a frantic struggle to appear as grandly as the occupants of the next one appear, the grander being all tinsel and vain show.

Unfaithfulness, evasion of duty, sloth and self-indulgence are everywhere the foes of happiness, and nowhere more surely than in the family. They are largely caused in the home circle by the unfair depreciation so frequently cast upon the share of labor that belongs to the wife and mother. Work that is undervalued or condemned is seldom done in the best manner, and so long as we measure the worth of labor only by the money that it will bring we can not expect to see the best possibilities of the family life realized.

EDITORIAL

Good achieved with labor remains when the labor is forgotten. Pleasure attained by evil is soon forgotten, while the evil remains.

You and your company are sure to assimilate. Therefore be particular and exclusive. "He that walketh with wise men shall be wise."

It is something to "study to be quiet and mind your own business." Not a very high attainment, surely—but too high for some in all ages.

It is amazing how enthusiastic a man becomes "in duty to myself," and how apathetic he is when it is a question of duty to God and neighbor.

"The soul of the sluggard desireth, and hath nothing." His desire "killeth him!" Why? Because "his hands refuse to labor" (Prov. 13:4; 21:25).

Popular faith is the prostration of reason before the throne of superstition. Bible faith is the hearty belief, the joyful reception, the childlike submission to the attested word of God.

The term "dragoon" (British cavalry) is derived from the Roman draconarii, who bore lances ornamented with the figure of a dragon, and were trained to fight both on horseback and on foot.—Fonblanque.

Divine mercy, surpassing the mind of man to conceive, is offered to us by the favor of God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift. Let us gratefully accept it, and escape the reproach incurred by the Jews when Paul and Barnabas said: "Seeing ye judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles." "Let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will let him take the water of life freely."

Brief articles—how scarce they are! You read the concise articles; you enjoy the brief compositions; and you rarely read the long ones, except in part. Others do as you do. If you want your writings read, enjoyed and appreciated, be brief. Go right to the heart of your subject the first stroke. Do not say you are beginning your article—begin; do not say you are concluding it—conclude. With introductory and concluding surplusage omitted, you will soon learn the art of brevity. Brethren, you can not write too many articles for The Restitution, but you can write them too long.

In orthodox churches "long prayers" (Mk. 12:4) are in fashion. Short prayers, however, are more appreciated, and—a very weighty consideration—they are scriptural. When our Master taught his disciples to pray he stated all our temporal and spiritual needs in a few choice sentences, and then said "Amen" (Matt. 6:13). When confronted by sudden danger of drowning Peter made a prayer for his deliverance in this short request, "Lord, save me" (Matt. 14:30). Had he made a long-drawn-out prayer like a preacher of today he would have drowned before he reached the "Amen."

THE GOOD AND TRUE

All through human society good is the most effective instrument with which to conquer evil. Not destruction, but fulfillment, should be our effort. How shall we correct poor and unfaithful labor? By infusing the desire for excellence. How shall we allay discord? By nourishing and developing the germs of love that lie dormant. How shall we cure the faults and follies that we carry about with us in our own characters? By welcoming and nourisihng the opposite virtues which have been neglected. By cultivating an interest in things that are higher we lose the taste for the lower, and by giving everywhere and always our loyal adherence to the good and true and pure we may conquer and outgrow the evil, the false and the corrupt.

THE WIND AND THE HOLY SPIRIT

In a sermon by Dr. James Stalker he gives three reasons why Jesus compared the Holy Spirit to the wind: (1) It bloweth where it listeth; (2) thou hearest the sound thereof; (3) thou canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth. The whole sermon is to show that these also are characteristics of the Holy Spirit. But Jesus did not say, "So is it with the Holy Spirit." What he said was, "So is everyone that is born of the Spirit."

Is not this inference of Dr. Stalker a perversion of his text? Is it not an error in exegesis that has made a great amount of mischief? Does it not lead to the theory that the operation of the spirits is lawless, arbitrary and uncertain? Has it not served to excuse a great many people who wait for the spirit to "move" before they do God's will?

"THEY PROFESS THAT THEY KNOW GOD"
(Titus 1:16)

Professors are not always possessors. You may profess to a be a Christian without possessing Christ. You may have religion apart from regeneration. You may have a "name to live" (Rev. 3:1) and yet "have no life in you" (John 6:53). It is counted respectable to "go to church," to make "a religious profession," to be a nominal Christian, and at the same time indulge in all the pleasures, pastimes and frivolities of the world. To "the sacrament" one day and to the race course the next; to take "holy communion" in the morning, and play golf or cards later; to attend "divine worship" one part of the Lord's day, and go to the theater the other. Such is the popular Christianity of the hour, and it finds ready acceptance with the crowd. But is it of God? Does it please him? Is it real? God hates shams. He disavows religious formality; it is abomination in his sight" (Prov. 15:8; Isa. 1:3). Hypocricy and empty profession meet his withering curse (Matt. 23:23-25), and must yet know his wrath (Rom. 1:18). Reader, make sure your religion is real.

DOING ONE'S BEST

"When a person is urged to accept Christ," writes Milford W. Foshay, "the excuse is often made, 'Oh, I am afraid I can not hold out,' or 'No, I'm not yeady to yet. When I join the church I'm not going to do as lots of Christians I know do. When I go into it I'm going into it for all it is worth!"

Quite right. But when we say, "Come on, then," he does not, and we begin to fear that his position is taken as an excuse only, even if it is a true principle. That each one should do his best when he accepts Christ goes without saying; but that a person should wait until he is sure he can live a faultless life is assuming something that God does not require. The Lord is ready to accept the real intent of the heart to live aright, and toward that perfection for which we should strive he has promised his help.

Moreover, he has promised his assistance to enable us to hold out while we are striving. "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." The best anyone can do is acceptable with God. Paul gives this as a principle of Christian service: "For if there be first a willing mind it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." And Jesus said, "She hath done what she could." He who strives to serve God with a pure heart may be sure that the character of the outward service will be acceptable.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM THE ONLY TRUE GOSPEL

I. The Gospel.

1. The word "gospel" comes originally from "godspel," "god" being an Anglo-Saxon adjective for "good" and "spell" meaning "news." The gospel, then, is good news, or "glad tidings" (Luke 8:1).

2. The gospel is variously described in the New Testament as "The gospel of God" (1), "The gospel of Christ" (2), and "The gospel of peace and salvation" (3).

(1) 1 Thess 2:8; Rom. 1:1 2 Cor. 11:17; 1 Tim. 1:11; 1 Pet. 4:7.
(2) Rom. 1:16; Gal. 1:7.
(3) Eph. 1:13; 6:15.

3. The gospel has been preached to Abraham (1), to the antediluvians (2), to the Israelites in the wilderness (3), to the contemporaries of David (4), to the contemporaries of John the Baptist (5), and to the house of Israel before the death of Jesus Christ (6).

(1) Gal. 3:8.
(2) 1 Pet. 4:6; 2 Pet. 2:5.
(3) Heb. 4:1, 2.
(4) Heb. 4:7.
(5) Mark 1:1; Luke 16:16.
(6) Luke 4:16-22; Mark 1:14; Luke 20:1.

Memory verse: "He taught he people in the temple, and preached the gospel" (Luke 20:1).

4. God has conditioned our salvation upon hearing (1), believing (2), and obeying (3) the gospel; understanding by "the gospel" "the things" reaveled by the "spirit of Christ in the prophets," as well as "the things which are now reported unto us by them that have preached the gospel unto us with the Holy Spirt sent down from heaven" (4).

(1) Deut. 30:10-20; Rom. 10:5-17.
(2) 1 Cor. 1:21; 15:1, 2; Mark 16:15, 16; Rom. 1:16.
(3) 1 Pet. 1:22-25.
(4) 1 Pet. 1:9-12.

II. "The Gospel of the Kingdom."

1. The gospel consists of "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Mark 1:14; Luke 4:18, 43; 8:1; 9:2, 6; Acts 8:12; 19:8; 20:25; 28:23, 30, 31).

Memory verse: "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women" (Acts 8:12).

2. To receive and believe Christ's teachings is to receive and believe God; to reject Christ is to reject his Father who sent him (1). From the beginning of Christ's ministry in Nazareth, where "he had been brought up," to his death on the cross, he preached "the gospel of the kingdom of God" (2).

(1) Matt. 10:40; John 12:44; 15:23; 1 John 2:23; 2 John 9.
(2) Matt. 4:23; 9:35; Mark 1:14; Luke 4:18, 43; 8:1; 9:2, 6, 59.

3. After Christ's resurrection he remained on earth forty days before he ascended to heaven.

He spent this sacred time with his disciples in "speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God" (Acts 1:3).

4. To receive and believe the teachings of the apostles is to receive and believe the teachings of Christ and his Father; to reject their teachings is to reject both the Father and Son (1). These Christ-ordained, God-endorsed and heaven-approved men who had in plentitude "the spirit of truth," which infallibly led them "into all truth" (2), also preached "the gospel of the kingdom" (3).

(1) Matt. 10:40; 18:5; Mark 9:37; Luke 9:48; 10:16; John 13:20; 1 Cor. 8:12; Gal. 4:14.

(2) John 14:17; 15:26; 16:13; 1 John 5:6.

(3) Mark 16:15, 16; Matt. 24:14; Rom. 1:16; Gal. 1:7; Acts 1:8; Col. 1:6, 23.

III. The Gospel of the Kingdom is the Only True Gospel.

1. A double curse has been pronounced against man or angel who shall dare preach "any other gospel," or who shall "pervert" this "gospel of Christ," which is the gospel he preached, namely, "the gospel of the kingdom" (Acts 19:3-10; 20:19-26; Gal. 1:6-9).

Memory verse: "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed" (Gal. 1:8).

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Restitution:

I am sorry that we are late with our renewal for the dear good paper, and make haste to send same along with 50 cents for a few copies of "A Letter to a Friend." We, my husband and myself, are well pleased with The Restitution, and wish to thank one and all for the many good articles which appear in its pages weekly.

I wish to say the several copies of tracts and sermons, "Denying the Faith," I ordered a while back, came to hand, and we are delighted with all, and will say that all who do not thoroughly understand how an individual is born of water and of the spirit should read the tract entitled "The New Birth," by Dr. J. H. Thomas.

Your sister in hope,

MRS. J. W. DISMUKES.

Bro. Huggins:

Enclosed find post office money order for two dollars, for which please send The Restitution to Mrs. Effie Meloy, who became obedient to the faith recently. For the other dollar please send me ten copies of "A Letter to a Friend."

We certainly enjoyed your sermon, "The Mediation of Christ, and Man's Reconciliation to God." We have just closed a series of meetings here. Bro. Robison will send a report soon.

Your sister, set for the defense of the truth as it is in Jesus,

N. B. ROBISON.

OBITUARY

Louisa Wagoner Moore was born in Fulton County, Ind., August 14, 1842, and was one of a family of eight children, forming one of the pioneer households of the county. She was reared here and spent most of her life in this vicinity, except seven years residence in Wisconsin. She died suddenly on the evening of November 22, 1915, at the age of 73 years, 5 months and 19 days. She was married to David Moore in Fulton County June 3, 1866. To them were born two daughters, one of whom died some years ago.

She was baptized by her brother in the flesh, J. F. Wagoner, our brother in Christ, and pioneer preacher of the Church of God in Indiana, and has lived a patient, consistent life in the hope of the faith in Jesus Christ our Lord.

She leaves her faithful husband, one daughter, two brothers, four sisters, and many other relatives to sense the loss of one who has been a loving companion, a good mother, an affectionate sister and a kind friend.

Funeral services were held from the Church of God in Athens at 10 o'clock a. m. Thursday, November 25, 1915, conducted by the writer. The services were attended by many neighbors and friends, attesting to the esteem in which our sister was held. Burial was made in the Hoover Cemetery, where we laid Sister Moore, sweetly resting till he comes who holds the keys of death and the grave. D. E. VAN VACTOR.

BUILDING ON THE ROCK OR SAND

Berean Bible Study

"Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock. And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not, for it was founded upon a rock. And everyone that heareth these sayings of mine shall be likened unto a foolish man which built his house upon the sand; and the rain descended, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell, and great was the fall of it" (Matt. 7:24-27).

A few years ago the government decided to erect a beautiful building in the city of Cleveland to be known as the "General Postoffice, or Government Building." Engineers made an examination of the site selected. A boring was made through the strata. Many feet below the surface a vein of quicksand was discovered, which seemed to forbid the erection of the building at this particular site. The engineer realized that the building must rest upon a solid and reliable base upon which the foundation may rest. After much toil the rubbish and sand were removed, and a foundation of cement and stone was finally laid, upon which the building was erected, andtoday is admired by thousands, not only because of its beauty, but also its durability.

The words of our text are parts of a discourse Christ addressed to those who professed to be followers of God, but whom Jesus declared to be false prophets, teachers and hypocrites. To impress more deeply the solemn declarations just made, our Lord closed his discourse with a most affecting comparison.

Christ is the Rock, the only sure and tried foundation, on which God is building up the church today. Paul says: "For other foundation can no man lay that that is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (1 Cor. 3:10-15).

Isaiah saw and believed in the efficacy of this foundation stone: "Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious cornerstone, a sure foundation" (Isaiah 28:16). David says that this stone would be rejected by the builders (Psa. 118:22). Jesus remembered this prophecy, as recorded in Matt. 21:42. Peter had no foolish notions in his head that he was that stone or rock, for he declared that Jesus Christ is that stone, and none other (1 Peter 2:4-8). Paul, in Ephesians 2:20, tells us that thetwelve apostles and the prophets are also stones in this foundation, but that Jesus is the "chief" or cornerstone that holds the building together.

In considering the kind of building that God is erecting, and the purpose for which the building is intended, I am led to believe that the scriptures suggest that a pyramidal form of building is intended. Jesus said: "The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner. * * * And whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken, but on whomsoever it shall fall it will grind him to powder." The geometrical definition of a pyramid requires that it should have a regular rectilinear base, and plane triangular sides meeting in a point exactly above the center of the base. A building of this character can be complete without the top or "chief cornerstone," which is an exact pyramid itself.

Now notice the apostles and prophets are the foundation stone already laid. Jesus is in heaven at the right hand of the Father. He is the top or "chief cornerstone." Now read Eph. 2:21: "In whom all the building, fitly framed together, groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord." The church is being built up, as Peter says: "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ" (1 Peter 2:4-9).

Jesus, then, being the top stone, is necessarily "the head." In fact, he is a perfect pyramid; all the lines of the building must meet in him. If they in any way diverge, then the building is not plumb. Beloved, get this thought clear in your mind; our life must conform exactly with his life. Peter says: "For hereunto were ye called; because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps" (1 Peter 2:21-23).

Peter was always thinking about this rock, this chief cornerstone (Acts 4:10, 11, 12). If you take a good concordance, and under the word "rock" look up all the references, you will be surprised how much the prophets speak of God as being their rock. Today men are building upon the teachings and philosophical reasonings of Plato, Seneca and many others of the ancient philosophers: deists and moralists are trying to build pleasing and beautiful structures. They must fall, for in the day of judgment (Acts 17:31) they will be found to be erected upon sand.

To build successfully we must hear and do the sayings of Jesus. "All things that pertain to life and godliness" are given us "through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue." This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent" (John 17:3). Knowledge of the first principles is necessary before the first steps can be taken in the Christian life, but that is not all the knowledge required to run successfully the race for the prize of the high calling. "His own glory and virtue," held out before us for admiration and imitation, and the "exceeding great and precious promises," glowingly set forth in his word, operate in us as incentives to persevering effort. Having by his grace in Christ escaped from the corruption that is in the world through desire, there still remains the important work of thorough transformation into the divine likeness. "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove (by practice) what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God" (Rom. 12:2). "So then, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. For it is God who worketh in you (when acting obediently to the teachings of God's word), both to will and to do of his good pleasure" (Phil 2:12, 13). "Wherefore, girding up the loins of your mind, be sober, and set your hope perfectly on the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ, as children of obedience, not fashioning yourselves according to your former desires in the times of your ignorance; but like as he who called you is holy, be ye yourselves also holy in all manner of living; because it is written, Ye shall be holy, for I am holy" (1 Peter 13-16).

As Bereans who delight in Bible study, here are a few specific exhortation and commands which we should study diligently: Matt. 5:3-9; 16:24; Rom. 6:11; 12:9-21; 2:28-32; 3:11-18; 13:13, 14; 1 Cor. 6:5-10; 10:20, 21; Gal. 5:19-21; Eph. 5:3-7; James 3:16; 4:1-17.

In conclusion, beloved, let us then take warning by our Lord's solemn admonations and "examine ourselves whether we be in the faith." and whether we have that love without which all other attainments are are nothing (1 Cor. 13). Let us beware of the spirit of our day—infidelity, profligacy and self-righteousness; of a dead faith, a formal profession, a perversion of the gospel. Let none of us imagine that he builds on the one tried foundation who only hears the words of Christ, but does not obey them. Alas, if we do we are building up on the sand as surely as are those who are enemies of the truth as expressed in the gospel. Our edifice may appear to rise fair and magnificent; but it will crumble when we shall need it most. In the day of his appearing our folly will be manifest to all and our eternal ruin complete and final. GEORGE B. ALLDRIDGE.

JEWISH STATE IS RISING IN ASIA

Zionism Making Home for Persecuted Race in Palestine, Says Louis Brandeis.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—"Zionism is a movement to give the Jews more liberty, not less—the liberty to live in the land oftheir birth or adoption or to go to the land of their fathers," said Louis D. Brandeis, eminent Jewish attorney, speaking here of the material and spiritual beginnings and progress ofthe movement to repopulate Palestine with the Hebrew race.

"Zionism," he said, "is not a movement to transport all the Jews in the world to Palestine. That would be impossible. It is not a movement to drive a single Jew to Palestine, nor a movement to wrest the sovereignty of Palestine from the Turks, but a movement to give the Jews a home in the land of their fathers, where Jewish life may be lived.

Jewish "Pilgrims" Blaze Trail.

"For nearly 2,000 years the Jews have longed for a return to Palestine; now Zionism has come to make that dream a reality through the devotion and self-sacrifice of those who were true to their ideal.

"They sought to establish the principles of democracy and social justice for which we of America are striving. They gave women equal rights.

"The Jewish pilgrim fathers, a small body of Russian and Rumania Jews, a generation ago went to Palestine to work out another great contribution to the world's civilization. Many died, and the survivors suffered. At the end of twenty-five years they established the twogreat propositions on which Zionism rests—that Palestine is fit for the modern Jew and the modern Jew is fit for Palestine.

"First came a revival of the ancient Hebrew language; now the language is in the schools, press and on the platform. The school system is almost complete. The opening ofthe first department of the University of Jerusalem was halted by the war.

"They undertook to solve unemployment. The war stopped exports and threw many men out of work. They went forward with public works. The farmers did work which would ultimately add to the value of their farms. Money was loaned to continue industries. Employed workers permitted their wages to be cut, that others might not be totally unemployed. They did all this without the ability to call upon a government for aid.

Land Rented to People.

"A national fund has been estblished, with which land is acquired and added to a national domain, and leased to the settlers at a rent which will not permit of unearned increment.

"I have been told that in Russia and Galicia, where for centuries poverty has been so deep, there are people who pawned their coats to raise money to buy a share in this fund, to help the national ideal."

What Zionism Has Done in Palestine

Colonies and cities built, after much privation, by Jewish emigrants.

Disease largely eliminated, exhausted soil made productive, the ancient Hebrew language revived, a university is on the point of being established, women have equal suffrage, unemployment practically eliminated and proper housing provided.

Co-operation is being perfected with the aid of the central bank, colonists are placed through a national information bureau, and the spirit of Zionism is inspiring the race throughout the world.

Ideals are the engines that draw men up to the higher planes of being. It is from ideals aspirations spring, and it is by them development is produced.

THOUGHTS

Gold is worth no more than the basest of metals when idle or left in the earth.

The diamond sparkles in the dark. So does a true Christian in this benighted world

"Can't" has one more letter than "can," but one dwells in oblivion, the other moves the world.

Triumph and elevation are shown in all their glory and magnitude in the fact that Jesus said: "Hitherto ye have done nothing in my name." And now we do all things in his name.

It is all right of you feel your oats, but not your rye.

Do not be satisfied with a little; do all you can.

God makes his decisions according to quality, not size. This is true, for the little flock are to get the kingdom.

The blind lead the blind into the ditch. Sleepy Christians put the world to sleep. Paul says: "Awake, thou that sleepest!"

Eye salve will do no good to the destroyed organ; it only cures the defective sight.

ALMUS ADAMS.

TWO ESSENTIALS

The essential things which distinguish one individual from another, which give one man a higher place among his fellows and another a lower, are just two. First of all, perseverance, the ability to keep everlastingly at it; and secondly, imagination or vision, the ability to see beyond the present moment, andto understand that the work at hand reaches beyond the present moment, and so is worth while.—Gifford Pinchot.

Feelings can not be summoned or dismissed by a single effort of the will. They spring unbidden, and stay without a welcome. Yet we can so regulate our thoughts, our associations, our reading, our employments as to foster those feelings which in sober moments we approve, and to restrain or gradually subdue those which are injurious. Especially can we, bya positive culture of the reason and judgment, assert and maintain their supremacy.

You can not keep the straight path with a crooked heart. Never.

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

"PREACHING THE TRUTH"

A Narrative Reciting the Experiences of a Believer Preaching "the Truth as It Is Jesus."—William Brown.

When Timothy returned to the sitting room he found Doris Hamilton ready to start for home. "What: you ready to go so soon? What is your hurry, Doris?" inquired Timothy.

"Why, Timothy, look at the clock, it is past eleven," replied Doris.

"So it is," said Timothy glancing at the clock, "I will go right out an harness Dick; I will be ready in five minutes."

"No, don't do that Timothy, let's walk tonight, it is a beautiful moonlight night and just ideal for a walk," said Doris.

"That suits me perfectly," said Timothy, "I love a moonlight walk; especially when I have good company; and besides it takes a little longer on foot and gives us more time for conversation."

The young people were soon out on the country road wending their way toward Doris' home. The road to the Hamilton residence took them along the side of one of hills among which the village nestled. The road commanded a splendid view of the valley, every tree and field and housetop of which was now discovered by the clear, soft silvery moonlight, by which also the hills across the valley were clearly outlined. It was one of those nights that make one regret the demands of nature that call upon us from the enjoyment of its soothing insidious influence, to spend the remainder of the night within the walls of our bedchamber. About half a mile from Timothy's home the road descended to a lower level and was cut by a stream over which a bridge was built. The scenery here was entrancing. As one stood upon the bridge and let his vision follow the direction of the stream, he could see far down its course the moonlight gleaming upon the water with here and there the shadow of a tree thrown across the stream.

The scene is one of tranquility and peace. The stillness is broken only by the rippling laughter of the brook; as on contemplates the scene he is impressed as never before with the force of the prophetic statement concerning Jrrusalem. "Behold I will extend peace to her like a river" (Isa. 66:12).

The bridge was a favorite spot with Timothy and Doris; many a pleasant hour they had spent together there, but tonight they were strangely absorbed with other matters. Doris had received an answer to the question which had troubled her; she could not deny the truth of the answer and yet her equanimity was deeply disturbed by the fact that to accept it involved the sacrifice of her most cherished belief. She had purposely asked Timothy to walk home with her so that they could discuss the matter along the way.

Timothy opened the discussion. "Well, Doris, you have had an opportunity to hear Mr. Stephanas tonight," he said, "What do you think of his arguments?"

"Well, to be candid, Timothy, I was deeply impressed by what he said; I searched my memory in vain for an answer to his reasoning. He seemed to leave no ground for one to stand upon. Do you think it possible that these cherished tenets of our faith, which are the heritage handed down to us from past generations, and for which our forefathers shed their blood, do you really think, Timothy, that they are false?"

"I don't like the thought of it, Doris," replied Timothy, "but like you I have been unable to find solid ground to stand upon, and as far as our forefathers are concerned you know, Doris, if we follow our ancestry back far enough we find them steeped in ignorance and superstition. I also was deeply impressed with the thought you have just expressed and have been trying to find an answer to it. I find that the Christians to whom the apostle Peter spoke had a similar experience, for he reminds them that they had been redeemed from "vain conversation received by tradition from their fathers" (1st Peter 1:18). So it is evident that they had to set aside the traditions of their fathers when they accepted the gospel as preached by Peter."

"That is not the only point," replied Doris; "Look at the intelligent people who study and preach our faith and who love and revere the Bible: if what this man has been telling us tonight be true their intelligence has profited them nothing and they are deceived and deluded; do you think such a thing possible, Timothy?"

"What has happened in the past can easily happen again," replied Timothy, "in fact, we find history continually repeating itself. Look at the Apostle Paul before his conversion to Christ, brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, educated in a manner second to none in his day, fully conversant with the Scriptures and yet absolutely deceived and deluded as to their true teaching, full of zeal in his false belief and persecuting those who really knew 'the truth,' and who were for the most part poor, illiterate and despised. You will remember how he was brought to see that his learning and intelligence had profited him nothing as far as finding 'the truth' was concerned; and after his conversion he remarked on a certain occasion that 'it is written—I will destroy the wisdom of the wise and bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent;' and also that 'the world by wisdom knew not God' (1 Cor. 1:19, 21). Speaking of his own countrymen on another occasion he said, 'I bear them witness that they have a zeal of God but not according to knowledge' (Romans 10:2). So you can see, Doris, that it is not a question of intelligence of worldly wisdom, or even zeal; but a question of having a proper understanding of what the scriptures teach."

"Why Timothy, one would almost think you were a disciple of Mr. Stephanas," said Doris.

"No danger of that Doris," said Timothy. "Mr. Stephanas does not want disciples to follow him, he would be highly indignant at the suggestion. I would not be surprised though if he were to succeed in materially changing my views as to what the scriptures teach concerning salvation."

"Do you think it possible, Timothy, that you could ever leave the old church?" asked Doris in a serious tone.

"I think I could, Doris, if I was fully convinced that it as wrong," replied Timothy.

"I am afraid, Timothy, Mr. Stephanas has had an evil influence over you. I feel sure his arguments can be met; I am going to speak to father and ask him to meet this man who is disturbing our religious equanimity and see if he can not put him to silence once and for all. Doris spoke with great earnestness, and determination was clearly read in the expression of her face. By this time they had reached Doris' home and they bid each other good night.

Doris retired with a troubled mind; she seemed to have a premonition of approaching evil. The events of the evening had first pleased and then alarmed her, and now, try as she might, she could not succeed in dismissing the matter from her mind, and not until far into the night did sleep at last put an end to her troubled cogitations.

Next morning Doris appeared at the breakfast table locking a trifle pale. Her mother and her brother, noticing the pallor, inquired anxiously as to how she felt. Doris assured them that there was no cause for alarm, as she felt quite well.

"You were rather late in getting home last night, were you not, Doris?" inquired her father.

"Yes, father, Mr. Stephanas, the blacksmith-preacher, was visiting the Bereas and we had a discussion in which we became so deeply absorbed that we never noticed how time was flying," replied Doris.

"Oh, yes, I remember now, Mrs. Berea told me she expected a visit from this man Stephanas. I went over some of the disputed points with her and pointed out to her some of the weak points in his arguments. I have no doubt he found her well prepared to answer his sophistries," said Mr. Hamilton.

"Well, the fact is," replied Doris, "that neither Mrs. Berea nor any of us could answer his arguments; in fact, they seemed unanswerable; they were composed almost entirely of plain simple statements from the Bible, and to deny them would mean the rejection of the Bible. at least so it seemed to us. At any rate we were like children in his hands; we could only listen while he quoted and explained the scriptures to us."

"Why, Doris, you surprise me! I thought you at least could give a good and sufficient reason for the hope that is within you," said Mrs Hamilton.

"I thought so, too." said Doris, "but this illiterate blacksmith seemed to knock the whole foundation from under us. He overwhelmed us with scripture testimony that seemed plainly to teach just the opposite of what we have always been taught to believe. Mrs. Berea and myself were much troubled over the matter."

"Where was Timothy during this discussion?" inquired Arthur Hamilton, Doris' brother.

"Timothy was there listening with the rest of us," replied Doris.

"Listening, eh? Did he not attempt to answer this man's sophistries?" asked Mr. Hamilton.

"No, father, he made no attempt to answer, and in fact he seemed to be deeply impressed and pleased with the things which he heard," said Doris.

"Nonsense, Doris!" said Mr. Hamilton, "how could a man of Timothy's intelligence and standing in the community be impressed with the dogmatisms of an illiterate blacksmith?"

"It was not his assertions, father," said Doris, "but the testimony of the scriptures, which he brought forward to support his assertion, which seemed to impress Timothy. You know the Berea family are noted for their love of the scriptures, and they have been searching the scriptures to see if these things are so, and the result has been a deep impression that they are true. Timothy told me last night that he would not be surprised if he had to modify his views as to what salvation is and how it is to be obtained. It was a shock to me to hear Timothy talk in that way, and I could not get to sleep for a long time after I retired last night. I made up my mind that I would ask you, father, to come to our rescue and show the fallacy of this man's arguments, for I feel sure he must be wrong and that his arguments can be met, and you are the only one we can turn to with the hope of stemming the tide of this heresy."

The pallor had now disappeared from Doris' face, and in its place was the flush of excitement upon her cheeks; she spoke earnestly, almost appealingly, to her father, and she was quite successful in communicating her fervid interest in the subject to him and the others at the table.

"I shall be glad and shall consider it my duty to do all that I can in the matter. What would you suggest? Shall I give a special course of sermons, or do you think it would be better if I were to talk privately with Timothy?" asked Mr. Hamilton.

"I would suggest, father, that you arrange a debate with Mr. Stephanas and invite the villagers to be present," said Doris.

"What! I debate with an ordinary laymen, an illiterate blacksmith? Surely Doris you would not desire me to lower the dignity of my high office by such a procedure," exclaimed the clergyman.

"I would not desire it, father, if I could see any other way to save Timothy and others from contamination with these heretical doctrines. You see they meet him daily at the shop, where he lays his arguments before them with no one to answer them, and as they are for the most part unlearned in the scriptures the result is an impression is made upon them which they are apt to retain unless something is done to counteract it. Now my theory is that if you meet him in public debate and answer his arguments before the townspeople, the people will be fortified against his reasonings, and his influence will cease."

"Don't you think, father, you could do this for the sake of our old faith and to save some of our people from spiritual destruction?" pleaded Doris.

The old clergyman felt the force of his daughter's logic, and after remaining silent for a moment or two he said: "Well, Doris, it is a great sacrifice of one's dignity to even consider such a thing, but I want to do all I can for my fellow-men; I will consider the matter and let you know later." With this remark he arose and retired to his study.

On the evening following the day on which Doris Hamilton and her father had the conversation at the breakfast table Paul Stephanas, after a hard day's work at the shop, was busily engaged preparing notes for his talk at the schoolhouse Saturday night.

A knock at the door brought Mrs. Stephanas from the kitchen. On opening the door she was surprised to see Timothy Berea, who inquired if Mr. Stephanas was home. Mrs. Stephanas assured him that her husband was home and would be glad to see him. Timothy was ushered into the sitting room where the blacksmith was seated with his Bible open before him, and after the usual salutations Timothy began at once to state the object of his visit.

"You will be surprised," he said. "when I tell you what I have come to see you about; you may not be aware of the fact, but your preaching and your conversations at the forge with those who come into your shop have become a source of alarm to some of our leading church members. They seem to fear that your doctrines will cause some of the weaker members to leave the church and believe the things which you teach."

"I sincerely hope," said Paul, "that not only some of the weaker members, but some of those who are considered 'pillars,' will have their eyes opened to God's everlasting truth, and will have the courage to face any opposition that may come as a result of their acceptance of that truth."

"From your point of view that is quite right," said Timothy, "but still from their viewpoint you can hardly blame them for being somewhat alarmed when they see indications of an undermining influence at work."

"Yes, but all my efforts have been open and above board; I have spoken openly and have invited discussion, and have always stood ready to answer questions as far as I was able to do so," said Paul.

"I quite agree with you, Mr. Stephanas," said Timothy; "you have struck straight out from the shoulder, and I can personally testify that I have felt the force of some of your blows; but what I wish to speak about is this, the religious equanimity of this community has been disturbed by your preaching of what you call 'The Truth,' and a plan has been evolved by which your teaching can be put to the test to see whether it really is 'The Truth;' and I have come tonight to see whether you will agree to the arrangement. To come directly to the point, Mr. Stephanas, it becomes my duty to ask you to engage in a debate upon the doctrinal points you have raised with Mr. Hamilton, the pastor of our village churuch. What do you say?"

Paul Stephanas was so much surprised that he could not for a moment find words to answer; recovering from his surprise, however, he said: "Well, Idon't know, Mr. Berea; you see, I am only a poor mechanic with very little education, while Mr. Hamilton is a learned man, and therefore has a great advantage over me. Would it not be better for me to send for one of our brethren who is better educated and who could meet Mr. Hamilton on more equal ground?"

"I don't think that would do at all," said Timothy; "you are the one concerned in this controversy, and I thing it devolves upon you to support the position you have taken and for you to show that it is scriptural."

"Well," said Paul, "I have no desire to run away, but I believe in giving the truth the best possible chance by putting its best exponent to the front: however, if it must devolve upon me to defend it I will, with God's help, do my best, and I can assure you I am ready in my own humble and unlearned way to give to every man that asketh a reason for the hope that is within me with meekness and fear."

"Past experience," said Timothy, "has led me to believe that you will give a good account of your stewardship. It has been suggested that the debate take place in the schoolhouse next week, beginning Tuesday evening, and to continue as many evenings as may be necessary. However, if you wish more time to prepare we can arrange it for a later date."

"It makes no difference to me," said Paul; "I am ready at any time. What is to be the subject of the discussion?"

"It has been suggested," said Timothy, "that the first night be taken up with the subject of 'The Reward of the Righteous,' the proposition to read: 'Resolved, that the righteous are rewarded by being taken to heaven at death; Mr. Hamilton affirms, Mr. Stephanas denies.'"

"That will suit me very well," said Paul.

"Well, I must hurry over to Mr. Hamilton's and tell him of your acceptance of the arrangement," said Timothy, rising to go. "Have you any suggestion as to a chairman for the evening " he continued as they walked to the door together.

"I can think of no one but yourself, Mr. Berea; you know I have no friends here," said Paul.

"Well, we will see about that later," said Timothy; "good night, and don't forget Tuesday night. The whole village will be there."

Timothy went directly to the Hamilton residence and reported his success in getting Mr. Stephanas to agree to a debate. It was Doris who had requested him to see the blacksmith and make arrangements with him, and her father had reluctantly consented to engage in a public discussion.

That evening arrangements were made to have Timothy preside throughout the debate.

Mr. Hamilton was far from bein enthusiastic about it; he acted like a man who was about to go through an unpleasant experience, which he could find no way to evade. Nevertheless he was determined to do his duty as he saw it plainly before him.

The debate as announced at the schoolhouse on Saturday night, at the close of Paul Stephanas' lecture, which was well attended.

It was also announced on Sunday morning at the village church, after which it became the one great subject of conversation throughout the village.

MEANING OF THE WORD "CONVERSION"

"What is meant by being "born from above?" Jesus said in Matthew : "Except ye be converted." I see the R. V. renders it: "Except ye turn." Wherein is the difference? These two phrases are very significant. They are well worthy of consideration and richly repay it.

(1) The former occurs in the New Testament only in John 3:3, 7; and here the proper rendering is uncertain. It may be either "born again" (A. V.), "born anew" (R. V.)—the meaning stereotyped in the theological term "regeneration," or born from above" (margin of both versions). The ambiguous word is capable of either significance. It bears the latter ("from above," i. e. from heaven) in John 3, 31; 19:11; James 1:17; 3:15, 17; and the latter ("again," "anew," "over again") in Gal. 6:9: "in bondage over again." The divergence is easily understood. The literal meaning of the word is "from above," and its connection determined its significance. Thus, it was used of tracing a river "from its source." and so of doing a thing "over again from the beginning." E.g., in writing his Gospel Luke promises to correct the errors which had crept into the sacred history by "tracing the course of all things accurately from the first" (1:3, R. V.). i.e., going back to the source and following the course of events. So also it is written (Matt. 27:51; Mark 15:38) that "the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom." And in the only other passage where John uses the term besides those already quoted, he says that our Lord's seamless coat was "woven from the top throughout" (19:2?), i.e., from first to last in one piece. The rendering "born anew" is thus quite legitimate, and it would signify that salvation is a radical and far-reaching work—not merely the repairing of a broken edifice, but its rebuilding from top to bottom; but John's usus loquenti rather favors the rendering "born from above." The idea is that salvation is not merely self-reformation, but the coming down of a new life into the soul. It is life that we need, and we cannot originate it, according to the scientific maxim: omne vivum ex vivo. It must come from without, from God.

(2) Conversion. This is a useful term expressing an essential truth: nevertheless in its common use it is not a scriptural term, and it will teach us a needful and important lesson if we consider how the word is employed in the New Testament. It is impossible to enter here into a technical discussion. Suffice it to say that the Greek word means simply "turn," and is either transitive or intransitive. Transitively it means "make one turn round and face the other way" (Luke 1:16, 17; James 5:19, 20). It is the word used in Ezek. 34:4 (Greek version) of a shepherd "bringing back" a wandering sheep. Again, it is used transitively of "returning" (Matt. 12:44; 24:18; Luke 2:39), or "wheeling sharply round" (Mark 8:33; Acts 16:19; Rev. 1:12). "Convert" is here a permissible rendering if the word be understood in its proper sense of "turn"; and the important fact is that the Greek term is never used passively in the New Testament. That is to say, it means always "turn," never "be turned" or "converted." There are three passages where the Authorized Version has erred by ignoring this. One is Matt. 18:3, where, though the Greek word is indeed passive in form, it is active in meaning—a Middle Passive, as grammarians put it (7:6; 9:22; 16:23). The second passage is Luke 22:32. In neither of these cases is it "conversion" in the popular sense that is meant, since our Lord is speaking to the Apostles. They were already "converted," but they had taken the wrong road, and they needed to "face round and return." The third passage is the quotation from Isaiah in Matt 13:15 (cf. Mark 4:12; John 12:40; Acts 28:27). Here the scriptural usage plainly appears. There are five stages: (1) "See with their eyes"; (2) "hear with their ears"; (3) "understand with their heart": (4) "turn"—each the sinner's act; and then (5) God does his part by "healing them." Conversion, in New Testament language, is not God's work, but the sinner's. God calls, the sinner hears and "turns," and then God saves him. It is unscriptural to ask: "Are you converted?" Conversion is not a blessing to be prayed for and waited for; it is a duty to be performed, and performed now. God is calling to us; he has been calling to us all our days; and if we be unsaved, the reason is that we have never "converted," never hearkened to his call and turned—David Smith.

SUNDAY IN MOVIES

Writer in "Public Pulse" Wants to Know Who Is Lying.

Writing in the Public Pulse department of the Omaha World-Herald, Almus Adams reviews Billy Sunday's remarks on picture shows and cites a recent story in The Mediator about Sunday himself being shown in the "movies" over in Iowa. He suggests that if the story is not true, The Mediator be forced to swallow it.

Mr. Adams is quite right and the editor accepts the challenge. Sunday appeared in pictures at Boone, Iowa, and was well advertised, both in the Boone papers and in posters, which were given unusual prominence. Copies of them are on file in The Mediator oifice.

Mr. Adams' contribution to the Public Pulse follows:

Let Us Have the Truth.

Omaha, Oct. 11.—To the Editor of the World-Herald: Every person who believes in law and order and good citizenship would rejoice in anything done to this end, no difference where it came from. But it is a law of nature, soundly fixed, that you cannot get sweet and bitter water from the same source. You don't gather figs from olive trees.

Now, I have read Mr. Sunday's sermons in your paper, and have heard him as well. We all know how roughly he has denounced picture shows and the theatres. And now comes The Mediator, a weekly paper, printed in Omaha, and tells us that Billy Sunday is a headliner in a movie show in Boone, Iowa. I read in the paper since Sunday arrived where "Ma" Sunday said that Billy had been offered large sums by the movie men, but had declined because he had denounced picture shows, etc. But if what the Mediator says is true this is about the biggest piece of hypocrisy ever pulled off?

To simply ignore this is not enough. The people want the truth and they should have it. Are the ministers of this city ignoring these things because they want the results and know results would fail if the truth were known? If it were my case I would make The Mediator swallow all that, or let the people know who the liars were.

Again, the limit of hypocrisy has about been reached when people make a profession of religion and pretend to be "trail hitters" just to fool some one and make them move. For a man who claims to be so sensitive to wrong to be the instigator of such a deception is astounding.

Let us have the truth—in methods, in doctrine, in practice. Will the people demand it?

ALMUS ADAMS.

COME TO CHRIST

The Holy Scriptures of truth most solemnly declare that the great "day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men" is NEAR, yea, and "HASTETH GREATLY" upon a slumbering world (Zeph. 1:14-18; 2 Pet. 3:7-10). How this fact thrills our whole being as we anticipate its near and swift approach (Joel 2:1-11)! There will be but two classes in that grand yet awful day—the righteous and the wicked (Matt. 25:31-46). To which class, dear reader, do you belong? Christ is NOW inviting you graciously and by various media: "And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And he that heareth, let him say, Come. And he that is athirst, let him come: he that will, let him take the water of life freely" (Rev. 22:17). Thus are you invited and urged to come (John 4:14; Rev. 21:6).

Oh, reader, heed the invitation and heed it NOW! Come unto Christ and receive freely the water of eternal life (John 7:37). Why resist his tender appeal longer? THE GREAT JUDGMENT DAY DRAWETH ON APACE (Isa. 13:6-13)! Will you not accept him today? Tomorrow may be too late! "Behold, NOW IS THE ACCEPTABLE TIME; behold, NOW IS THE DAY OF SALVATION" (2 Cor. 6:2). Do not delay lest you perish. "How shall we escape if we NEGLECT so great a salvation" (Heb. 2:3)? The living waters of salvation are free, for "he that hath no money" is invited to come (Isa. 55:1). Yes, God wants you to come, for he says, through one of his prophets: "Turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die" (Eze. 33:11). You may not be a vile sinner, yet Christ says to all alike, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish" (Luke 3:13). Even if you have fallen into the lowest depths of sin, the Lord declares: "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool" (Isa. 1:18). Believe God, when he says: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:9). Concerning the Son of God and his precious name, we read: "And in none other is there salvation; for neither is there any other name under heaven, that is given among men, wherein we must be saved" (Acts 4:12; Eph. 1:20, 21; 1 Tim. 2:5, 6).

The offers of Christ are frank and free. Let none fear. Let none hesitate. Blessed Saviour, give us grace to accept of thy gracious offers of salvation; then shall we gladly thank thee from the bottom of our hearts (Eph. 2:8). How appreciative we should be for the grace of Christ that enables us to accept of his offers of eternal salvation (2 Cor. 12:9)! While it is called TODAY, the great God of heaven commands men everywhere in all tenderness to hear and obey the voice of his only begotten Son: "TODAY IF YE SHALL HEAR HIS VOICE, HARDEN NOT YOUR HEARTS" (Heb. 3:7, 8, 15). This loving command of God is always today; for he ever demands present obedience (Psa. 95: 7, 8). Yes, the voice of Christ is TODAY tenderly calling all sinners to himself: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matt. 11:28-30). Surely none need to be miserable, for by submission to Jesus Christ, trust in him, and obedience to his gracious invitations, all may enjoy the fullness of life, and be happy forever; but of those who hear and obey not the voice of the Savior the apostle Paul writes: "Who shall suffer punishment, even eternal destruction from the face of the Lord, and from the glory of his might" (2 Thess. 1:9; Rom. 2:7, 8; Mal. 4:1).

Oh, then let us listen to Christ's gracious invitations, and before he shall appear as judge, come to him as the sinner's friend, weary and heavy laden, burdened with sins and sorrows of every kind—let us come to Christ as we are!

Do not let us take up false notions of Christ's religiou—it is not a heavy yoke, but a pleasant one. "His commandments are not grievous, but his service is perfect freedom;" and "in keeping his commandments there is exceedingly great reward." Let us receive his gracious truths and submit to his gracious laws, for thousands can bear testimony to the veracity of his word, "My yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matt 11:30; John 5:3; Psa. 19:7, 8, 11).

H. R. STARK.

As the happiness conferred by grateful appreciation and glad responsiveness is as real as any that exists, whoever grudgingly withholds it is as really selfish in so doing as the miser who clutches his gold when men are starving around him.

What better can we do with the misfortunes of life, is unfavorable circumstances, sorrowful events, disagreeable passages, failures, and discouragements, than to forget them speedily? Their perpetual remembrance can bring only distress and weakness, and will unfit us for the pressing duties of life, which demand all our energies. This art of forgetting may not be easy—no art worth learning is—but it is not impossible.

EDITORIAL

The Restitution tenders Bro. and Sister Adams heartfelt sympathy in the loss they have sustained in the death of their daughter.

Bear you present troubles with as much resignation as you can. You can stand all you now have; but if you try to shoulder all the troubles you have had, all you now have, and all you expect to have, the burden will be more than you can carry.

November 21st two more friends abandoned the world and joined hands with the Lord's called out ones by being baptized into Christ, namely, Lester Grief, son of Bro. and Sister Grief, and Miss Lucille Hamley, formerly Baptist. We welcome this young brother and sister into our fellowship, and may they make their calling and election sure. Time is short; it is high time to wake up and discharge the duties of the truth seriously. The Judge stands at the door. Are we ready?

The different churches of Christendom are built on and have no other foundation than a hobby. The Baptists harp on immersion, the Methodists on sprinkling, the Seventh Day Adventists on the Sabbath, the Second Adventists on the Lord's coming, the Hard Shell Baptists on predestination, the Dunkards on triune immersion, and the Campbellites on baptism, water. Usually you will find the preacher of the different denominations well posted along the well beaten path of his particular hobby; but as to a familiarity with the various principles of the gospel, he is shamefully ignorant. He only thinks, talks and preaches about his pet theory. Hence he becomes lopsided.

It appears from our exchanges that prophetic students are divided in opinion as to who the king of the North is, some advocating that he is Russia, others that he is Turkey. We have never looked into this subject critically, having always assumed that Russia filled all the requirements of prophecy. The faces of all the warring nations are now turned toward Constantinople; something of a very extraordinary nature will soon happen to Constantine's city. We believe that just now is an opportune time to discuss this question, "Who is the King of the North?" We suggest a friendly discussion of this question among our brethren. Perhaps Bro. A. D. Strickler, of New York. will defend the Russian theory, and Bro. S. H. Thomas the Turkish. Will these brethren please give us a state in our investigations on this prophetic theme?

A Campbellite, so the story goes, wearied his congregation by constantly harping on baptism. A brother became restive under his preaching and set about to devise a plan to switch the minister off of his hobby. The result was, he handed the preacher Prov. 13:15 and requested him to give a sermon on that text the next Sunday. He felt good through the week, anticipating a good sermon on the following Sunday. The brother could see no water in the text, and though his minister could not find any; he felt sure they would have a "dry" sermon Sunday morning. Sunday morning came. "Brethren and friends," began the preacher, "my text this morning is Prov. 13:15. I preach upon it by special request of a brother. The text reads, 'The way of the transgressor is hard.' There are three thoughts suggested by this scripture: 1, the transgressor: 2. his conversion; 3, his baptism. We will pass over the first two thoughts and come at once to the third." And the preacher rode his hobby again for ane and one-half hours.

ABSURDITIES OF RUSSELISM

A correspondent, who has read more of Russelism than is good for him, sends an article advocating a universal "fair chance" for every individual of Adam's race, irrespective of his merit or choice in the matter. He builds his theory upon Isa. 35:9, and misquotes it as reading, "Fools shall err in that age." The text correctly quoted reads as follows: "An highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called the The Way of Holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein."

The reflecting reader will please note that instead of this text favoring Russellism, it refutes, in the plainest terms, that very ism. In direct opposition to Russellism it teaches that:

1. "The Unclean" will exist simultaneously with the holy. Granting that chronologically the text applies in the reign of Christ, instead of all being restored to God, enjoying his salvation in holiness and happiness, "the unclean" shall exist!

2. "Though Fools." From this it appears that beside "the unclean" there will be "fools" in the age to come! Russell's theory regarding a "fair chance" for all in the future, gets its plausible coloring from his "fair speeches" about the inability of so many now—they are mentally incapacitated for the gospel now. Thus arises his stentorian claim that the handicaps of the present are to be removed in Christ's reign, and for this very reason a "fair chance" is made possible for those who have it not. But by some means, either "fair" or foul, "the unclean" and "fools" slip through Russell's fingers into the golden age of restitution! If fools have no chance now, and they are still fools in the age to come, they will suffer on this account the lack of a chance then as they do now.

3. "Shall not err." We have heard Mr. Russell repudiate from the public platform Universalism; but he is a Universalist notwithstanding. If the unclean and fools are to be given a fair chance, and "shall not err therein," they certainly cannot miss being saved; and surely if the unclean and fools are all saved, the holy and the wise will not be cast off! Reader, be thou wise as a serpent, and harmless as a dove; do not let Russellism deceive you.

PRINCES IN THE EARTH

Give an exposition of Psalm 65:16.—G. L. Muncrief.

Editor's Reply

"Instead of the fathers shall be thy children, whom thou mayest make princes in all the earth." In the first verse of this Psalm the writer says by way of introduction that his statements are "touching the King." From the first verse to the tenth he describes the King—his beauty, grace, justice, majesty, throne, righteousness and garments. As he is soon to be married, the writer begins in the tenth verse to describe his bride, the saints of God; and because they are to be united in marriage to Christ they are appropriately designated as a "daughter" (vs. 10). He urges her to consecrate herself wholly to the Lord, and that he is her "Lord," and deserves her worship (vs. 11). That she may appear before the Master and Husband in unblemished purity, he asks her to "forget her people," even her "father's house" (vs. 10). Presuming that she obeys these conditions, he dilates upon her riches, favor, clothing, raiment, needlework, companions, and consummates the narrative by picturing her entering the "King's palace" where the marriage of the Lamb occurs with gladness and rejoicing (verses 10, 15). Then "instead of thy fathers," whose house thou left when thou wast espoused to thine husband (verse 10), "shall be thy children." The church, the bride, when married to the bridegroom, will be "fruitful, and multiply, and subdue the earth;" she will become the mother of a host of children;" and these, instead of being the serfdom of that age over whom saints lord it, as Russellism teaches, are to be honorable and princely—all of them "princes," and having a name "better than of sons and of daughters" (Isa. 56:5).

MIRACULOUS CONVERSIONS AND REFORMATIONS

Brother Huggins:

Please answer the following questions in The Restitution:

1. Are there any heathen religions beside some of the Protestant churches that have "miraculous conversions?"

2. How do you account for the reformed lives of some very wicked people after their miraculous conversion?

Your Brother, E. M. H.

Editor's Reply

1. The Israelites in the degenerate days of the prophet Malchai "Covered the altar of the Lord with tears, with weeping, and with crying out," the like of which may be seen at the so-called "mercy-seat" of a modern revival. Though his altar was literally "covered" with the tears and sighs of apostate Israel, he adds that God did not "regard" nor "receive" with "good will" their worship (Mal. 2:13). Though here practiced by fallen Israel, this mode of worship was really of Pagan origin. The Baalites, we learn from 1. Kings 28:26, called on Baal "from morning until noon." "And they leaped upon the altar which was made." Literally as the margin reads, "They leaped up and down at the altar." In plain English, they danced round the altar in a frenzy of spirit, tossing their heads to and fro with unseemly bodily contortions, accompanied with groans and cries and gesticulations. The inspired description of their worship is continued in verse 28: "And they cried aloud, and cut themselves, after their manner, with knives and lancets, till the blood gushed out opon them." "After their manner" refers to the rites of their religion. They reasoned that if the blood of their sacrifice would not move Baal to mercy their own blood might. Their "manner" therefore was to cut themselves with knives and lancets, and thus smear both themselves and their sacrifice with blood. Such was the "manner" of idolatrous Israelites, Syrians, Persians, Greeks, Indians, etc. Between this heathenish manner of worship and the foolish antics of modern theology when supposed "miraculaus conversions" occur, there may be traced many similarities.

2. The good morals of people who were formerly immoral after they have been "converted" in the manner described, is to be admitted (sometimes), and explained just like an infidel whom we once knew, and was reformed of the drinking habit. Doctors told him he had consumption, and would die soon if he continued to drink intoxicants. He "reformed" immediately, and is now a well man.

Many reasons not of a religious nature often reform a man. "Morality" is a very vague term today; it stands often for a code of human whims of man's own devising. When God made man he gave him everything created, animals and all herbs, absolutely everything (Gen. 1:27, 28). The tree in the midst of the garden (Gen. 3:8) was the only thing God prohibited man from using. God's laws are not prohibitive, but regulative and governmental. Not satisfied with God's standard of morality, the world has dictated "Commandments and doctrines of men;" they have passed "ordinances" which forbid you to "touch" this and "taste" that, and "handle" the other thing (Col. 2:20, 21). In this they make a "shew of wisdom," and pretend some "humility;" but their morality is purely human. Morals are good in their place, but they cannot of themselves change the sinner to a saint, a child of the devil to child of God. Only a chance of relationship can do this (Gal. 3:26, 27).

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed find money order for renewal of The Restitution. I cannot do without the dear old Restitution; it has been in the family over 40 years. It is all the preacher I have, as I am living in a community of orthodox churches. I do enjoy the sermons and letters from the brethren and sisters each week. Bro. Huggins' sermon in November 2nd issue I think is excellent, and the contributions are all very interesting. I have always wished I could write like some of the brethren, but I do not have the gift, so do not try.

Yours looking for the coming of Christ and his Kingdom, HUGH MONTGOMERY.

Dear Brethren:

Enclosed find postoffice order for one dollar and fifty cents to renew my subscription for another year. The Restitution has always been a welcome visitor to my home for over thirty-five years. Yours in hope of the soon coming of the Kingdom. MRS. M. G. CALKINS.

Bro. Huggins:

As our time for The Restitution is about expired, will send you one dollar and fifty cents to renew. After taking the paper for one year, we feel that we cannot do without it. Have received much benefit from the writers. We would like to take the stand for Christ, but there is no one of the faith near here that we know of.

Yours truly,
J. E. WILSON.

"AWAKE THOU SLEEPER"

Eph. 5:14. (N. V.)

The word "awake"! with all its Scriptural meaning has been burning upon my heart these last few days. I believe it is a stirring call from the Lord and for each fellow member of his body.

The verse which attracted my attention is found in Luke 9:32: "When they were fully awake, they saw his glory." The disciples, in a very true sense were with the Lord on the Mount of Transfiguration, yet in the midst of all "they were heavy with sleep." Meanwhile, a wondrous thing had transpired concerning the Lord's glory, but it was only when they were fully awake that they saw it! I believe, in a very special sense, the Holy Spirit would apply the word to those of us who claim risen union and Fellowship with the Risen Christ.

We are living in perilous times—the later days. The very atmosphere is charged with apostasy and unbelief. We are yet in this "present evil world," and unless we are kept with quickened spirit, utilizing every means of grace, and entering into all of the Lord's triumphs over the world and the flesh we too, may be "heavy with sleep," and miss the things that concern his glory. The Lord needs those who are awake—who are on the Mount of Vision with him, who see things from his standpoint—those who know the times in which we live—the fulfilment of prophecy and the imminence of his coming and the glorious possibility of translation? Not less than this will satisfy him, and not less than this must be our attitude.

Thustothe Christian comes the stirring, clarion call, "awake!" The scriptural meaning of awake is to 'a'rouse out of spiritual sleep by a vigorous exercise of grace, by leaving off all sinful (and doubtful) courses," and by walking in the very light of God in the height of transparency. Thus may we take 1 Cor. 15:34 as a personal word to us from the spirit, "Awake to righteousness, and sin not." Romans 13311: "It is high time to awake out of sleep." Eph. 5:14: "Awake thou sleeper (N. V.), and arise from the dead (dead works), and Christ shall give thee light." Luke 9:32: "When they were fully awake they saw his glory."

Oh, friends! Are we awake? awake Godward—to all the possibilities of God in our lives—awake to his plan, to his purpose—awake to our ministry and service for these times? Are we awake to our position of victory in him, "far above all" and "wtihin the veil?" Are we so awake that we are obeying the imperative call of the spirit to enter every bit of the truth, and love and light in Christ Jesus, "having no part dark," even though we are surrounded by increasing darkness without! We are "children of light," and as such must have on the whole "armor of light" and live and walk in the power of it. We must awake from deadness, passivity, and from the awful lethargy that is upon the nominal Christian church in these days. We must awake to the great truth of "overcoming," being empowered individually to fully overcome, "even as he overcome."

In a past dispensation God had one whom he translated—"he pleased him." At the close of this dispensation there will be a company of Enochs, having the same testimony, that they "please God." Oh, friends! let usnot fall short of having that translation readiness—translation faith. Remember it was "by faith" that Enoch was translated. Let us individually grasp this great truth, lay hold and be thus ready!

Dear friends, it is time that a personal call to our Lord reaches him, from the heart: "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly!" In the midst of these "perilous times," ltt us take the motto, "See that ye be not troubled." Remember it is the Lord's personal word to his believing children in just these words. Let us hold fast "till he come."

A. H. HAMBLIN.

Undue praise is the poison of human souls. He that would live healthily must learn to push along entirely without praise.

OBITUARY

Sarah C., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Watkins, was born December 31, 1857, in Marshall County, Ind., where she spent most of her life. She was married to Thomas M. Phillips in the year 1874. She died November 10, 1915, aged 57 years, ten months and ten days. She was preceded in death by her husband and five daughters, leaving two brothers, four sons and twelve grandchildren. Several years ago she united with the Church of God at Argos, Indiana, remaining a faithful member until death. She was a faithful wife and a devoted mother, always ready to sacrifice self, maintaining her part as a Christian with dignity and simple faith. Such a life needs no eulogy. It speaks for itself.

"And though like a mourner that sits by a tomb,
I am wrapped in a mantle of care;
Yet the grief of my bosom—Oh, call it not gloom—
Is not the black grief of despair.
By sorrow revealed, as the stars are by night,
Far off a bright vision appears;
And hope, like the rainbow—a creature of light,
Is born, like the rainbow, in tears.

—BY HER CHILDREN.

Funeral services were held Friday, November 12, 1915, at 11 o'clock a. m., from the Summit Chapel church, conducted by the writer and the Argos Church singers. The many floral offerings and a large attendance of friends and neighbors attested the esteem in which sister Phillips was held. We spoke from Rev. 1:18, to which the audience gave careful and appreciative attention. Sister Phillips was then tenderly laid to rest in the near by cemetery to await the coming of the Lord and his resurrection.

THE PARABLE OF THE WHEAT AND TARES

An Exposition of Matt. 13:24-30. 36-43

This parable is a favorite resort of those who feel themselves free from all principles of Church discipline. Here, it is alleged, there is mixture. Instead of an injunction of separation, there is an explicit mandate to the contrary. A positive order is issued—"Let both grow together until the harvest:" and according to the interpretation of the parable given by the Master himself, that means until "the end oftheworld;" when the separation is to be made by the "Son of Man." That this method of interpreting the parable has the attribute of superficial plausibility we admit, but we object to it for the following reasons:

1. The wheat and tares signify persons. The persons represented by the tares are not hypocrites, as is generally supposed. To talk of retaining hypocrites in church fellowship is absurd. We cannot be said to retain such characters in the church: the very idea of a hypocrite implies that the real character is successfully hidden. And so long as it is covered, there cannot be criminality in retention, or warrant for exclusion. Then the tares of the parable do not refer to them. It does not even include them. It discriminates between two persons, whose respective characters are equally apparent. The parable does not drop the remotest hint of any difficulty in telling the wheat from the tares. The servants distinguished the one from the other without hesitation. "Then appeared the tares also." They saw them when they "appeared," and knew them. The risk suggested about gathering up the tares was not the fear that the servants would pull up wheat instead of tares, but that they might pull up wheat along with tares. The tares do not represent hypocritical professors, but known "children of the wicked one."

2. If the design of the parable is to teach that all varieties of character are to be admitted and retained in the church, then Christian communion is at an end. The church becomes an indiscriminate mixture of the godly and the ungodly, the pious and the profane: and this means, when properly analyzed, no church at all. The world is the church and the church is the world! There is no point at which, on this understanding of the parable, its advocates can consistently stop short of universal admission and no exclusion. And this leads us to say:

3. That this principle leads our no-discipline friends farther than they want to go. The loosest of our loose friends will not tolerate in church fellowship liars and drunkards—any who grossly offend against the laws of morality. However loosely this principle may be carried out in practice among them, it stands acknowledged in fact. Here, though, is an inconsistency. See how general and comprehensive are the designations in the parable. What can be more so than "the wicked," and "children of the wicked one"? No limitation, no qualifications are used. The word "discipline" itself becomes a term of rebellion. It is not letting both grow together "until the harvest." They who make exceptions of any kind, show themselves sensible that the parable, as they interpret it, proves more than enough, and cannot be harmonized with other Scriptures. When they plead for separation from any offender whatsoever—even the grossest—they contradict their principle. If there is to be separation, let it be as complete as faithfulness and charity united can render it. Let us act definitely and uniformly on our principles. It will not do to quote the tares and wheat parable in proof that purity of church fellowship is not required, and then refuse to admit the impurity in the extent which the parable so quoted not only warrants, but enjoins. If there is to be mixture, let us have mixture, and to the extent the parable teaches. Let us have one or the other.

4. Those who resort to this parable to teach impure communion, feel themselves pinched between it and the entire tenor of the New Testament. The commands: "If he refuse to hear the church, let him be to thee as a heathen man and publican;" "Purge out the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump;" "Put away from among yourselves that wicked person;" "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers;" "From such withdraw thyself," are all in the very face of the interpretation of the parable which justifies the godly and the ungodly in church communion. Any doctrine which sets the Bible against itself cannot be sound doctrine.

5. If the parable teaches the indiscriminate mixture of saints and sinner in the church, then we ask, To whom is this mixup attributed? The answer is, "An enemy hath done this!" Who is the "enemy" before whose door this charge is laid? The interpreter answers, "The enemy that sowed them is the devil!" This is the reply to the inquiry, "Whence, then, hath it tares?" The bad seed is not sowed in the field by the servants of the householder; he never issued any such an order as this. It is done by "an enemy." In secrecy—in the darkness of nightfall—"while men slept." It follows then, that when the servants of the Householder knowingly introduce into his church "offenders and them that do iniquity," they are doing the devil's work! If it is the devil's work to introduce them there, it cannot be the Lord's work to keep them there! But lastly,

6. We must state briefly what the parable really does teach. "The field is the world" (not the church). This is doubtless sufficiently explicit. "Go ye into all the world" (Mark 16:15). "The world" in which the gospel was to be preached is "the field" in which the tares and wheat were to "appear." Here they were to "grow together until the harvest." "Wilt thou that we go and gather them up?" must have referred to the field (the world). Since the tares are persons and the field is the world, we are naturally led to believe that the parable teaches their non-extirpation from the world itself, by violence. It is a lesson given by Christ against persecution. Compare the parable with Luke 9:54-56; Matt 26:51. 52. Three motives are brought out why we should not participate in persecution:

1. It is inconsistent with the genius of the "gospel of the kingdom:" "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of."
2. Christ interdicts it by penal sanction: "All they that take the word shall perish with the sword."
3. It cannot be attempted by God's people and carried on by them, without involving themselves, and their brethren, in a common destruction: "Lest, while ye gather up the tares, ye root up the wheat with them."

THE FAITH OF ABRAHAM

There are two systems of belief in the world; the one is Gentile, the other is of the Jews (John 4:22). Gentile faith is not founded on the promises of Jehovah. The salvation it teaches is not of the Jews, but is Platonic, the rescuing of a soul already immortal from the torments of an endless hell! But of such a salvation as is Jewish they have no conceptions.

The faith of "Christendom" is an apostacy from the faith once delivered to the saints, and held fast by the faithful ones, such as Antipas (Rev. 2:13.), who, unlike those who supported Satan's seat, did not deny the faith, but held fast the name of the Anointed Jesus.

When we attain to an understanding of what the "Faith" is, we are better prepared to estimate Gentileism as subversive of the true Gospel, and, consequently, can have no sympathy with it, can have no fellowship with it, even at the risk of being denounced uncharitable, exclusive, etc.

We have said that the one faith, which is antagonistic to Gentile faith, is Jewish, or in other words, the faith of the Gospel is Abrahamic, and all believers are of an Abrahamic mind and disposition. As there is but one faith, necessary means must have been provided to secure this unity. What means, then, has Jehovah employed to accomplish this object? He has given us a model faith to copy after, namely: the faith of Abraham, who is thereby constituted the father of all them that believe (Rom. 4:11). Gentiles, then, cannot have righteousness imputed to them, unless they lay aside their old character, cease from the works of the flesh, (this, of course, including their former vain, deceitful conceptions of religion), and walk in the steps of the faith of Abraham, and thus cease from being Gentiles in the flesh, (Eph. 2:11), they become Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise (Gal. 3: 29). The 11th of Hebrews shows very clearly what constituted Abraham's faith. Jehovah called him to go into a land that he should after receive for an inheritance. We are also called to a Kingdom and a glory (1 Thess. 2:12). By faith Abraham sojourned in the land of promise with Isaac and Jacob the heirs with him of the same promise. They believed God, that at some future period the very land in which they dwelt would be a heavenly country, and that they would come into the possession of it, and also, that the nations of the earth would then be blessed in Abraham and his seed, the Christ. They also believed that the inheritance would be everlasting, consequently, they would obtain eternal life, which an eternal occupancy of the inheritance implies, thus eternal life was promised us in the Christ before the times of the ages, or jubilees of the Mosaic age. (pro chronoon aionioon) (Tit. 1:2). This heavenly country, this everlasting inheritance, belongs to Abraham and his seed, and to none else; hence the apostolic plan of salvation being in Christ, to be an heir of God, and a joint heir with Christ. It is this plan of salvation that makes it Jewish or Abrahamic. All the promises are to Abraham and his seed; this forever excludes all Gentile methods of salvation as originating in the wisdom of the the flesh, whose workings must be ceased from; its wisdom must be esteemed folly; its devices to save man as utterly worthless, and subversive of the one faith, which alone is pleasing to God. Let us then cease from upholding, or countenancing anything that detracts from the value of this one model faith, exhibited in him who is constituted the father of all acceptable believers.—JAMES EVANS.

THE FAITH OF DEMONS.

What is it? "Thou believest that there is one God, thou dost well: the devils believe also, and tremble" (James 2:19). Therefore demons believe in God. Why, then, are they not accepted of him, and heirs of his Kingdom? Because they have nothing but a theoretical faith, which does not change their demoniac character. They are like some professors of religion, on whom no change of character is wrought by their faith, unless they have become two-fold more demoniac than before! And they must meet the fearful doom of demons; be destroyed, unless they not only tremble, but reform and obey the Gospel.

Your subscription to "Words of Life," a monthly magazine advocating eternal life only through Jesus the Christ, at his coming and kingdom, is earnestly solicited. One copy, 37 cents per year. The Restitution

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of Rom. 10:14-17, and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1:5-8; 3:18), and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

WILL THE WAR END IN THE HOLY LAND?

The Success of the English and Russian Campaigns in Mesopotamia and the Caucasus May Mean the Redemption of Palestine and the Nationalization of the Jewish Race

Richard Hill

In the hurly-burly of this great war, with armies numbering millions deadlocked on both the western and eastern frontiers, attention is entirely focused on those fronts to the exclusion of other parts no less vitally affected and of no less importance, although perhaps not of such spectacular interest as those nearer to Europe and America. For instance, fighting has been going on ever since last October in the Caucasus and Turkish Armenia that, althought not in the limelight as the French and Galician campaigns are, is nevertheless important, and events are transpiring there that are bound to have a tremendous effect upon the ultimate end of the war, and that may even become in the roped whirlwind of events the deciding factor in this life and death struggle of nations.

If we study closely the present trend of events we will see that the happenings of the past few months are swinging the pivot of influence and importance away from the capitals of Europe back to the cradle of the race, back to the Caucasus, to the valley of the Mesopotamia, to Constantinople, and last, but not least, back to Palestine, the crux of the whole situation.

Let us remember this is to be a long war, and further that it is not destined to be settled in Europe. Already the great armies in Europe are deadlocked, lying like monster giants so closely interlocked in each other's embrace that anything more than a spasmodical and useless kicking about is quite impossible, which condition may continue for years unless outside events occur which will compel either giant to cry quits.

These movements, then, that now are dwarfed into insignificance by the mighty thrashing about of the frantic giants tearing at each other's throats are destined inevitably to increase in importance as time goes on, and may yet decide the war. The quiet and slow advance of the Anglo-Indian force up the Tigris on the march to Bagdad, slow and painful as it is, is nevertheless climbing up into importance and prominence; for, once Bagdad falls, the Sultan loses his Mesopotamia provinces and the great Bagdad Railroad that was to link Berlin and Bagdad will end in British territory.

Indications are not wanting that clearly point to an awakening and a return to national life and vigor of that region of old Babylonia.

The valley of the Mesopotamia and old Chaldea, the oldest known inhabited sections of the earth, will soon, no doubt, resound to the tramp of Britain's armed host from India, and with these will come to old Chaldea and Babylonia an awakening and a stirring of the dry bones that will call back into life the impulses and activities that for many a century have lain somnolent and passive.

The most remarkable phenomenon of modern times is the revival of the East. A recent writer, speaking of the Bagdad Railroad, says that its completion will bring two quarters of the globe into juxtaposition, and three continents—Europe, Asia and Australia—into co-relation. It inevitably entails the colonization and civilizationof the great valley of the Euphrates and Tigris, the resuscitation in modern shape of Babylonia and Nineveh.

Germany, with clear, prophetic vision, had seen the value of that land, had bent her imagination and her energy to that task, and was already committed to a policy that would have carried her deep into schemes of colossal magnitude.

It would appear now that England, a bit tardy and slow, has at last seen the possibility of the situation, and is now seeking to reap the fruits of German's endeavor. She is pushing up into the Euphrates valley, and will no doubt in time make sufficient progress to cause Turkey deep concern as to her southern provinces.

Russia has also seen the possibility of expansion in those regions, and has been quietly plotting and palnning for years to push on and down on her irresistible march to the sea. The writer remembers with interest an agitation started in Russia some years ago, which, while only a straw, perhaps, nevertheless clearly indicates the direction of the current of the wind of Russia's workings. This agitation was started and carried on in aid of Armenia.

Pamphlets were printed and distributed, lectures were arranged and given in many cities of the empire calling attention to the Armenian atrocities, arousing sympathy for the Armenian people and appealing to the Russian government to intervene in behalf of downtrodden and oppressed Armenia.

No secret had been made that the next war prior to the outbreak of this great catclysm was to have been with Turkey. Russia had made it known that she was not indifferent to the frightful atrocities perpetrated on the Armenians by the Turks, and had intimated that the time was past when she could complacently look upon her co-religionists being systematically exploited and outraged, and, as I have remarked, had already started a campaign to prepare the country for the eventuality of a war of liberation of these people. Further than that, the growing strength and solidarity of the Balkan States made future encroachments from that side impossible, and also made the advance on Constantinople, Russia's century-long ambition, through those States a matter beyond the range of probability or possibility. Therefore, the logical sequence of events was to start it through the Caucasus and Armenia.

There were two potent reasons that made this advisable: First, to help that Russia could expect from the Armenian population in through all of old Armenia, and secondly, the need of forestalling Germany in her encroachments in Asia Minor and the valley of Mesopotamia. Germany even in Persia was beginning to cause some uneasiness. She had established a school in Teheran, had sent out German professors, and was offering her education practically free to the Persian youth. Her political agents were seeking concessions in various parts. had already secured some, were working a few coal mines, had roads planned, and they were systematically getting a foothold in all the main industrial centers as a prelude to swamping the country with her wares. For instance, in the city of Tabriz, in the past five years a number of German factories have been erected, a number of Germans have come to the town, and there was prior to the war an aggressive growing German colony in the place backed by the German government and well equipped with foods.

Her plans for the Bagdad Railroad included a branch running into Persia and down to the Persian Gulf, tapping all the great trade routes on the way.

But let us glance for a moment at the present condition of affairs in the East. We have England entrenched in Egypt, drilling her troops under the shadow of the Pyramids, preparing no doubt for an advance eastwards into Palestine when she can spare the troops; we have her backing her way up through the land of the Chaldean, Babylonian and Persian empires, coming up, one might say, into the very heart of things by the back door.

We have Russia battling through the Caucatus and Armenia, parts of which have for many centuries been the favorite battlefields of the nations. Whether it is the shadowy figures of Jason on his search for the golden fleece, or Ulysses conquering one-eyed giants, or the more substantial figures of Alexander the Great, Darius, Genghis Khan, Tamerlane or Shah Abbas, all seemed to have realized that this is the gateway of the East, and the possessor of these parts well on his way to the gate of the East, the Golden Horn.

Russia's campaign, then, in the Caucasus has taken her over into Armenia and she has steadily pushed through to Van and is now working forward to Erzerum, the headquarters of the Turkish general staff. Simultaneously with this she has cleared northwest Persian of the Turks, and is is now drivng them back into Kurdista and into the mountains. But Constantinople is not her sole aim: she has designs on Palestine.

There is abundant evidence that would lead us to the conclusion that this great world war, that was started over European issues and in Europe, is not going to be decided in Europe, not in the fall of any of the great capitals of Europe, not even in Constantinople's fall, important as that would be, but in the Holy Land in Palestine. This, inexplicable and bewildering as it may appear, is nevertheless apparent, for the near future, judged by the events of the past few months, will no doubt find the attention of the whole civilized world focused on that country.

"Palestine geographically is the gateway between the East and the West, or rather the barbarian which commands the two avenues of the Euphrates and Red Sea lines of communications." To England, with Egypt an integral part of the British Empire, Palestine is of supremest importance. To Russia, once Constantinople is in her grasp, Palestine and her future becomes a matter of greatest moment, for Palestine in the hands of a first-class power would be able to dominate the highway to the East and to control the Mediterranean Sea.

To Germany, with her colonies gone and her hopes of territorial expansion confined solely to Asiatic Turkey, Palestine is of overwhelming importance. No political acumen is necessary to see how Palestine in hostile hands would seriously impair the usefulness of the Bagdad Railroad, and how large a place Palestine must have in German's hopes and fears.

The Jewish question, then, is of paramount importance, for a disassociation of Palestine from the Jew is unthinkable, for that strange people are inseparably bound up in its future; therefore we find this evidenced in a striking manner by the prominence given to it by most if not all of the present belligerents.

For instance, an army order issued by the Grand Duke Nicholai just a little while ago, that attracted little attention at the time, is notwithstanding fraught with tremendous import. In it he called attention to the fact that Russia's aims and purposes in this war were far-reaching, and that they embraced the deliverance of Palestine from under the heel of the infidel Turk and the resettlement of the nation in their ancestral land. He therefore urged all Jews to bend every energy and enable Russia to accomplish this task, and granted permission to Jews fighting in Galicia or Poland to transfer themselves to the Caucasus so as to have a part in the bringing of that about. In view of this the transfer of the Grand Duke to the Caucasus may prove to be not the political shelving of Russia's military genius, as many supopse, but rather a remarkable, astute move on the part of the Russian military authorities. Anticipating the slacking up of the German offensive in Poland, and the necessity of the Germans digging themselves in in Poland for the winter, which will no doubt release Russian troops for service elsewhere, and seeing that the campaign in Armenia and the Caucasus may soon overhadow in importance the movements in Galicia and Poland, they have sent the Garand Duke to the Caucasus to prepare for this new phase of the war.

Further, there have been frequent references to this subject by prominent British statesmen, references to the hopes entertained by them that the outcome of the way may enable them to solve the age-long Jewish problem.

More dramatic, however, than all these are the statements attributed to the Kaiser. He, not to be outdone and shrewd enough to see the value of Jewish support, has gone even further, and has been reported as offering himself as their Messiah. It is stated that, going into one of their synagogues in Lodz, after the occupation of that city by his troops, he lifted up one of the scrolls of the law and said: "Jews, you are waiting the Messiah. I am the Messiah, and I was sent of God to save you." German agents in Holland and elsewhere have notified Jewish refugees that if they will espouse the German cause he will restore the kingdom of Israel in Palestine. His spectacular visit of some years ago to Jerusalem, melodramatic and bombastic as it appeared at the time, was simply an incident in a scheme of world-wide magnitude which a bewildered world is just now beginning to get a glimmering of.—Selected by Bro. Lang from "Travel," November, 1915.

ONE TAKEN, THE OTHER LEFT

Our subject is based on Matt. 21:40, 41: "Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left." Here, in our Lord's own words, we have a statement of the instant and awful separation that will take effect at the second coming. Awful, that is, for those left behind. We, as a people, think much and speak freely about our Lord's coming again to this earth, for it is a doctrine that we hold with much tenacity; but do we fully take to heart all that is included in that stupendous fact?

Let us recall some of the statements of Holy Writ relating to this great and wondrous pending event. And as we do so let us treasure them afresh in our hearts, so that they may control our lives in and for his service. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain (over to that coming) shall be caught up together with them in the the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (1 Thess. 4:16, 17).

This gives us an idea of the how and when of our Lord's coming, impressing the reader with its suddenness; for the Lord would have us always in an attitude of expectancy in accordance with his own exhortation: "Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." "Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." Then our Lord will come with suddenness. There will be no time then for preparation to meet him. That time is now; then it will be too late. No time left then to buy oil to put into the lamps that are going out, no time to pull ourselves together and make up for our lack of service so that we may meet him with joy; no time to "buy the truth," that it may purge our heart and conscience, and make us free to glorify him; no time to make reconciliation with a wronged brother, or to pour the oil of comfort on one we have grieved; no time to buy up lost opportunities and to increase the talents with which we have been entrusted; no time to declare the glad message of salvation, for this day of gospel grace will have closed; no time to have our hearts directed into the love of God, and the patient waiting for Christ, as in 2 Thess. 3:5; no further time to accept God's message of love, his invitation to become his son or daughter, a sharer in the glory of his beloved; no time for preparation, reconciliation, patience, hope, for "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," the change will come for the ready ones, and the dead will be raised incorruptible, and together they will be "caught away to meet the Lord in the air."

As a thief comes in the night, so unexpectedly, suddenly, quietly, the trump of God shall sound, the voice of the archangel be heard, and the Lord will be here. As Paul writes to the Hebrews (10:37): "For yet a little while he that cometh shall come, and shall not atrry." In a moment of time, as sudden as the lightning's flash, two in the field, two grinding at the mill, two working at the same bench, two sharing the same bed, "one will be taken and the other left!" For the one taken it will be a change from mortality to immortality, from corruptibility to incorruptibility, from frailty to imperishability, from trial and difficulty to reward and triumph, from patient waiting to joyous greeting, from tears to smiles, from fight to victory, from the valley of humilitation to the mountain of exaltation. Yes, for the one taken it will be an eternity of life, joy, happiness, blessing. Caught away to meet the Lord, who will be on his way from realms of glory to meet and conduct him or her to the mansion of inexpressible delight in his Father's house. What a meeting! For when we see him we shall be like him! These "bodies of our humiliation" changed, and "made like unto his own glorious body!" Caught away to meet him, and with him all the best of earth. The worthies of the Old Testament and of the New—prophets, apostles, martyrs, those who have lost life to gain life! The saints of all dispensations and ages, angels and archangels, seraphim and cherubim. Then and there, with these myriads of holy ones, to bask in the sunshine of God's presence, "at whose right hand there is fullness of joy and pleasure forevermore."

Our pain will then be over,
  We'll sin and sigh no more;
Behind us all of sororw,
  And naught but joy before.
A joy in our Redeemer,
  As we to him are nigh
In the crowning day
  That's coming by and by.

Whilest the expectation and prospect for those taken is thus full of glory and of joy, what is that which is lying before those "left," and which is every moment drawing nearer? As the "taken" are caught away there will fall upon those "left" the greatest catastrophe that has ever befallen the world. Right up to that moment the world will be going on its usual course. All the rounds of daily life will be occupying its attention. The business man and merchant will be immersed in his business and merchandise: factories and workshops will be in full swing: all classes of men and women at their accustomed posts, the professor at his desk, the chemist in his laboratory, the teacher with his pupils, the lawyer in his office, the clerk at is desk, the policeman on his beat, the sailor on the sea, the soldier at his post. All things continuing as they were—theater, music halls, picture palaces, railway trains, motor cars. All the round of pleasure and travel in full swing, when suddenly something happens, something new, something that has never taken place in the world's history before, something that will affect all classes of society the world over, suspending business, pleasure, travel, industry and the usual round of daily life for a season; trains will stop running, shipping traffic will be held up, the daily press will be delayed; for a season consternation will seize upon the inhabitants of the whole earth. In many cases blank despair will settle down, for there will be missing the best of earth's inhabitants; it may be one from this home, two from another, a few from this street, thirty from this village, fifty from this town, eighty from another, a hundred from this city, a thousand from that, and this will be taking place the world over. His "elect will be gathered together from the four corners of the earth."

Mother gone, father gone, brother gone; a friend here, nurse there, servant and master yonder; vacant places in the home, in the office, in the shop, in the factory, on railways, ships, the land, colleges, workhouses and workrooms, prisons, vacant places everywhere—one taken, another left. People of all ages and of all ranks. Poor old saints whose long life has been a struggle with poverty, yet "rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom." The child that has early learned to love the name of Jesus; the widow who has worked early and late to provide for her family and to bring her children up in the fear of God; the rich who have not trusted in uncertain riches, but used them for the glory of God and the good of man. Yes, rich and poor, old and young, bond and free, all who love the name of Jesus and have taken him to be their Savior; all who have loved and longed for "his appearing and kingdom"—all gone! In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. "One taken, the other left." But where gone?

As the news spreads of these missing ones these are the questions that will be on the lips of all remaining: "Where are they?" "What has become of them?" "Whither have they gone " This is the one topic of conversation, the thought in every mind, the inquiry on every tongue. Where? Where? Where? The minister of religion, pastors of churchs, mission workers, Sunday School teachers, religious editors, will be inundated with inquiries and appeals for information, for the public mind will be agitated by mingled feelings of wonder, fear and deadly alarm, especially on the part of religious professors who, in the face of such an event, realize what a heartless sham their religion has been and is. Can it be possible? They will ponder that what the missing ones have told us in the past is true, has really taken place. Has the Lord Jesus really come and taken them away with him to dwell with him? Oh, how foolish we were in not giving heed to them, in not believing the word of God! Then will a great cry go up: "Lord God, open to us! Come and take us also, Lord!" Prayer meetings will be held; multitudes, in private and in public, will pray as never before. Despair also will find an outlet in heartfelt prayer, the universal petition being: "Lord, Lord, open to us!" Nay, it will be too late, too late, for the last stone will have been added to the church of the living God. The Lamb's Bride will be complete, having met her Lord, the Bridegroom, and been presented faultless before the throne of God, and the door closed. No more can joint that heavenly company. The heirs of inheritance are now complete. "The marriage of the Lamb has come, and his wife has made herself ready." Yes, the door is closed, and none can force it. "Yu may not enter in." "The Lord knoweth them that are his," and they were "sealed with the Holy Spirit" unto the day of redemption." Thus they had oil in their vesels with their lamps. They were ready and watching, and now are gone to be forever with their Lord. The "salt of the earth" has been taken away, that which has kept the world from corruption. How can the world be sweetened and preserved now? For it was this which hindered the full manifestation of the "man of sin, the son of perdition." By this removal of those thus lost to the churches and the world both these are impoverished, Christendom is in despair. Alas, alas, for the professiong church that was not ready to meet the Lord! Alas, alas, for the world that has lost all that could preserve it from corruption. "For as it was in the days of Noah, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark. * * * So shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your God doth come" (Matt. 24:37-42).

Solemn day, solemn hour, solemn moment! Be ready. Oh, be ready. Amen.—Thomas W. Relf, selected by Flora A. Wood.

INCORRUPTIBLE SEED

The kind of seed that is sown governs what will be produced in the harvest. "Every seed after its kind" is an unchanging, unalterable law of nature, and in the realm of the spiritual there is the same positive law.

The "new man" is begotten of the incorruptible seed—the word (Mark 4:14). There is a law of reproduction in the realms of all nature that the seed must exist in the unseen state for a period before it can become a material form or body with an identity of its own, consistent with the nature of the seed from which it developed. The body of man is but a development or another expression of what had existed in the realm of life unseen.

There was a time when there was not man at came forth. And though we recognize in his creation no direct operation of an infinite personal Creator, one who ordained all the laws of nature, yet we can also perceive that the all-wise Creator did not suspend those laws of nature as operating to undo the work of his own creation.

He caused the mighty oaks to grow in the forest and woodland under a similar law. The rains and sunshine caused their growth and development, and the same forces ultimately lent themselves to their decay and destruction. So man was not protected from the action of natural law. Having grown, matured and then weakened or died and passed away, and having thus been remanded to the invisible state, who shall say that the Infinite Personal Creater who first brought him forth by the invisible forces of nature can not bring him back again if he so ordains? Has he so ordained? "Many that sleep in the dust shall awake" (Dan. 12:2). "Thy dead men shall live. * * * Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead" (Isaiah 26:19).

The above quotations prove that the purpose of God and his revelations concerning it are in harmony with the view that natural law in the spiritual realm involves the idea that he will bring again to a visible existence "many" who have passed into the invisible state; and that the earth which before held the elements of which they were created will furnish the same again for their regeneration.

"The sower soweth the word," and these are they which are sown on good ground; such as "hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit, some thirty fold, some sixty, and some an hundred" (Mark 4:14-20). "I will raise it up again at the last day," says Jesus (John 6:40). The law which governs is the same law whereby all life is brought into being.

"It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." And that eternal life is meant is made evident immediately after these words were uttered by Jesus when Peter, addressing him, said: "Thou hast the words of eternal life" (John 6:63, 68).

The seed or word being spirit engenders spiritual life in those who receive it, and in whom it finds lodgment in the heart. Therefore did Jesus say: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, thought were dead, yet shall he live" (John 6:25). Christ himself was quickened, or made alive, by the spirit, and himself awakened to the spiritual or divine nature (1 Peter 3:18). So we read in Paul's Epistle to the Romans that "if Christ be in you the body is dead, because of sin; but the spirit is life, because of righteousness. But if the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you."

AN OPEN LETTER

Dear Ones in Christ:

Some time ago I read a letter in The Restitution which was a plea to the brethren to write more letters. I am writing this to urge you to send out more religious literature than ever before at this season. "The King's Message," which appeared in The Restittution some time in August, was printed on the best paper, to make it an attractive and neat folder to enclose in letters. I have several thousand of these on hand and will send them to any address at the same rate of four-page tracts.

"The Visitor" contains many dates, outlines and history that is of special interest to those who are interested in prophecy and the war. I feel sure that you will find people ready to search for truth as never before. Send twenty-five cents for a copy and then try and take a canvass of your neighborhood and see how many will take a copy. It's a good way to find someone who is interested in Bible study. You may in this way be able to start a Bible Class. Sickness prevented my going out for a house-to-house canvass this fall. A few days ago I received a letter from a men in New York. He said he and his wife had drawn from the Baptist Church and were deeply interested in Bible study. Someone had loaned them "The Visitor," and he wanted a copy of his own. His commendation of this little volume and his interest in wanting to know more concerning the great truths made me feel encouraged. What a good work could be done if each brother would send for a copy and lend it to others. While many are interested in the outcome of the war it is a good time to get them interested in prophecy.

In some of the leading papers very interesting things are said concerning the future of the Jews, which shows the turn of mind many have taken concerning the war. The question, What way will the Eastern question be settled, seems to find but one answer. The Turk must give up his possession of Palestine and the Jews be given their natural heritage. Palestine is the "Bridge of Nations," and none of the great powers will allow it to fall into the control of another. The furious strife of nations will go on, and sooner or later center in this small country, which has been the battleground of nations.

Now that the season has come again when greetings will be sent to many, let us remember that Christ is no unknown quantity, so refuse to purchase any postcard with "Xmas" printed on it. "I know in whom I have believed." Let no opportunity pass to show your regard for that holy name. Our generation needs to be taught piety. What shall I say more than "to give the world the best you have, and the best will come back to you." In these restless days let us show our faith in Christ by sending out his message of faith and hope. Yours in the service.

Duty is a power which rises with us in the morning and goes to rest with us at night. It is co-extensive with the action of our intelligence. It is the shadow which cleaves to us, go where we will, and which only leaves us when we leave the light of life.—Gladstone.

The aim of education should be rather to teach us how to think than what to think, rather to improve our minds so as to enable us to think for ourselves than to load the memory with the thoughts of other men.

The ordinary treatment of children is in various ways sheriously prejudicial, says Mrs. Herbert Spencer. It errs in deficient feeding, in deficient clothing, in deficient exercise—among girls at least—and in excessive mental application. Considering this regime as a whole, its tendency is too exacting—it asks too much and gives too little. In the extent to which it taxes the vital energies it makes the juvenile life much more like the adult life than it should be.

Sister Swain reports the death of her husband, Bro. Cyrus B. Swain. Bro. Rothe, of Brooklyn, N. Y., spoke words of comfort at the funeral.

Bro. J. H. Anderson is to begin a series of meetings at Roll, Ind., January 4, 1916. If the Lord wills, we shall have the pleasure of helping our brother in these meetings.

December 5 we spent at the home of Bro. and Sister Stroud, at Geneva, Ohio. There are now fourteen brethren there. They meet on the first day of the week to observe the Lord's Supper. They are one in the faith, and are walking together in its obedience. If they "continue in well doing" the world will soon give them attention, and thus an opportunity will be given them of speaking the truth to their neighbors. God bless the little band of saints in Geneva.

How did it come to pass that Ruth the Moabitess entered the "Congregation of the Lord," when the law forbade a Moabite to enter (Deut. 23:3)? The answer to this question is very simple: The word Moabi or Moabite is masculine in Deuteronomy, while in the Book of Ruth the word is feminine (Moabiyah). See Ruth 1:22; 2:2, 6; 4:5, 10.

DEATH AN ENEMY

We are assured by the believer in the immortality of the soul that death is not what it seems to be; that it is not in reality death, but a mere transition, a change from a lower nature to a higher, and to a more exalted state of being. Hence we are gravely told death is not an enemy, but a friend. It is said: "Death need not be the King of Terrors to anyone. To the Christian there are three friends—himself, his God, and the angel of death." Now all this is mere religious cant, as hollow as it is false. It is not a perversion of truth; it is worse than that—it is an utter denial, a direct contradiction of the express statement of scripture. Paul plainly declares: "For he must reign till he has put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." Death is not yet abolished. It reigns triumphant the wide world o'er. And until it is destroyed, until "there is no more death," it remains what it ever has been, the enemy of the human race. Is not the grave-side bitterness evidence sufficient to every beholder? Yet hardly are the words from Paul testimony to this fact passed the lips of the speaker, as the solemn service for the burial of the dead is gone through, than follows the positive denial: "Death is not an enemy, but a friend." True it is that "because they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved; and for this cause God shall send them strong delusions that they should believe a lie" (2 Thess. 2:2-11).

WHO ARE RESPONSIBLE?

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I have been over among the Christadelphians. They claim that all who are out of Christ are not responsible for their acts to God, it matters not what they may do. I mean they can kill, steal, rob and do any crime in the category, and are no more responsible for it than an idiot would be; that the Gentiles are aliens from God, and strangers from the covenants of promise and are without hope and without God in the world, and it matters not what they may do; they are just in the same condition as if they had not committed the crime. I suppose your understand their position. Now I claim that with the coming of light comes responsibility. And the greater the light the greater the responsibility. I referred them to the commission, "He that believeth not shall be condemned." Condemned to what? They were already condemned to death before they heard the gospel. Now I want you to write an article on this subject, "Who Are Responsible?"

Editor's Reply

Above is an extract from a correspondent who marks his letter "private," and whose name, for this reason, is omitted from his communication. To some who are not familiar with the body whose doctrine is described it may seem that exaggeration has been used by our writer; but, absurd and unscriptural as it sounds, and as it is, it is, we are sorry to say, a sober, unstrained and dispassionate presentation of American Christadelphianism. The only palliative observation we can make is that the theory was repudiated by the founder of the body, and is disowned and disfellowshipped by the original body in both Europe and America, those holding the theory being a minority whose organization is maintained in schism.

In answering the question, "Who Are Responsible?" we say those who are enlightened, who know the will of the Lord. In proof of this we point to

1. The First Sin. "Because thou has harkened to the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it," etc. (Gen. 3:17). The penalty of death came upon Adam, not because he had made a covenant with God, not because he had agreed to obey God, not because he had been baptized, but because God "commanded" him, saying: "Thou shalt not eat of it." A known commandment of God disobeyed was the ground of his responsibility and condemnation.

2. The Mosaic Law. That responsibility is co-extensive with knowledge is obvious from the fact that when the whole congregation sinned through ignorance, or the ruler, or the "common people," when it "is known," "comes to his knowledge," he was guilty, and had to make an offering unto the Lord (Lev. 4:14, 23, 27, 28). The same remark holds good as to

3. The Prophetic Age. David points out that "men of the world have their portion in this life" (Psa. 17:14), that the great, rich and honorable, if they "understand not," are "like the beast that perish" (Psa. 49). "So foolish was I and ignorant, I was as a beast before thee" (Psa. 73:22). This text read strictly according to the Hebrew, as given in the margin of the Bible, settles the whole issue: "So foolish was I and ignorant, I was as a beast with thee;" that is, a foolish and ignorant man sustains the same relationship "with" God as a beast sustains—non-accountable to divine law. But no Bible writer ever says such a thing of an enlightened man—never.

4. The New Testament Preaches the same doctrine.

(a) Inspired writers declare that those who "know to do good, and doeth it not," commit sin (Jas. 4:17); that those who have "known God" and disobeyed him are "worthy of death" (Rom. 1:21, 28; 2:1, 3, 9, 16); that while God "winks at people in times of ignorance," he will hold them strictly to account in the day of judgment in times of knowledge (Acts 17:30, 31); and that sinners must repent and be "baptized for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38) "Sin is the transgression of the law" (1 John 3:4); but law can only be transgressed by people who are "under" it (Rom. 3:19). Then if sinners are not under divine law, and do not transgress it before their baptism, "baptism for the remission of sins" is the most stupendous hoax and farce ever known among men.

(b) Finally, if you care to know where Jesus Christ our Lord stands on this question, you may read John 3:19; 9:41; 15:22, 24.

COMMUNICATIONS

Bro. Huggins:

I see my time is about out for the paper. I send you two dollars, one-fifty for The Restitution for next year and fifty cents for the Helping Fund. I have taken The Restitution for twenty-six years, and it is new every week, and its teachings are just what we need to build us up and strengthen us in the truth, that we may be able to fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life. May we be worthy of the crown of life which the Lord shall give to all who love his appearing.

Your sister in the hope of the gospel,

MRS. ALBERT BURTON.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I don't know whether I was more amused or indignant at the pompous letter of your Christadelphian contributor. Personally, I have never had any official connection with the Christadelphians, but I have known them, one way and another, for many years, and the same religious propensity is characteristic of them all. There are many noble exceptions, but the general spirit is the same—argumentative, "I know it all" disposition to lay down the law, and the nearer you come to being of their mind, while not accepting all their conclusions, the more likely you are to be condemned by them. When I lived in the city I used some times to go to their meetings (there were two then running in opposition to each other); and all you had to do was to partially agree with them to get the cold shoulder. The two parties openly scandalized each other, making all sorts of bitter remarks concerening the membership other than their own.

Now I consider that their doctrine, in some reespects, is as pure as can be, especially in regard to the coming and kingdom of the Son of God, the mortality of man, etc.; but the spirit that they show is so foreign to my conception of the gentle Christ that I consider them further away from the truth than many of the sects, making exception, of course, for the aforementioned exceptions.

I was once witness of a scene that illustrates this fact. My dear wife, now deceased, one of the sweetest women that ever lived, a leading and much loved member of the church in Edinburgh, Scotland, when she came over to this country had a letter of introduction from a Christadelphian sister in Edinburgh to another in Baltimore. So we made it our business to call at the first opportunity. This Baltimore lady was a fine woman, and my wife and her being interested in those beautiful needle works that nimble feminine fingers delight in, they became rather intimate and loving to one another, and it was rather a pleasure to visit and spend a social hour, until one evening her sister-in-law (she was a widow) happened to be there, and the first thing we knew "Mortal Resurrection" was introduce. Well, she was a glib talker, and she just let go! Years since I had read the "argument" in pamphlet form, but had forgot about it; but she gave it to us all in short order. Suffice it to say there was a wet blanket thrown over the company; at once silence and restraint reigned until we gathered ourselves sufficiently to say a friendly farewell. My dear wife expressed herself in dialect Scotch after we got outside.

Now this is the trouble with these people—they are too argumentative; the sweet spirit of Christ, if it exists at all, is set away in the background; the main thing is to "study up."

Here is a story from my old friend, Bro. A. Magruder, now deceased, that illustrates this trait in Dr. Thomas very well. It was before the war, and when they were then both "disciples" (Campbellites); but the now-apparent truths to us of the kingdom and mortality were dawning. Magruder was then in his prime and pretty well to do, as a landed proprietor in Virginia, and he invited Dr. Thomas to come down and give his neighbor a discourse. Magruder had advertised the meeting very well; he had a fine audience collected from among his neigthbors. "And now," he said to the doctor, "these people that are here at all bright, inteligent folk, some of them wealthy in fact, and there is no necessity to say anything harsh to hurt," or words to that effect. Forthwith the doctor took for his text, "Woe unto you rich, for ye have received your consolation!" and pitched in right and left. These are things that make us ashamed. It isn't sense to tell a man the first time you see him that he has a pimple on his nose, and it might be something worse. By such foolish conduct we make ourselves and our ideas despised; no one with self-respect will listen to us. Lovingly yours,

Remarks

During October we have been very busy. Held several good meetings in Omaha. Had a number of inquirers, part of Billy Sunday's choir at one meeting and others that were seeking the right way. Last March, at the earnest call of Sister Phelps, we came here northeast of Cambridge, and owing to storms and deep snow we were compelled to close, although the interest and attendance were good. Before the weather and roads would permit our resuming the meetings the busy season arrived, so we were unable to begin again until October 11th. We begun and continued the meetings till last night, October 31st.

The interest increased until the result was manifested yesterday, a beautiful Sunday. We met at the home of Bro. Irvin Lathrop. After partaking of a splendid lunch brought by the sisters we proceeded to Deer Creek, a few rods away, and planted eighteen earnest believers into the all-saving name of Jesus. We then proceeded to set the church in order, and commemorated the Lord's death. This new congregation starts off with bright prospects. There was no smoothing over the truth to please men; and I believe the result was due to declaring the whole counsel of God. They know that Paul not only preached the gospel, but defended it. Pray for these dear ones in the faith; they are worthy and an adornment to the truth.

We now have to bid them good-bye for a time and go to other fields that are waiting for us, where we hope and pray the Lord will give us others out of the world; for he has some there yet, no doubt, and will have till the bride is complete (John 17:6). Yours in the work,

ALMUS ADAMS.

BAPTISMAL SERVICE

Orpha Pauline Logan, Iris Melvy Stilson and Tressie L. McChesney were baptized at the Plymouth Church of God baptistry on Sunday, November 28, 1915, at 2:30 p. m. They come from North Salem, where they will be received into the church. They are the product of the Sunday School and of Christian homes, and show the results of their training by rendering obedience to the doctrines they have been taught from their infancy. May they find a blessing in their union with the church, and the church receive the full measure of their strength as they yield their lives as instruments of righteoueness for the cause of truth. We are glad to introduce these excellent young people to the household of faith. May the Father's care and blessing rest upon them, and the sweet spirit of the love of the Savior guide them into that rest that remaineth to the people of God, is our praye.r D. E. VANVACTOR.

National Berean Tract Work

The National Berean Tract Committee has the following tracts on hand, viz: "Can You Believe?" (by H. V. Reed), "The Gospel," "Nature of Man," "The Kingdom of God," "What is Religion?" "The Restitution Age," "The Destiny of the Wicked," "Life and Death," "The State of Man in Death," "The Coming and Kingdom of Christ," "The 'Age to Come' Nota Heresy" (H. V. Reed), "A Berean Tract" (by a Berean, on the second coming of Christ), "The Resurrection" (S. J. Lindasy), "The Coming of Christ" (S. J. Lindsay), "The Reason Why" (an old tract). Also a quantity of miscellaneous tracts by different authors.

Other tracts will be added from time to time, and the titles will appear in this list as tracts as added. These tracts are free to all for the asking, and may be had of Mrs. Lydia Railsback, 621 S. Fellows Street, South Bend, Ind.

The True Bread of Life

The motto of Bereans is "Seek the scriptures," and we have the promise of the Master, "Seek, and ye shall find." What shall we find? First, that the Bible is emphatically a book of life; its pages are devoted for the most part to the lives and deeds of men and women. There is comparatively little mention of death in it, the death of him only who in dying slew death being the single instance where it is described at length. The Bible gives little space to dying testimonials, but it abounds in stories of those who have lived and suffered in the world's arena. All men have physical life, most have intellectual life, many have moral life, but a vast majority are destitute of the life which is hid with Christ in God. They are dead in their trespasses and sins, and walk according to the ways of the world and not as the great Example would have his followers walk.

The beginning of the sixth chapter of the Gospel by John records the miracle of Christ feeding the five thousand with five loaves and two fishes (the "loaves" probably resembling large flat crackers more than our idea of a loaf, and the fish being not much larger, probably, than our sardines). As it has always been the one who can feed a multitude that is a hero, so did this miracle cause a great swelling in the ranks of those who followed the Master, who, with his spiritual insight, knew it was the being fed which made them flock to him, and not their desire to know more of his life and works, and therefore he commences his talk to them with the words: "Labor not for the meat that perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life," to which those assembled replied, asking what they could do to work the works of God. Jesus replied that this is the work of God, that they should believe on him whom he hath sent. Then they ask a sign as to his authority for being the Son of God, and saying Moses gave our fathers manna in the desert which came from heaven. Jesus replied: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven." They, supposing this to be the bread necessary for the sustenance of daily life, ask that it may be given unto them ever more. And the Master says: "I am the bread of life," and repeats it several times, showing that whereas the Jews of old had eaten the manna in the wilderness and died, even though it came direct from God, but those that eat of the bread that cometh down from heaven shall live forever. This, however, was not what the people wanted. They evidently thinking it would be a fine thing to have a king who would furnish them their daily bread without their working for it; and many of his followers left him after this talk.

We all know that bread is one of the essentials of life, but some bread has very little of the life-giving properties of the wheat; and so it is comparing the wisest prophets who ever lived with the Savior of men. There are multitudes who confound Christ with comomn men, but who else can say and prove it: "Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day."

And now how often must we feed on this bread of life? Is it enough for us to repent of our past sins and be baptized, and then trust on being member of the church for future salvation, paying little or no attention to the comand, "Search the Scriptures?" Suuppose we should eat a whole loaf of bread at one time, would we not become hungry very soon again, and what a poor looking specimen of humanity we would become if we cut the staff of life out of our every-day food! In like manner we should follow the example of the Bereans of old who searched the scriptures daily; not only should we read the book of life, but study it, comparing one passage with another, and, above all, striving to walk closely in the Master's footsteps. Dont let your Bible get a dusty cover. "Eat" it daily, "digest" its contents hourly, and when the Lord appears we shall hear the joyous welcome: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you."

OBITUARY

Mary Ann Roose was born in Stark County, Ohio, August 9, 1848, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Amos Ruff, of Nappanee, November 26, 1915, aged 67 years, 3 months and 17 days.

She was united in marriage to Benjamin Shaffer August 18, 1866. To this union were born six children, one son and five daughters, the son having died when but twenty months old. She leaves five daughters—Mrs. Philip Senff, Mrs. William Loyd, Mrs. Amos Ruff, Miss Osee Shaffer, and Mrs. Oris Annis; twelve grandchildren, three great-grandchildren, two brothers, one sister, and a host of friends to mourn her loss.

She, with her husband, was baptized into Christ January, 1869, by Bro. Richard Corboley, and united with the Church of God, which faith they kept until death, although we soon hope to meet them when Christ who is our life shall appear. We know that a precious one from us is gone, a loved voice we loved is stilled; a place is vacant in our home which never can be filled.

The funeral service was conducted in the U. B. Church at Bremer, Ind., Monday, November 29, 1915, by the writer. "We must part for a little while," said one of her daughters. Yes, Jesus will soon come, and then we shall meet to part no more.

He who endeavors to escape from life's drudgery may also cease to compete for life's prizes. Even if, by manouver or trick, he seize some of them, they will become but empty baubles that have lost their significance.

A SOUL-DESTROYING DELUSION

We live in the last days when God's Word declares "perilous times shall come" (2 Tim. 3:1). Sound doctrine will not be endured, "but after their lusts they shall heap to themselves teachers having itching ears, and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables" (2 Tim. 4:3-4).

This is now being realized in the fable—or falsehood—being taught our soldiers by many so-called Christian preachers, that if these warriors die in battle they will be sure to go to heaven.

The sinful slaughter of warfare is thus made to take the place of Christ's atoning work on Calvary. Salvation is obtained by human sacrifice, instead of by God's ordained plan of man's saving faith in Christ's sacrifice. The sacrifice of man's life is thus made a substitute for the sacrifice of Christ's life. This is a Christ dishonoring doctrine and a blasphemous tradition of men. Surely it has come from satan as a strong delusion to deceive the souls of men; it is a satanic lie for the times. Woe be to him who believes any one who preaches this fable, no matter who he is, and woe be to him who preaches it.

God declares that. "The Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world" (1 John 4:14), and "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12). No kind of death that any man can die can give him a passport to the Kingdom or save him from the punishment of unrepented sin. God has laid down clear rules which must be absolutely obeyed; some of these are as follows: "Repent and be converted that your sins may be blotted out" (Acts 3:17). "By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God" (Ephesians 2:8) Note that saving faith is the gift of God. and it will be given if asked for earnestly. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31). "Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners" (1 Timothy 1:15). "God will have all men to be saved, and to come unto a knowledge of the truth" (1 Timothy 2:4). God's will is not that men should die on the battlefield, but that they should know Jesus Christ, his Son, and knowing him obey him, and thus. through practical faith, be saved. If the nations had done this there would be no battlefields, but Christ's birthday proclamation of "Peace on earth and good will among men" (Luke 2:14, R. V.). would be a realized fact, and men everywhere would be enlisting in his army to proclaim the good news of salvation to every nation on earth Has he not commanded. "Put up again thy sword into its place, for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword" (Matthew 24, R. V.)?

Reader, if you want to be saved know this, that acts of self-righteousness cannot save you, nor any kind of death you can die, but you can be saved by repentance of your sins, turning from them in faith to Christ, who alone can give you power to keep you from sinning, for he says "Go, and sin no more" (John 8:11; 5:14). Any one who trusts in any other way believes a lie which will destroy their soul, and those who preach any other doctrines are acting as the agent of satan. But, "If we confess our sins he (God) is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness (1. John 1:9), "and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7).

If God is "kind even to the unthankful and the evil," we can afford to be magnanimous.

"There is time enough for everything in the course of the year," says Lord Chesterfield, "if you do but one thing at once; but there is not time enough in the year if you will do two things at a time."

Remember that God only hears the prayers of those who are pleasing in his sight; the prayers of the wicked are an abomination; and there are wicked people who have the name of Christ upon them.

The man who can command his appetite owes thereto length of days, and not length of days merely, not more continuity of existence, but that which alone gives to continuity substantial value—namely, power to enjoy.

A smooth sea never made a skillful mariner; neither do uninterrupted prosperity and success qualify for usefulness and happiness. The storms of adversity, like the storms of the ocean, arouse the faculties and excite the invention, prudence, skill and fortitude of the voyager.

The best way to discover the manifold uses of friendship is to cast about and see how many things there are which a man can not do for himself, and that it will appear that it was a sparing speech of the ancients to say that "a friend is another himself," for a friend is more than himself.

True religion consists not in a nice orthodoxy, but in a sincere love of truth. and in a hearty approbation and compliance with doctrines fundamentally good; not in vain flourishes of outward performance, but in an inward good complexion of mind: not in a furious zeal for trivial circumstances, but in a conscionable practicing the substantial parts of religion.

An ivy branch, finding nothing to cling to beyond a certain point, shot off in a bold elastic stem, with an air of as much independence as any branch of oak in the vicinity. So a human being, thrown, whether by cruelty, justice or accident, from all social support and kindness, if he have any vigor of spirit, and be not in the bodily debility of childhood or age, will begin to act for himself with a resolution which will appear like a new faculty.

The Restitution

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF
The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-55); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13: 3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). INTERESTING CORRESPONDENCE

Bro. Judd's First Letter

To "Rev." A. B. Fredericks:

Dear Sir—I am sending a little book, "The Bible Doctrine of the Soul," which I sincerely hope you will read, and read carefully and prayerfully. I am well aware the contents do not at present agree with your views, but I am hopeful you will not resent my request, which is made in the full spirit of brotherly kindness. I have been so struck lately by certain articles in the Christian Guardian and other magazines, and the hymns you have chosen at service, which categorically deny the existence of death, that I have felt constrained more than once to write to you, and I only do so now in the spirit of true Christian fellowship, believing you will acept it in that spirit.

I am convinced from certain knowledge that there are many in the Methodist churches(especially in England) who are accepting the view advocated in this little work because it tallies so closely to the words of scripture and the reason with which God has endowed us.

Have you ever really thought over what would have ben the case if, as St. Paul says, Christ had not been raised? You believe, I am sure, that God raised Christ from the dead—you believe it as a fact, and as a student you are, I am certain, ready to acknowledge that no fact can be overthrown. The fact that God raised Christ from the dead is proof also that he might not have done so, in which case Christ would have remained dead, and St. Paul gives some of the awful consequences had such been the case! Did not St. Paul preach Jesus (who was raised) and the resurrection? Surely he did. Can we then who are Christ's expect to live again apart from resurrection—God's divinely appointed way to everlasting life, life and immortality. "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life (life that lasts), and some to shame and everlasting contempt" (Dan. 12:2). If "there is no death" God's word is wrong in the above passage, and when it says "The wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23). I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death" (Hos. 13: 14).

Christ said: "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore" (Rev. 1:18). How, and why? Because God the Father raised him from the dead. Paul in Heb. 7 shows clearly that it is here Christianity transcends every religion, even Judaism. The Aaronic priesthood could not continue by reason of death, but he (Jesus) ever liveth to make intercession for us. Jesus is the only living Savior, and if people could only realize this it would be the death blow to Romanism, and (as we read in yesterday's paper re Becker), praying equally to Jesus, Mary and Joseph. Joseph and Mary are dead. Jesus is not, praise God, and definite proofs that he is alive today can be given: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, * * * and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive (that are left) shall together with them be caught up in the clouds, and so shall we ever be with the Lord, wherefore comfort one another with these words."

Yours sincerely, R. H. JUDD.

Minister's Reply to Bro. Judd

Dear Bro. Judd:

I received your letter today. Yes, I received the books which you sent. I am sorry that I have not been able to give them thorough consideration, but I have examined them sufficiently to see that they are unorthodox in their teaching. I am sorry for your sake, and for the sake of your influence, that you have been deceived by their teaching, and if I felt that there was anything to be gained by doing so I might debate the matter with you; but I feel that it would be unwise and that we can be better friends by not doing so, so I will return the books.

Hoping that you and your family are all well, I remain, yours sincerely,

A. B. FREDERICK.

Bro. Judd's Second Letter

Dear Friend:

Your letter of the 29th ult. duly received, but you do not reply to mine of August 1st. I may say it is now about ten years since I first embraced the views I now believe to be scriptural. I am not concerned with being what is called "orthodox" or "unorthodox," but I am concerned as to what God's word says. I have discussed these matters freely with many, among them Dr. Torrey, Dr. Anderson Berry and Sir Robert Anderson, and I have yet to meet with one who can prove from the Bible that the statements in my letter above referred to, and the litle tract, "Bible Truths," which was enclosed, are unscriptural; nor have I yet met anyone who can give scriptural evidence of the awful doctrine "that the wicked shall exist throughout eternity in a state of unutterable endless torment and anguish," which is admittedly "orthodox."

Your letter states that I am "deceived," and hints at the possibility of debate. No doubt the latter could be arranged, if you so desired, provided of course it was mutually agreed to accept the English Bible as the sole arbiter. Some definite statement as to where I am "deceived" would be appreciated in any case, and should naturally, as man to man, follow any such serious charge as is preferred by you.

Yours faithfully, R. H. JUDD.

P. S.—Of course one very serious hindrance to successful debate would be my exceeding deafness. In view of this I would suggest that use be made of the columns of the local press. By this means you would reach a wider audience, and readers would be able to give any subject discussed cool, calm and powerful consideration in the light of the scriptures, in a way which would be impossible in public debate. I should have no objection to any other paper you might suggest as well, and, if you wished, I think I could promise any space you might require in one or two magazines, provided of course you base your arguments on the plain statements of the word of God. R. H. J.

Brother Judd's Third Letter

"Rev." A. B. Fredericks:

Dear Friend—On the 3rd inst. I wrote a reply to yours of the 29th ult., and since then have not received any message from you. I have no wish to seem impatient or to hurry you unduly for the return of the small books sent you some months ago, but I would deem it a courtesy to have a definite reply to my letters. Possibly you might feel relieved if I were to tender my resignation of church membership. Indeed, I may say that I had no intention of allowing my name or that of my children to be entered on the church register on my return to Wicklow, and was very much surprised when I found it had been done without first asking my permission. I might further add that one more than one occasion your opposition to the Bible doctrine of death has been so pronounced as to cause me to pen a note of resignation. For various reasons I refrained from posting, for I had no wish to seem unfriendly, either to yourself or members of the congregation, or to seem at variance with all your work. I can not help feeling, however, that it amounts to a matter of principle, and that it would now be inconsistent of me to remain a certified member of your church when I feel that your teaching in many ways is unscriptural. To give one instance only: You teach, "There is no death, what seems so is transition.' You teach that men and women do not die, but that at death (pardon the inconsistency) their immortal souls go at once to heaven, while the Bible teaches exactly the reverse, viz., that "it is appointed unto men once to die, and after death the judgment." The Psalmist believed and said: "God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave" (Psa. 49: 15).

If you think there is room for debate on such a question I am quite ready to meet you on conditions as before stated, and in any way that would be most advantageous to the spread of truth.

Yours very sincerely,

R. H. JUDD.

P. S.—I would particularly request that you do not in any way associate me with "Pastor" Russell.—R. H. J.

Bro. Judd's Letter to the Editor

Dear Bro. Huggins:

Herewith the long promised correspondence with the local Methodist minister, "Rev." A. B. Fredericks. A glance at the dates will show the cause of delay, and whose the responsibility. You will also see that although the suggestion of debate was his own he has entirely backed out; at least, what other construction can be placed on his repeated refusal to make any reply whatever to my pointed but friendly communications? He does not feel there would be "anything to be gained," and so far as I am concerned I am sure I should do my utmost to prevent his doing so.

My connection with the church has never been anything but nominal, for I made it clear to the former minister that I was not a Methodist, though my wife was. They were clearly given to understand this, and that I was a believer in baptism by immersion. This will be the end of my connection with any orthodox organization under any pretext whatever.

Yours faithfully,

R. H. JUDD.

P. S.—Bro. Rothe knows something of the struggle it has been to me to come to this decision. It has been long and hard, but I am thankful it is so now. Your sermon on "Denying the Faith" has been a very helpful factor in the case.—R. H. J.

Editorial Comments

Many will rejoice that the above correspondence resulted in Bro. Judd's withdrawal from the Methodist church. We can not allow any truth-nullifying sects to wheedle us into connection with them and yet remain faithful to the gospel. "Nominal" membership does not minimize our responsibility. As long as Bro. Judd belonged to the Methodist he was a Methodist by consent and reputation. That he was not one at heart only argues that he was allowing himself to be advertised in the community other than he was. We congratulate our brother for his noble stand for the truth. He will be happy now that his "struggle" is over. Brethren, pray for Bro. Judd.

THE WATER GAGE ON THE NILE

June 15th is in Egypt an anxious time, for then it is that there comes the first indication of the annual flood. The amount of the rise has been accurately recorded every year from 3600 B. C. to A. D. 1913, for there is only a foot or two between starvation and plenty, and between plenty and devastation. The rise is recorded by the Nilometer constructed by the Khalif Mutawakhui more than ten centuries ago, on the island of Rhoda, opposite Cairo. A square well, from the water of which rises a marble column, is connected with the river by a canal. As the water rises more of the pillar is hidden. When the "18 cubits" mark is passed the starvation specter vanishes, the "19 cubits" mark awash stops the grumblers, and "22 cubits" completely satisfies the optimist. But if the "24-cubit" mark goes under devastation is at hand. But the Assouan Dam has mitigated the anxiety of five thousand years.—London Chronicle.

"PREACHING THE TRUTH"

A Narrative Reciting the Experiences of a Believer Preaching "The Truth as it is in Jesus"

William Brown

The Great Debate

Never in the history of the village, at least not within the memory of any of the villagers, had such a crowd assembled as that which was found trying to crowd into the little schoolhouse on Tuesday night, the first night of the debate. The schoolhouse was inadequate to accommodate them; many who could not find standing room were forced to go away disappointed.

When the hour arrived for opening the debate Timothy Berea arose and made a few remarks, stating the cause and object of the debate, the form and rules of the discussion, with a word of counsel to the debaters and to the audience to be calm and to preserve strict order. He said: "Mr. Hamilton will speak on the affirmative ten minutes, after which Mr. Stephanas will speak twenty minutes on the negative; Mr. Hamilton can then occupy fifteen minutes in questioning Mr. Stephanas or in a speech, after which Mt. Stephanas can occupy fifteen minutes in questioning Mr. Hamilton or in speaking."

It was to be decided at the close of each meeting whether the subject was to be discussed further at another meeting or not.

The subject was then announced—"Resolved, that the righteous are rewarded by being taken to heaven at death."

The chairman called upon Mr. Hamilton to open the discussion with a speech of twenty minutes on the affirmative.

Mr. Hamilton's Speech

"Beloved Parishioners: It is with feelings of regret and humiliation that I stand before you at this time, under these circumstances. Regret that a discussion of this kind should be made necessary, or at least considered necessary by those who have urged me to take part in; humiliation because the dignity of the high and holy office to which I have been called in the ministry should suffer by its occupant taking part in a public argument with a layman, who, well meaning though he may be, is nevertheless illiterate and unlearned in all those holy studies that are necessary to the proper understanding and correct interpretation of the Divine Word.

"You may think this an uncharitable and irrelevant statement, but I can assure you I mean no unkindness, and the statement is quite relevant because it forms an important part of my argument tonight. The point is this, being unlearned in theological studies, my opponent is unqualified to give an interpretation that will withstand the onslaughts of adverse criticism and which can be depended upon to be in harmony with the whole system of scriptural theology. You will see how strong this argument is as I proceed and show you the great amount of study and labor that has been necessary to obtain the knowledge we now have. Do you see that pile of books over there on the table? Don't be alarmed; I am not going to read them to you tonight. I have brought them to give you some idea of the great amount of labor and study that a clergyman must undergo before he is qualified for the ministry and fit to expound the scriptures and preach the gospel. In that pile the following sciences are contained in their respective volumes: 'Biblical Criticism,' to ascertain the exact text of certain works claiming to be inspired, and if possible their time, place and human authorship; 'Apologetics,' to establish and defend the claim of the scriptures to inspiration; 'Hermeneutics,' to investigate the principles of interpretation; 'Exegesis,' to carry those principles into practice by actual interpretation. And so I might continue and speak of the other volumes on 'Dogmatic Theology,' 'Polemic Theology,' 'Practical Theology,' 'Pastoral Theology,' etc.; and with all this we are none too well equipped for the great work of defending and expounding the scriptures. How then can an ordinary blacksmith who has not had access to these studies be depended upon to preach the truth of God? I say it is an unthinkable absurdity.

But let me proceed to the scriptures themselves and show how clearly they teach what our proposition affirms. I will not repeat the arugments I presented in my sermon last week upon this subject; it is not necessary to do so, for there is plenty of evidence to choose from. For instance, the Master, in that grand eloquent sermon on the mount, said: 'Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God' (Matt. 5:8). Now I ask, How can they see God unless they are taken up to him? They can not see him with mortal eyes and in this fleshly tabernacle. When can they see him? Certainly not during this life; it must be at death when they receive their reward in heaven. Oh! but my opponent says they are not going to heaven! Well, I am glad we don't have to take his word for it. The Master did not leave us in doubt about it: he not leave us in doubt about it; he not only told us that the pure in heart would see God, but he indicates how and when, in both this and other discourses recorded in the New Testament.

In the same chapter at the twelfth verse he says: 'Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven, for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.'

When will the pure in heart see God, then? The obvious answer is, When they receive their great reward in heaven.

Well, when do they go to heaven? Answer, At death.

How do we know this? Christ has said so. Turn with me to the 16th chapter of Luke, verse 20. Here the Master is relating the incident of the rich man and Lazarus the poor beggar. Let us read from the 20th verse: "And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate full of sores, and desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table; moreover, the dogs came and licked his sores. And it came to pass that the beggar died and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich also died and was buried." In the dialogue which follows between Abraham and the rich man who finds himself after death in torment, the following words are addressed to the rich man in verse 25: "But Abraham said. Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted and thou art tormented." Could anything be more conclusive than this? A righteous man dies and is carried by the angels to Abraham's bosom and is comforted.

I see my time is nearly expired, and I want to give my opponent some questions to answer before I close. I want him to tell me why Paul said: "For me to live is Christ and to die is gain," and that he had "a desireto depart and to be with Christ, which is far better." Did he not expect to be with Christ when he departed (Phil 1:21-23)? Why did the faithful ones look for a city that hath foundations, whose maker and builder is God, if they didn't expect to go to heaven (Heb. 11:10)? And if it is argued that this is a city on earth, then why does the apostle in speaking of it in the same chapter, at the 16th verse, say: "But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly, wherefore God hath prepared for them a city."—Time called.

When the clergyman took his seat there was a burst of applause from the audience, which was interrupted by the chairman, who asked the audience to desist from noisy demonstrations. "Let us be calm," he said, "and weigh well the arugments that are set forth, and let our judgment of the debate be based not upon partisan feelings but upon reason, common sense, and, above all, the testimony of the word of God." He then called upon Mr. Stephanas to speak for twenty minutes on the negative side of the question. Paul Stephanas thereupon arose and addressed the audience.

The Blacksmith's Reply

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: I am called upon for the first time in my life to take part in a public debate; and while to all appearances I am at a great disadvantage, both as to training and natural fitness, yet I do not share the feelings of my opponent, who said at the beginning of his speech: "It is with feelings of regret and humiliation that I stand before you at this time under these circumstances." I must confess that I feel neither regret nor humiliation, but on the contrary I believe I feel somewhat as the Apostle Paul did, who, when he was called to answer before Agrippa, said: "I think myself happy, King Agrippa, because I shall answer for myself this day before thee." I consider it an honor and a privilege to be permitted to defend and present God's truth to an audience such as is gathered here tonight.

I will now take up the arguments of my opponent and answer them as far as my time will permit. The first argument he has presented, and which occupied the greater part of his speech, is this: "Mr. Stephanas is a layman, he is illiterate, unlearned and ignorant of all the holy theological studies which clergymen are required to understand before they can get a license to preach." As he was directing your attention to the pile of books the contents of which he had successfully stored away in the inner recesses of his expansive mind, and was endeavoring with all his power to impress you with his wonderful knowledge, I could not help but think of that story in the Bible about the great giant named Goliath who terrified Israel by the greatness of his stature. This giant, as you will no doubt remember, used to exhibit himself daily between the camps of Israel and the Philisines, and it seems that Israel was overawed by his mighty presence. But one day a little shepherd boy came along, and, without spear or shield or armor, slew the giant with a stone and a sling, and stood upon his dead body, and with his own sword cut off his head. Now since Mr. Hamilton has been pleased to place himself before you as the giant in this discussion, the only position left for me is that of the shepherd boy; and I have a few stones picked out of the river of the water of life (the word of God) which I intend to sling at this intellectual giant to bring him to the ground. Now I am quite prepared to plead guilty to the charge of being only a poor illiterate blacksmith without theological training, but then the disciples of Christ were only illiterate fishermen, and the Master himself was a carpented, the Apostle Paul a tentmaker, etc. No, dear friends, God has not left us to the mercy of learned theologians; on the contrary, he has invited us to come each one for himself and drink of the water of life freely. If it is necessary for us to fill our minds with the sciences in that pile of books over there before we can understand God's truth, then there is no hope for any of us here, for the circumstances of life in which we are placed will never permit us to accomplish such a feat. For my own part, I do not care to try, for I consider my limited mental space too valuable to be filled with anything but the incorruptible word of God, which Paul says "is able to make use wise unto salvation" (2 Tim. 3:15), "and is able to build us up and give us an inheritance among all them which are sanctified" (Acts 20:32).

My opponent quotes Matt. 5:8: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God," and asks the question, "How can they see God unless they are taken up to him?" Well, I must say that is a remarkable question for a man with so much education as he seems to have to ask. Ask that question of any schoolboy, and he will tell you that if the pure in heart are to see God, then they must either go to God, or God must come to them. But my opponent can see only one way, and that is the way which agrees best with his theology. But we must answer the question, When and where will the pure in heart see God in fulfillment of the promise of Christ? Well, we can be certain of one thing, and that is that the pure in heart will not see God by being taken to heaven at death, for there is not a passage of scriptrue between the covers of the Bible that either teaches or implies that men go to heaven at death. On the contrary, there is abundance of evidence that no such thing occurs. In fact, we are told plainly that "no man hath ascended to heaven" (John 3:13). There is no need of our being perplexed over a simple queslike this, for it has been answered for us thousands of years ago, long before theological seminaries were invented The patriarch Job gives us a direct answer to the question in the 19th chapter of his book; at the 25th to 27th verses he makes this statement: "For I know that my Redeemer liveth and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God. Whom I shall see for myself and mine eyes shall behold, and not another, though my reins be consumed within me." In whatever sense then that we are to be permitted to "see God," it is to be at the "latter day upon the earth." The Apostle John said on one occasion, speaking of Christ: "But we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is" (1 John 3:2). Now to see Christ is equivalent to seeing the likeness or manifestation of God, for Christ said on one occasion: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father" (John 14:9). This will be true in a still larger sense in that great day when he returns to the earth in great power and glory "to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all of them that believe" (2 Thess. 1:10).

But Mr. Hamilton says the righteous go to heaven at death because Christ in his sermon on the mount said, concerning those who were persecuted for righteousenss sake: "Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven, for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you." Now the trouble with my opponent is that he reads into this passage something it does not contain. It does not say a word about going to heaven. True, it says the reward is in heaven. That is because God is there, and he has the rewards with him. Peter tells us it is "reserved in heaven for us" (1 Peter 1:4), that is, it is laid away for us, kept for us, and then tells us that it is to be "brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ;" that is, when Christ comes again (1 Peter 1:13). The Master himself settles the matter when he says in the message which he sent to John on the isle of Patmos: "And behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man accordingfi as his work shall be." It is quite clear then that the reward is in heaven at present, but that when Christ comes again, as he has promised to do, he will bring the reward along with him and bestow it upon his faithful friends who have kept his commandments.

My opponent next comes to the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. I knew he would quote this; it is the ancient and time-honored argument of all heaven-going theorists. He has not told us whether he believes it to be a parable or a literal account of an incident that really happened. It makes no difference which view he takes, it is full of difficulties which he will find do more harm to his theory than any argument an opponent can bring against it. If he considers it not a parable, but a true story, then it upsets his whole theory.

What is it that takes place at death, according to the teaching of Mr. Hamilton? Does the body of the deceased go to heaven or to hell, as the case may be? Why, no? We know that the body is taken out to the cemetery and lowered down into the earth and covered with the sod. No! Mr. Hamilton does not believe that the body goes to heaven or hell, but his idea is that there is an immaterial immortal soul in the man concerning which Isaac Watts says:

> Up to the courts where angels dwell,
>   It mounts triumphant there;
> Or devils plunge it down to hell
>   In infinite despair.

Now this soul is supposed to be immaterial, that is, it has no substance; you can't see it or feel it. It is this soul which my opponent believes goes to heaven or hell at death. Now the story of the rich man and Lazarus will not help him to prove this, for it does not speak of invisible souls, but rather of real substantial men with eyes, voice, finger tips, tongue—visible men who can see each other and talk to each other, so that if he considers this a true incident, and not merely a parable, then it destroys rather than supports his theory. On the other hand, if he considers it as a parable, which it undoubtedly is, then it is only a story that is told to point a moral or illustrate a point, and does not necessarily have to be true or even possible. In the 9th chapter of Judges a story is told of the trees going out to choose a king story told of the trees going out to choose a king over them, and they ask first one tree and then another to be their king, and finally the bramble consents to be their king. Now you don't suppose that this parable teaches that the trees can talk and enter into political discussion, do you? Well, neither does the parable of the rich man and Lazarus teach that dead men can talk, or that the righteous can enjoy themselves in glory while they look on and see the wicked in torture. No, the parable of the trees was intended to teach that Israel at that time had chosen the meanest of Israel's nobility to be their king, one who would be in comparison with the others in Israel as the bramble compares to the other trees of the field. And the parable of the rich man and Lazarus was intended to teach the Pharisees and those who had ears to hear that which he stated plainly in the 15th verse of this chapter (Luke 16). His words are these, and this is what the parable teaches—speaking of the Pharisees: "Ye are they which justify yourselves before men, but God knoweth your heart, for that which is highly esteemed among men is an abomination in the sight of God." The parable beautifully illustrates this by showing a highly esteemed but wicked rich man tormented and a righteous but despised poor man comforted. The parable does not teach the time or place, but Christ tells us the time, place and circumstances in the 13th chapter of Luke, where he says at the 28th verse: "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth when ye shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God, and ye yourselves thrust out." I see my time has expired, so I will have to answer the other questions later.—Time called.

Whatever may have been the impression made upon the audience by the blacksmith's address, anyone who observed the expression on Timothy Berea's face could not fail to see that he at least was pleased. He arose and announced a recess of five minutes to allow the audience to relax somewhat before the second part of the debate was begun. When this time had elapsed he called the meeting to order, and announced that Mr. Hamilton would not occupy fifteen minutes in questioning Mr. Stephanas, or in speaking, or divide his time between speaking and questioning.

HEAVEN NO PLACE FOR MOTHER

A lady visiting Colorado suffered greatly from the elevation. One day after an attack of breathlessness she sighed out: "I am sure I shall die!"

"Will you go to heaven if you die?" inquired her little son, anxiously.

"I hope so, dear."

The small boy burst into tears.

"Oh, mother, dear," he sobbed, "don't, don't go to heaven. You could never stand the altitude."

Study not to remember the benefits you have conferred; guard against forgetting those you have received.

We could not be happy with all that the world can give us now. The spectacle of evil would blight anyone's life. Give us the hope of Israel and the world is well lost for it.

We are grieved to learn that Bro. Geo. T. Updyke is in poor health, and contemplates going into a hospital for treatment. The Lord bless the brother and give him back to his family in health.

Those who are devoted to the truth are like people in business in one respect—they have to "let things go" which, with other and lighter occupations, they might attend to. "Business" excuses everything with people in the world; "duty" will do the same with those who belong to God.

Discussion with the alien may be a serviceable way of drawing attention to the truth on special occasions, but it is of questionable utility as a permanent feature. It is apt to create a love of debate for its own sake, and to check those true spiritual tastes which it is the mission of the truth to develop. "Love, joy, peace, gentleness, righteousness, faith," do not grow in a polemic atmosphere. They are liable to shrivel in such an atmosphere, while the harsher critical propensities which delight in intellectual friction and finesse are apt to grow with a strength that blights and deforms the new man.

It makes no difference with some if you don't see them for five years, they are the same good friends as before. You begin just where you left off, as if there had been no interval. Others require keeping close to, or their friendship will cool. The cause of the difference is detectable upon examination. There is more of the love of God in the former than the latter.

Sunday, December 12th, we had a delightful visit from Bro. and Sister Chas. Moore, Sister Coy and son, Bro. Ralph Coy, all of Salem, Ohio. Mr. Wm. W. Coy, husband of Sister Coy, was also a visitor. He came for the express purpose of being baptized. Talks with him made it evident that he had been well taught in the gospel truths of the kingdom and name of Christ. Accordingly he was baptized Sunday morning, and broke bread with us immediately afterward. In the afternoon the happy family returned to Salem, and, like the eunuch, are now going on their way rejoicing (Acts 8:39).

"IN THE DAY"

Gen. 2:17

The Hebrew preposition be, rendered "in" this text, is translated in thirteen different ways, but only three of the thirteen could be used in this text, which are "in," "after" and "against." The choice of the right preposition depends entirely on the translator's understanding of the passage. "Against the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die" does not express a clear idea. Then the choice is between the two prepositions "in" and "after." "After the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" makes just as good sense as "in the day." In Numbers 28:26 the Hebrew preposition be is correctly and necessarily rendered both "in" and "after," as follows: "Also in the day of the first fruits, when ye bring a new meat offering unto the Lord, after your weeks be out, ye shall have a holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work." It would not make sense to say "in your weeks be out." The sense requires that both "in" and "after" should be used in this verse.

In Gen. 2:17 and Numbers 18:26 the words "in the day" are a correct translation of the Hebrew words be yom; and it would be just as proper to render each "after the day," provided the word "after" expresses the correct idea. Gesenius, the noted Hebrew lexicographer, says: "Where the mind rests more on the end of a period, and spoken therefore of time already past, the preposition be should be rendered "after." This is just the case in Gen. 2:17. The Creator was calling the attention of Adam to the fact that death must follow if he ate of the forbidden tree; not that he should die in the day he ate; for, when explaining the penalty, he says: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it was thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shall thou return" (Gen. 3:19).

THE PERSONALITY OF THE DEVIL

Elsewhere in this number will be found an article by Bro. A. B. Wince on the personality of satan. We have said before, and now say again, that we believe in the personality of the devil. We think some of our brethren make a reprehensible mistake when they spiritualize the serpent into evil thoughts, lusts, etc. To the serpent God said: "Upon thy belly shalt thou go all the days of thy life." It would hardly make good sense to read this sentence: "Evil thoughts, upon thy belly shalt thou go all thy life!"

Man is prone to extremes. In opposing an idea, and it may be an unscriptural idea, he unconsciously indulges in exaggeration. While agreeing with Bro. Wince as to the personality of the devil, we rather think he has gone beyond clear scriptural teaching in asserting that—

1. "There is not a hint that they had a desire or curiosity to taste the forbidden fruit." On the contrary it was distinctly affirmed of Eve: "When the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired," etc. (Gen. 3:6).

2. "Satan in some manner employs the serpent, and forces it to speak." "It is nonsense to suppose that God would sentence a dumb brute for being the chief cause of sin. * * *" By turning to Gen. 3:14 we find that God did sentence the serpent for the part he played in leading Eve into sin, and the sentence rests upon his accountability: "Because thou has done this." If the devil forced this dumb brute to do its part, did not God know it? And if he knew the "chief cause of sin" was the devil, not the poor snake "forced" into the transaction, why did he sentence the serpent, charging him with having "done this," and let the devil, the instigator and "chief" sinner, go "scott free?" If there were four parties in the Adamic sin—Adam, Eve, the serpent and the devil—why did God, who always does right, punish only three of the criminals, and let go the fouth, and he the "chief" or worst of them all?

3. "The snake was used to symbolize the devil himself." The objection to this statement lies in the fact that, like those who deny the personality of the devil by reducing him to evil propensities, it makes the serpent symbolic. If he was symbolic, Adam was symbolic, Eve was symbolic, the tree was symbolic, and so with the Garden of Eden and everything else. All reality becomes lost in the symbolic. As our dear Bro. Wince says, "The Restitution stands for what its contributors make it." We therefore exhort all who take pen in hand to write an article for its pages to be careful and write as the oracles of God give him authority.

IMMUNITY FROM DEATH A SERPENT DOCTRINE

In the Bible Advocate of November 16, 1915, Virgie L. Thompson writes: "The Lord has wonderfully led our family out to trust him in the past five years, and has delivered us from typhiod fever, pneumonia, carbolic acid poisoning, colds, boils, burns, cuts, bowel trouble, neuralgia, chills and ague, and many other things; in fact, we find him equal to any emergency, and I might say that liniments, salves, pills, fomentation cloths,—yes, and syringes, too—are all banished from our home. The doctors and drugs preceded them. I once tried these things, then as a last resort I tried the Lord, and I must surely have tried his loving patience with my unbelief; but now I see him first and last, bless his dear name, and all is well."

Like Mrs. Eddy, this writer seems to be floating in thin ether. She denies the reality of natural laws. She scouts physiology. There is no consumption, there are no fevers and tumors. These are only "false beliefs." But the normal mind will peer through the thin tinsel of Mrs. Eddy's "science" and see its delicate and far-reaching fibers. The infant, when it wails, has an "inherited belief" of pain. The babe writhing in its mother's arms with colic is the victim of a false belief. A man takes poison and dies, but it is not the poison that kills him—vicious belief sends him to the grave! If there is no disease, then of course the "false belief," the thing which does all the mischief, must extend to the beasts. You must say to your dog when he gets sick: "Carlo, you have a belief that you are sick; but, Carlo, it is all in your mind. Matter is never sick." What pangs and tortures, according to Mrs. Eddy's "science," has poor humanity endured, and the beasts as well, and all because of a false belief! Imaginary physical agonies have been the slavery of the human race. If the sufferings of fallen man have all been borne as a "false belief," then unreality is the profoundest thing in the world.

The art of healing, however, advocated by Virgie L. Thompson in the extract taken from the Bible Advocate, differs from Mrs. Eddy's in this, namely, there are diseases such as typhiod fever, pneumonia, etc., consequently she has been "delivered" from them; but with Mrs. Eddy these diseases are simply "illusions of mortal mind," and can not be "cured," because they do not exist. Diseases cause death; if diseases, then, are "illusions," not real, then death should cease among Christian Scientists. Remove and cause and its effect must cease. The cause of death, disease, they claim does not exist; death with them is ergo causeless! Virgie L. Thompson admits there are colds, chills, etc., and "many other things," but the Lord "delivers us" from these things, and therefore to her they are as harmless as if they were not. They can not have power over her; and, as the Lord is "equal to any emergency," she is absolutely immune from death.

"Ye shall not surely die" (Gen. 3:4), the serpent's lie, is still clinging, not only to immortal soulists, but to those who believe in conditional immortality as well. "Thou shalt surely die" (Gen. 2:17) is God's fiat, his "law of sin and death" (Rom. 8:1), which has reigned for centuries and ages, "even over them that have not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression" (Rom. 5:14). We are slow to understand and believe that "death has passed upon all men" (Rom. 5:12). When we discarded the immortality of the soul we thought we cleared ourselves of the serpent's theology; but when we examine ourselves and prove our own selves "whether we be in the faith" (2 Cor. 13:5), we find that just as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety, so he has corrupted our minds more or less from the simplicity that is in Christ (2 Cor. 11:2, 3). We have been indoctrinated by serpent theology; the poison is in our blood, and the result is you will hear even those who believe in conditional immortality, but are still holding on to the tail of the serpent, talking no death doctrine; that Enoch, Moses, Elijah, etc., never died; divine healing, faith cure, etc. These questions of antiquity are still pertinent: "Your fathers, where are they? And the prophets, do they live forever" (Zech. 1:5)? "Do they live forever?" The immortal soulists answer us promptly: "Certainly they do; there is no death for anybody; all men live forever." "Do they live forever?" Even some believers in conditional immortality, somewhat serpentized, answer: "Some of the 'fathers" still live, and some of the 'prophets' are still living, as Enoch, Moses, Elijah, etc." Thus they dispute the reign of death even over those who have sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression; they might, then, just as well dispute the reign of death over Adam himself, and be logical and consistent. But what is God's answer to the question, "Do they live forever?" Ponder it well: "But my words and my statutes, which I commanded my servants the prophets, did they not take hold (mar., overtake) of your fathers" (Zech. 1:6)? Did not God's sentence of death "take hold" of Adam? Did it not "overtake" the fathers and prophets? It did! To the grave they were all doomed, and to the grave they all went (Eccl. 9:10). Dowie and Mrs. Eddy are both dead, notwithstanding their great pretensions of healing. And the claws of time will soon drag into the grave Virgie L. Thompson, notwithstanding her boastful claim of immunity from death.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

With gladness of heart I write you a few lines concerning the meetings held in our neighborhood during the latter part of October. Bro. Almus Adams, in his usual clear and fearless manner, talked to us of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. We were favored with good weather, the attendance was fair, and the interest unusually good. The result was more than we had ever thought. At the close of the meetings 18 earnest souls embraced the truth, and were buried with him him by baptism. I pray that God may keep them in the straight and narrow way, and that we may all meet and rejoice together with our king at his coming. I desire to thank you who were instrumental in any way in sending Bro. Adams to us, and hope that we may likewise help others who are searching for the truth.

Your sister in hope, EVA PHELPS.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

Will you allow me a small space in our dear paper? I want to tell you that I have just returned from a visit East, and I want to say I visited the dear ones at Blackwell, Okla., and Arkansas City, Kansas, and found them rejoicing in the soon coming of the Master. I was loathe to leave them, but as my time was limited I had to hasten away to visit my many other friends before returning to California. I see in the Restitution of August 17, 1915, an article written by N. L. Willard, M. D., on "The Earth: Its Present and Its Future, and How It Will Be Repopulated." He spoke about the lost Atlantis. Will he please tell where one can get the history of it, or how does he know about it? I for one would be very thankful to hear the particulars about the Atlantis.

Always looking for the Master,

CASSIE L. HICKLIN.

Editor of The Restitution:

I write to let you know of the fine meeting we had here in Quinlan at the Christian Church by Bro. D. C. and N. B. Robison. We did not have a very large crowd, but what came were very attentive listeners. Bro. Robison was quite feeble for the first week, but Sister Robison delivered so many very instructive sermons on the resurrection and the coming of Christ, and the purpose of his coming, and the sincerity of believing the gospel of the kingdom of God and life of obedience that we may be an heir in the kingdom of Christ when he comes in power and great glory. It is surely a blessed thought to look forward to the coming of our blessed Redeemer, when those that have put on Christ and have walked in the way of life will be raised to die no more, but will live and reign with Christ when he comes to take the throne of David. We shall then not die any more, but will live on throughout the ceaseless ages to come.

Hoping that I may ever be found working in the vineyard of the Lord and praising his holy name forevermore, as ever in the Christ,

ELLA R. GATES.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

Please send me three or four copies of The Restitution of November 2, 1915. I think it safe to say any one article in that issue is worth all we pay for the paper the whole year. Your sermon, "The Kingdom of God is Within You," is simply grand, a feast to the hungry soul. Surely everyone who has read it has received real and lasting good. Thank the Lord for so much truth.

Bro. Judd's articles on "The Trinity" are unanswerable. Bro. Aldridge has given us some fine lessons on "The Devil: Is He a Personal Being?" which I have read with much interest and profit. "Spiritualism," by Bro. J. Conaway, is also a real treat. Bro. Conaway is one of our best writers. I would like to mention every writer, for they are all good, but can not do so for want of space.

Another year is drawing to a close, and as we enter the new year may we do so with a greater determination than ever before to serve God and live nearer and more devoted to him in the future than in the past. May Jesus soon come and restore the kingdom and bless the nations by his peaceful reign of one thousand years on the earth. Then "the meek will inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace" (Rev. 5:10; 20:6; Matt. 5:5; Psa. 37:11, 9, 34, 22). Then "shall the law go forth from Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks. Nations shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more" (Isa. 2; Micah 4).

Thank the Lord for this promise, for we know "he is faithful that promised." May the Lord everywhere bless his waiting children and guide them, as it were, by his right hand. And when Jesus Christ comes to make up his jewels may we all hear the welcome words: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

In the blessed hope of the gospel,

MRS. A. J. MARTIN.

DO THE SCRIPTURES TEACH THE PERSONALITY OF THE DEVIL?

Since the pages of The Restitution are freely open to those who deny his personality, we take it for granted that those who affirm his personality will not be excluded; yet we would mildly insinuate that its pages might be well filled more important matter. The Restitution stands for what its contributors make it. Hence we should be careful to emphasize the important things that are reveald for our edification, and with patience wait for the revelation of him whose purpose is to detsroy him who has the power of death (that is, the devil), and leave not a vestige of his corporiety upon which to predicate personality. Webster's definition of a person includes humanity, soul and body, life and rationality. Satan has manifested all of these qualities in a remarkable degree. He is referred to as the first person singular, second person singular and third person singular. He has as many names as he has characteristics. He has marked individuality, and a very subtle influence in the affairs and counsels of the nations. He is capable of transforming himself into an angel of light, an arch deceiver, the adversary of God and man, the chief actor in the Edenic episode. He persuaded our first parents to believe him instead of God, and established an error that is regarded vastly more sacred and essential to salvation than the doctrine of life through the Lord's anointed.

What the motive is of those who deny his real being I do not know. I only know that his destiny is fixed and his usurpation will end when the Lord shall crush him under our feet, and the burning lake shall receive and utterly consume the dead carcasses of him and his angels. The scriptures very frequently refer to him and his character and also speak of his power and majesty, and attribute to him those qualities of a rational being. I thank God that he is not invulnerable. The patient man of Uz scored a victory over him and refused to curse his Maker and die. The temptation of our Savior in the wilderness came from the same source, and were not the musings in the mind of the sinless Redeemer. Satan again is put to flight, and his offer scorned. We do not deny that we are tempted when our lusts are not kept under control. We wish to be understood as holding that others, by their suggestion and influence, may be chief cause, and often the whole cause, of our going astray. On my judgment neither Adam nor his helpmate reflected nor had any idea of the result of such transgression. It all grew out of the suggestion of the old liar.

Eve quotes her Creator's own words. The persuasion came from without, from the enemy. There is not a hint that they had a desire or curiosity to taste the forbidden fruit. The adversary, with his blandest smile, suggests to her that they would not surely die. This allays her fear. Next he tries to modify God's statement of the penalty in such a way that Eve would not notice the contradiction. He says: "God knows. You see his aim. God knows what will certainly follow, namely, your eyes will be made stronger, your understanding enlarged, and you will become like the angels with whom you have become familiar. Thus was the deception complete, and the human race corrupted at the fountain.

Satan in this instance in some manner employs the serpent, and forces it to speak as the angel of the Lord spake to Balaam the prophet through the dumb beast. It is nonsense to suppose that God would sentence a dumb brute for being the chief cause of sin and death entering into the world. No, no, the snake is only used to symbolize the devil himself. A very light penalty surely, since the serpent is as well and even better adapted to crawling than walking uprightly. Such a theory assumes that Eve was tempeted by her own lusts and enticed, and the Savior refers to her as a liar from the beginning.

I am done with the subject. I do not believe the subject is worthy of much investigation, and might as well be left out, since there is not one text in the Bible that plainly asserts, affirms or denies the proposition. A. B. WINCE.

Remarks

When I closed my meeting at Plainview, near Cambridge, Neb., October 31st, with 18 baptisms and a new congregation being the result, we were rejoiced because we knew the angels in heaven were rejoicing. But on November 1st, as we were getting ready to go to our next appointment, we received the saddest message of our life. My daughter had yielded to the grim reaper that morning. Oh, how little we know of others sufferings till we meet their conditions. "Maudie," as we always called her, was a girl of high ideals, and she has left a name behind her that will live and still speak. It was the largest funeral I ever saw, and it was a comfort to know she had not lived in vain. The immense floral offerings told of the esteem in which she was held. And now the future hope is all the sweeter, and it seems we can hardly wait till the grand reunion comes. We want to thank all who have written us and tried to comfort us. These epistles of love and sympathy are soothing to our aching hearts, but the sore spot there can not be healed till that great great day when we meet again. We try to forget our sorrow in thinking of the joy of meeting again.

The new congregation above mentioned decided to meet, or in other words Bro. and Sister Harglcroad are going to move to a new home, and thought it might never be their privilege to have the little flock in their home again, so they invited them to come to their home and enjoy Thanksgiving. They sent me a special invitation to meet with them, and we did. That was their first Thanksgiving after receiving the truth, and they thought they had more to be thankful for than ever before. After dinner the assembly sang some songs, then had responsive reading, when Sister Ethel Harglcroad and her sister Maude and Grace Tomlin gave us a special number that was appreciated by all. We then addressed them on the subject of Thanksgiving. We tried to show them that far above all temporal blessings was the joy of knowing our eyes had been opened to see the truth, and this was the principal thing for thanksgiving. We can never fully thank God for this wonderful blessing. We could starve and become destitute of clothing, and still get into the kingdom; while, on the other hand, we might have plenty of food and raiment and be destitute of truth and righteousness, and fail to enter the kingdom. So let us thank God for light, and pray for the garments of purity.

What is faith? "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen" (Heb. 11:1). God has not required man to have faith in him, without plenty of evidence. He has literally strewn mans pathway with wonderful works, so that even "devils believe and tremble" (or shudder). How does faith come? Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God" (Rom. 10:17). God has revealed enough of himself to mankind so that he says of the unrighteous and the ungodly, "They are without excuse." For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith, as it is written, The just shall live by faith. For the wrath of God is reveald from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men who hold the truth in unrighteousness, because that which may be known of God is manifest in them, for God hath showed it unto them. For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead, so that they are without excuse." (Rom. 1:17, 18, 19, 20).

The author and finisher of our faith here proves if we reject what has been revealed or made manifest of himself we are "without excuse." Paul warns us that without faith it is impossible to please God. James says: "Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone." "For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also." If we cherish the faith we must remember it will not, can not exist under a bushel or under a bed. If we seek to hide our light because of shame, or for fear of persecution, or for any other excuse, our Savior's own words condemn us, in Mark 4:21, 22. He says: "Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel, or under a bed, and not to be set on a candlestick? For there is nothing hid which shall not be manifested, neither was anything kept secret but that it should come abroad." Peter says: "And if ye call on the Father who, withou respect of persons, judgeth according to every man's work, pass the time of your sojourning here in fear.

Brethren, be not weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. Remember "ye are the light of the world."

Your sister in faith and hope,

LAURA SKEELS.

ADVICE

Advice is offensive, not because it lays us open to unexpected regret or convicts us of any fault which had escaped our notice, but because it shows us that we are known to others as well as to ourselves; and the officious monitor is persecuted with hatred, not because his accusation is false, but because he assumes that superiority which we are not willing to grant him, and has dared to detect what we desired to conceal. The desire of advising has a very extensive prevalence; and, since advice can not be given but to those who will hear it, a patient listener is necessary to the accommodation of all those who desire to indulge in the odious habit. A patient listener, however, is not always to be had, and good counsel is thrown away upon those who are absorbed in their own reflections.

FINISH YOUR WORK

Always finish work that you begin. One thing finished is worth a hundred half done. The completion of an undertaking yields more pleasure and profit than dozens of plans. The man who is always planning or scheming is rarely if ever successful. He often furnishes ideas for others, who go persistently to work and finish what his ideas suggested. "That was my idea, my plan," we frequently hear someone say; but the man who carried it out was the one who benefited himself and others. Do not begin what you can not finish. What you undertake to do, do, and reap the reward of your own ideas and skill.

NOTICE

Your subscription to "Words of Life," a monthly magazine advocating eternal life only through Jesus the Christ, at his coming and kingdom, is earnestly solicited. One copy, 37 cents per year. Twelve copies to one address, 25 cents a copy per year. Will be greatly pleased to see your name on my list. Sample copies gladly supplied on application. WM. G. ROTHE.

VOLUME 68 | A. R. N. O., JANUARY [illegible] | NUMBER 5

SUFFERING, WORKING AND TOILING

Dear Bro. Huggins:

"Does it pay to send The Restitution to anyone?" Sister Ettie Fry asks. You will think it does, and so will the readers of the paper, when you hear the wonderful story she told me when here on a recent visit. I think you will all get down on your knees and thank God for the amazing work of grace he has begun, and pray that it may grow as did the work of Simeon, Lucius and Mansen, who came from Cyprus and Cyrene to Antioch.

The 2st of last June Sister Fry went on the operating table and had both breasts taken off, the left one being afflicted with a malignant cancer, of large size, just ready to burst, and the right one with a benign tumor. The left breast was taken off from the shoulder to the waistline; all the glands and muscles from the left shoulder, the glands out from under the arm, and the breast clear to the bone. The right was not so bad, it was only the breast.

She had not realized the nature of her disease until a few days before she was taken to the hospital, and had told no one, not even her husband and her only sister of her trouble.

I think it was about this time that, when wrestling in prayer, she cried out: "I have done all I know how. I have tried to stand true to certain principles and certain true ideals, and O, Father, I am done. I am done, I am done. It is in your hands; I am done. I just leave it with you."

An arm was felt stealing softly from her left shoulder to her right, and a voice seemed to say: "You need do no more; I will do the rest." And from that time her worry over the non-success of her efforts in behalf of the truth vanished.

When she was telling me I said: "Ettie, I don't know that I ever got to that place;" and she replied: "O Roxana, I feel so poor; the [illegible] have all left me (gone into other churches), and I wanted to do so much for the Master."

"You can imagine what my thoughts were when I went to sleep to submit to that dreadful operation, not knowing whether I would wake again, but saying to myself: 'O Father, I am in thy hands; bless the hands of those who are to use the knife. It is all right if I wake up, and it is all right if I do not. Thou dost know how I have tried to stand, and that with all my faults I have [illegible] to what [illegible], and my faith [illegible] not been shaken."

Everyone, even the surgeons, [illegible] at her marvelous courage and [illegible] [illegible] the doctor said "Well, you are game." She replied "It is not game; it is trust." All who stood around her bed were so touched they turned and walked away. Soon after the operation was performed, and was successful, her physicians said she came out of it as she did just because of her unfaltering reliance upon God. To look at her now you would never guess that she had suffered from so serious a malady. She appears a little older, that is all.

And now comes the sequel of "doing all you can and leaving the rest to the Lord," knowing that it is the Lord who gives the increase. Ettie's strength had failed, she was utterly powerless, "she was done," compelled to put everything absolutely into God's hands. And Oh! he has "done the rest," just as the precious whispered words said he would.

She had sent The Restitution last year to a young girl named Melba Glaston, living with her aunt, Mrs. Bickley, in Ft. Wayne, Ind. Melba, being the only child of Herbert and Laura Gaston, and Mrs. Glaston the daughter of Mrs. Sarah McCormick, who is the sister of Dr. Charles Fry, Ettie's husband.

Melba read the paper with careful attention, grasped the truth, and believed it. Writing to her mother shortly after Sister Fry came out of the hospital to "tell Aunt Ettie I believe as she does, and I have been baptized. Another precious soul has accepted Jesus as her Savior and has been buried in his likeness—if I remember correctly, in the same city and through the same instrumentality.

After Ettie had read Melba's letter she wrote to me: "Can you imagine the tears, the thrill, the thankfulness, the pouring out of my heart to God for every blessing, taking no credit to myself, but Oh! the gratitude to our Father!" She has been so anxious for you to know, Bro. Huggins, but [illegible] to write the story herself lest she should seem to be boasting so I tell it for her.

But I am not through. I have only told what The Restitution so prayerfully, trustingly sent has begun to do. Melba's father is no longer indifferent. His tears flow when he hears the story of God's wonderful love for man. Let us pray that he [illegible] truth, and become a sanctified, earnest servant of Jesus.

The Fry family [illegible] now in Stafford, Kansas. [illegible] little one, and a beautiful, [illegible] and intelligent girl," though at present acting in some kind of a show. "The manager," Sister Glaston says, "is a very fine looking, educated man, with a wonderful voice [illegible] great powers for [illegible]. He is also a very fine actor and plays the [illegible] Melia."

Well, Mrs. Glaston and Melia got in [illegible] with him about the scriptures one day, and now, Mrs. Glaston says, "the man is simply wild." He had never heard the truth presented before, and spends his time in his room reading his Bible and digesting.

His wife told Sister Glaston that he said: "God sent that [illegible] woman into my company and, beginning [illegible] I am going to be a Christian; and just as soon as I can I am going to change my company into an evangelist crew and let God have my time and talents." The man's name is Wilson. Of course he has much to learn as to what he must do in order to be saved, but we will all pray for him and try lovingly to help him, that he may, as Apollos and Cornelius did, learn "the way of God more perfectly," and may mightily convince others that Jesus is the Christ, the only one through whose name we can receive forgiveness of sin and have the life that is to come. Mr. Wilson wants literature on "the signs of the times," but we must be careful what we send him lest we get him confused.

Sister Glaston is trying to organize a Bible Class in the show. Surely "God works in a mysterious way his wonders to perform." "And now," Ettie says, "let's you and I do all we can for The Restitution, writing for it and trying to make it the very best paper there is," trusting that God will bless our humble efforts and use us and the paper still further for his own glory.

S. ROXANA WINCE.

THE GOSPEL AND ITS CONDITIONS IN APOSTOLIC TIMES

A Sermon by M. Joblin.

As a people we are profoundly impressed with the idea that the end of Gentile times is near. From the lips of the blessed Lord his disciples were warned to take heed to themselves, lest at any time their hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life and so that day come upon you unawares; for as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. The instruction of our Lord was to enable his little circle of learners to be the exception to the almost universal rule, that that day would come as a snare. "Watch ye, therefore, and pray always that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these (troublous) things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man." And the apostle Paul, writing to the Thessalonians on the same subject (1st letter, chapter 5, verse 4), says: "But ye brethren are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief; ye are the children of light, and the children of the day; we are not of the night nor of darkness, therefore let us not sleep as do others but let us watch and be sober." They were in a condition not to be surprised. But why? They were children of light. And when we remember that the Psalmist says that it is the entrance of God's word that gives light; and remember the Word of the Spirit in Peter that we have the prophetic Word more confirmed, to which we do well to take heed as to a lamp shining in a dark place, till the day dawn; and remember the Word of the same Spirit in Amos [illegible] where we read that the Lord God will surely do nothing; but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets, this will explain to you why we know that this dispensation is about to close. We have given heed to God's revealed purpose. We know nothing of ourselves, but simply believe what God says, and Jesus says of the signs that will proclaim that mighty revolution close at the door. As sure as God has spoken to us in the [illegible], so sure is it that the gospel invitation ends with Gentile times. The gospel offers eternal life and a crown and a throne in co-partnership with Jesus in the world's dominion. That is what it is to be saved! That is what Jesus offered and what the apostles offered in his name as long as they lived; and that is what is offered us in their written words to us. No other gospel has been published since. Being personal witnesses of the signs given by our Lord and his apostles we know absolutely, that the Lord is at hand to come, and that he shuts the door into his kingdom and glory when he comes, it makes us terribly in earnest to show our fellow mortals what the gospel and its conditions were in the apostolic age. Whatever they were then, they are now. Jesus preached the coming of God's kingdom, and sent the twelve and the seventy to do the same. And on the eve of his departure he said, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness." But he told them to begin at Jerusalem. They did begin at Jerusalem. He instructed them to baptize in the name of Father, Son and Spirit all who believe. The words of Jesus just quoted show that it was the gospel of the kingdom that had to be believed before they were proper subjects of baptism. They were to preach the gospel of the Kingdom, and believers of the gospel of the kingdom were to be baptized, no others. Let us see now, whether or no the apostles obey these commands of the Lord. He told them to begin the work of proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom at Jerusalem, and they did. In the second chapter of Acts we learn that the day of Pentecost being fully come and the whole number of 120 being altogether in one place, they were all filled with the Holy Spirit and thereby fully equipped for their evangelistic labors, in all countries, being able to speak tongues that they had never learned. On that occasion Peter delivered a sermon that is a model for the whole dispensation, and the gist of it was that he, whom they only a few weeks before cruelly put to death, was alive again, and revealed the way of life after death to others, and proves that men dead and buried, are dead and buried; they are not dead and alive at the same time, and he [illegible] the case of David who died over a thousand years before, as proof of this, saying that he had not ascended to heaven but his grave was with them to that day. He also says Christ was raised up out of the death [illegible] on David's throne, the throne [illegible] promised the Lord God would give him. When this astounding intelligence was fully realized by the assembled multitude they said, Men and brethren, what shall we do? If [illegible] [illegible] raised from the dead [illegible] sit on David's throne, they united to secure a share of the kingdom. Daniel said the saints should share with the Son of Man for ever, even forever and ever. Experience of more than fifty years teaches me that if Peter had said Jesus had been raised from the dead to take people to heaven when they die millions upon millions would rejoice in it, because it is what they believe; but, seeing they do not believe what Peter preached, they never even see this Scripture, or if they do see it it means nothing to them. They believe something else, and what Peter says affects their minds no more than water affects a duck's back. Read it to them as the words of Peter when literally full of the spirit, and, I grieve to say it, it no more changes their faith than if it were spoken by any uninspired man now. Scores upon scores of people have said to me, after seeing that the word of God sanctioned what I said: "I don't believe it makes any difference what we believe, if we are only sincere." Solemnly I say it, they take what liberty they please with the divine conditions of salvation and think they are Christians all the same. I repeat that Jesus preached future life by resurrection to inherit the kingdom of God under the whole heavens, to the Jews, and sent the disciples into all the world to publish the same glad tidings, and it was believers of these same things they were commanded to baptize, and no others. It was baptized believers of these same glad tidings that Jesus said should be saved, and the disbelievers of these same glad tidings that Jesus said should be condemned, and it makes no difference at all what men and women think it ought to be. That is the way it is! I have started out to see if the apostles preached what Jesus told them to preach, and we find Peter in the Pentecostal sermon hewing to the line. And the statement is made in Acts 2:41 that they that gladly received his word—Peter's word—were baptized.

In the 13th verse of the next chapter Peter again, after healing one who had been lame from his birth, declared that it was done in the name of Jesus, before whom they had preferred a murderer, although Pilate could find no fault in him——he was alive again, and glorified, and styles him the "Prince of Life," showing that those who would obtain life must receive it of him—the Prince. He had himself said he was the way, the truth and the life, and the resurrection and the life, and that he would raise up at the last day those who believed in him, and also said: "Because I live, ye shall also live." And in the 19th verse he calls on his hearers to repent and be converted, that their sins may be blotted out when God shall send Jesus again, whom the heaven must retain—how long will heaven retain him, Peter? Hear his answer: "Until the time for the restoration of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Heaven will retain Jesus until the time for restoring all things which God has spoken by all the holy prophets. Of course Peter could not quote all the prophets had said should be restored, so he quotes none of them, but sends us back to the prophets to find out, and if we are not interested enough to search it out in the prophets we do not deserve to have any part in it, and will not have any part in it. "Search the Scriptures," said Jesus; there were only the Old Testament Scriptures when he said that. In Acts 4 we find Peter again referring to the establishment of the kingdom, and predicting how the kings of the earth and the rulers will try to prevent the establishment of the kingdom, and further on it says "with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus," the Prince of Life for all believers. In the 5th chapter the apostles were arrested and thrust into prison. But the angel of the Lord set them free during the night and told them to go and speak in the temple to all the people all the words of this life—that Jesus had brought to light—to show them how they could obtain future life by a resurrection through the risen and glorified Jesus. Of course they were again arrested, and commanded not to teach any more in Jesus' name. Peter gave them to understand that they ought to obey God rather than men; and told the authorities that repentance and remission of sins were obtainable through the resurrected Jesus. In the 6th chapter we learn that Stephen full of faith and power did wonders and miracles among the people, and presently he was arrested, and brought before the council, and in his defense he went back to the promise of Abraham and his seed (the Christ) of the land of Canaan for an everlasting inheritance, but never gave him as much as he could set his foot on, and then proceeded to show them that he whom they had cruelly put to death was the promised Messiah; but before he could round out the story by showing them that Abraham and his seed would come into possession of the promised inheritance when God sends Jesus again—yes, before he could finish the gospel story they stoned him to death. In Acts, chapter 8, we are introduced to another powerful evangelist, Philip. He went down to Samaria and preached the Anointed One to them. At the 12th verse we find one of the most important passages in the book of God, because it for all time settles—yes, forever settles what it was necessary to believe in apostolic times—right close to the days of the Lord on earth—only two or three years at the most after the ascension of Jesus to heaven. It states distinctly and positively what it was necessary to believe before they were proper subjects for baptism before they would baptize them. Philip we are told in the 6th and 7th verses, wrought miracles, healed the lame and the palsied, etc. And in the 12th verse says: "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." Here are two sections or divisions of the gospel message as distinct as words can make it: (1) The things concerning the kingdom of God; (2) the name of Jesus Christ, or Anointed. Remember this rule was applied by one divinely equipped for his mission. Would the spirit have miraculously attested that he spoke the truth of God if he had gone beyond the Lord's commission, and laid needless conditions of salvation upon the people? I trow not. I say to all who except to these conditions that they owe it to themselves and to God to show that later conditions of pardon have come from heaven, or cease their presumption and opposition, for it is a matter of life and death to them. Oh, I say to such, in the language of the spirit: "Cease ye from man whose breath is in his nostrils."

Dear friends, I realize that I shall have to give an account for all that I may say to you in the name of the Lord, and I realize, too, that Jesus said: "My word shall judge you at the last day." His word, no matter if ten thousand men make assertions of their own that conflict with his, his words will judge you. It is seen by this fact that it is a serious thing to listen to his word; therefore I trust you will give earnest heed while I ask, and then answer why Philip preached to the Samaritians concerning the kingdom of God. I answer, he could do nothing else. He had no choice in the matter. The commission under which he proclaimed at all included Matt. 24:14, which says: "This gospel of the kingdom shall" (not may be) "shall be preached in all the world for a witness." I say Philip could not help it, had he wanted to. But how could he want to after embracing it himself and having—yes having actually tasted of the powers of the age to come—had a foretaste of the unlimited power to be entrusted to them when they shall have attained to God's kingdom and glory. It was this foretaste that enabled them to perform miracles and wonders before the people. The next point is to consider what things concerning the kingdom of God did Philip preach? He preached the coming of the kingdom as Jesus did (Matt. 4:23; Mark 1:14). "This gospel of the kingdom," said Jesus; the gospel he preached—"shall be preached in all the world." What besides the coming of the kingdom did Philip preach? He preached that Jesus would come again and set up the kingdom he proclaimed the coming of. In Matt. 25:31-34 we find these utterances, "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory and all the holy angels with him, THEN shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." He is seated now, upon his Father's throne (Psa. 110:1; Rev. 3:21). Here we have infallible evidences that Jesus is coming to earth to take his seat upon the throne of his glory. How could it be different from this, after Gabriel has promised that the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David? David had no throne in heaven, and himself has never entered there (Acts 2:34). The house of Jacob is not in heaven, but scattered over the wide earth and he comes to gather them out of all nations and invites them all into one nation upon the mountains of Israel, and reigns over them forever (Ezek. 37:21-25).

What other things about the kingdom of God did Philip preach to the Samaritans? He preached that all the blessed of the Father will inherit that kingdom along with Jesus. How do I know that? I know it because that is one of the things Jesus preached about it—and this is the same gospel he told his disciples to preach. Jesus tells us that after seating himself upon the throne of glory, he will say to them: "Come ye blessed of the Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Philip surely would not omit the grand finale, the consummation of the hope he set before the Samaritans. I mean that he would not omit the grand inducement to believe and obey.

What other things concerning the kingdom of God did Philip preach and the Samaritans believe before he would baptize them? Why, that those who continued with him in his temptation would be appointed to a kingdom, as his Father had appointed unto him, that they may eat and drink at his table in his kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

What other things concerning the kingdom did Philip preach? He preached what Jesus did in Luke 12:32, that it was the Father's good pleasure to bestow the kingdom upon the "little flock" who believe the glad tidings. And what more? Why if he preached what Jesus told him to preach, he taught them that Jesus, as a nobleman, had gone to a far country to receive a kingdom, and to return, and then reckon with, and reward his servants (Luke 19:12-15).

THE METAL IMAGE

This vast struggle that extends throughout the three continents of Europe, Asia and Africa, and even part of America—for Canada and the West Indies are sending "contingents" to the front—what does it all mean? I remember when just a boy reading a pamphlet entitled "The Coming Struggle," written by a certain Dr. Cummins. I don't recollect much about the details of his "interpretation" of the Hebrew prophets, but it is on my mind that he closed up mundane affairs with the voyage of Queen Victoria, the then reigning monarch of Britain, to "lay her crown at the Redeemer's feet." Just think of it, when out of that woman's womb in the second generation has issued three men—George, William and Nicholas—who have drenched Europe in blood and caused havoc to civilization such as could never have been dreamed of half a century ago. Dr. Cummins meant well, but he missed it—that is, he missed it in detail. The main idea, that "the Redeemer would come to Zion and turn away ungodliness from Jacob," he had that all right. Men long before him had the same idea—Joseph Priestley, John Bunyen, John Milton and others centuries ago wrote of it as the hope of humanity; the apostles of Christ did the same, and prophets of Israel before him, but they all saw through a glass darkly—"heard but understood not"—so we can't wonder at Dr Cummins and the rest of us who make errors in guessing out the details of this "great event to which the whole creation leads."

Now I set down as a postulate, for my own satisfaction at least, that it is unreasonable to suppos that those who are "waiting for the kingdom of God" should have to rely on some old back numbers of expositors bound in musty tombs and buried in libraries or museums. Young students of prophecy may clear their minds of that idea and not vex their souls with hard study on the matter, especially if they have, like me, to make their living by working. "God is his own interpreter, and he will make it plain," so plain that no faithful soul on the watch will have any doubt, provided he is posted in the one volume that the Father has given for our instruction in righteousness. Still we are at liberty to consult one with another. It is our privilege, in fact, as well as our duty, to build each other up in this matter as well as in others.

Now according to my idea the most salient point in prophecy is the massing of all human power ready for the resistance to the Son of Man at his advent. This point could be shown from almost any of the prophets, or all of them, but it is nowhere shown so simply or so conclusively as in the much quoted instance of "Nebuchadnezzar's dream," as related by Daniel. The king, according to the narrative, saw a great human image composed of different metals, but it was one complete form. What he saw was not a historical narrative, but an erect figure; and moreover this human form in all its parts perfect remained thus until destroyed by the "stone cut without hands;" and it is particularly specified in the narrative that all the various parts composed of the various metals were "broken in pieces together," and hence simultaneously, at one place and at one time, and the power they had was at once absolved by the destroying stone. Now all the "interpretations" that I have ever read seem to rest content with the idea that each of the empires enumerated destroyed each other, and that at the coming "advent" there will be only the "toe kingdom" left! To me this is so far away from the actual narrative that I hardly know how to begin to correct it. True enough, the various kingdoms enumerated succeeded each other as "world powers," but it is evident to any reader of history or even newspapers that the end of their career was not at the termination of their "foreign empire," for every one of them are as much in existence today as they ever were, and with the exception of Babylonia, now occupied by Turkey, they not only have had a more or less continuous existence, but they even are called by the same names---Persia, Greece, Rome.

As for the toe kingdoms, there is only one thing that I feel certain about, and that is that neither of these mentioned kingdoms are any of the "toes." These, as we gather from other figures in the Bible that picture this last wonderful scene, have their power "one hour with the beast," that is, they had no existence at th etime of the writing. So that in the last "combine" so graphically pictured in the various prophecies we have two sets of powers represented, namely, the historical or ancient, and the modern and military, built up into one vast human framework that all that dwell on the earth will worship, "save those whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life."

PSALMS OF DAVID

Exalt ye the Lord our God, and worship at his footstool; for he is holy (Ps. 99:5).

Exalt the Lord our God, and worship at his holy hill; for the Lord our God is holy. Know ye not that the Lord he is God; it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves. We are his people, and the sheep of his pasture (Ps. 100).

Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: and be thankful unto him, and bless his name. For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting, and his truth endureth to all generations. I will behave myself wisely in a perfect way. O when wilt thou come unto me? I will walk within my house with a perfect heart. I will set no wicked thing before mine eyes; I hate the work of them that turn aside; it shall not cleave to me.

A froward heart shall depart from me; I will not know a wicked person. Whoso privily slandereth his neighbor, him will I cut off; him that hath an high look and a proud heart will not I suffer. He that worketh deceit shall not dwell within my house: he that telleth lies shall not tarry in my sight. I will early destroy all the wicked of the land ,that I may cut off all wicked doers from the city of the Lord (Ps. 101).—Selected by Mrs. H. E. Russel.

PRACTICAL POINTS

God is very patient and forgiving, and sometimes gives us a second opportunity (Ps. 130:3, 4).

The call to be a co-worker with God for the salvation of men is extended to every one of us (1 Cor. 3:6-9).

No matter how great the work, if God calls us to it it is ours simply to go forward. He will direct us what to say (Jer. 1:17).

If we fail to warn the wicked our guilt is very great (Ezek. 18:29; 33:8).

The alacrity with which heathen sometimes accept the gospel message puts to shame those who have heard it from infancy (Matt. 12:41).

To do at once what we know God wants us to do is to take a long step toward better knowledge of him (John 7:17).

When we see ourselves in the light in which God sees us our penitence for sin will be very deep (Job 42:5, 6).

The most glorious way along which a king can lead his people is the way that leads into right relations with God.

True repentance includes the "Right about, face!" in relation to all sin (Isa. 1:6).

An appreciation of the forgiving nature of our God is the strongest force deterring us from sinning against him (Ps. 130:4).

By penitence and pardon the sinner can come into the attitude upon which God's greatest blessings can rest (2 Cor. 6:17, 18).

THE BEAUTIFUL

Whatever is beautiful is refining. Whether in nature or in art, the presence of the beautiful softens and purifies. But let no young lady fall into the blunder of supposing that only that which is expensive can ever be beautiful. It is labor, care, skill, an artistic eye and a refined taste that beautify. Whether in home or in dress, in speech or in manners, money is not main thing which provides the beautiful. The dowdy apparel of many a slattern has cost more by far than the neat and beautiful garb of her indigent but orderly neighbor.

Love, like the opening of the heavens to the saints, shows for a moment, even to the dullest man, the possibilities of the human race. He has faith, hope and charity for another being, perhaps but a creation of his imagination; still it is a great advance for a man to be loving even in his imaginations.

No one was ever corrected by a sarcasm, but oftener driven further in the wrong way. In teaching always be kind and patient.

EDITORIAL

Sister Wince writes: "Sister Alta King's articles on 'Justification by Faith' are fine. Alta is one of your best writers. Those articles are worth the price of the paper for a year. I do so want to write The Restitution, if nothing more than a word of Christmas cheer."

Sister Huggins was taken ill suddenly December 20th, and had to be taken to a hospital immediately for an operation. At this writing she seems to be on the way to recovery. Her unexpected illness during Christmas is unfortunate for her and for us, but we are profoundly thankful to our Father for the preservation of her life and for reasonable prospects of the return of her usual good health.

"When my Lord the king shall sleep with his fathers" (1 Kings 1:21). In these words Bathsheba speaks out the heart of a wife. David's end was near; his wife could not contemplate that event without deep emotion. She compared death to a sleep. Beautiful simile! This view of death robs the "last enemy" of its terrors, and soothes the sorrows of the bereaved. Death is but the gentle sinking of the tired and spent body into the lap of rest. Silently it reposes among the hallowed dust of bygone generations, until the last great trumpet shall wake it into newness of life.

Many readers have appreciated Bro. Brown's series of articles on "Preaching the Truth." Others have regretted his letter in which he expressed his faith in "mortal resurrection," while several Christadelphians have rebuked him for same. Bro. Brown, of course, is "the blacksmith preacher" in his story; and all must admire the splendid way in which he answers the fallacious claims of the orthodox Mr. Hamilton. But the ease with which he puts aside Mr. Hamilton and his claims is because Bro. Brown is right and Mr. Hamilton is wrong. When a Christadelphian is wrong he is as wrong as anybody else, and is just as easily confounded and silenced as anyone else. Several months ago we exposed a sophisticated argument by Editor A. H. Zilmer, who is a reputed Christadelphian, and he has been as quiet since then as an immortal soulist when asked for proof of that dogma. Then Bro. Brown came along and somewhat boastfully claimed he was a Christadelphian, and that he believed in "mortal resurrection" for all who are raised from the dead. He felt so strongly on the latter point that he practically challenged us to debate the question. We replied that we were ready, and incidently asked him for divine authority for calling himself a Christadelphian, and also for the Bible proof for "mortal resurrection." Since then we have even addressed him privately, but to the present date (Christmas eve) we have not received the scratch of a pen from the brother. We opine that when he lookd in the word of God for the name of "Christadelphian" he was not able to find it, just like an orthodox looks and fails to find "immortal soul." And when he looked in the Bible for "mortal resurrection" (for the saints) he was not able to find one single passage that he could quote for proof! If this humiliating experience has made our brother a sadder man we ardently hope that he is at least a wiser one.

WORDS, IDEAS AND INSPIRATION

Words are signs of ideas both common and revealed. Revelation in its restricted meaning signifies the things revealed or made known by the Spirit of God. Hence the ideas contained in the scriptures are spiritual ideas or things; and these are expressed in spiritual words and spiritual phrases, or signs adequate to their conveyance. Thus Paul says: "Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which comes from God, that we might know the things which are given to us by God. Which things also we speak, not in words taught by human wisdom, but in words taught by the spirit, explaining spiritual things (or ideas) in spiritual words." Now here are two classes of words—first, words taught by human wisdom, and second, words taught by the spirit. The former may be termed the language of Ashdod, and the latter the language of Canaan. It is a rule, which you will find sustained throughout scripture, that spiritual ideas are never couched in the language of the philosophy contemporaneous with the writers of the word, nor are human traditions clothed with spiritual words. Hence, if a phrase current among the philosophers of old and the people be not in the Bible the idea of the phrase is not there either. Now, the phrases "immortal soul" and "immortality of the soul" belong to the first class, namely, of "words taught by human wisdom," for neither of them is to be found in the scriptures from Genesis to Revelations.

INSPIRATION

Festus was not an inspired man, and therefore what he said to Paul was not the language of inspiration, but the writing that tells us what he said is the writing of inspiration. No man, speaking by inspiration, would have said to the apostle of the Gentiles: "Paul, thou art beside thyself, much learning doth make thee mad" (Acts 26:21). The case is exactly as you suppose—a case in which what uninspired Festus said has found a place in the inspired records of events, just as the speech of Gamaliel (Acts 5:35-39); the cry of the Jews when they found Paul in the temple (Acts 21:18); or the question afterward put to the apostle by the chief captain (21:38); or what the scribes, pharisees, lawyers, sadducees and chief priests said upon so many occasions in the course of Christ's ministry of the word of the kingdom; or what the serpent said to Eve; or the message of Sanballat to Nehemiah; or the blasphemous speech of Sennacherib before the walls of Jerusalem, etc., etc., all of which, being thus incorporated with the scripture, constitute elements of the inspired record; for what inspiration did not originate (as in these instances) it has at least had to do with recording; for, even when the apostles were put upon their defense before the authorities, they were under no necessity to take the least thought about what they were going to say; whatever might be necessary was given to them by the spirit in the very hour of their need; for, says Christ, "It is not ye that speak, but the Holy Spirit" (Mark 13:11); "not ye that speak but the spirit of your Father that speaketh in you" (Matt. 10:19, 20). If the apostles were not fit to be left to themselves, in the mere matter of giving evidence in their own defense, how much less fit they must have been to have given such an ample account of the whole matter, as we have in the New Testament! What to leave out, and what to include, in this permanent record of so many sayings and doings, it was only possible for the Spirit to decide.

HOLY CHILDREN

Please explain 1 Cor. 7:14 for one who has profited by your exegesis.—S. T. Blessing.

Editor's Reply

"For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by (in) the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by (in) the husband (the brother, so some of the oldest MSS. read); else were your children unclean (unlawful); but now (that you have been legally married) are they holy" (according to law). Such is our understanding of Paul's words. The circumstances, it seems to us, demand this interpretation. They are these: Paul is answering a letter of inquiry which the Corinthians had sent to him (verse 1). In it they had raised the question if a brother should live with an unbelieving wife, or a sister with an unbelieving husband. Paul's answer is: "If any brother hath a wife that believeth not;" not, "If a brother marries a wife that believeth not," for the marriage of believers with unbelievers is forbidden; but if after aliens have married, and the truth finds the husband, and not the wife, then should this brother who "hath (already) a wife," leave her (verse 2)? Paul's answer is, No, let him not put her away. He then proceeds to show why their marriage should remain sacred and unbroken: "For," alleging the reason why their marriage is legal, "the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband." In the marriage vow the "unbelieving wife" had agreed before God and man that "forsaking all others, she would cleave to him, and him alone, so long as she should live." Sanctification is setting apart for special use. Then the marriage vow sanctified these parties, set them apart for each other's use. Their marriage was legal, their children were "holy' or legitimate. Since their marriage was legal and their children legitimate, he urges them to remain in their covenant, with this added reason, that it gives the believing husband or wife an opportunity to "save" the unbelieving partner (verse 16).

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Editor:

Enclosed find my personal check for renewal of The Restitution. We have received it two years now, and miss it when one is delayed or our time expires.

Yours in hope, C. W. ZELLER.

Dear Bro. Huggins and Brothers and Sisters:

I am enclosing $1.50 for the Christmas present that I agreed to send. I hope it will be in season for some poor soul to get the paper in time. I cut a piece out of a paper called The Family Herald. It was written by a minister. Could you or any of the brothers and sisters tell me through the paper where I could get a new Bible?

Your sister in Christ,
SUSAN A. HOWARD.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

In The Restitution of November 30th I notice on page 8 that J. E. Wilson says: "We would like to take the stand for Christ, but there is no one of the faith near here that we know of." Does he mean that they would like to be baptized, or does he simply mean that they are literally alone? What do you know about him? If he is a good subject for the Isolated Society to work on may we have his address?

Your sister in Christ.
LYDIA RAILSBACK.

(Will Bro. Wilson please communicate with Sister Railsback, 621 S. Fellows Street, South Bend, Ind.?—Editor.)

Style is only the frame to hold our thoughts. It is like the sash of a window—a heavy sash will obscure the light.

ISOLATED SOCIETY NOTICE

The work of the Isolated Society has been well started. Money has been coming in, but more is needed all the time to accomplish the good that may be done in this way. Are you not willing to help someone learn the "good news" of the kingdom of God.? Send all money to the Secretary, Miss Rose Storjohnn. Phoenix, Nebraska.

REPENTANCE

Acts 3:19-21

First, What is repentance? Webster: "The relinquishing of any practice."

Sorrow, fear and anxiety are properly no part of, but adjuncts to repentance, too closely connected to be easily separated. Properly expressed, repentance is change of mind or purpose. Illustrate.

That such is the scripture meaning, or use of the word, see Jer. 18:7-10. Again, Mat!. 21:28: "A certain man had two sons, and he came to the first and said, Son, go work today in my vineyard. He answered and said, I will not, but afterward he repented and went.

Second, "Be converted." Popular view Webster: "To turn from one belief to another; properly, a change of belief." Hence James says (5:19): "Brethren, if any of you err from the truth, and one convert him * * * he shall save a soul from death."

But we are to repent and be converted for what? The answer is, "that your sins may be blotted out," or, as Jesus said to Paul (Acts 26:18): "I now send thee to the Gentiles to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins and inheritance among them that are sanctified by faith that is in me" (or "through that faith which leads into me"—Diagiott).

We see then that we obtain forgiveness of sins through faith in God's appointed way. Hence Paul says in Acts 10:43: "To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth into him shall receive remission of sins."

In perfect harmony with this are the words of the prophet Habakkuk: "The just shall live by his faith." Again, "Without faith it is impossible to please God." Who can not see the importance of faith? It is by faith we live, through faith we get remission of sins; without faith we can not please God.

Is it any wonder Paul says in Phil. 3:8: "I have suffered all things that I might win Christ, and be found in him, not having my own righteousness but the righteousness which is of God by faith."

Faith is everything. Faith in what? This is the question. Will any faith answer? No. But some say you are too particular; it is impossible for all to believe alike. The apostle tells us there is but "one faith." Listen to Paul: "There is one body and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope, * * * one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all and through all, and in you all."

What are we to do? Everything is predicated on faith—to please God, our righteousness, the forgiveness of our sins, eternal life. Yes, there is no escaping it. There stands a thus saith the Lord; there is but "one faith."

Since God has predicated all on faith, can we ascertain what that faith is? Yes, there is not the least difficulty, though I am free to say that the professed Christian world does not know. Yet it is plain, which we can show beyond dispute.

I answer then: The "one faith" is just what the apostles preached to be believed. What was that? I answer: It was just what the Savior told them to preach: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth," etc.

But what did they say when they preached the gospel? Did they talk of going to heaven? No. John says that Jesus said to his disciple, "As I said unto the Jews, so say I unto you. Whither I go ye can not come."

Did they talk about saving your soul, getting religion? Did they point the sinner to a fiery gulf below and an angry God above? Did they simply say that Christ died for us, that we must believe on Christ, etc.? Was that what they preached when they preached the gospel? I anwser, No. What then did they preach?

We are told in Acts 8:12: "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God," etc. Is it not plain beyond dispute what the "one faith" is?

Did Paul preach the same? He says he remained two whole years in his own hired house, preaching the kingdom of God and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ (Acts 28:30).

Again, we are told in the 23rd verse that he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading the Jews concerning Jesus, out of Moses and the prophets from morning till evening."

Peter preached the same on the Day of Pentecost He told the Jews that God had sworn with an oath to David that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne. This Jesus hath God raised up whereof we all are witnesses. Therefore, let all the house of Israel know assuredly that God hath made that same Jesus both Lord and Christ." When they heard and believed this they were pricked in the heart.

Once more After John was cast into prison Jesus came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, repent and believe the gospel?"

The one faith, then, is the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and Paul said if any man, or an angel from heaven, preach any other, let him be accursed.

In order, then, that we may receive the remission of sins and inheritance among them that are sanctified, we must believe the gospel or glad tidings that God has caused to be proclaimed.

Here, if time permits, elaborate the things of the kingdom and name of Christ.

Whoever, then, has not heard and understood these things has not complied with God's way of life, can not have his sins remitted What was to be the result of their sins being blotted out? Answer: "Times of refreshment and the return of "Jesus." They looked to the setting up of the kingdom and restoration of Israel. This is clear from Acts 13:23: "Of this man's seed hath God according to his promise raised unto Israel a Savior." Verse 26: "Men and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham, and whosoever among you feareth God, to you is the word of salvation sent. For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets, which are read every sabbath day, they have fulfilled them in condemning him." Verse 32: "And we declare unto you glad tidings, how that the promise which was made unto the fathers, God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children in that he hath raised up Jesus again." Verse 38: "Be known unto you, therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you forgiveness of sins."

They understood that only such as reformed and were baptized for the name could have part in the kingdom. Here Peter says (chapter 3, verse 26): "Unto you first God, having raised up his son Jesus, sent him to bless you in turning every one of you from his iniquities."

The apostles were anxious that they should give ear in order that the time might speedily come when Jesus should come again, for, says Peter, "the heavens must receive him until the times of restitution of all things," etc.

He could not return and restore all things till the bride of Christ, or rulers were made up. This is clear from Paul's words to the Jews (Acts 13:46). He says: "It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you, but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles."

Why did they turn to the Gentiles? Simeon explains this in Acts 15:14: "God did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name. After this I will return."

We see, then, that when the work of taking out a people for his name is accomplished, then will Jesus return, and a time of refreshing come to Israel, for then will Israel be restored, and not only Israel, but all things spoken of by the mouth of the holy prophets. The things to be restored are those spoken of by the prophets. The prophet [illegible] says the first dominion will be restored. Micah 4:8: "Thou, O tower of the flock, the stronghold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem." Ezek. 21:25 foretells the restoration of the kingdom. All the prophets speak of restoration of Israel (see Ezek. 20:33; [illegible]; Isaiah [illegible] 7; Isaiah 60:10; Zech. 8:[illegible]—Sermon Notes by Dr. J. H. Thomas.

THE GOSPEL

When was the gospel first preached? 1921 years B.C. Who preached it? God. Who did he preach it to? Abraham. What did he say to Abraham? "In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. 12:3; 22:18; 28:14). This was a promise from God. Did he make any further promise? Yes. He promised him a large territory of land that he would give him for an everlasting possession (Gen. 13:15; 15:18; 17:8). 1979 years after we read of the inspired writer Paul calling the words that God said Abraham, "The gospel:" "And the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, "In thee shall all nations be blessed" (Gal. 3:8).

How are the nations blessed? By the seed of Abraham. How are believers blessed? By faith. "They which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham" (19th verse). How does this blessing come on the Gentiles? Through Jesus Christ: "That we might receive the promise of the spirit through faith" (14th verse). The just shall live by faith. Faith in what? The gospel. 430 years after God preached the gospel to Abraham. The beginning of the year was changed; the passover instituted, and the law given to the Jews. Was this law ever called the gospel? No. Was there any promise of life in the law? No. Was there any promise of being saved through the law? No. As there was no promise in the law, could one have any faith in it? No. Why? Because the law is not of faith (12th verse). The law was added because of transgression, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made. Is the law against the promises of God? No. If there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law. What was the object of the law? It was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ. Why? That we might be justified by faith. After faith is come we are no longer under the law (Gal. 3:21-25).

Now if what God preached to Abraham was "the gospel," was it a different gospel from the one that Christ commanded his disciples to preach? No. What change did Christ make in it? He added the ordinance of baptism to it. Why? Because the seed had come; the head of the body, the church (Col. 1:18; Eph. 5:23). And this baptism, was to initiate one into the body so they would be made heirs to the promises by adoption. That was the plan of salvation commanded by Christ (Matt. 28:19; Mark 16:16). Has that plan been changed up to date? No. Is there any other way of being saved? No. Is there any other gospel preached? No. Is there not different creeds preached? Yes. But not another gospel; and different doctrines taught is not gospel. Is there not many false gospels preached? Yes. There are many claiming to preach the gospel; but as they do not preach what God, Christ, and his followers preached, therefore it is not the gospel. There is only one gospel, and only one plan of salvation. A belief in anything, outside the gospel will not save. Neither can one be baptized into Christ only by faith in the only gospel that is accepted of God.

What was preached to the people before Christ?

Neh. 6:7: "Prophets preached there is a king in Judah."

Psa. 40:9: "I have preached righteousness.

Isa. 61:1: "The Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings.

What did Christ and his followers preach?

Matt. 4:17: "Repent ye the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

Mark 1:4: "The baptism of repentance for the remission of sins."

Matt. 4:17: "Repent ye, for the kingdom is at hand."

Matt. 4:20: "The gospel of the kingdom" (Mark 1:14).

Matt. 10:7: "The kingdom of heaven is at hand."

Matt. 24:14: "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached."

Mark 2:2: "He preached the word unto them."

Mark 6:12: "That men should repent."

Mark 16:15: "Go ye and preach the gospel."

Luke 4:43: "I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities."

Luke 9:6: "They went through the towns preaching the gospel."

Luke 9:60: "Go thou and preach the kingdom of God."

Luke 16:16: "The kingdom of God is preached."

Luke 24:47: "Remission of sins should be preached."

John 3:3: "Except a man be born again, he cannot enter in."

Acts: 3:20: "Send Jesus Christ which was preached to you."

Acts 4:2: "Preached through Jesus the resurrection of dead."

Rev. 14:6: "The everlasting gospel. Fear God and give glory to him."

To preach the gospel, the kingdom of God, the word, Christ, the word of faith, etc., is simply teaching the different parts of the gospel that God preached to Abraham. The gospel is the glad tidings of the kingdom of God (Luke 1:19; 8:1; Acts 13:32; om. 10:15). The kingdom of God is promised to Abraham and his seed. The word is what God said to Abraham. Christ is the seed through whom the nations will be blessed. Without faith it is impossible to please God. This gospel was preached 3836 years ago; 430 years after the law was given to the Jews and they were under the law 1491 years. When Christ was 30 years old he preached this gospel for three years, and taught others to preach the same gospel. Many of the Jews believed he was the promised seed, for after his resurrection they asked him, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel" (Acts 1:6)? These Jews believed the gospel that God preached to Abraham, and had longed for the restoration of their people to the promised land. Christ's answer (7th verse), was a sad disappointment to them, as they had been listening to his preaching for three years, and were perfectly aware that he preached the same gospel that God preached 1952 years before; and that he was the only person that could restore the kingdom, for he was the promised king. He commanded them to preach the same gospel, have faith; and be baptized as a means of becoming an heir to the promises that God had made.

The gospel was preached by Christ's disciples for 66 years after his ascension; then there came a falling away, and for nearly 1700 years the gospel was not preached. In the fifth century was the Coptic Church. The Abyssian Church became a branch of the Eastern Church in the year 333, the Moravian Church originated in the 9th century. The creed of the Roman Catholic Church was defined in 1545 to 1563. In 1782 there was born at Pittsfield, Mass., one William Miller, he accepted infidel dictrines, soon renounced them and became a Baptist and engaged in a close study of the Bible, with no aid except a concordance. About 1833 he began to lecture on the second coming of Christ, and others took up the study and brought to light the present gospel which is believed by the Church of God.

"PREACHING THE TRUTH"

A Narrative Reciting the Experiences of a Believer Preaching "The Truth As It Is In Jesus"

William Brown

Mr. Hamilton Questions Mr. Stephanas

Beloved parishioners: You will no doubt have noticed that my opponent has left untouched, most of the questions which I propounded for his consideration. From his point of view this was wise, for he would find great difficulty in giving an answer that would square with his peculiar views. I do not propose, however, to permit him to avoid these difficulties by simply passing them by, and so I shall proceed to place them before him in such a manner that he will be compelled to answer or to confess that he cannot answer.

Turning to the blacksmith he began as follows:

Question by Mr. Hamilton: Where do you think the Apostle Paul expected to go at death?

Answer by Mr. Stephanus: To the grave.

Mr. Hamilton: If he expected to go to the grave why did he say he had a desire to depart, and to be with Christ: which is far better (Phil. 1:23)?

Mr. Stephanas: Because both of these things would be acceptable to Paul.

Mr. Hamilton: What do you mean?

Mr. Stephanas: I mean that the Apostle Paul would welcome death as a release—from his trials, and he would also be glad when Christ returned and he should be with him. this he said was far better than life or death.

Mr. H—: Does not the language here imply that the Apostle expected to be with Christ as soon as he departed this life?

Mr. S—: No; Paul would not teach even by implication, things that were not in harmony with the "truth." There is a sense, however, in which it might be said he would be with Christ as soon as death overtook him.

Mr. H—: What sense is that?

Mr S—: Well, when a man dies he lapses into complete unconsciousness and therefore though thousands of years pass over him he knows nothing of it, and when he is brought to life again at the resurrection it will seem as if he had just closed his eyes a moment ago.

Mr. H—: What! do you mean to say that a man dies [illegible]?

Mr. S—: That [illegible] the Bible [illegible].

Mr. H—: Are [illegible] the Bible teach [illegible] doctrine?

Mr. S—: There is nothing [illegible] and the Bible teaches it plainly in several places. For instance in Ecclesiastes 3:19: "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: As the one dieth so dieth the other."

Mr. H—: That refers to the body, not to the soul, which continues to live after the body dies.

Mr. S—: It says: "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts. "As the one dieth, so dieth the other." Therefore, if one of them continues to live after death, so must the other; and if one of them passes into complete unconsciousness, so must the other.

Mr. H—: That brings us down to the level of the beasts, does it not?

Mr. S—: No, only in the mater of death; they are both alike in that state.

Mr. H—: Then you think that when a man dies he becomes utterly unconscious like a beast and knows absolutely nothing?

Mr. S—: I have already answered that question, but will give you another Bible answer. In Ecclesiastes 9:5 the Lord distinctly says: "The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything." Surely that ought to settle the question.

Mr. H—. What becomes of the soul when the body dies?

Mr. S—: What do you mean by the soul. The life?

Mr. H—: It is not necessary for me to define it for you; I will give you a passage which illustrates what I mean. In Genesis 35:18, speaking of the death of Rachel, these words occur: "And it came to pass as her soul was in departing (for she died)," etc. This is the sense in which I use the word "soul." What became of Rachel's soul, and what becomes of the soul in every case at death?

Mr. S—: Rachel's soul was her life, and to say her soul was "in departing" is the same as when we say concerning one who is dying, "his life is fast ebbing away."

Mr. H—: You have not answered my question, Where does the soul or the life, as you are pleased to call it, go when it departs?

Mr. S—: I can best answer your question and convey to the audience my meaning, by relating an incident at which I was a witness.

Mr. H—: Go on, if it is not too long.

Mr. S—: One day [illegible] years ago while working on a heavy piece of red hot iron, a shopmate of mine was struck in the eye with a piece of the hot metal [illegible] his hammer. We made him as comfortable as we could [illegible] called a doctor. After treating his injured eye the doctor departed, but as he was leaving the shop several of us who worked there approached him and in subdued tones, so that the injured man would not hear us, we asked: "Well, doctor, how is it with him?" To our horror the doctor answered, "his sight is gone." We were exceedingly sorry for our fellow workman, yet not one of us ever thought to ask the doctor where his sight had gone to.

Mr. H—: Of course not, that would be a foolish question.

Mr. S—: Your question is of a similar character; you speak of life or soul as if it was something which might have a separate existence instead of being, as it is, dependent upon the action of the organs of the body; sight, hearing, smell, taste, thought, are all manifestations of life; destroy the organ through which they are produced and the manifestations cease. When the heart stops all the organs stop their work of producing manifestations of life, and therefore there is no life in relation to that particular being, but the sight, hearing, thought, etc., which are the real life or soul of the individual, do not exist somewhere else.

Mr. H—: That's quite an oration for a blacksmith; you speak of man as if he were a mere machine.

Mr. S—: O wonderful machine, and yet very easily interrupted in its work; you keep the bellows blowing and the fire continues to burn brightly, but when you stop the bellows the fire dies and goes out, but it does not go somewhere else. And so it is when the lungs; the human bellows stop blowing, the fire of life goes out, but does not exist somewhere else any more than the fire of my forge.

Mr. H—: If the soul does not have a separate conscious existence after death, why did Paul say he was willing to be absent from the body and to be present with the Lord (2 Cor. 5:8)?

Mr. S—: Paul was not speaking about the soul, but about two different natures of bodies.

Mr. H—: Does not the Apostle say, "For we that are in this tabernacle do groan being burdened?"

Mr. S—: Yes.

Mr. H—: Is it not evident then that what the apostle wanted to do was to "shuffle off this mortal coil?"

Mr. S—: No, sir; Paul did not want to shuffle anything off, he distinctly says so in the very passage you quote. His words are: "Not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." Paul was thinking of putting something on, not of shuffling something off.

Mr. H—: What was it he desired to put on?

Mr. S—: His "house from heaven."

Mr. H—: What is his "house from heaven?"

Mr. S—: An immortal nature.

Mr. H—: Is it the body that puts this on?

Mr. S—: Certainly.

Mr. H—: How can one body put on another? Does the one fit over the other?

Mr. S—: The Apostle Paul explains this clearly, in 1 Cor. 15:52-54; he tells us we are to be "changed," and that "this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality:" and in this very passage we have been considering, the Apostle says, that when this change takes place, "Mortality will be swallowed up of life" (2 Cor. 5:4). What is really conveyed by this language is that this mortal, dying body will be changed into a strong incorruptible and imperishable body.

Mr. H—: I did not ask you to give an oration; you are taking up my time.

Mr. S—: I have answered as briefly as possible, but if I have taken too much of your time I am quite willing to allow you as much extra time as you need to finish the points you have in mind.

The Chairman: I think Mr. Hamilton is justified to some extent, although his questions were such that they could not be answered with "yes" or "no," but required some explanation. Under the circumstances Mr. Hamilton may have an extra five minutes.

Mr. Hamilton then continued his questions.

Mr. H—: On one occasion Christ said to his disciples, "Fear not them which kill the body, but cannot kill the soul:" Does this not prove the soul's immortality and a separate conscious existence after death?

Mr. S—: No: for the very next sentence says: "Fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell" (i e. Gehenna) (Matt. 10:28). That which is destructible surely cannot be immortal.

Mr. H—: What does Christ mean by the "soul" in this passage, then?

Mr. S—: The word "soul" is used in a great variety of aspects in the scriptures, and it is not always easy to decide definitely which of these aspects the writer had in mind. Personally I believe the word is used in this passage in the sense of "individuality."

Mr. H—: And pray, tell me, what is individuality?

Mr. S—: That which distinguishes us from each other, which makes us distinct beings.

Mr. H—: Well, what is that?

Mr. S—: Principally our character and disposition.

Mr. H—: According to your materialistic theory when a man dies he is altogether non-existent: if that is the case, is not his character and disposition dead also?

Mr. S—: No, sir; his character and disposition are preserved in God's "book of remembrance" (Malachi 3:16) and at the resurrection, that character and disposition or individuality, or identity, is flashed upon the man again and he is the same identical person who existed before death overtook him.

Mr. H—: How can God destroy a man's character and disposition in hell; if a man's disposition is such that God finds it necessary to cast him unto hell, will he not continue to be wicked when he arrives there?

Mr. S—: The "hell" of the Bible is not a place where men are preserved in torture, as modern religion teaches. The word "hell" in this passage, as you know, is "Gehenna," which means "The valley of the son of Hinnom," a place outside the walls of Jerusalem where fires were kept continually burning to consume the garbage of the city, and into which were thrown the bodies of criminals and carcases of beasts, refuse, etc. In the day of Christ, which is still future, it will be used again, and the transgressors who are thrown into it will be destroyed both body, individuality, character and disposition and everything pertaining to them; they will be blotted completely out of existence; God will leave them neither root nor branch (Isa. 66:23, 24; Malachi 4:1).

Mr. H—: That will do.

Then turning to the audience Mr. H— said: My dear parishioners, I am exceedingly sorry that I have been, to some extent, responsible in bringing you here to listen to these heresies; this man's doctrines bring us down to the level of the lower animals. He does not believe in the blessed doctrine of the "immortality of the soul," a doctrine believed by all the world. Why even the crude nations believed it, the Indians, the Hindoos, the Chinese, the New-Hollanders, the Laplanders, etc., all believed this blessed doctrine, to say nothing of such men as Socrates, Plato and other great philosophers and hundreds of thousands of Christians; and yet this man has the audacity to deny it. (Time called.)

driven from Constantinople and from Europe, and will "plant the tabernacle of his palace (set up his government) between the seas, in the glorious holy mountain (Mount Zion), and shall come to his end there." "And at that time Michael shall stand up," and "many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake," and rise to meet the Lord.

One year ago the allied fleet were pounding at the gateway of Constantinople, and the days of the Turk in Europe seemed numbered, and each week we eagerly looked for news of his flight to Jerusalem, which event would, in our opinion, usher in the coming of our Lord, and a realization of all our hopes. The whole program seemed so clear and certain, that but little room for doubt remained. But twelve long months of weary watching and waiting have passed and the Turk remains [illegible] strongly entrenched than ever in his stronghold, drinking the blood of helpless Christians as never before in all his unspeakable history. These facts, and the events of the last few months, coupled with a more careful study of the sure word of prophecy, have served to cast a doubt upon the cattle and goods, to take a great spoil. He will lay siege to Jerusalem, and "the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished."

But God, by the mouth of his prophet, says: "I am against thee, O Gog. Thou shalt fall upon the mountains of Israel; thou, and all thy bands, and the people that is with thee. "He shall come to his end and none shall help him."

"And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy (Daniel's) people." "The feet of the Lord shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake."

For a detailed description or narrative of the events which lead up to and bring about the final destruction of the "King of the North," and the visible return of the Lord as "the Lion of the tribe of Judah," and his glorified saints around him, which will doubtless occur at that time, the interested student should study carefully Ezek. 38 and 39 chapters, also Zech 14, and Joel 3, 9-17, all of which are descriptive of these momentous events.

TRUST

Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is (Jer. 17:7). Some trust in chariots, and some in horses; but we will remember the name of the Lord our God (Ps. 20:7). Our fathers trusted in thee: they trusted, and thou didst deliver them (Ps. 22:4). I have trusted in the Lord, therefore I shall not slide (Ps. 26:1).

God has a reward for the one that trusts in him: He is blessed. In what way is he blessed? Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth (Matt. 5:5). Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the formation of the world (Matt. 25:34). Blessed with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ (Eph. 1:3). We should be to the praise of his glory, who first trusted in Christ (Eph. 1:12, 13). Blessed is that man that maketh the Lord his trust (Ps. 34:8; 40:4). The Lord is my strength and my shield: my heart trusted in him, and I am helped (Ps. 28:7, 31:19). Our heart shall rejoice in him, because we have trusted in his holy name (Ps. 33:21). God hath sent his angel, and delivered his servants that trusted in him (Dan. 3:28). For I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day (2 Tim. 1:12). For thou art my hope, O Lord God: thou art my trust from my youth (Ps. 71:5).

Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord (Jer. 17:5). She obeyed not the voice; She received not correction; She trusted not in the Lord; She drew not near to God. Therefore, wait ye upon me, saith the Lord, until the day that I rise up to the prey: for my determination is to gather the nations that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy (Zeph. 3:8). He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool (Prov. 28:26).

[illegible] and be saved. Only those that trust in the Lord will be saved, and aside from trusting there is a work for us to do, God will not reward a slothful man (Matt. 25:26). He expects us to work, for Christ said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." I must work the works of him that sent me" (John 5:17; 9:4; [illegible]). In every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted of him (Acts 10:35). Let every man prove his own work, for every man shall bear his own burden (Gal. 6:4, 5). Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. Whatsoever good thing any man doeth, the same shall he receive of the Lord (Phil. 2:12; Eph. 6:8). My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work. He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also (John 14:12). Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent (Rom. 10:11 to 15).

Trust then comes through faith, and faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God (Rom. 10:17). [illegible] Salvation cometh from the [illegible] 1 Tim. 1:10; [illegible]; 1 Tim. 1:16; Heb. [illegible]; 2 Tim. 1:12; 2 Cor. 1:9. Those that trust in God, and believe, and obey him, [illegible] live forever; they [illegible] die [illegible] [illegible] names are written in God's "book of life," and [illegible] not [illegible]. They are born of the spirit at the resurrection and become spiritual beings, [illegible] like the wind that bloweth (John 3:8). Those that trust in man are [illegible] and when they die, there is no resurrection for them, for [illegible] they are far from [illegible]. Man that is in honor [illegible] like the beasts that perish. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish (Psa. 146:4; 49:20; 78:27; [illegible]; Eccl. 3:19).

Yes, [illegible] Lord, [illegible] in thee,

EDITORIAL

The editor, if the Lord wills, will begin a series of meetings at Brumfield, Ky., Tuesday evening, February 1, 1916.

Christian, reflect on the privilege of speaking a word for Jesus and his truth, and not in the light of duty alone. You are called to the fellowship of the Son—to the joint heirship with the Son, and should lose no opportunity to win souls that shall help swell the grand anthem when Jesus is crowned King of kings and Lord of lords.

Service in the work of the truth may be declined or shrunk from because of a consciousness of—

1. Incompetency, Moses (Ex. 4:10).
2. Impurity, Isaiah (Isa. 5:5, 6).
3. Ignorance, Jeremiah (Jer. 1:6).
4. Inexperience, Thomas (John 20:25).

A disappointment, a contradiction, a harsh word, an annoyance, a wrong received and endured as in his presence, is worth more than a long prayer; and we do not lose time if we bear its loss with gentleness and patience, provided the loss was inevitable and was not caused by our own fault.—Fenelon.

NAMES OF GOD

Jehovah, generally printed as "Lord" or "God" in small capitals.

Adhonai, "Lord" without capitels.

Elohim, "God" without capitals.

All three are found together twice only (Ex. 34:23; Amos 5:16).

IS THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE IDEA OF GOD SCRIPTURAL?

G. R. Wilson

"He that cometh to God must believe that he is" (Heb. 11:6).

The question was once asked, "Where is God?" The answer given was, "Everywhere." We have also heard the question, "Where is heaven?" and the answer has been, "Where God is."

If heaven is where God is, and God is everywhere, then it was not necessary for Jesus to leave or to ascend to get to heaven. That heaven is a locality we will admit without any attempt at argument. We will quote from "Science and Health:" "Christian Science strongly designates the thought that God is not corporal, but incorporal—that is, bodiless." We are coming to the very foundation upon which the whole structure is in process of building. "We know him only as Divine Mind, as Life, Truth and Love" (p. 140). "What is God? God is Divine Principle, Supreme Incorporal Being, Mind, Spirit, Soul, Life, Truth and Love" (p. 465). Again, "Christian Science rightly understood coincides with Scripture" (p. 304).

We will now bring to your attention a few passages that you may judge for yourself whether "Christian Science" coincides with the Bible: "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Jesus Christ. Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God, but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant and was made in the likeness of man" (Phil. 2:5-7). This Scripture clearly teaches that God has a form, and that Christ is in that form. If Christ had a form, or body, God must have also.

"And God said: Let us make man in our own image, after our likeness" (Gen. 1:26). "Yes," says the Christian Scientist, "God created men's morals in his own likeness. Men are like God. But error has taken possession of these 'morals,' which, you must remember, are like God." Yes; these men who are in the image and likeness of God—Spirit, Mind-Like, God Perfect; I say, these men are so full of error that they need the book, "Science and Health," which itself is a delusion, because it is composed of leather, paper, cloth, thread and glue, which of course are material! We are so far from truth that we need this book to lead us back to God. And yet, according to Mrs. Eddy, is as liable to be in error as we are, who are his image and likeness.

If man is as the Christian Scientists claim him, then God is liable to have thoughts not in harmony with so-called Divine Science. These Scriptures, read a moment ago, do not say men's morals were created in the image of God, but, distinctly—man—made of the dust, and that dust made like God's form. If you wish an explanation of Gen. 1:26 read Gen. 2:7: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." It is impossible to infer the term, "moral image," which is simply principle, or character, to the shaping of dust into form. This can not be.

"For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, for as much as he is the image and glory of God." If this be true an image of God must have a head, and that head, during worship, must be uncovered, so as fairly to represent God himself. (You understand, of course, that this verse refers to the male members of the human family.) Can this be said of spirit, principle, that it has a visible head that can be covered or uncovered with a hat or turban, or any such thing? Surely not.

The prophet, Isaiah, believed in something beside principle, spirit, when he said in the 59th chapter and first verse of his prophecy: "Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy that he cannot hear." It may be that Isaiah was mistaken, but I prefer to believe in his inspiration rather than that of Mrs. Eddy.

Let us notice Heb. 1:1-3: "God who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds; who being in the brightness of his glory and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself, purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high." Here Paul declares God to be a "person," and Christ is the express image of that person.

"And I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my back parts; but my face shall not be seen" (Ex. 33:23). Did God falsely pretend to Moses that he had a hand, and face, and back parts, when actually he had none? I am sure he did not. Certain it is that the natural eyes of Moses did see a part of the material form of his God, who was none other than the Creator of the world.

But once again, to prove the image of God does not mean moral Image, in Gen. 5:1, we read: "This is the book of generations of Adam. In the day that God created man, in the likeness of God made he him." Now, look at the third verse of the same chapter, and compare scripture with scripture: "And Adam lived a hundred and thirty years, and begat a son in his own likeness, after his own image, and called his name Seth." Now, then honest seeker, does this third verse mean that Seth looked like Adam morally or personally? Your mind responds that it means personally. Therefore, the first verse must mean personally also, for the same terms are used in both.

Notice, if you will, Gen. 9:6: "Whoso sheddeth man's blood by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made he man." This text positively states that God's image has blood in it; therefore, the image of God cannot mean a moral spirit, for Christ said, "A spirit hath not flesh and bones," and physiology certainly teaches that flesh is the product of blood.

"And hath put on the new man which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him" (Col. 3:10). Again, Christ is the image of God: "In whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believeth not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God should shine unto them" (II Cor. 4:4).

The apostle, James, tells the world that the very mechanism of our bodies is similar to that of God's: "But the tongue can no man tame, it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison. Therewith bless we God, even the Father, and therewith curse ye men, which are made after the similitude of God" (James 3:8, 9).

Now, we wish to call attention to a few passages of scripture which Christian Scientists use to prove the immaterial existence of God. John 4:24: "God is a spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." I John 4:8: "He that loveth not knoweth not God, for God is love." Speaking of Jesus, Paul says in Col. 1:15: "Who is the image of the invisible God, the first born of every creature."

We will first examine John 4:24. This is the only time in the Holy Bible that God is called a spirit; all other passages are rendered has a spirit. Look at verses 21, 22: "Jesus said unto her, Ye worship ye know not what. We know what we worship." They had a god whom they did not know, and could not describe—not a real, a personal God. "The true worshipers worship the Father in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship him." In Liddell and Scott's Greek and English Lexicon, is given seven definitions to the Greek word "Pneuma," which is translated, "Spirit." We feel justified because of what we have already quoted, from the Bible, to use the third definition which is, "life," also the spirit, a living being." Like the Latin, "Anima," "that which blows or breathes."

Now, whatever "spirit" signifies in the worshiper, "spirit" also signifies in the thing that is worshipped. So, we would now read verse 24, thus: "God is a real, intelligent Father, and they that worship him must worship him in a real, intelligent and truthful manner." "In spirit and in truth" signifies not only earnestness of devotion, but a real, intelligent worship. "The Father" signifies a person or personal God. So, our point is proved that the God of John 4:24 is a living being, a personal God.

I John 4:8, "God is love." Love is merely one of the attributes of God. John 3:16 does not read, "Love so loved the world," but, "God so loved the world." This text of I John 4:8, with one other in the Bible, calls God "love." Because, in one place in the Bible we read, "God is a spirit," and in two other places that he is love, does not necessarily follow that the fact of his personality is exploded. If it does, then Christ was never born of a woman, lived or died since the world began. Why? Because, in the same bible, we find God spoken of as spirit, we also read Christ is a spirit: "Now, the Lord is that spirit." And then the last part of the verse explains the first, "And where the spirit of the Lord is there is liberty" (II Cor. 3:17).

We come now to Col. 1:15. There are many who believe God to be immaterial, because of this verse: "Who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature." But this verse does not imply that God will always be invisible, for Jesus said, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God" (Matt. 5:8). Jesus evidently believed that men had bad hearts, and if those hearts were pure, with their eyes they should see God.

On another occasion, Jesus said, "Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones, for I say unto you, that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 18:10). This proves beyond contradiction that, although God is invisible to men in this world at the present time, yet angels are continually before him, beholding his face.

Is it possible that Christ, apostles and prophets entered into an alliance to deceive the world on this all-important point? No. I shall never charge them with such wicked device. Does the Christian Science idea of God coincide with the scriptures? It does not. We have now explained all arguments brought forth in proof of an immaterial God. I say, we have buried this argument with scripture which proves, without doubt, our God to be a personal being, corporal in his existence. Just one more text to clinch the whole matter: He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Now, I would like to know how any rational man can believe that God "is," when at the same time he says that God is immaterial, without form, shape, body, head, hands, locality; without center, circumference, length, breadth or thickness. How can you better define nothing? Settle it forever friends.

God Is

As I close this subject I feel impelled to remind you that not only is Christian Science built upon the foundation of an immaterial God, but nearly all so-called Christian denominations hold this same theory.— Present Truth Mssenger.

THE FOUR BEASTS

In a former article I endeavored to give my idea of the consummation of the human world empire as illustrated in the prophecy of Daniel in the often quoted "metal image." Now, it seems to me that the same scene is pictured in all the other prophecies on this subject,—namely, the summary of human power antagonistic to God and his Christ---the amalgamation in some loose sort of way—joined but brittle—combined but not cohering—after the manner of "iron and clay"—all this brought out on parade, as one might say, full of pomp and vain glory, with the glitter and swagger that militarism lends to arrogance—"gathered as sheaves into the floor," as Isaiah puts it, to meet the doom fore-ordained, at the place fore-ordained, in "that day," foreordained.

We, in our time, can realize this better than any writers or thinkers that preceded us in point of time, because we have the facts at hand, whereby we may realize the possibility of such a thing in the immediate future. Our fathers who knew nothing, and could not know anything of the vast powers of modern civilization, of the mechanical and material improvements and inventions that have altogether changed the face of the earth in relation to human life and well being, of railroads and telegraph, wire and wireless, of ships that carry a town, not forgetting guns that carry twenty miles or fire so many hundred shots a minute, of the thousand and one things that were new to us a few years ago, but that now have put us in communication with the farthest "ends of the earth," and we read of our neighbors, on the other side of the planet, every morning in the penny paper. Our fathers, who tried to decipher the "time of the end," did the best they could to imagine what the grand denoument would be like with the limit of the then known, but the eyes of Omnipotence penetrated further than their imagination when he "revealed his secrets to his servants, the prophets."

These thoughts have suggested themselves in considering the well-known prophecy of the four beasts of Daniel. This vision is presented primarily as to a historical scene, or rather succession of scenes, and in this respect differs from the metal image, which was presented at once in a coup d' ocil, as the French say, "stroke of the eye." In the case of the beasts we name them, appearing one after another in succession to the one then in the decadence of its power, for the vision was seen in the first year of Bellshazzer, and the empire of Babylon fell in his third year, which was probably little over one year after the date recorded of the "vision." In the scenes of beasts that follow each other in the vision, the prophet sees first one double, as it were, combined lion and eagle; the second is marked as treble, "with three ribs;" the third is marked as quadruple—four heads; the fourth and last, which is spoken of as "dreadful," terrible and strong exceedingly," has the strange peculiarity of ten toes on, thus corresponding to the ten toes that are the props of the metal image.

Now, without going into any details of the minor significance of these succeeding empires, we may observe and impress upon the reader that they are all spoken of as subsequent to the time of the vision, and that, although their empires were taken away, yet they were preserved—their lives were prolonged. We see now, in enumerating these kingdoms that followed the Babylonian that this has actually happened. The kingdom of Persia is intact today, so is Greece, so is Rome or Italy—these are the three that have passed as empires, but still live as kingdoms. The fourth, from Babylonia, not excluded, has not as yet made his appearance, but there is every reason to believe that his horns are now growing and making themselves sharp and strong, and with the might of modern military power he, indeed, will be "terrible and strong, exceedingly."

To me it is a great secret joy to know that all the villainy that is now obtaining in Europe and elsewhere is all reckoned for and is coming to an end. I often listen to the theological dreams of good theological souls that have no idea of the future great peace that is coming after this turmoil of strife. They wander in a maze of misty glory in the realms of upper air, satisfied to float on emptiness and rhetoric. How truly glorious to realize that this dear old world of ours is to be delivered! How interesting is the fight! How magnificent the globe-encircling struggle with almost every race and tribe of mankind engaged! How grand will be the victory when the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ, and when those who are the destroyers will be destroyed! Let them gather, with their armies, and beat their plowshares into swords. Let them associate for their coming doom. "Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done on earth."

T. F. GELLETLY.

CAN GOD USE A REPENTANT BACKSLIDER?

"Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable to me for the ministry" (2 Tim. 4:11).

"And he went out, and wept bitterly" (Matt. 26:75).

"Have mercy upon me, O God" (Psa. 51:1).

Can God use one who has backslidden, if he truly repents and trusts him? Certainly he can, and he will. It is far better never to have sinned, but God opens the door for the returning sinner, and many a backslider has been restored and mightily used of God.

Mark was a backslider. At a most critical time he had left the work and turned back. We have no record of the bitter tears he shed, but he truly repented and God made him—the unprofitable—to become truly profitable (1 Tim. 4:16). In fact, he was, after his repentance, chosen of God to be the writer of the Gospel that bears his name and thereby was made a blessing to thousands and millions of mankind.

We have further proof in repentant Simon Peter (Mt. 26:69-75). Sad to relate, he thrice denied his Lord before the twice crowings of the cock. Who can describe his agony of soul when "he went out, and wept bitterly"? God saw that his tears were genuine and that his repentance was real. He truly forgave him and used the same repentant Simon Peter to preach the sermon on the day of Pentecost when three thousand were converted. God also used him to write two Epistles in our New Testament. These two books have been used to comfort and inspire with hope as many of God's children as any other books that have ever been written.

We will mention but one example more to show that God is willing to use and will use a truly repentant backslider. David is a conspicuous example Was there any man of his time of so great talent and privilege? Was there any who sinned so grievously, or sank so low? In fact, he seems to have remained unrepentant for a considerable time. It was hard for him to come back to God, but he came. Where can we find, in all literature, such a sorrow for sin and such a brokenness of heart? God forgave him and restored him and used him; although for years he reaped some of the consequences of his sins, yet God used him as king over his people and let him write Psalms of penitence that have helped multitudes back to God.

It were far better if none of these had sinned; but God's wonderful love is revealed by the fact that he not only forgave them, but even greatly used them again. So, my backslidden friend, if you truly repent, God is willing to restore and to mightily use you (Hos. 14:1; Jer. 3:12; Isa. 55:7).

CUNNING AND DISCRETION

Cunning has only private selfish aims and sticks at nothing which may make them succeed. Discretion has large and extended views, and, like a well-informed eye, commands a whole horizon; cunning is a kind of short-sightedness that discovers the minutest objects which are near at hand, but is not able to discern things at a distance. Discretion, the more it is discovered, gives a greater authority to the person who posseses it. Discretion is the perfection of reason and a guide to us in all the duties of life; cunning is a kind of instinct that looks out only after our immediate interest and welfare. Discretion is found only in men of strong sense and good understandings; cunning is often to be met with in brutes themselves and in persons who are but the fewest removes from them. In short, cunning is only the mimic of discretion, and may be mistaken by weak men in the same manner as vivacity is often mistaken for wit and gravity for wisdom.

DISCONTENT

Every one who suffers the pangs of discontent believes the cause to lie in something which he wants and cannot get, a something which he has and cannot get rid of—some unsatisfied longing, some trial to be borne, some hope deferred, some haunting fear. He feels sure that, could this longing be satisfied, this trial be removed, this hope realized, this fear dispelled, his discontent would vanish like dew before the sun. Yet again and again these things actually take place, and he is neither easier nor happier than before. His discontent, deprived of one source, quickly finds another more grievous, and fastens upon that with a redoubled sense of woe.

CONSCIENCE IN WORK

The greatest need of the day is more conscience in work. The habit of doing what we have to do as well, as thoroughly and as speedily as possible, without immediate reference to its probable or possible effects upon ourselves, is one which would of itself secure at once the best success for ourselves and the greatest good of the community. It would settle many vexed questions and solve many knotty problems. Instead of this the common course is to consider closely the comparative benefit that is likely to accrue to us in return. There are all degrees of this calculation, from the strictly just to the grossly selfish. One man tries to estimate the true worth of his labor and performs it accordingly; another gives as little work and secures as large returns as possible; and between these there is every shade. But in all such reckonings there is one important element left out. No one can count up the value of the labor which is both generous and conscientious; even its money value can never be calculated.

Learn your business thoroughly. Keep at one thing: in nowise change. Always be in haste, but never in a hurry. Observe system in all you do and undertake. Whatver is worth doing at all is worth doing well. One today is worth two tomorrows. Be self-reliant; do not take too much advice, but rather depend upon yourself. Never fail to keep your appointments or to be punctual to the minute. Never be idle, but keep your hands or mind usefully employed, except when sleeping.

No man or woman, of the humblest sort, can really be strong, gentle, pure, and good without the world being the better for it.

A HESITATING SOUL

"If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them" (John 13:17).

I speak to the man or woman who means to accept Christ some time, but wants to know more about the gospel before doing so. Can this be offered as a valid reason for putting off the great decision?

To begin with, there are some things that nobody knows. Of making many books—covering the little that we know—there is no end; but if the things that we do not know were to be published the book shelves of the world could not contain them.

For there are some things that we do know, such as "two and two make four," and "a straight line is the shortest distance between two points." These are called "self-evident facts," because they require no proving. A wise man who is really intent on the quest of knowledge will take rudimental truths for granted and move on to larger things.

If this be the part of wisdom in the common affairs of life, how much more in the larger problems of religion, which have to do with our eternal destiny? So it is written: "Let us leave the principles of doctrine (that is, the simple, elemental facts which are in the nature of intuitions), and go on unto perfection (Heb. 6:1). It is my purpose now to point out some of these religious axioms which are held in common by all who live in gospel light.

The first axiom is God. You believe in a God, because you can't help it. Not that the existence of God is never denied. As it is written, "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." But there are few avowed atheists in these days, and surely you are not among them. The average man—even the Zulu who bows down before a fetich in the jungle—takes God as a self-evident fact.

The second of the axioms is responsibility. I am a moral being: that is, made under law. You may call it the moral law or the law of your being, as you will; in any case we are under bonds to keep it. If this fact be questioned listen to the voice of conscience "accusing or else excusing you." This is the monitor that enables us, as Plato said, "to discern betwixt the worse and better reason;" and you can not get away from it.

The third axiom is sin. There are only two kinds of people who deny personal sin. On the one hand there are perfectionists in the church who profess to be living blameless lives. On the other hand there are moralists outside the church who insist that their lives are so far beyond criticism as to require no pardoning grace.

It is difficult to believe that either perfectionists or moralists are sincere in their claims. For we need but to inquire within to hear the self convicting voice. "The Lord looked down from heaven to see if there was any that wrought righteousness; and behold there is none that doeth good—no, not one." And if there were, neither you nor I, certainly, would claim to be that one.

The fourth axiom is salvation. This is affirmed as a self-evident fact, because we know that if there is a God anywhere in the universe—that is, a God with a heart—he could not see his children go wrong without making bare his arm to deliver them from the power and penalty of sin. God so loved the world that he gave his only-begotten Son to suffer and die in our behalf. This you learned at your mother's knee; and you can not escape it. No do you really want to.

The fifth axiom is justification by faith, which is expressed in the terms: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not, the wrath of God abideth on him." It is written that "Christ tasteth death for every man." This makes all men salvable; so that whosoever will may take of the water of life freely. But he must take it. God can make salvation free, but he can not force it upon us. Ours is the inevitable and inalienable power of choice. But here is where many a man fails. The Lord offers all the riches of eternal life for the taking, and men refuse to take it.

There is a sixth axiom which must not be omitted, namely, "procrastination is the thief of time." You mean to accept Christ some day. You would not for a moment admit that you intend to live and die without him. We all mean well; but we postpone and again and again postpone the settlement of the most important question that ever confronts us.

Let me lay down this proposition: Not to decide is to decide not. Not to decide for Christ is to decide against him. That which is right to be done can not rightly be put off.—Selected by Sister Howard.

WORK

We are all of us workers in one way or another, but how many of us are possessed with an earnest desire that the work we put from our hands shall be a thorough, honest, faithful performance that shall fulfill its purpose and withstand the ravages of time? The great difference in labor is, not in what is done, but in how it is done—not in the kind of work we perform, but in the spirit we put into it. From the cleansing of a room to the purification of a government, from the clearing of a forest to the chiseling of a statue, from the humblest work of the hands to the noblest work of heart and brain, it is the determination to make it of the best possible quality that places it in the front rank. The work that is performed only for the sake of what it will bring, not for what it is to carry forth, is like cloth of shoddy, which may please the eye but will not wear. It is cheap flimsy stuff, woven with no nobler purpose than to hold together long enough to be bought and paid for.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF
The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 18) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the Saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28, 29); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:11-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31) ROBERT G. "ACCORDING TO," OR SOME OF GOD'S MEASURING LINES

A Sermon Delivered by the Editor of The Restitution, in Cleveland, Ohio, June 4, 1911

According to the riches of his grace" (Eph. 1:7).

There is a simple phrase oft repeated in the New Testament, and often overlooked, which expresses the measures and steppings of the higher Christian life. It is the phrase "according to," two words which rise like the uprights of Jacob's ladder to the heavens, and across which many of the precious promises may be seen in the vision of faith firmly fastened as heavenly steps leading higher and higher up to all the good and perfect will of God. Let us glance at some of these heavenly measures.

1. The Will of God.

This is at once the limitation and the inspiration of our faith and prayer. "If we ask anything according to his will he heareth us;" "the Spirit maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God." Beyond this our desires and our aspirations can not go; but beyond it they need not desire to go, for within it lie all the probabilities of blessing which a mortal can receive; and God's chief desire is to get us to see how much it means of blessing for us. As we have often said, there is no vaster prayer within the reach of faith than the simple sentence, "Thy will be done." This will must mean for each of us our highest possible good. We know it includes our salvation, if we will accept salvation; for "God will have all men to be saved." We know it includes our sanctification; for "this is the will of God, even your sanctification." We know it includes our deliverance from physical evil, if we will receive it in his name in faith and obedience, for he has said: "I will. Be thou clean." We know it includes every needed blessing that the obedient can require, for he has said: "He will withhold no good thing from them that walk uprightly." The apostle's prayer for his beloved friends was that they might have fulfilled in them "all the good pleasure of his goodness;" and that they might "prove that good and acceptable and perfect will of God."

Beloved, are you measuring up to this divine rule? Are you meeting all your Father's will? Are you walking "worthy of him to all pleasing?" and are you having fulfilled in you the prayer, that "He may make you perfect in all things to do his will, working in you that which is pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever and ever? Amen."

2. His Word.

"Behold the handmaid of the Lord," is the sublime response of Mary to the angel's astonishing message, "be it unto me according to thy word." Never was faith put to a harder test. Never was woman asked to stand in so delicate a place of peril and possibility, of humbling shame and glorious, everlasting honor. Realizing, perhaps, with every instinct of her maiden heart all that this might cost her, she meekly, unhesitatingly, without question, one faltering breath, accepted the stupendous promise and responsibility and rose to meet the divine measure, "according to thy word," and like an echo came back the heavenly benediction: "Blessed is she that believes, for there shall be a performance of those things that were told her from the Lord."

Beloved, are you living up to this great measure? Is faith resting and claiming, not according to signs and seemings, frames and feelings, but according to his word? Is obedience walking, not according to the course of this world, or the moods of our capricious hearts, or the standards of men, or the example of others, or the traditions even of the church, but according to his word? Are we Bible Christains and determined to believe and obey every word within thes inspired and heavenly pages? Then we shall be found in "the way everlasting," for "the grass withereth and the flower fadeth, but the word of God shall stand forever," and "he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

3. The Riches of His Grace.

"In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins according to the riches of his grace, wherein he hath abounded towards us in all wisdom and prudence." Peter has used a parallel expression: "According to his abundant mercy he hath begotten us again into a lively hope." This is God's standard and measure of salvation. He works and saves according to the riches of his grace. He abounds towards us in all wisdom and prudence, that is, he adapts his mercy to every variety of guilt, and he anticipates, in his prudence and foresight, every future emergency. He sees Peter from the beginning to the end of his career and accepts him "for better or for worse," and when the hour of his shameful fall is near he can say: "I have prayed for thee." So he takes everyone of us and adjusts his infinite grace to all the minutiae of our sin and its worst aggravations, our corrupt and ruined nature and all its wreck, our weak and helpless will and all its inability to stand, our circumstances, our temptations and all that besets us. Knowing and anticipating all, he just encompasses us in his everlasting arms and saves and keeps us, "according to the riches of his grace."

Beloved, have you entered into the fullness of this measure, and have you understood it in all its all-sufficiency for a lost world and the most wretched and ruined lives over whom you pray and love? Oh, let our faith look up from lost humanity to the mighty love of God and "the exceeding riches of his grace." And if there be a discouraged and guilty soul within reach of this message may God help you, beloved, to put your sins, with all their aggravations, side by side with God's immeasurable grace, until you shall realize something of the Psalmist's sublime figure when he sang: "As far as the east is from the west, so far has God removed our transgressions from us. As high as the heaven is above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him." Our sins may have reached to the clouds until they have become like a "thick cloud," but thank God, "his mercy is in the heavens," and far above the clouds.

IV. The Riches of His Glory.

Can we form any conception of the riches of his glory? Moses asked to see that glory, but was told it was too bright for human gaze, and only in the distance and from behind could he dare to look upon it. A little glimpse of it the disciples beheld on the Mount of Transfiguration, but they were afraid of its brightness, and their eyes were overcome with slumber under its spell. "The heavens declare his glory, and the firmament showeth his handiwork," and some conception of the riches of his power and majesty may be gathered from these glorious constellations and worlds of light which science is more fully exploring in these wondrous days. Sometimes we have sat down and allowed our minds to dwell on the multitude of these discoveries and calculations. We have tried to take in the magnitude of yonder planet many hundred times larger than our world, and yonder sun outweighing the world many thousandfold, and stars beyond stars, "Where system into system runs, and other planets circle other suns," until our brain whirls and threatens to collapse under the pressure of the sublimity; and "lo! these are part of his ways, but the full thunder of his power who can comprehend?" His hand holds all these orbs; his will commands them all; his wisdom poises all these spheres and directs them in their course without a jar or catastrophe; his scepter is over his mighty empire; his creating word called every portion of them into being; his province upholds them every moment; his taste and goodness have adorned them with beauty and loveliness and enriched them with happiness and blessing. There is not a creature among their inhabitants from the highest archangel to the lowest insect but owes its being to his power and goodness. And all this is but "the hiding of his power," for his omnipotence could call millions of such universes into being a moment. Nay, all this is but a scaffolding for the glory which he is preparing for the abode of his redeemed. The riches of his glory will not be complete until the new heavens and earth shall have emerged from this state of disorder, and the New Jerusalem descended from heaven in the glory of God, with streets of gold and gates of pearl, and foundations of precious gems, and all the thrones are reared and crowns are set, and the mansions are completed, and the glorified are shining "as the sun in the kingdom of their Father," and we ourselves are crowned with all "the riches of his glory."

Oh, beloved, we shall then understand something of the meaning of such verses as these: "I pray that God would grant you according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened by his spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith." Or, again: "Strengthened with all might according to his gracious power unto all patience and long suffering with joyfulness." Or again: "My God shall supply all your need according to the riches of his glory by Jesus Christ." It is according to the riches of his glory that he is working out the new creation in our hearts, and preparing the more glorious temple of the soul for his own eternal abode. It is according to the riches of his glory that he is willing to strengthen the heart for all patience and long suffering. And it is according to the riches of his glory that he is able and ready to supply all our need. There is nothing too hard for such a God; too rich and glorious for his wisdom, grace and love. He looks at the littleness of our faith and cries: "Hast thou not known, hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? There is no searching of his understanding. He giveth power to the faint, and to them that have no might he increaseth strength."

V. The Resurrection and Ascension of Jesus Christ.

"That ye may know what is the hope of his calling and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward that believe, according to the working of his mighty power, which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality and power and might and dominions, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: and hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all."

The resurrection and glorification of Jesus Christ have become for us the pledge and pattern of all our faith and hope can claim. The power that God hath wrought in Christ in raising him from the dead and setting him upon his own right hand is the very same power which we may expect him to exercise to us-ward who believe. "The riches of the glory of this inheritance in the saints" is the standard of what we may share in our spiritual experience now. God has performed for us the most stupendous miracle of grace and power, and nothing can ever be too hard or too high for us to expect from "the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." The picture is a very definite as well as a very glorious one. Step by step we can ascend its transcendent and celestial heights with our ascending Lord, as we see him rise, first above the mighty power of earth, and then above and far above all principality and power and might and dominion and every name that is named, not only in this world, but in that which is to come, until all things are beneath his feet. And then as we gaze upon his lofty pre-eminence we are permitted to sit down by his side and claim all the fulness of his glory as our own. For all his glorification, power and majesty are, not for his own personal exaltation, but that he might become the Head over all things for his body, the church, and he takes his high pre-eminence as our representative, and recognizes us as already seated with him in the heavenly place. His resurrection, therefore, involves ours, his triumphs ours, his glorification ours, his rights are shared with us.

Do we require in our behalf the exercise of an authority that transcends all other authority? We have but to remember that he, our exalted Head, is sitting far above all principalities. Do we require a force to be exercised for us overmatching the mightiest forces of nature or of evil? He is sitting far above all power and might. Do we ask something which even natural law would seem to hinder? God already has done something in his resurrection which is superior to all law, for that is what "dominion" means. Are we confronted with imposing names and despised by human pride? We are sitting side by side with One who is exalted above every name that is named, both in this world and that which is to come. Indeed, the whole economy of human life, the whole system of providence, is a framework for the accomplishment of God's purposes for his redeemed people. Nations rise and fall, human society exists, great cities swarm with their inhabitants and move with the mighty currents of commerce and social life. All the events of the great world as they pass are but movements of Christ's mighty hand, primarily designed for those who immediately take part in them, but ultimately for the good of his church and the preparation of his kingdom, and men and nations are but puppets in the hands of the ascended King, whom he uses for his wise purposes, even when they are fulfilling their own pleasures, and then drops them when he pleases. After the resurrection of Christ, and in view of his enthronement, there is nothing we need fear to claim according to this mighty measure, as part of the riches of our inheritance.

6. Christ Himself.

We read in Romans 15:5: "According to Jesus Christ." This is the highest of all standards, higher even than resurrection, ascension and glory. As he is, so shall we be when he appears, but "as he is, so are we," even here. "Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." "Love one another, as I have loved you." "As I live by the Father, so he that eateth me even he shall live by me." "As thou hast sent me into the world, even so send I them into the world." "When he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." Such are some of the riches of heavenly light which reveal our identity with Jesus and unfold the mystery of his life in us. Not only is he our example, but he is our life. Miniatures of Christ, God expects us to be receiving and reflecting him in all his fullness, so that his life, our love his love, his purposes ours. We represent him, we dwell among men not as citizens of earth, but dead to our citizenship, and walking like him as if we had been sent specially from heaven on a mission from another world.

Beloved, is Christ our pattern, our type, our living Head, our divine standard and measure? Are we determined to have nothing less and to be nothing less than even as he? Shall we cease to copy man, and follow only our Lord and Master? Let us always keep our eye upon these heavenly standards, and be satisfied with nothing less than "according to Christ."

THE GREAT BEAST OF REVELATIONS

I see by the daily papers that our friend, "Pastor Russell," has again entertained a large audience in Baltimore with his views on the result of the war, which are something to the effect that the great monarchies now engaged in mortal conflict will presently be replaced by anarchy and nihilism. In other words, there will be no kingdoms of this world to become the kingdom of our God and His Christ when he comes but only chaos and misrule (Rev. 11:15). It is difficult to argue against a statement of this kind, because it is so far from the truth we can hardly find where to lay hold. Yet it seems quite a popular idea that the "breaking of the nations" by this war will result in the destruction of the present system of government. As a matter of history and as a matter of fact war that weakens the people strengthens the military systems that are nourished by their blood and treasure, for the very obvious reason that the resources, instead of being applied to the furtherance of civilization and the arts of peace, are diverted into channels that produce more military power which is again directed to further subjugate the suffering subjects. So that war is like Shakespeare's jealousy—"it creates the food it feeds on," and advances from "whips to scorpions," and from finger to waist size.

For illustration, take France at the time of the great Revolution, painfully and strenuously attempting to hold off her enemies, and compare her as a power with her military development under Napoleon. True, she had lost hosts of men in battle, but what was that as concerned her position as a political and military power? The same thing happened here. The war of the rebellion, and the more recent war with Spain, were the main factors to develop the United States as a "world power." This is almost invariably the case unless the conquered nation is victimized to the extent of annihilation, as in the case of Poland, for instance. In most cases of defeat, even the conquered as well as the conqueror gains new power. Witness France again in the defeat of 1870, or Russia after her defeat by Japan. Both these have risen with renewed vigor as military forces.

These facts are interesting to the students of prophecy as well as the students of history. In some former articles I have endeavored to show that practically all the prophets with one voice testify to the enormous development of human military power that will immediately precede and continue until the coming of the "Son of Man." The figure of the "terrible" metal image and the "Fourth Beast" of Daniel's prophecies show this military culmination. But the most wonderful of all is the "Beast of Revelations." I could not undertake to explain all the details in this wonderful vision; I make these simple notes by way of suggestion, what other scribes may bring forth from their treasures something new or old.

The main point to be noted at the beginning is that the "Beast" that John saw was a combination animal, and the component parts—lion, bear and leopard—are the same animals representing empires that Daniel saw rise in historical succession, and which Nebuchadnezzar saw for the most part in the image. We must also note that the number of the horns and the toes are the same, the horns representing the force of the beast and toes representing the supports of the image. The horns, moreover, are said to come into immediate antagonism with the "Lamb," and the toes are represented as the "points of resistance" upon which the "stone" fights to crush and so bring down the whole superincumbent structure. These points, it seems to me, are very plain. There are many other complications in the pictures of "Revelation" that we may be able to grasp yet, but if we get the outlines in this great matter, plain before us, we may be able to fill in details as they develop. The main points that I want to call attention to at present are that these three pictorial representatives of the self-same thing as seen from different points of view, and represent the antagonism that will be developed immediately preceding, and existing up to the time of the advent of the "Lord of Lords," and which he comes prepared to vanquish and "destroy with the brightness of his presence," coming as he will into immediate opposition to it, and we may say contact with it. Moreover, I claim that from my reading such a mighty unity of human military power has never obtained on earth before, nor indeed anything at all like it, and that its existence in full fruition will be short, we hope and pray. That it exists at present in a more or less embryonic state; that is, that the parts are all [illegible] in when the conditions are right, I think is highly probable, and we can wait and see.

J. F. GELLETLY.

VEILED PROPHET OF TURKEY IS MENACE TO CHRISTIAN ALLIES

Special Correspondence to Daily News.

LONDON, Nov. 5—"Britain and her Allies will never take Constantinople. Their policy in the Balkans has been stupid and suicidal. Before they beat the Turkish Empire they will be faced with over forty millions of Moslems, for a world-wide Jehad, or Holy war, is now in course of preparation."

This was the statement today of Mr. Kahlda, a prominent Turkish merchant who has but recently left Constantinople. He ranks high among his compatriots as a Mohammedan who has made a pilgrimage to Mecca. He declares that the peril of a great holy war is imminent.

"The preparations for a Jehad," said Mr. Kahlda, "have been going on since 1911 when Italy attacked Turkey. So far as Turkey is concerned in the present war she has little money to continue, but she is receiving support and the nation itself is rich and the people are intensely patriotic.

"The army is a perfect fighting machine, as the British and French now in Gallipoli have admitted. The rulers of the Ottoman Empire recognize that this is likely to be a fight to the death, and, should there be a sign that Turkey is likely to be beaten, there still remains the last resort. That effort would be the greatest of all, and would effectively paralyze the enemies of Islam. All arrangements have been made to put this into effect, and call a holy war.

"Should the sultan find the Empire imperiled he has it in his power, as the personal representative of the Prophet, to call a Jehad, which would mean a general uprising of all Islam against the Empire's enemies. Despite all reports to the contrary, no such call has been made, though the Kaiser of Germany has been assured that the call will be made if necessary.

"Abdul Hamid once made such a threat and so ended European aggressions, but the passing of Abdul Hamid has not changed the position, for the present Sultan would be supported by an even greater personage in the Moslem world—I mean the veiled Prophet of Kufra, at whose sign over forty million Mohammedans will be hurled against Turkey's enemies. That sign will be given perhaps sooner than expected.—Daily News.

THE TRIBULATION AND THE SIGN

What is the tribulation spoken of in Matt. 24:29? Have those signs been fulfilled? You will notice that the signs come after the "tribulation," and that is what gives us trouble. It does not seem to me the Seventh Day Adventists can be correct in thinking that these signs were fulfilled in the dark day and night of 1780, and the falling of the stars in 1833, because they were so widely separated and so long a time has elapsed since the first sign. Our Lord says, "This generation shall not pass away until all these things be fulfilled." If the Lord says, I will give you certain signs by which you may know my coming is near, how can they be signs to any but those witnessing them? Must not the Lord come while these people are living who saw the signs? Now we know the generation who saw the first sign, viz., the dark day of 1780, passed away long since.

Then again in Matthew 24:29 he says: "Immediately after the tribulation of those days," the signs occur. Now I want to ask you, "Are these signs given for believers or unbelievers? Must not the saints be taken away before "The Tribulation," for they appear with Christ at Jerusalem as the Jews are fleeing from Gog and Gomer and all his bands; and if they are taken before the tribulation how can they see the signs?

Well, dear brother, perhaps I have trespassed too long on your time even in the reading of so long a letter; if so, forgive me. May the Father of our Lord Jesus, the Anointed One, keep you in his grace until the kingdom be come.

Yours in the hope of the gospel,

MRS. FLORA A. WOOD.

Editor's Reply

"The tribulation of those days" (vs. 29) is the "great tribulation" of the 21st verse; that is, it is the horrible calamities which came upon the Jews in fulfillment of their imprecatory prayer: "His blood be on us and on our children" (Matt. 27:25). It was "shortened" and consummated by the eagles (vs. 28) of the Roman army. Jerusalem was like a putrid corpse; her life was gone; and the Romans were like the vultures and eagles—sure to find the carcass and devour it. Since then Jerusalem and the Jews have been "trodden down," but for the "elects' sake" their punishment has been more bearable. The sixth vial has been pouring out upon the Ottoman Empire since 1820; and as soon as the "sick man" passes away the great enemy of the Jews will be out of the way; the way emy of the Jews will be out of the way: the way of the kings of the east will be prepared; Christ will come as a thief, and then Jewish "tribulation" will end and their "fulness" begin anew (Rom. 11:12).

"Immediately, but after the affliction," is the literal Greek of Matt. 24:29. The sign follows the tribulation, and instead of giving you trouble should enlighten you. Do not get the idea as did Dr. Clark, that by the word "immediately" all time is blotted out, or at least limited to a very short period. "Immediately" in the Greek is emteos, and signifies "all at once, suddenly;" so that it means only the sudden appearance of the sign which Jesus announces, not the shortness of the interval which was to separate it from the "days of tribulation," of which he is speaking. And what is the "sign of the Son of Man in heaven?" The darkening of the sun and moon, the falling of the stars, and the shaking of the "powers of heaven" (vs. 30). Of course the Seventh Day Adventists are wrong here; for they interpret the sign literally, concerning which method of interpretation God has warned us, saying: "Learn not the way of the heathen, and be not dismayed at the signs of heaven; for the heathen are dismayed at them" (Jer. 10:2). The falling stars and dark day stories of Adventism are simply heathenism modernized. The signs of the times are political, not astronomical. In prophetic diction, great commotions upon earth are represented by the phenomena of the heavenly bodies. The fall of Babylon is likened to the stars and constellations of heaven withdrawing their light; and the sun and the moon being darkened (Isa. 13); Egypt, by heaven being covered, the sun hid in a cloud, and the moon darkened (Ezek. 22); Jerusalem, by darking the sun, and turning the moon into blood (Joel 2). When Christ comes and changes the kingdom of this world into his the "powers of heaven" upon earth will be shaken and destroyed (Rev. 11:13-18). Their overthrow is the "sign of the Son of Man in heaven." The sign of the Son of Man in heaven is totally a different thing from the signs of the times which are precursors of his advent. There are two stages in the manifestation of the Son of Man: He comes for his saints at the beginning of the time of trouble, and delivers them from the east of Jerusalem and invades the city "with his "saints" or "troops," and rescues it from the Russian power of Gog (Ezek. 14; Hab. 3:12-16; Jude 14). Here Christ and his saints appear in the political "heavens" for the first time; the "sign of the Son of Man in heaven" is written in letters of blood and fire, and "all the tribes of the earth" can not deny it (vs. 30), for he comes in the clouds of heaven (the multitude of saints, Heb. 12:1), with power and great glory. From his coming to the "end of the world" there will elapse a period of about 40 years (Mi. 7:14, 15). "All these things" will transpire within a generation (Matt. 24:34). "These things," embracing the advent of the Lord, and much else besides; "all these things," ending entirely "this world," and opening up "the world to come"—within a generation. The power and great glory of Christ and his kingdom will then shine out in the splendor of a divine kingdom. Matt. 25th chapter completes the picture.

"THE DEAR OLD RESTITUTION"

This is a familiar form of reference to The Restitution all over this broad land. Many reasons could be given why its readers give the paper this endearing title, this appellation of affection. From the revival of the truth some sixty or seventy years ago, when God began "taking out a people for his name" from the world in the latter days, The Restitution has made its weekly visits, advocating truth and inculcating righteousness; declaring the whole counsel of God, and exhorting to purity of life. So useful in its mission, so accurate has been its teaching, so beneficial its exhortations, its readers have slated it among the "household necessities"; they feel that it is one of the family circle, and they feel the same affection for it as they do for wife or children.

The good-hearted farmer, after a horse has spent years in his service, will put him on pension in his old age. He is often worthless, but the farmer gives him pasture and tender care out of consideration for the good and the work he has done. Were The Restitution as worthless now as an old horse it would still have a competence for life. Consideration for what it has done, the battles it has fought, the victories won, would cause its readers to deal tenderly with it in its old age; with them it would still be "the dear old Restitution."

From this illustration do not draw the inference that The Restitution is old and feeble. The present status of the paper was never better in all its history. It is now in the hands of the church (where it belongs) in the hands of officials known to be successful business men, and also known for their devotion to truth and piety. "The Dear Old Restitution," aged and honorable, will continue its weekly visits, bearing to the four points of the compass the sweet message of God's kingdom, and the coming glory of Christ's reign. With this editorial policy we are sure our readers heartily sympathize. Give us then, your prayers, sympathy, financial and moral support. Send the editor good articles for publication, give him every suggestion you have in mind that would improve the paper, do what you can to increase the subscription list, and take up this slogan for the New Year: "Long live the dear old Restitution."

"OUR FOUR ARCH PILLARS"

There are four grand arguments for the truth of the Bible. The first, the miracles on record; the second, the prophecies; the third, the goodness of the doctrine; and the fourth, the moral character of the penmen. The miracles flow from the divine power, the prophecies from the divine understanding, the excellencies of the doctrine from the divine goodness, the characters of the writers from moral purity. Thus Christianity is built upon these four immovable pillars—the power, the understanding, the goodness and the purity of God.

EDITORIAL

Earnest contention for the faith is scriptural conduct (Jude 3), only we must be careful not to have more contention than faith.

Brother, do not seek to head everything in the church. A conspicuous mark of efficiency is getting good work out of your brother and sister.

Ministers, quit trying to get everything into one sermon; quit trying "to exhaust the text." No preacher can pump the wells of salvation dry. It is easier to exhaust your hearers than your text.

The Bible tells us to "avoid," "reject" and "withdraw" from the impure in faith and morals (Rom. 16:17; Titus 3:10; 2 Thessalonians 3:6). "Let them cut themselves off;" says the duty-dodger. "Let them die off," says the coward. "Let us do what God says," says the man who "trembles at his word" (Isaiah 66:2).

Some things stick to you no matter how hard you may try to shake them off. By many a creed is hated, denied, repudiated, and shaken off, only to be shaken on again. Not long since a conference voted that it stood "against a written creed." The conference no doubt thought that by this action it was voting a creed clear out of existence. Only think a little, however, and you will see that in repudiating a "written creed" the conference unconsciously and unintentionally, but for that matter, just as really recognizes, implies, and admits a creed that is not "written." After all, there is your "creed" right along by your side. You can hate, deny, repudiate and pass all the resolutions you please against a creed, but when the dust settles, you will see that creed, like the horseleech, still sticks.

1. The gospel for every man: "To every creature" (Mark 16:15).
2. A message for every man: "Hearken everyone" (Mark 7:14).
3. A promise for every man: "Every one that asketh receiveth" (Matt. 7:8).
4. Gifts for every man: "To every one gifts" (Eph. 4:7).
5. Work for every man: "To every man his work" (Mark 13.34).
6. An account for every man: "Every one shall give account" (Rom. 14:12).

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brothers and Sisters of the Faith:

I will add my testimony. I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and not that of Joseph, as some like to believe. A promised Son from the time the seed should bruise the serpent's head in the Garden of Eden. All through the Old Testiment, and the first thing in the New. Now he is God's only begotten Son, that came into the world.

I can see it in no other light than that it is a testing truth, which every one of the faith will be judged by. Are we believing the record God gave of his Son?

I believe in being baptized into Christ. My husband, J. E. Cook, deceased, also believed in the only begotten Son of God. Know ye not that as many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ? I believe in the second coming of Jesus Christ to earth to gather his faithful followers to reign on the earth when the curse is removed, and shall ever be with the Lord.

Written with much love to all of the faithful.

M. F. COOK.

OBITUARY

J. E. Cook

It is with sadness I write to announce the death of my beloved husband, J. E. Cook, who departed this life on the 12th day of October, 1915, after five weeks of intense suffering. The last three weeks were spent in the hospital at Charlottesville, Va. Death was due from a complication of diseases. All was done that his family, relatives and dear friends could do, but to no avail.

He expressed to a dear relative, near the end, that he was ready to go, if it was the Lord's will. He joined the church of God under the preaching of Brother Lindsay, several years ago. He met with the brethren in worship whenever there was an opportunity, and liked to talk on the precious promises in the Bible.

He was a native of Pennsylvania. He was 76 years, 6 months and 10 days old. He was married to M. Frances Updyke, near Browntown, Warren County, Va., October 17, 1876. In this union, they were blessed with seven children, three of which preceded him to the grave. He left two daughters, two sons, two daughters-in-law, two sons-in-law, and ten grand-children to mourn his loss.

He served his country during the civil war to maintain the Union. As there was no minister of our faith the Baptist minister conducted the funeral services at the house to a large gathering of relatives and friends. He was laid to rest in the family grave yard at Browntown, Va. There was a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends. The floral offerings were beautiful. I comfort myself with the promise of a glorious resurrection morning.

His wife,

M. F. COOK.

IS THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE IDEA OF CREATION SCRIPTURAL?

"That we hence be no more children, tossed to and fro and carried about by every wind of doctrine" (Eph. 4:14).

After having carefully considered the Christian Science of God, and found it the very opposite of scriptural teaching, we now turn our attention to "Creation." Our purpose is to turn the searchlight of God's eternal truth upon the written claims of Christian Science.

Mrs. Mary Baker Patterson Glover Eddy not only taught her followers of an immaterial God, but of an immaterial creation as well. Read carefully the quotations from "Science and Health" (page 175): "Matter is therefore not created by mind."—"God." Page 176: "Trees, plants and flowers are ideas of the mind. Mind multiplies them, and the product can only be mental. (Old Book.) New Book, page 280: "All things beautiful and harmless are ideas of mind. Mind creates and multiplies them, and the product must be mental."

Let me give you some scripture, with the Christian Science idea of it. Gen. 1:1: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." Page 502 of Science and Health: "This creation consists of the unfolding of spiritual ideas and their identities, which are embraced in the infinite mind and forever reflected."

Heaven and Earth—Spiritual Ideas

"In the universe of truth matter is unknown; hence the eternal wonder that infinite space is peopled with God's ideas, reflecting him in countless spiritual forms" (page 503). On Page 506, commenting on Gen. 1:9, we read: "Spirit—God, gathers unformed thoughts in to their proper channels, and unfolds these thoughts." Water and land—simply a thought!

Page 510—Gen. 1:17: "Truth and love enlighten the understanding in whose light shall we see light, and this illumination is reflected spiritually by all who walk in the light and turn away from material sense." Merely Spirit Light!

Page 510: "Light is a symbol of Mind, of Life, Truth and Love, not a vitalizing property of matter." Have you ever noticed how necessary is light to plant growth? Yet we are told it is not a vitalizing property of matter!

Page 511—Gen. 1:20: "The fowls which fly above earth in the open firmament of heaven correspond to aspirations soaring above and beyond corporeally to the understanding of the incorporeal and divine principle, Love." The fowls of Gen. 1:20 are merely aspirations soaring in the open heavens!

And now I wish you to notice the Christian Science idea of Gen. 1:21: "And God created great whales, and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly after their kind, and every winged fowl after his kind, and God saw that it was good." Hear Mrs. Eddy: "Spirit is symbolized by strength, presence and power, and also by holy thoughts winged with love." Good explanation?

Page 512—Gen. 1:22: "And God blessed them, saying, Be fruitful and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl multiply in the earth." "Spirit blesses the multiplication of its own pure and perfect ideas. God is ignorant of both the existence of this mortal mentality, so called, and its claim." God told his thoughts to be fruitful and multiply!

Let us try again. Gen. 1:24: "And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind; and it was so." "Spirit diversifies, classifies and individualizes all thoughts, which are as eternal as the mind conceiving them." The beasts of the earth, living creatures, cattle and creeping things, are only thoughts of the mind." They do not in reality exist. "The serpent of God's creating is neither subtle nor poisonous, but is a wise idea" (page 515).

While sitting in a comfortable chair on a shaded porch a few months ago, reading an interesting book, I became aware that something had been added to the immediate surroundings. There was a something black, which seemed to extend about six inches outward from under the arm of my chair. As the realization of something added penetrated to my brain I took my eyes from the book and focused them on that object. And then things began to happen! I left that chair probably in as great a hurry as I ever was in my life, and when the distance seemed sufficiently great to insure safety I turned myself about, and there in the chair was one of Mrs. Eddy's "ideas"—"wise idea." Yes, it was a serpent; a snake of about five feet in length. And that snake a "wise idea?" No! But the quick move I made when I saw the snake was a wise idea, put into action. Have you ever seen a man after he has been attacked by a poisonous serpent? The "wise idea" causes a man to die.

Gen. 1:31 reads thus: "And God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good." This verse is explained on page 518: "Deity was satisfied with his work. How could he be otherwise, since the spiritual creation was the outgrowth." So you see that nothing was made, after all.

Gen. 2:4, 5: "These are the generations of the heavens and of the earth when they were created, in the day that the Lord made the earth and the heavens. And every plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field before it grew; for the Lord God had not caused it to rain upon the earth, and there was not a man to till the ground," is explained: "Here is the emphatic declaration that God creates all through mind and not through matter; that the plant grows not because of seed or soil, but because growth is the eternal mandate of mind." And yet, if you hang a plant in the air, where its roots can not find the soil, will it grow? Does the seed take root before it is put into the soil? To be sure, God spoke them into being, but he then planted them in the earth that they might grow.

Now what is the Christian Science idea of creation?

"Spiritual Creation" (page 518).
"Spiritual Ideas" (page 502).
"Matter is unknown" (page 503).
In other words, God never created matter.

The logic of no matter means that the universe is a deception. All creation is a lie. Nothing we see or feel or touch or hear is real. Those mountains and hills where we have camped, and from whose height we have seen the rivers and lakes in the distance, are unreal. The breeze which whispered so softly through the towering pines, singing us to sleep, is but the imagination of the mind. Those breakers on the beach, which you have watched with such fascination, were but ideas, not really existent. That most beautiful sunrise which you watched from some lofty place is a falsehood. That glorious sunset, which we have looked upon from the deck of many a gallant ship, those changing colors, as the great ball of fire swings slowly down to touch the waves, is but a falsehood, a rank deception. And this is the logic of that fundamental proposition, "no matter." For they tell us that God never created matter. But Moses said, "God created the heavens and the earth." Poor Moses, how mistaken he was! What terrible hardships he had to pass through, and all because Mary Eddy had not yet published her book! The great things which God promised to Abraham are lies: "And all the land whichthou seest, to thee will I give it." There was no land to see; none was ever made! Christ need not therfore to expect the fulfillment of that promise, for as the seed of Abraham he was to receive as his kingdom the world. We who are Christians need not look forward for anything, for nothing has been made. That Grand Trunk Line of Prophecy, which we have enjoyed because of what it means to Christians, is of no account. We must tack some spiritual interpretation to all that, for God never made anything. "And the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominion shall serve and obey him" (Dan. 7:27).

This is nothing—means nothing. And yet, as we follow that prophetic line, we are convinced that God spoke something into being at the beginning, and then, because of nature, behind which is the person of God Almighty, these things which were made continue. We need but to open our eyes to know the somethingness of creation. The Bible is plain in its statements, and says nothing of spiritual creation apart from the material—Present Truth Messenger.

PROVE ALL THINGS, HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD

Some Additional Comments Relative to the Question, "Is Jesus Christ God?"

No. 3

Some time ago one of the most cogent articles I have ever seen in defense of the doctrine of the Trinity appeared in the New England Bible Standard, and I sincerely hope that such an able writer will yet herald the fact that there are not three gods, but one, and only one. The writer of that article based (or endeavored to do so) a strong argument upon the fact that the word "godhead" was a "scriptural term," and was in itself sufficient proof that more than one personality was included.

I have not the issue of the Bible Standard, so can not state his exact words, but have, I trust, represented his position fairly. I must confess that when reading and replying to the argument I did not see any satisfactory answer to this point, but so sure was I that the Bible statements that God was one, and only one, admitted of no ambiguity, I was quite content to wait for further light.

From early boyhood it had always seemed to me that the word "godhead" was unnatural; that it was coined for some specific purpose, and conveyed no clear or definite meaning. The word occurs in the A. V. in three places only, viz., Acts 17:29; Rom. 1:20; Col. 2:9. The Revised Version in two out of three of these instances has changed the word to "divinity," or "that which is divine" (see margin), and had they done so in the third instance it would be then seen to be a corroborration of Matt. 28:18: "All power (authority, R. V.) is given unto me." See also Matt. 11:27; 16:28; Dan. 7:14; John 3:35; and numerous other passages.

Paul speaks in Col. 2:9 of the "fulness" of Christ; and in an earlier chapter (Col. 1:19) says: "It was the good pleasure of the Father that in Him should all the fulness dwell;" and John says: "Of his fulness have all we received" (John 1:16). Two or three points here must surely present themselves to an inquiring mind: Col. 2:8, as presented in the A. V., is quoted as proof that Christ is one person of a triune godhead, each equal one with the other—co-equal and co-eternal. This verse can not rightly be understood if considered apart from the previous statement in Col. 1:9, for without question the later statement is always qualified by the former. How often we find more care is needed in rightly dividing the word of truth.

No unbiased student can fail to notice that in the several foregoing passages quoted "authority," "power" and "fulness" are delegated by one to another; and that that same "power," "authority" or "fulness is in a limited sense again delegated by him to others, for John says: "Of his fulness have all we received;" and elsewhere we are said to become partakers of the divine nature

This leads to the consideration of another phase of this interesting study, which presents difficulty to many, but careful comparison will show its correspondence with the above. The names and offices of Jesus are by them supposed to prove that he was and is God. Candid examination of at least the greater part of these names clearly shows dependence upon another; the others are explained by the statements of Christ himself that he came in his "Father's name" (John 5:43; 10:25). The words in Ex. 23:21, though spoken first of the type, clearly have reference also to Christ, and emphatically show the high importance of the one bearing such a capacity, and are an ample and satisfactory explanation of the difficulty referred to. Some of the names of Christ can legitimately be variously rendered, one translation being equally correct as others, and it is but reasonable to adopt that which is most in harmony with facts.

Phil. 2:8, 9, is worthy of notice. If the generally recorded doctrine that Christ was God before his birth, death and resurrection is correct he surely could not hold any more exalted position. How then can we reconcile the statement that because he became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross, God therefore highly exalted him, and gave him a name which is above every name? If he was God before, co-equal and co-eternal with the Father, where was his gain or his exaltation, if he only returned to his former glory? If he was God, co-equal and co-eternal, why need he have this great name and glory given to him, conferred upon him by another?

DIVINE NATURE BY FAITH ONLY

Chas. A. Goss

Exaltation to the divine nature is dependent on the promises of God and our faith therein. Hence we read in 2 Peter 1:4 that God has given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these (promises) we might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.

"The divine nature" is the nature of God, in which the lusts of the flesh or strong desires of the fleshly nature can not exist or enter in. When these fleshly desires are in control of our body our acts are such as lead to corruption. But if we "crucify," or "put to death," or overcome them, we then may become partakers of the divine nature in the future. How, then, can we get rid of, put to death or escape from the control of these desires, and so escape the corruption to which they will lead? If we study the Apostle's words we see that he points to "the great and precious promises" which God has given us as the way. If we remember that God has made our salvation dependent upon faith in his promises it will help us to understand this. "The just shall live by faith" (Rom. 1:17). Therefore the Apostle admonishes us "to be followers of those who by faith and patience inherit the promises" (Heb. 6:12); for "without faith it is impossible to please God," says the Apostle Paul.

From the beginning we had this to have been God's plan for the saving of mankind. Abraham (our father in the faith) believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness. Hence Paul says: "Faith is the basis of things hoped for, a conviction of things unseen." How? Why, on the same basis that it was with Sarah, as recorded in Heb. 11:12: "She judged him faithful who had promised." For this reason the promises were given that we might believe them, or have faith in them, for the Apostle tells us that "faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God" (Rom. 10:17). It would be impossible to have faith if no promises had been made. There must be something in which to believe, or we could not exercise faith, and God has provided for that by giving us "exceeding great and precious promises." The first ray of divine light on the question of our deliverance from "the bondage of corruption" in which we are held by our "fleshly lusts," or natural and uncontrolled desires—in other words, our sinful nature—is found in Gen. 3:15. Where we find that God foretold the coming of one mighty to save, who shalt "bruise the serpent's head," and, as thus symbolized, crush the sin power which had wrought the downfall of the whole race through Adam.

The second is found in Gen. 13:14-17 in the promise to Abraham—first, of the land; second, of the seed; third, of the rulership; fourth, of whole nations to be blessed through the promise. This was again repeated to his son Isaac, and confirmed again to Jacob or Israel, when their faith in them was being tried.

The next promise was made to Judah (Gen. 49:10): "The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be."

Then we have a promise made to the nation of Israel through Moses, the greatest lawgiver and leader that any nation ever produced. He says in Deut. 18:17-19: "And the Lord said unto me, They have well spoken that which they have spoken. I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him. And it shall come to pass that whosoever will not hearken unto my words, which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him."

Again do we find the royal line of inheritance, which was implied in the promise to Judah, most explicitly stated to King David in Psalm 89:35-37, and a throne which should 'endure forever.'" Gods's book abounds with promises exceedingly abundant and manifest in their blessedness.

Such are the restoration of Israel in Isaiah 43:6 and Ezek. 20:33, for which we pray when we say: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." This prayer will be answered when another promise is fulfilled which is found in Ezek. 21:25-27, when God gives the kingdom to him "whose right it is," even to Christ, for he confirmed this promise when the angel Gabriel spoke to Mary and told her that the Lord God should give unto her son the throne of his father David to reign over the house of Israel forever (Luke 1:32). We may see that the Apostles believed what the prophets had foretold of Christ's kingdom because they taught it. As for instance when James refers to the words recorded in Amos 9:11 about the restoration of the tabernacle of David and the building again of the ruins (Acts 15:17). Peter also repeats the oath and promise of God unto Dvaid when he speaks of Christ being the one whom God would raise up to sit on David's throne (Acts 2:29-32). He—the Son—has been highly exalted, and been given a name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow in heaven and in earth, and all confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of the Father (Phil 2:9-11).

We see him who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death crowned with glory and honor (Heb 2 9), and we hear the Apostle saying: "If we suffer we shall also reign with him" (2 Tim. 2:12).

Then we recall the greatest of all promises from the Master himself (Rev. 3:21): "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." Also in Matt. 25: 34: "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." And the redeemed shall sing a new song, saying: "Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:9, 10).

It is by a belief of these promises—all of them—that we may escape the corruption which is in the world through lust, and will be made partakers of the divine nature. A belief of these promises constitutes the "one faith" of the gospel. To reject any part thereof is to reject saving truth.

"The world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." Hence we are admonished to love not the world, neither the things of the world. If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him. "And this is the promises that he hath promised us, even eternal life" (1 John 2:25). "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God" (John 5:5)?

"Therefore 'Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye appear with him in glory" (Col. 3:2-4). A belief of such promises begets a new heart or mind, and helps develop a godly character in the believer. Not to believe them leaves one subject to the corruption inherent in Adamic nature. Such an one dies a hopeless death.

Go straight forward in the way of duty. Providence will take care of the rest.

There is no greater evidence of a shallow mind than to court attention by a display of eccentricity.

Avarice knows no god but gold, no happiness but gain, no fear but loss of wealth, and no friendship that has not a profit in it.

The words that a wise father speaks to his child in the privacy of home are not at first heard by the world, but, as in whispering galleries, they are clearly heard at the end, and by posterity.

It requires a certain capacity for good in yourself to appreciate the good in others; and the converse is unhappily true also, for, if you constantly see the bad in others, you may safely conclude that you are not exactly what you ought to be yourself.

The course of the river is often broken by sudden rapids or perilous eddies. The life of the good man is not one perpetual flow of buoyant melody. It has its breaks, its discords, its attritions. Like the river, its course is often fretted by the eddies of trouble or disturbed by the sand-bars of defeat.

The happiness of life consists, like the day, not in single flashes of light, but in one continuous mild serenity. The most beautiful period of the heart's existence is in this calm equable light, even though it be only moonshine or twilight. The mind alone can obtain for us this heavenly cheerfulness.

Learn to say "No" with decision, "Yes" with caution—"No" with decision whenever it meets a temptation "Yes" with caution whenever it implies a promise. A promise once given is a bond inviolable. A man is already of consequence in the world when it is known that we can implicitly depend upon him.

It is not what we earn, but what we save, that makes us rich. It is not what we eat, but what we digest, that makes us strong. It is not what we read, but what we remember, that makes us learned. It is not what we intend, but what we do, that makes us useful. It is not a few faint wishes, but a lifelong struggle, that makes us valiant.

A person's manner is quite a different thing from a person's manners. The former indicates very plainly the style and character of the individual, while the latter are the result of training and association It has been well said that a lady may possess very excellent manners and yet have a very unfortunate manner, and the reverse.

The arrangement of our homes and the management of our hospitalities, to be truly agreeable and inviting, must not have cost an undue or painful effort The elegantly-furnished drawing-room loses all its charm and attractiveness when we discover that it has been adorned at the expense of the family comfort, or health, or education. The splendor of an entertainment fascinates no longer when it is found to be the result of a mean parsimony and a persistent paring in other directions.

HAVE YOU HEARD ABOUT THE NEW HYMN AND SONG BOOK?

A new Hymn and Song Book is now in the hands of the publishers. This book has been compiled and edited by Bro. Almus Adams and a committee selected by the Nebraska State Conference. We feel safe in saying it is absolutely free from doctrinal error and yet has retained all the dear old favorite hymns we love—the good ones of half a dozen publications.

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the Saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13: 3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). HOW "TOMMY" WAS CONVERTED

No. 1

In January, 1870, near Frank Pierce, Iowa, ther lived a certain disciple by the name of "Lan" Briggs. He was one of those fellows who took delight in hearing the truth plainly spoken, and never lost an opportunity to call the attention of others to the time and place where one of his preachers was going to speak.

So it occurred one day, while I was at work on the "wood pile," he drove up, saying: "I thougnt I would stop and let you know that we are going to begin a religious meeting in the Bender school house, and I would like to have you go and hear my preacher."

I said, "Sir, I think I will go."

"Well," said he, "you can ride up with us in the big wagon."

"That kind of an arrangement will suit me, and I will be on hand in time," said I.

The sun was just going down, but "Lan" lived only about one-half mile away—was really one of our close neighbors, but we had not been in that neighborhood very long, and as my father and mother were "strong" Methodists (father being a "class leader" in that denomination) and overhearing Mr. Briggs talking with me, he ventured to inquire:

"What did 'Lan' Briggs say to you?"

"O, he wants me to go with him to hear one of his kind of preachers."

"Well," said father, "I can tell you what you will hear."

"Indeed."

"Yes, you will hear water, water, water!"

This excited my curiosity somewhat and made me more anxious to see and hear this kind of a religionist as I had never heard this new doctrine, although I was nearing my twenty-second birthday. I was always of a religious nature, but had no definite position in the religious world. This I attribute to my parents, for whom I have great respect, and especially to my godly mother, as I knelt by her side in boyhood days, when she laid her hands upon my little head and prayed with that earnest and fervent spirit that God would help her to raise her child to walk in wisdom's ways; and though for many years that voice has been hushed in death, the words still ring in my ears until I know that there is one boy who cannot forget his mother's prayers. And I trust that when that "poor, lisping, stammering tongue is ransomed from the grave, then in a nobler, sweeter tone she'll tell God's power to save."

Just here let me say to all mothers: Do not neglect praying for your offspring. Kneel with them, place your hands upon their little heads and with the sincerity of a mother's heart you can pour out the desires of your soul to the God of heaven and earth, that will never be forgotten; and when your children are away—far from your earthly home in after years—there will be a shield of protection thrown around them in the light of "mother's prayers."

As intimated, I was in the habit of attending the M. E. services and was taught to think that "One denomination is just as good as another" (which statement I judge is still true, for they are all man-made orders, and therefore do not exist by the will of God).

I have since learned that we will not be crowned unless we strive lawfully (2 Tim. 2:5). This set me to thinking seriously and thus to reason: That if we enjoy the crown of life that will never fade, we must understand what the will of the Lord is, then do it in the lawful way; must learn what the terms and conditions are that will grant us power or privilege to become the sons of God.

Supper being over, I stepped up to the farmer's house and joined him and a part of his family, and we were soon on our road to "church." I do not recall any of the conversation on the way, but when we reached the school house I saw we were going to have a crowd.

But behold! when the time came for the minister to appear, to my surprise, there stepped forward a beardless youth. It was J. C. Hay, looking as—scarcely out of his teens.

The subject that night was "Faith," and it was well handled; so plain, so simple. He stated, if a person desires to become a child of God, he must believe all that God had said, through his Son. God in former times spake to the patriarchs, and also to the Jews, by the Prophets. But now He speaks to us through his Son. So God tells us through Jesus of Nazareth, how we can become his children, and says, "Hear ye him!" That is surely plain, and locates all that we need to know, about Christ and his religion, in the old and new testaments.

He also showed that unless we had faith in God it is impossible to please him (Heb. 11:6), and that faith could be obtained only in one way: faith is the product of testimony, given by competent and reliable witnesses. So Matthew, Mark, Luke and John testify that Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God. John says in the conclusion of his testimony that "these things are written that we might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing you might have life through his name." This locates salvation in one name. All are to hear him on the subject of religion; "Hear ye him!"

The testimony or evidence that these four writers give to prove this Jesus of Nazareth to be the Son of God has never been proven false. The brightest minds that could be used in his day and in all succeeding centuries have never been able to set aside his claim as the Son of God.. The testimony and the "infallible proofs," together with the success his followers met, are being published in more languages today and read by more people than any other book in the world. The proof, that his followers did believe with all their hearts that Jesus is the Christ, is found in the great sacrifices they made, in the persecutions they endured, and in their willingness to die for him. These are proof positive of their sincerity, and are the faith that keeps the religious world in motion today.

When these simple statements were made, one ray of intellectual light penetrated my mind and threw a circle of radiant splendor around my heart, and also around the long list of sad disappointments in my life. It seemed to me I was before one who, though young in years, was able to lead me "unto the Rock that is higher than I." I could see the strength of his ability consisted in his marvelous simplicity of thought and full reliance upon God's word. The Bible looked like a new book to me as my understanding was opening up. I began to see in the clear and certain light of Gospel truth what faith really is—how simple, yet how sublime! Faith comes by hearing the word of God (Rom. 10:17). Well, I was hearing it—yes, drinking it right in. Thus you see I was favorably impressed, and when I returned home my father said:

"Well, Tommy, what did the Church of God man have to say?" "Well," I said, "he gave us a good lesson on faith."

"Faith!" said he. "Why, Tommy, those fellows don't believe in faith." "No," I replied, "but they believe in testimony, and that produces faith; and I learned further that faith comes by hearing the word of God, and that we must believe that Jesus of Nazareth, who went about doing good, was really the Son of God, and that he is now the one whom we must hear on the subject of our salvation."

Father said, "Tommy, I want you to go over to our prayer-meeting tomorrow night."

"Well, father," said I, "I can't do that, as I have already promised to go and hear Mr. Hay again." (And so I did, then I promised to go the third time.)

Upon my return home from the second night's meeting my father inquired what success the young man was having. I said:

"The crowd is on the increase and the attention is fine."

He then inquired about the subject.

I said, "He spoke on the subject of repentance."

"Well, what did he make out of that?" asked father. "He showed that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God because after God has spoken unto us through his Son, he now commands all men everywhere to repent. And until we have obeyed that command we are sinners in his sight."

With great earnestness he asked, "Well, what do you think of his way of preaching?"

I said, "Father, that man can make the Scriptures plainer than any preacher I ever heard."

He said, "Tommy, Bro. Kenyon wants to see and have a talk with you. He has something of special interest to say to you."

("Bro. Kenyon" was the M. E. pastor.)

"Now, father, I have listened to Mr. Kenyon for some time, and while I regard him a good speaker and possibly the best M. E. minister I ever heard, I must say this young man Hay is very much his superior in giving explanations of scripture and in showing what God has to say to us as he speaks through his Son. And I have promised to hear Mr. Hay once more."

On the third night Mr. Hay gave a discourse on the subject of "Confession." Many persons of today confess Christ in part, but their hearts are far from him. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness." You see righteousness begins in the heart, and to confess Jesus as our Lord, prophet, priest and king is to give him the first place in our hearts, with all authority in heaven and earth, to guide, direct and lead us in all the ways of Christian peace. Many troubles could be avoided if we would only let Jesus lead—if we would speak as he speaks and be silent where he has not spoken.

But alas! we see the meek and quiet spirit of the Body of Christ disturbed by people who, on account of their half-converted condition, seek to introduce things that produce discord among good brethren, speaking where Jesus has not spoken. My brethren, these things ought not so to be. Confession of Christ, with the mouth, implies that Christ shall take full charge of our heart's work in all religious matters. It is in fact a confession to the public that we make a full and complete surrender to him in spirit and body. So we are no more our own, but are his as he has bought us with the price of blood.

This confession, made understandingly, excludes forever from our religious life all man-made doctrines, together with all human names given and found in the long list of sectarian bodies, and all things that have ever been suggested by the minds of mortal man as "expedients" to assist in the worship or otherwise.

After hearing Mr. Hay the third night, I returned home. Father had not retired, so he ventured to ask, "What success did Mr. Hay have tonight?"

I replied, "Not any, only the crowd was too great and the house too small. So they will change the place of meeting and go to the Frank Pierce church tomorrow night, then he will deliver a discourse on 'Baptism.'"

"Well," said he, "I knew, Tommy, that he would get to the water after awhile. And now Tommy, Bro. Kenyon wants me to tell you he has a special proposition to make you that will prove to be of great interest to you in after life. I hope you will surely see him and accept it without delay. He wants you to come at once."

I said, "Father I cannot go, for I have agreed to hear Mr. Hay on "Baptism" tomorrow night." I was more and more convinced I had found a people who had a better understanding of the Scriptures than any class of religionists I had ever met, and I was fully determined not to let anything or anybody hinder me from hearing the grand and plain lessons so earnestly spoken.

On the fourth night the speaker began, after a few preliminary remarks, and gave us a plain, Scripture lesson, showing that to sprinkle water upon a person, as the act of baptism, is not in harmony with the Scriptures, and is a substitute, originating in the minds of men, for that act Jesus commanded the apostles to perform in the name of Christ; then showing that both Philip and the eunuch went down into the water—something they would not do if sprinkling water upon a person was what Jesus commanded as the act in baptism (Acts 8:38). Now the act performed while in the water is clearly set forth in Rom. 6:4, where we find it to be a "burial"—hence an immersion. The third verse of the same chapter tells how every one who believes with all his heart is connected with the riven heart of Jesus, out of which flowed the shed blood of our dear Redeemer for the remission of our sins—baptized into his death.

Note.—A thought just here which seems to have escaped the minds of many is this: The blood of Christ did not flow for the remission of sins until his spirit left his body. So we are baptized into his death in order to connect with his blood for the remission of sins. Thus we pass through the water into the promise of the blood—the point where we meet the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, and receive the forgiveness of the Father, through the blood of the Son, and the Holy Spirit to guide us through life. Truly can the apostle say, "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God" (Rom. 8:14).

Many things were said in this discourse, and I became a very willing hearer. In fact, I confessed I believed the things concerning the kingdom and name of Christ (Acts 8:12). When I returned home the family was up, and before I was seated at the fire my father again asked, "What success did Mr. Hay have tonight?"

I replied, "Well, father, they got one tonight."

A pause—then drawing a long breath as if fearing to hear the answer—he asked: "Who was it?"

I never can forget that intense look—that tone of fear—and the silence awaiting the answer. I was happy—not because my sins were forgiven, but because I had the promise, in plain English, from Christ that "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;" and I was just waiting for the morrow's sun, for at the hour of 10 a. m. I was to be buried into the death of Christ—to meet my Lord, with his sacrifice. Yes, we are buried with him (Rom. 6:4), where his blood purges our conscience from dead works to serve the living God, and for this cause he is the mediator of the New Testament, that by means of death for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance (Heb. 9:15). It was this death that I was soon to approach through the water of baptism. I say on account of this I really felt happy, but I knew there would arise in the heart of father a cloud of sorrow that would appear to him as destructive to my future life as does the cyclone prove destructive along the path it so forcibly pursues. And I may have hesitated, but I was on my way to meet my Savior, and there was before me the tree of life, the eternal city and all the exceeding great and precious promises held out to those who obey Christ. I could see by an eye of faith my immortal body rising from the tomb, the union with all the saints at the second coming of Christ, the beautiful home eternal, the pure water of life; the Elysian fields of everlasting glory located in the place that Jesus will prepare for all those who obey him. These be some of the exceeding great and precious promises given to those who obey from the heart that form of doctrine delivered by the apostles of Christ. I it was who was waiting the coming of my Lord—to be buried with him in the water of baptism; and should I tell father who it was those people "got",

Surely, I said, "Father, it is I."

He said, "Tommy, you are lost!"

"Tommy's lost!" this thought ran in the mind of father all night.

Next morning, while I was getting ready for breakfast, mother said to me, "Your father did not sleep very much last night."

I asked her why.

"Oh he thinks you are lost."

T. J. JACKSON.

MAN, HIS CONSTITUTION AND HIS PLACE OF HABITATION

This morning we heard a wonderful sermon, arranged under these three heads, entitled, "What are we to believe?"

1st. What we believe respecting our faith;

2nd. What we believe respecting our knowledge;

3rd. What we believe based upon our opinions.

The last point made a deep impression upon our minds. The speaker (Bro. Huggins) pointed out that everybody, including himself, had opinions. After pointing out how our own opinions may lead us astray regarding what to believe in the things concerning the Kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ (Acts 8:12), he demonstrated that the only infallible and safe foundation upon which to base our belief was upon the sure word of God. "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8:20).

On my way home I thought of Acts 17:11: "These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so." This afternoon my mind, being in a meditative mood, I am thinking how much the conclusions of thoughtful and scientific minds agree exactly with the teachings of the scriptures, respecting the constitution and abode of man.

First, let us consider the scripture statements. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground" (Gen. 2:7). "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:19). "And Abraham answered and said, Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the Lord, which am but dust and ashes" (Gen. 18:27). "Whose foundation is in the dust" (Job 4:19). "All go unto one place; all are of the dust and all turn to dust again" (Eccl. 3:20). "All flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto dust" (Job 34:15). "I am formed out of clay" (Job 33:6).

"For he knoweth our frame, he remembereth that we are dust" (Psa. 103:14). "All flesh is grass . . . surely the people is grass" (Isa. 11:6, 8). "For all flesh is as grass—as a flower of the field: so he flourisheth—he shall pass away" (1 Pet. 1:25; Psa. 103:15; James 1:10; Psa. 78:39; Dan. 4:35; Isa. 40:15, 17, 22; 45:9). "The first man is of the earth, earthy" (1 Cor. 15:47).

Neither the Bible or science offers any hope to man of a home anywhere in the universe—except upon this earth. If men go to heaven when they die, or if when Christ comes the kingdom will be established anywhere other than upon this earth, will some one please direct our attention to the scripture that declares such to be the case?

Mr. Russell and his followers believe, according to their opinion, that they will live upon another planet; all the various churches believe and teach the same. But what sayeth the scriptures? The above testimony cited is as clear as the noonday. Now, listen to what the most enlightened men in the scientific world have discovered and established as facts, beyond any question and agrees exactly with what all the prophets and apostles taught, believed and wrote. "For whatsoever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning, that we, through patience and comfort of the scriptures, might have hope" (Rom. 15:4).

Now for the new science. Every man is a world in himself. Man is the world in miniature. All things that belong to the world and the universe belong in some way to him. Hence, we say: "Man is a Microcosin in whom the elements are wonderfully blended."

The name that was first applied, so far as we know, to man indicate his earth and universe relationship. Man's name was, first of all, Adam. The Hebrew word Adama means the earth. Man was called Adam because he sprang from the earth. The Latin word for our word man is "home," from humas, that is, the ground. Man is a humas, springing from the ground. In the Greek language the word that stands for our word "man" is anthropos, meaning one who looks upwards. In these three words, when blended, we find our best conception of man. Man is a creature of the earth, with an upward, a universe look. Man is a world within himself, for himself and by himself.

There is no other creation like man on the face of the globe. From a physical standpoint of view he may resemble some of the lower order of animals, but in the wonderful adaptation of each part to its use there is a distance as far as the east from the west between the lowest man and the highest animal.

Our geographies teach us that one-fourth of the earth's surface consists of solids; the other three-fourths are liquid. Man, too, is one-fourth matter, or solid, and three-fourths water, or liquid. Physical geography teaches that the same ration that liquids and solids bear one to the other throughout the earth, the same ratio is maintained in man. Whatever part of man is teeth, that part of the earth is mineral, threads of gold, veins of silver and strata of coal. Whatever part is skin and flesh, that part is exactly the same ration in the earth as is soil. Whatever part is hair in man, exactly that part of the globe is vegetable, trees, and grass. Whatever proportion in man is bone, that proportion in the earth is rock. Whatever part in man is vein and artery, that is the exact ratio in the earth that is water curren.

Finally, whatever proportion in man is nerve, the same prorortion exists in the earth as electrical force. Hence it comes that man is a microcosin, a little globe, a little world, a universe in miniature. Is it any wonder, then, that men love the earth from which they have sprung? "As iron sharpeneth iron, and a man's face answereth to that of the friend" (Prov. 27:17, 19), so the forces that are in man, answer to the forces of earth, making each other glad.

Slowly through the long centuries of man's existence on the earth there has come to him a recognition of the truth that between him and the earth there should be wonderful harmony, perfect peace and complete mastery. How exactly this agrees with Gen. 1:26-28; Psa. 8:4-9; Heb. 2:5-12). Man, the lord of creation, receives the order to subdue the forces of the earth, compelling them to his service, whenever he has sought to obey that command, he has found the earth ready for him, obedient to his voice. The earth was made for man, not man for the earth. From the earth man is to receive the medicines that upbuild and strengthen his body when he is ill. From the earth man extracts the coal that warms him when he is cold. From the earth and the sky round about, man takes his currents that send his messages of love and commerce the world around. From the earth man takes that which makes the earth bloom and blossom as the rose.

Living close to the earth, studying it, mastering its secrets, man becomes the master, the conquerer of the earth. Every secret that the earth has is already locked up in the brain and body of man. When earth, brain and body of man work together in harmony and peace, there is sure to be new revelations given to all creation. It is man who has taken the gold, silver, copper, iron and coal of the hills, and using them, has discovered the way to chart the heavens, map the seas and gird the continents with the electric spark. When man turns from speculative philosophy to practical philosophy; when he speaks to the earth and lets it teach him, then to him Mother Nature reveals her secrets. Wonderful things man has accomplinshed when he has bent low to earth, when the spirit of the earth has answered his spirit. More wonderful things will he accomplish as he lingers near, catching the voice and walking in the way of her, whose child he is.

Man is miniature cosmos; all the universe is in man. That means that man is unlimited in his possibilities, boundless in his limitations, and never ending in his accomplishments. What man has achieved in the past is only a drop in the bucket to what he may achieve, if he keeps close to earth, who is his mother, his teacher and his guide. How wonderfully science unconsciously anticipates the glorious reign of Christ and the glorious home and abode of his saints! Abraham, heir of the world (Rom. 4:13). The righteous shall be recompensed in the earth (Prov. 11:31). For the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it, but the wicked shall be cut off from the earth (Prov 2:21, 22). Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth (Matt. 5:5). For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth, and dwell therein forever (Psa. 3:22, 29; 9:11). And hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth (Rev. 5:10).

"I will worship towards thy holy temple, and praise thy name for thy loving kindness, and for thy truth; for thou has magnified thy word above all thy name" (Psa. 138:2).

GEORGE B. ALLDRIDGE.

CONDEMNED

"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that beleiveth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be condemned" (Mark 16:16).

Christ here gives a command to his disciples, and also promises two different rewards. To the one that hears the gospel, believes it and is baptized, such shall be saved: but the one that hears the gospel and will not believe it shall be condemned, or pronounced guilty, sentenced to punishment, pronounced unfit for the kingdom of God, censured, blamed, judged to be wrong. God did not send his Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved. He that believeth on Christ is not condemned, but he that believeth not is condemned already (John 3:18). He that believth shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life (John 5:24). There is no condemnation to them who are in Christ (Rom. 8:1). There is a condemnation to those who partake of the sacrament with unbelievers, those who preach another gospel from what Paul preached (1 Cor. 11:32-34). God condemned the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah with an overthrow, making them an example unto those that after should live ungodly, and delivered Lot, the only obedient one in those cities. Why were they condemned? Because of unbelief. Do you think they did not believe anything? Certainly they did: they were very wicked, did not believe in God after they had repeatedly been warned to forsake their wicked ways and serve the living God. Hence their doom is an example to all who do not worship the living God and do not believe his gospel. The Lord saved the people out of the land of Egypt, and afterward destroyed them that believed not (Numbers 14:26-32; Jude 4:7). He that condemneth the just is an abomination to the Lord (Prov. 17:15). Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea, rather that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us (Rom. 8:34). Who so despiseth the word shall be destroyed (Prov. 13:13)

It is very evident that those who hear the gospel must believe it in order to be saved, and everyone who hears the gospel and rejects it will be condemned, shall not see life, have no place in God's kingdom. It is a promise and command from Christ when one hears the gospel to believe it "and be saved;" reject it and "be condemned." But those who believe some man-made gospel and are baptized are not saved, nor are they condemned; they do not belong to either class. If they have ever heard the true gospel, and then join some other gospel, they come under condemnation for rejecting the true for the false. They are condemned for not believing the true gospel when they hear it. The threat of being condemned for rejecting is just as sure as the promise to be saved for believing the gospel. He that hears a false gospel and does not believe it is not condemned, neither is one that believes it, and is baptized, saved.

Why will not people believe God's word, "the gospel?" Satan taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts (Mark 4:15, 24). Their hearts are hardened; he that hardeneth his heart shall fall into mischief (Prov. 28:14). He that, being often reproved and hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy (Prov. 29:1). All that hear the true gospel are reproved. Christ's own disciples hardened their hearts at times (Mark 6:52; 8:17;16, 14). We are again in a day of contention, and listen to the doom that God promised the Israelites for hardening their hearts for forty long years. He said: "It is a people that do err in their heart, unto whom I swore in my wrath that they should not enter into my rest" (Ps. 95:8-11). Paul, in writing to the Hebrews, warned them to take heed lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God. For as the Jews could not enter into God's rest because of unbelief, neither can we. So we say again, if anyone hears the true gospel and believes it he can enter into God's rest, while the one who harders his heart and will not believe the gospel when he hears it is condemned.

THE YOUNG

To accustom the young to be and to do is even more important than to induce them to learn and to know. What they think out with their own thoughts and work out with their own hands is worth far more to them than any amount of passive reception of other men's thoughts or doings, even through the very best books or the very best teachers. Let the child feel not merely that he is preparing for something in the future, but that he is also living a true and real life in the present, taking his own share of work and responsibility, strengthening his powers by continual action, and building up his character by continual well-doing.

The body fashions itself more or less after the intents of the mind. Just as a man's character gradually stamps itself upon his face, so, literally, does his habitual conduct impress itself upon each organ and tissue of his body. In order to perfect health, then, it is clear that we must begin in the region of the intellect.

The battle of life has to be fought, and is unavoidable; but the weapons it has to be fought with, the spirit which is to guide the combatants the object to be fought for, and the kind of victory to be won—these are all, to a large extent, within the discretion of every individual soldier.

The reformer of practical abuses first begins to be wise when he allows for the obstinate vitality of human error and human folly, and is willing to believe that those who cannot see in precisely the same way that he does are not themselves necessarily bad men.

EDITORIAL

Some friends are like pins: they have their good points, but they will stick you if they get a chance.

"Abraham believed God, and it was counted to him for righteousness. Now to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt" (Rom. 4:3, 4). Splendid, Paul: for as soon as faith begins to "reckon," God begins to "count."

Sister Rose Storjohn writes: "I am going to try and get some subscribers for The Restitution; I am positive I shall be able to do so." Quite a nice ring in these statements. If we only had a few more believers like Sister Storjohn. Lord, increase their number!

Sister Esther Richardson wishes us to say that the brethren in Los Angeles, Cal., meet on Wednesday evening of each week at the home of Sister Howard, 1037 Heliotrope Drive, for Bible study. "We also meet," she adds, "the first and third Sundays of each month, at 10:30 a. m. in Taft Hall, 730 South Grand Avenue. Brother Joe Tucker speaks for us, when he is here. He preaches the truth, plain and straight."

Announcement of the death of Brother Peter Henry Bouk, of Fonthill, Ont., Canada, has been received. He was almost in the ninety-second year of life. We tender Brother Railton and all the bereaved brethren and sisters in Fonthill, our sympathies and prayers in the great loss they have sustained by the death of "Father" Bouk.

THE FORGIVENESS OF SINS

Scripture statements that are familiar to the reader are often passed by without being fully comprehended or appreciated. In illustration of this remark see how thoughtlessly people will quote this text about the forgiveness of sins: "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us" (Psa. 103:12). Simple words, familiar, commonplace, yet the text has a wonderful significance. If the passage read, "As far as the north is from the south," the distance indicated would be both definite and circumscribed; for the North Pole has been discovered, and very likely the South Pole will soon be found. "As far as the north is from the south" would only be the distance between the North and South Poles. But the text says, "As far as the east is from the west." The earth is round; we can go from the east to the west, and go west forever, and still go west. There is limitless space between the east and west, and no "poles" between them. What can be farther apart than the east and the west? Thank God for this wonderful text.

JUDAH HELPLESS WITHOUT GOD

Brother Huggins: How do you explain this statement to make it harmonize with God's power: "But could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley, because they had chariots of iron" (Judges 1:19).

GEO. MITCHELL.

Editor's Reply

Judah slew the Canaanites of Zephath (Judges 1:17), "took Gaza" (ver. 18), and "drove out the inhabitants of the mountains," because the "Lord was with" him (ver. 19). All things are possible with God (Matt. 19:26), because his power is infinite. When God is "for us, who can be against us" (to any harmful purpose) (Rom 8:31)? As long, then, as "God was with Judah" he was victorious against all foes (Rom. 8:35, 39) But when Judah became intimidated at the iron chariots of the valley, the Lord was not with Judah any longer (1 Chron. 28:9); and left to himself Judah "could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley." The Hebrew text literally translated stands: "And was Jehovah with Judah, and he took possession of the mountains; but not to be expelled (were) the inhabitants of the valley, for chariots of iron (were) to them." Even in the English text it is not said that God could not drive them out. "Judah" in both texts is the nearest antecedent, not "the Lord." The lesson here taught and enforced is that even Judah, the best warrior of all the tribes of Israel (Judges 1:1, 2), the "goodly horse" of Yahweh Tz'vaoth (Zech. 10:3) is helpless and sure to stumble unless ridden and directed by the Lord.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brother Huggins: Will you please give us some advice through The Restitution? We have in our midst a sister, highly esteemed by all, sound in the faith; but she has lately been playing in an orchestra for dances. When we spoke to her about it she gave as her reason this: "I have a family of little ones. My husband is out of work most of the time." (It is hard to find work here in winter time.) She also said that she had always understood that where there was nothing definite to go by in the Bible that each one should decide such things for oneself. "I have been taught," she says, "that dancing in moderation was like all other pleasures, lawful if practiced moderately and sanely." The sister does not dance herself, or care to, but is hired helper in the orchestra. When her little ones are in need of shoes, etc., to keep them warm, she does not see any wrong in what she is doing.

After discussing the matter, and finding her very set, and seemingly honest in her convictions, we decided that we would write you about the case. Can we fellowship in the breaking of bread with this sister, if she refuses to give up her connections with, or stop playing at, dances? Several are interested in this case, and it will be agreeable with the one accused, as well as others, to have some public or private advice on this question.

A SISTER.

(Above letter was received at Roll, Ind., where we are in the midst of a series of meetings. We have neither the time nor the facility for writing now; but we shall try and answer "A Sister's" question the first opportunity which presents itself. In the meantime, it would be interesting, and no doubt helpful to the Church disturbed about dancing, to which "A Sister" belongs, if correspondents would give their "advice" in the matter through The Restitution. Place will be given to those who are for the dance, as well as to those who are against it. Let those who write on either side of the question be short, sincere, firm, and kind in what they write; let us remember that concepts, opinions, "think sos," "guess sos," what were taught, etc., are not divine laws. "Advice" expresses only what the one advising thinks; and what he thinks is worth no more than what somebody else thinks. Let us not get lost in a maze of opinion in the discussion of this problem. If we did but realize the great difficulty of so appreciating the peculiar position, character, and feelings of another as to find out what was really the best thing for him to do, we should be much more reluctant to give advice than we now are. Instead of pouring it out volubly upon those who do not want it and will not follow it, we should at least wait until it is sought, and then only give modestly and kindly the best results of our most careful thought and disinterested sympathy. When the heart and the mind are thus brought into full play upon this important duty, advice will be rarer; but it will be far better worth having, more eagerly sought, and more frequently followed. But, at the best, advice is not inspired; it is not divine law. "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God" (1 Pet. 4:11).—Editor.)

PATIENTLY WAIT

How gladly would I turn from the worldly pleasures and ambitions to welcome the Lord. None but he who reads the heart as an open book may know how eagerly I scan the daily news for evidence that the day is in sight. And earnestly do I long for audience with some learned man of God who is able to search out some prophetic word hitherto unseen which may reveal the secret. I am fully persuaded that thousands of God's chosen people share with me tonight these impatient longings. I fear some of us have allowed our zeal to outstrip our wisdom. We have drawn up in our mind a line of events by which it appears to us God will settle this terrible controversy of the nations and usher in the glorious age to come. But month after month rolls around, and events which we confidently expected, have not occurred. The allied fleet did not smash its way to the gates of Constantinople and break them down. Instead of blood-stained Germany and the unspeakable Turk being muzzled or exterminated they are extending their borders and drink the blood of martyred Christians as never before in their bloody history. God does not yet strengthen the arms of the allies to crush them, as we in our impatience think he should. This should not, dear waiting, weary ones, shake our faith in God; but rather serve to remind us that "He works in a mysterious way his wonders to perform." His hand is at the helm, and in his own time and way will he bring about the consummation of all of his promises and our earnest desires. This we may know, dear ones, for a certainty. As we seek our rest each night, it matters not how dark the outlook, we are surely one day nearer the desire of our heart. Let this thought rest and comfort us.

TO THE ISOLATED ONES

"Best New Year wishes to all." We have just finished a peaceful year, and we really ought to feel very grateful to God for his protective care over us. We can not see the future of the year we are just beginning; but let us ask God, in our daily prayers, that with the aid of him this nation may remain neutral.

I wish to thank the brethren and sisters that have responded to the Isolated Fund, for their liberal aid toward this noble work. I hope we will try to make this year a very successful year, doing much for our blessed Redeemer, who will be at our side in whatever may befall us. For he says: "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world.

This promise ought to be a great consolation in every trouble.

Shall we be found at our Master's business when he comes? Let us all work now, for this is the acceptable time. We know not what may befall us on the morrow.

We are all able to do something, even if it be but a kind word. The harvests of the Lord are large; workers are few. The work for the isolated is where most of us can lend a helping hand. We have so far prospered nicely, having received the aid of quite a number of faithful brethren.

Remember, dear readers, this is no small task, and without the aid of many, we shall be unable to keep this urgent work on the move. But let us hope it may not prove a failure for the lack of earnest workers. Let all strive to make it one of the largest works among us.

There are many who are really in need of the true bread of life and that would cheerfully accept it with a thankful heart if they had any possible chance to receive it. It is within our power to provide this chance by all working together and doing our part. We will soon be able to send our evangelists wherever needed, to spread the "Glad Tiding" and satisfy many a lonely heart that is starving for the lack of spiritual food.

You will all remember that Sister Carrie Free, of Blair, Neb., will meet all calls and give you her best attention. Send your pledges to me (as I am secretary of this work). I will book your names and addresses and receipt you for whatever sent, and then turn the amount over to the treasurer and there it will be ready for its intended use, and drawn out as needed.

God has precious promises for all those that work for him. We read the following promise in Matt. 25:21: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things: I will makes thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." There are many such promises and rewards for all those that become his servants (Rom. 6:22; Rom. 2:10; Rev. 22:12). Let us all engage in loving service for the welfare and happiness of others by doing our part. That is all God expects of us. Give as God has prospered you.

Phoenix, Nebraska.

EVANGELISTIC NOTICE

Dear Brethren: I am thinking of making a trip through Oklahoma and Kansas next summer for health; and if any brethren in these states want me to stop and preach for them, please write me at once, so I can make arrangements to do so.

THE CLERGY AND INFANTS

Why do the clergy make so much ado about infants? I will tell you. They know well the sympathy existing between mothers and infants; to persuade the ladies that their infants were liable to the pains of hell for ever was a sure way to get them to put their offspring under priestly tutelage; they sprinkle them as a sign that they are regenerated, and therefore elect; this satisfies the mother, and she blesses the holy man. Having thus secured the ladies, by them they control the men; next comes the purse, and then the sword, by which they rule the world. This order of things, however, is now considerably broken up; never, we trust, to be re-established.—Sel.

Timidity creates cowards and never wins success. It is a strong and abiding faith in one's own ability to perform which overcomes difficulties that others think cannot be surmounted.

THE TIME IS SHORT

"He Which Testifieth These Things Saith: Yea: I Come Quickly" (Rev. 22:20).

(Read Psa. 110 and Rev. 22).

Let me, my brethren, repeat a question which I put to you last year ,arising out of the last chapters of Daniel. After much intense searching of the Scriptures, to discover all that had been written about the restoration of Jerusalem, Daniel had prophesied more definitely concerning this thing; and in his last chapter, after the closing message, the Lord says: "But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end: many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased." The increase of the knowledge and understanding of prophecy is one of the most solemn signs of the times. At the time of the end, "knowledge shall be increased." Further at verse 8, the prophet expresses a desire for more exact information: "And I heard, but understood not: then said I, O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? And he said, Go thy way, Daniel; for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried." Jesus Christ shall be revealed to them as sanctification and purification at the time of the end; they will be tried as they never have been before in their Christian life; but the hotter the furnace, the shorter must be the time of trial. Then we read: "The wise shall understand." Again (verse 13): "Go thy way till the end be;" these things are not for thee personally; in answer to thy prayer they are given; to the Jews for their times, and to the Church the people of God, for the last days (compare 1 Peter 1:12).

Between the prophecies of Daniel and the book of Revelation, given by the Lord God to his Son for the Church, lie six hundred years. Daniel had been told: "It is not for thee; it is for the time of the end." Now, after six hundred years had elapsed, John received at Patmos the glorious vision concerning the present time, and he was directed quite contrary to Daniel. To Daniel it was said: 'Seal it; it is for the time of the end;" and to John it was said: "Seal not . . . for the time is at hand" (Rev. 22:10). Why? For the very reason for which the things in the book of Daniel must be sealed—they were for the time of the end. "The Lord, the God of the spirits of the prophets, sent his angel to show unto his servants the things which must shortly come to pass. And, behold, I come quickly . . . the time is at hand" (Rev 22:6-10, R. V.). Then in verse 17: "And the Spirit and the Bride say, Come;" and verse 20: "Yea, I come quickly." All through this chapter, we see "the time is at hand."

And now comes my question: How is it that eighteen hundred years have passed since the Lord said: "The time is at hand, seal not," when only six hundred years after the Lord had said to Daniel, "Seal up the saying, the time is not yet," he opened the Revelation to John? Lay this question to heart.

How many conversions take place out of due time! How few follow the Lord in the vigor of youth? How many give him only a remnant of old age? The first call of the Holy Spirit which sounds in the heart is given at the very hour in which the Lord God is willing and ready to save the soul, and to make the sinner one of his sons. You heard, but you were callous to what he said: you knew it was his call. How is it you did not follow him at once? How few there are who respond at once, like the converted thief! I don't think he was saved in the eleventh hour; I think it was the first hour in which he met with his Lord; he heard and saw him, he was conquered by the face and the Divine character of the crucified One, and he confessed him with his mouth. How many are only converted at the eleventh hour who, perhaps, were called in the first hour of the morning, to give the first fruits of their youth, their life, to the Lord! If conversions can be thus delayed, and those called inthe first hour of the morning can hold back till the evening hours of their declining days—if individuals can thus go on sinning against God, and frustrating him in the work he wants to do in and for them—cannot the Church, which is composed of individuals, possibly delay God's work by failing to understand his meaning and purposes?

It always goes to the deepest depths of my heart when I hear old Mr. Aitken, of Pendeen, though I never saw him. He was like Paul, who in his latter life saw that he was unable to bring the church up to his own level. He saw the apostacy developing; the lines o fhis horizon changed but not his Savior; no, he can not change; and at last he poured out his life as a "drink offering" (Phil 2:17, marg.). How many men of God, like Paul in days of old, and Mr. Aitken and others in recent times, have given their lives to revive and raise the church, and to bring it to a state of preparedness for the coming of Christ! They could not succeed, and at least, by the grace of God, they were able to give back into his hands the work which could not be fulfilled in their time.

How different is the present time! Shall our Lord be obliged longer to delay because of the carelessness of the church? The wicked have become more wicked, and the devil is preparing for the last outbreak; all approabches a crisis. Now the time is more manifestly "at hand," and we see and hear and read in newspapers the things which are going on; we see "the time is at hand." Shall the church then be asleep? Brethren, the Bride can not sleep! The church may sleep, the church may fail, but the Bride can sleep only as in the Song of Songs: "I sleep, but my heart waketh" (v. 2); waketh for the first call o fthe bridegroom-waketh for the coming of the Lord. Have you ever been obliged to exhort a bride to think of her bridegroom? She is no true bride who is able to forget her bridegroom. Poor husband who should have for his companion one who cares half for him and half for other things; who can not turn her back on her father's house and the scenes of her childhood; whose highest delight is not to follow her bridegroom!

Have you noticed that the Apostle exhorts the churches, and Jesus Christ, even from heaven, exhorts the backsliding, shortcoming churches who have lost their first love; but when the spirit of God reveals the Bible there is no exhortation to her? Both he and she say, "Come." She can not but watch; she needs no special exhortation to do so; she can not but purify herself (1 John 3:15).

From the moment she understood her calling to become the companion of the king it became impossible for her to forget it; she can not help making herself ready and preparing for her new and indescribable position; she could not do otherwise!

We read: "So shall the King greatly desire thy beauty." When the Bride is awake and ready the King will receive her. Not a single member of the Bride would ever be awake and waiting were it not the echo of the Bridegroom's desires; he longs to have his companionwith him. All the prayers of the saints for the church can find no answer, the confusion on the earth remains radically unchanged, all the sighing and groaning of the creation can have no cesastion, all is in suspense so long as the Bride is not ready to meet the Bridegroom. But when he finds her ready to have all to follow him to his house, and to abide with him, then he will take her, and she will reign with him. Then his enemies will be put under his feet, and he will reign from age to age. The closing of the "times of the Gentiles" and the readiness of the Bride are simultaneous.

O daughter, hearken! Do you answer: "I have so much to do; so much precious Christian work?" O daughter, hearken, and incline thine ear. The creation groans, waiting not for the conversion of the heathen, but for the manifestation of the sons of God, and the sons of God will not be manifested until he is manifested when he, with his Bride, returns after he has first taken her to himself without dying (Rom. 8:19; 1 John 3:2).

Then he will appear in glory, and all the world shall see him. He desires thy beauty, and he says, "I come quickly." The Bride says, "Come!" The widow, of Luke 18, persecuted by the adversary, cries for vengeance; but the Bride knows nothing of vengeance, she only knows the necessity of being ready for him. And she knows that all her sufferings, as all that the Apostle Paul enumerates in the last part of Rom. 8, work together for good, to bring his elect into conformity to the image of the Lamb of God, to his character of meekness and humility and love. All that is going on in every member of the Bride is ordered by her Lord to prepare her really, and to prepare her now for his coming, to array her with his own adorning, and stamp his own character upon her. Thus her wedding garment will be prepared even through persecution from her own brethren.

He longs to see us leave our old fatherland, our old nature, our personal interests, which often we have brought even into the work of God, mixing up our own interests with Christ's. He longs to get each member of the Bride, and the Bride as a whole, away from the old home. There are Christians among us in this present world who have not only begun, but who go on to manifest increasingly the Bride spirit, who seek Christ only.

In the sixth mesage to the seven churches, the mesasge of Christ to Philadelphia, we read the very same words that we have in the last chapter of the Bible, "I come quickly," and in the seventh message we read: "I stand at the door and knock." Is he really standing at the door and knocking? Then it belongs to us to prepare the room, to finish the last bit of preparation in our person, put the finishing touch to our attire, to receive such a Guest as he who is knocking at the door. And how the work of a thousand years may be compressed into one year, even into one hour! What we do now so slowly and unsatisfactorily, though by the grace of God with such wonderful results, is yet as nothing in comparison with what will be done the moment the Bride has joined the Bridegroom, when a nation shall be born in a day!

ONLY TWO SIDES

An Exhortation for the Young, by Auntie Wince

Only two sides, little ones, and all the time, every day, the battle lines are forming, drilling, marching, getting ready, ready for the mighty struggle with each other. You can not stand still and look on. In this war there is no neutral side, for Jesus says, "He that is not for me is against me."

You may think you are not very bad, that you do not do many wrong things, and that because of this God will look on you as a soldier and will save you; but God asks more than this. He wants positive boys and girls: boys and girls who will take the name and march under the banner of his Son, who said, "He that is not for me is against me."

Read those words over and over again. What is it to be "for" Jesus? Is it not to give yourself wholly to him? To love him as you love no one else, to look after his interests when earning and spending your money, when thinking, when studying, when writing, when in conversation, and in all the acts and circumstances of life?

To be "for" Jesus is to be in the church as an enlisted soldier, using the weapons that God gives to each consecrated one, and wearing the armor with which he clothes them. Your sword will be the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God; your helmet will be the hope of salvation; your breastplate, righteousness; your girdle, truth; your shoes, the gospel of peace. It is a beautiful armor, and every child of you ought to be glad and proud to wear it, and be on the side that is sure of victory at the last. In the church you are "for" Jesus, out of it you are "against" him; against him, because you are not influencing others to engage in his service against sin.

People may tell you that you are too young to understand the gospel and be baptized, but that is a mistake. You certainly can understand that Jesus is coming again, and that he is to be King over all the earth, and that in that beautiful new world there is to be no sin, nor curse. And not a child is there among you but who can fight against sin, against lying, cheating, swearing, drinking, playing cards, personal impurity, disobedience to parents, breaking of one's word, or taking that which belongs to another.

Not a child is there but can teach by example that love is better than hate, that purity is more glorious than vice. Decide now! Join God's army today! A little while longer and it will be too late.

A Mr. John B. Galion, of Arapaho, Oklahoma, dreamed lately that he saw a little army, drilling "preparatory to a mighty struggle." "It was surprisingly small contrasted with the multitude about it," and yet it "seemed confident of victory." At last the command to advance was given, and the little company moved on.

Mr. Gallion, in his dream, was "hoping to remain neutral, and turned to look cautiously about him, when as if by magic the scene changed. The careless multitude that seemed held in check when the little company were drilling were now controlled by a war spirit unsurpassed in history. The impression was that those who had not willingly joined the little company must now unite with the opposing forces."

Mr. Gallion in his dream looked about him for some way of escape, but no sooner had he turned his steps to the country for security than he perceived that men in authority in all directions were drafting everyone into service. It then came to him with startling force that all must decide for one side or the other, as there is no neutral ground. He turned quickly to throw in his lot with the little company, no matter what the consequences might be, when lo, it was gone! It was an awful moment," and "his feelings were indescribable. He had waited too long: the opposing forces were ardent and unrelenting, and he saw that he must act." Then he "awoke, weak with despair."

Do you want Mr. Gallion's dream to become a reality to you? Do you want to wait till the Lord comes and snatches the little company away, and you can not join? One side or the other you must take. Choose the good part now.

UNFORTUNATE LIVES

An unfortunate life is one of the leading causes of both physical and moral disease. One might write an entire volume upon this subject. Numerous examples of the effects of an unhappy life may be observed every day. Every child knows of them. An unhappy life is like dust in the machinery of a clock. It makes it go badly—even prevents it from going at all. But when the dust has been removed it goes once more as well as ever. When we are fortunate and happy we are sound as a fish in the water. An unhappy unfortunate life prevents those changes from going on in the system which health requires—prevents good digestion, good circulation, and a comfortable action of the nervous system. If we wish to be healthy we should endeavor to make our lives successful and happy.

If diamonds were always under our feet we should soon cease picking them up, and if the prizes of life were to be had for the asking, the time would soon come when they would be no longer asked for.

The cheerfulness, the happy hopeful character which every woman displays at the beginning of marriage, is not so easily lost as a fortune; there is but a small share required.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that can not fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with questions more important to man than others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear brethren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. Single copy, 10 cents; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

HAVE YOU HEARD ABOUT THE NEW HYMN AND SONG BOOK?

A new Hymn and Song Book is now in the hands of the publishers. This book has been compiled and edited by Bro. Almus Adams and a committee selected by the Nebraska State Conference. We feel safe in saying it is absolutely free from doctrinal error, and yet has retained all the dear old favorite hymns we love—the good ones of half a dozen publications.

Write for particulars.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:25, 26); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-54), the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16, Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1, 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). CARRY A BROTHER

The streets were muddy, the crossing was wide,
The water rushed past on either side;
The wind whistled past with a terrible groan,
As I wearily wended my way alone.

As I crossed the street, I chanced to pass
A little boy, in the arms of a wee struggling lass;
"Isn't he heavy, my dear little mother?"
"Oh, no," she replied, "he's my baby brother!"

Your burden may be heavy, your journey may be long,
The winds of adversity, bitter and strong;
But our way will seem bright if we love one another,
Our burden will feel light, if we carry a brother."

Selected by Brother GEORGE B. ALLDRIDGE.

HOW "TOMMY" WAS CONVERTED

(Concluded)

"Well, mother, when father said I was lost what did you say to him?"

She replied, "I told him I thought you could live in one denomination and be a Christian as well as in another."

Breakfast being now ready and the family seated at the table, father, as was his custom, offered thanks, and as we were eating, I said, "Father, at ten o'clock we are going to meet at the church house to hear a short talk, and then we are going to Old Man's Creek, where I am to be baptized; will you 'hitch up' and take the family?"

He answered me in the affirmative, and so he and the family saw me baptized. It was one of those cold January days and before I could get to the place where I was to make the change of clothes my pants were frozen stiff.

"Took cold?" you say. "No, not I."

I was a brother to Jesus of Nazareth, the Son of God. How do I know? Because I hold the statement of Jesus to that effect. It's written in my own tongue. He says, "he that doeth the will of my Father is my brother." Reader, can you say you have done the will of the Father in heaven? If so, you are a child of God—a brother or sister of the one who died for you.

Well, we returned home in safety and I began to read the Word of God. I had some very good teachers in the congregation at Frank Pierce, among them O. S. Andrews, one of the deacons. He gave me much valuable aid in scripture study; also Meeker Beeny, another deacon who was very kind to me, rendered much assistance both of a temporal nature as well as spiritual, and others whom I might name. I still remained with our family until some time in March (if memory serves me well), and then, as Bro. Andrews was a carpenter and had a small farm, he and I made a bargain that I would work his ground and for my part I was to get one-third of all I "raised."

Some of my readers may now wonder what kind of a time I had while at home, and "among the M. E's." Well, I must say that was one of the most interesting times of my life. I know it will make interesting reading for many of my younger brethren and I now venture to write it. Another reason is that the course pursued in leading me out of religious confusion may also act as an incentive for some others, and thus get them to accept the light, without any human names attached, and honor Christ in all things.

My father was a shoemaker "by trade," and one cold day while he was at work on the bench I, through my teachers, prepared some puzzling questions for him to solve. This day seemed to be most opportune. I said, "Father, I would like to read some statements to you and ask you some questions."

He replied, "Read on, I can work while you read." So I stepped to a shelf on the wall, and there lay the New Testament in small binding and the M. E. discipline—about the same size. The books from outside appearance look so much alike you could hardly tell them apart except upon close investigation. I took my chair, drew it up close to the bench and began by reading the ninth article of the M. E. Discipline: "Wherefore we are justified by faith only, which is a most wholesome doctrine and very full of comfort."

I said, "Father, do you believe that statement?"

He replied, "I believe that with all my heart, sir"—placing great stress on the last two words.

I then said, "I have one more to read."

He said, "Read on," adding "You can't hurt me."

I then read James 2:24, which says: "Ye see how that by works a man is justified and not by faith only."

"Here are two statements," said I, on the subject of justification by faith—one is written by what a large number of people call "great and good men," and their statement is plain that we are justified by "faith only." The other statement comes to us by inspiration and thus is the written testimony of the Holy Spirit." I then said, "You now see these two authorities do not agree. Now, father, which one do you believe?"

He looked up. I saw the flash in his face—the Sword of the Spirit had completely "cut off his ear," as did the sword of Peter at the time the rabble approached the Savior on that eventful eve of betrayal. I sat quietly by, although thoughts ran quick and fast in my mind. But I was wanting an answer. I got one—but not the one I was after. It came abruptly. The answer to that most important question which determines where we shall draw the line between inspired and uninspired teaching came in these words:

"Tommy, I told you that you were lost, and I will not argue with you!"

Poor man! "his ear was cut off"—cut off and—so was I. I immediately arose, for I could see the dignity of an Englishman was shaken, and without comment I left the books on the shelf near by, and I left the room determined to let the truth "soak in."

About one month later I began with Bro. Andrews preparing for the summer's work, as he and I had agreed to work together, only he was to work at his trade and I was to till his ground. The first of every week, as was the custom of the disciples in the days of the apostles, we met during my stay on the farm at Frank Pierce for worship. Each Lord's day found us there with our Bible's, our contributions, and our song service; and in prayers and thanksgiving we tarried one for another. Sometimes a sermon, more times a "social" meeting. Now the social work was a kind of developing exercise for the young brethren who were in spirit interested in not only meditating but ready to try at least to communicate such thoughts to others, and was really where some of us learned to wear off our natural timidity. It was the place, and the best place I ever knew, to learn how to preach under the watchful care of the overseers of the church.

While on a visit in Ohio I learned through one of my brothers that J. K. Cornell was going to assist the brethren at Frank Pierce in a series of meetings, and I was anxious for my father to go and hear him. So I wrote several letters to the family and when the meeting began father attended. He heard, believed and obeyed the truth, and when we returned in the following May he met us at the door, and after the usual hand-shaking, I said, "Father, I understand that you, too, are 'lost.'"

Sitting down, while from his eyes there started the tears of joy mingled with the penitential, he exclaimed, "Tommy, I don't see how anyone could be so full of prejudice as I was."

Note—Human nature is a strange something under the influence of sin, susceptible of many shades of change, so much so that the apostle once said, "It is not subject to the law of God, so then they that are in the flesh cannot please God." It will be well for the reader to consider these few thoughts: Man in the fall lost original righteousness and thus union with God. His understanding became dark, both in matters of business and religion; his judgment unsafe and his reason perverted. While in this condition his conscience is more or less evil, and his will is to have his own way. Now the reason for this condition of mind can only be explained in this way: When man disobeyed God the Holy Spirit was dethroned. This position, which we believe is correct, shows the first man was to some extent an inspired being, but when the subtle influence of the serpent had its deadly effect man became "lost" to that which is absolutely right, so that an earth peopled with such a class of beings, such as ours is a multiplicity of varieties of religion, so that confusion beclouds the mind of all that are thus affected. The question will naturally arise among those who stop to think: If the spirit has lost its controlling power, by what power is man guided today? I answer, largely by his animal appetites and propensities. His reason and judgment are made subject to his wants, as carnality demands, and in religion he does not hesitate to demand what he wants. It may be the worship of some of the heavenly bodies for a god, or it may be a god of wood and stone. The preaching of the gospel to men and women in a fallen state, is the means God has chosen to show man he is wholly incapable of redeeming himself and that, if saved at all, he must make a full and complete surrender of himself (soul, body and spirit); and then the Holy Spirit will return, enlighten the understanding, control the judgment, influence the reason and purge the conscience from dead works to serve the living God, leading the will (ing) mind into paths of righteousness.

I have written this short explanation to show the reader how it is possible for a man "to be filled with so much prejudice." You certainly can now understand why we must become dead to all things that our carnal natures may suggest, religiously, and wholly depend upon the Holy Spirit to lead us in our full work and worship in the church of the living God.

During my stay in Ohio I read some good books and my Bible. I attended the Sunday School in the school house near by and always took my seat in "The Bible Class." The "Class Leader" was the teacher. One day, I remember, we were reading in regard to "the remission of sins," and the thought came to me: Now is my chance to stir up some interest and drive away some darkness." So I asked some questions that puzzled the would-be teacher. Then he wanted to know how I understood the reading. I said: "I understand this reading to be in harmony with some others I will read." So I turned to other scripture bearing upon the same subject and read, then waited to see what the class would say. A pause—the explanation was pointed—it really pierced a hole in the Wesleyan Methodist doctrine, through which you could read, "Weighed in the balance and found wanting"! The would-be teacher looked at me. He was a sandy-complexioned fellow, about my size. He lost his temper; carnal thoughts arose in his mind. He stepped one foot toward me, and in a bracing attitude he exclaimed, pointing his finger almost in my face, "Young man, I just think you are a little too big for your breeches!" This brought out quite a laugh from the class, and I could not tell whether it was on me or him. I felt some shame, I confess, to think one who laid claim to being a child of God would thus speak. But the carnal mind is not subject to the law of God, which calls for patience that she may have her perfect work. So when you stir up the carnal man, satan speaks.

I replied, "I now challenge you for a public discussion on the differences that exist between us on the subject of baptism." He accepted the challenge, agreeing to meet me the next Wednesday night, that being their regular appointment for prayer meeting.

Wednesday night soon came and some willing listeners were present. Mr. Schwartz (for this was the name of my opponent) was there ready, as he thought, to show us a thing or two, and before the house was called to order I had my man in the "sweat box." It happened on this wise: Being of an impetuous nature, and, I judge, somewhat fearful of results, yet a little over-anxious to know what scripture I was going to use, he ventured this statement.: "I am not going to discuss the differences between us on baptism tonight. We are making arrangements for our school-teacher, Mr. Alex. Jackson, to meet you later on."

I said, "Very well; I will meet your Mr. Jackson any time you wish."

Said he, "I would like for you to give me what you wish to affirm."

"I will affirm that the scriptures teach that baptism to a penitent believer is for the remission of sins."

Note—I have since learned that a proposition worded in that way does not clearly state what we teach; for if baptism to a penitent believer is for the remission of sins, what is the blood of Jesus Christ for? A proposition intended to set forth the design of baptism should read as follows: To the penitent believer the scriptures teach that in the act of baptism remission of sins takes place in the name of Jesus Christ. As previously stated, baptism is the liquid wave through which we pass into the promised blood of Christ. If we would take time and be more explicit our own converts would better understand where the covenant or contract is agreed to on the part of the penitent, and where the blood of Jesus Christ is sprinkled on the heart of the individual believer as we meet the Father to forgive, the Son to save and the Holy Spirit to guide and seal us unto the day of redemption. Glorious thought! How full of comfort to those who obey from the heart that form of doctrine delivered them! Having our fruits unto holiness, and in the end everlasting life, the gift of God, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

He then inquired what scriptures I would use in support of this proposition. There was lying on the stand a large family Bible. I opened it and read Acts 2:38.

He said, "Let me see that." I gave him the book. He read it to himself and then said, "You can't find another such a statement in all the book."

I replied, saying "God does not have to say a thing twice to make it so; but I will now show you another statement given by the Apostle Paul, concerning his own conversion, that is even stronger than the one already read."

By this time the people were on their feet and crowding close around the stand. Among them was an elderly man somewhat slow of speech. He was wearing a vest but no coat, and occupied a position near me and a little to the right. Standing with both thumbs thrust through the armholes of his vest, with one foot fore and the other aft, thus assuming a bracing position, stood "Uncle Jesse Moor," as the neighbors called him—a very good man. I opened the great book once more—that Book that shall judge us in the last days of God's grace. How solemn, yet how true. "The words I speak unto you, they shall judge you in that day," said Jesus. I read slowly and reverently: "And now why tarriest thou?" It was the question of a man "called and sent" of God to one who desired to learn how he might become a disciple of Christ. The preacher found that Saul of Tarsus was convicted of sin, that he now had faith in Jesus of Nazareth as the Son of God and that his repentance had brought him to the house of Judas where, before the occupants of that household—as the sequel shows—he made a full confession of his faith in Jesus of Nazareth. To this penitent believer the preacher said: "Brother Saul, why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord!"

He took the Bible, closed it, placed one hand upon it, the other over his heart and said: "I have lived in the Methodist church for twenty years and my feelings are better than that book!"

Poor man! There was silence for a moment, then "Uncle Jesse" began to take on a weaving motion, spake out in his slow, usual way: "I 'low Tommy is about right."

This statement proved too much for my assailant and out of the schoolhouse door he passed into the darkness of the night, and I fear into the blackness of eternal despair, for there is more hope for a fool than for him who deliberately closes the word of God when it does not agree with his feelings.

Reader, will you draw back when the words of the living God do not accord with your feelings, or will you choose the better part that shall never be taken away from you! How many, like this man, have turned away from the word of God because certain statements did not agree with the man-made religions they have set their hearts on! Be careful that your treasure is not placed in earthen vessels that will be broken, for "where your treasure is there will your heart be also."

In the case of the man just cited, his heart was in the one form of Methodism, and when the Bible condemned that kind of teaching he, like the young man who came to Jesus on one occasion, left his word, turned away, because it did not agree with his feelings. Both the young man and Mr. Schwartz will be brought face to face with that Word in the hands of its Author, and for every idle word spoken against it they will give an account in that notable day of the Lord. As it is appointed unto man once to die, and we know of a certainty we can find no way of escape from that appointment, so it is also appointed unto man to meet God in judgment, and from this appointment there is no way of escape; can no more get away from the coming judgment than we can expect to miss the hour of death—they are both coming to you and me. Don't close the book! It's God's message to you: get ready! Will you or will you not believe it? That's for you to decide. "Choose ye *Wv(nftud.ebapas;-.. - .barvcount S vbg vbg vb this day whom ye will serve." That book will open up in judgment for or against you. It will read there just as it reads here—time nor seasons, customs nor usage will have any effect upon its plain statement, or modify in the least its manner or mode of speech. Its words are directed to each wicked and rebellious generation, all of whom are going very rapidly into the valley of death as fast as time can bear us on. It addresses itself to those that are lost—to all that is good, everlastingly good. It speaks to you, as sinners, just as God sees you, needing help, and this help he is now offering you in his book of instruction. Do not, I pray you, act so unwisely as the two men of whom I have spoken. But let these words ring in your ears by day and by night; and I earnestly pray Almighty God that you may have no rest until you have made full preparation to meet your God.

T. J. JACKSON.

GOD'S FINANCIAL METHOD

Sarah K. Taylor

One internal evidence of the divine inspiration of the Scriptures is that whenever any perplexity confronts us in our Christian living, somewhere in God's word we may find unmistakable directions that, if followed, will make a straight path through what would otherwise be an intricate labyrinth. This is not only true in individual experiences, but also in the perplexities that attend extensive church work, and the problems that confront nations.

Where God's way prevails prosperity prevails; but God's way is disregarded we may look either for [illegible] or for a gradual decay (Prov. 3:9, 10; [illegible]; Deut. 8:18-20).

[illegible] God's way of sustaining his worship. [illegible] was required to devote to the purpose of sustaining the worship of God one-tenth of his income, whatever that income might be. While he did this prosperity smiled upon him, his fields yielded abundantly, his flocks multiplied, [illegible] increased steadily. When he [illegible] to do this, adversity and disaster [illegible] his substance, and poverty and want took the place of plenty and peace. God's way worked well wherever it was followed.

Man has ever been trying to substitute some plan of his own, and has met with various degrees of [illegible]

Man's Methods

In all of man's devices the first element is to avoid personal sacrifice.

1. One way is to satisfy his own need and the needs of his family, and if there is anything left divide with the Lord.

2. Get money out of others. Beg, coax, persuade [illegible]. Give a banquet, invite rich [illegible] and after dinner, when everyone is good-natured, pass around a subscription paper. Arrange [illegible]. Talk up the matter privately beforehand and get several men to promise to pledge $100, or $75, or $50, or $25, when the call comes. Get some orator to make a speech and [illegible] of the people, and then call for $100 pledges. One of the men previously [illegible] and says: "I'll give $100." Another follows, and in the excitement some new pledges are gained. Then pledges of $75 are called for, $50, $25, etc., and thus money is raised.

3. Give entertainments, fairs, suppers, etc.

These are men's ways of supporting God's work.

If we are to take God for our ruler why not study his laws and adopt his methods?

God's Methods

What are some of the advantages of God's method?

1. It equalizes the blessedness of giving and evenly distributes responsibility. God's laws all had the tendency to equalize burdens and blessings. The land laws, the yearly feasts, the laws of tithes and offerings, all the regulations and ceremonies, national and ecclesiastical, worked toward equal rights, equal privileges, equal blessings. The poorest man who paid his tithes was an equal participant with the richer man in the acceptable service of God. Under this system a few rich men could not run things to suit themselves because they paid all the bills.

2. This system saves us from puzzling our brains over "How much can I afford to give?" We all desire and intend to do something. God fixes the minimum; but the payment of tithes always enlarges the heart, and whoever, with loving faithfulness, regularly brings his tithes to God finds such delight in giving that usually he soon adds freewill offerings. This principle is recognized where the Lord in reproving his people says: "Ye have robbed me in tithes and offerings" (Malachi 3:8).

3. It obviates the danger of self ruling, and is a safeguard against covetousness. Jesus warned his disciples against covetousness (Luke 12:15): "And he said unto them; Take heed and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."

He said it defiled a man (Mark 7:20-23). It is counted among the basest passions (Romans 1:29). We are told not to keep company with a covetous man (1 Cor. 5:9-11). The covetous will not inherit the kingdom of God (1 Cor. 6:9-10). We are not even to talk covetously (Eph. 5:3-5). We are to mortify it along with other most degrading vices (Col. 3:5).

4. It is an open door of communication between God and us. Walking with God he walks with us. We are (I speak with reverence) partners in business. We learn to recognize his guiding hand. He gives us what he wants us to have, and we appreciate his gifts. We are not so apt to fall into doubt, and fear, and despondency, because acquaintance with God increases faith, confidence, hopefulness. We have more correct views of life, and find less fault with others (II Cor. 9:6-10).

5. We learn the value of little things. Tithing "mint and anise and cummin" was small business, but Jesus said: "These ought ye to have done." We are taught system in trifles. God's rules that govern the flying of a gnat are as inflexible as those that guide the planets in their courses. Carelessness in little things is what undermines Christian character and vitiates the Christian life.

6. In Malachi 3:10, God tells us one advantage of his method: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

When this is done there is ever "meat" in the house of God. The support of his worship is not dependent upon our impulses or the excitement of our sympathies, nor upon the selfish, bribing gifts of Christ's enemies, nor the money that can be wheedled out of fun-loving, bargain-seeking worldlings; but a continual, steady supply from the loving payment of tithes will keep the treasury of God's house full, and there will be no financial lack.

Look now at God's argument: "Prove me herewith." Study the Divine urging. The reason Christians do not universally do this is because they think they cannot afford it. When God put this law upon his people they were the poorest they ever were, being just out of Egyptian bondage, yet he asked a tenth for his service, a tenth for the poor, the first fruits, the seventh day, three yearly feasts, and the land to rest every seventh year. This system was designed to teach faith and faithfulness, and a partnership with God in all business as in all worship.

But you say: "That was under the old law which has been abolished." True, but Jesus says when referring to this law of tithing, "These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone" (Matt. 23:23). And Paul recognized the law of proportionate giving when he admonished the church to lay by on the first day of the week "as God hath prospered him" (1 Cor. 16:2).

"All I have is God's," says another. True, and of all which is his he asks you to "pay" (not give), him a tenth. The other nine-tenths may be equally his, but he is willing you should use that in your family and in your business. But the tenth he claims. "A tenth is mine," he says, and to those who refused to pay that tenth he said, "Ye have robbed me in tithes and offerings."

"These ought ye to have done." Ought implies duty. It is a sin not to do what we ought. But in laying out our duties God only considers our profit. He would pour upon us an overwhelming flood of blessing, and the windows are opened by an act of faith on our part, an act that unifies the church of God, relieves us from perplexity, purifies us from one sort of selfishness, brings us into partnership with him, teaches us the perfection of his methods, and produces continual abundance in his house.

"BE NOT AS THE MULE"

"God in his word, said, 'Be not as the mule which has no understanding, whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle.' This precept is as timely and pertinent now as when it was first uttered. Not all the mules in this world have four legs, whatever may be the length of their ears. There are people who seem to be as destitute of conscience and reason as the mule, who are governed, if governed at all, only by power and fear, and are much better at kicking than anything else. They are always easily insulted or neglected and abused, and no matter how sickly and weak, they are as ready for a good strong kick as a mad hornet is to sting. Now and then one of these mules finds his way into the church. I have seen them where they would seemingly be real good for six or eight months at a time, and then how they would startle the community by their kicking. Occasionally one of these persons of a mulish nature finds his way into the ministry. Of all kickers the ministerial mule is the most inconsiderate. You may convince them that they are wrong, and out-vote them ten to one, still they continue their mulish course under the role of a reformer or martyr. Whether in the pulpit or pew they are wise in their own eyes, and if they cannot have the affairs of the church go their way they will do the best they can to prevent their going at all. This writer would about as soon meet a bear bereft of her whelps, as one of these church mules. The men are rare who can make things go when they have two or three of these kickery mules in their congregation. This is where the qualities of the two-legged mule come in play. He may be virtuous at heart, but no logic can make him alter his mind.

The mule is not without good points. He is easily kept, works hard, is tough, wiry and enduring and though sometimes vicious and treacherous, yet his vices are not perpetuated, his race always dies with him. But one thing the Philadelphia Railway men learned, when they had long teams of horses and mules to drag railway cars through the city streets, and that was never to put a mule on the lead. With a horse to lead, a string of mules would pull well; but as a leader a mule was a failure. "Be ye not as the mule."

Help somebody worse off than yourself, and you will find that you are better off than you fancied.

Bought wit is best, if not bought too dear; that is, if we do not obtain it at the expense of health or reputation, or at too great a sacrifice, so as to prevent the enjoyment of the acquired good.

Saintliness is the culture and perfection of the entire character, of the patience and self-denial of active life, as well as of the fervors and unchangeableness of the devotional life.

The range of friendship has scarcely a limit. Intercourse is not needful to its continuance. Equality in years is not a requisite. Nor is parity of position essential. The finest natures triumph over social inequalities, mutual trust and affection can bridge over the chasm between wealth and poverty.

No climate however balmy, no skies however bright, no circumstance, however advantageous avail for man's benefit unless he himself be sufficiently vigorous and intelligent to take advantage of them for his own purposes. This necessary vigor and intelligence can be gained only through continued effort and energetic action.

It is the health, not the eyesight, which parents with studious children should ever protect, though they should be most merciless in insisting on a sufficiency of light, and light which actually reaches the object of attention. You may sit in a room full of light, but have all the while only twilight, or even a deep shadow falling on the work in hand. Light, full light, but light which is in place, is the grand preservative of the eyes.

Persons who indulge in a dreamy and visionary habit of mind are frequently both unpractical and unsuccessful; but this proceeds not from an excess of imaginative power, but from the lack of training it aright and of supplementing its action by determined industry. Like every other faculty, the imagination needs wise direction and vigorous culture; and if it receives this treatment it will put a vital and energetic force into every part of life and give a new impetus to the most practical of its realities.

EDITORIAL

Sister Huggins, we are glad to say, has completely recovered from her operation.

It is often more difficult to be silent than to speak, but silence is often the best answer.

Love and honesty are things to be seen rather than protested. When a man professes them much it is likely he is trying to create a credit which his life would not produce

On account of the inaccuracy of most men's perceptions, and malice of most men's minds, rumor is rarely truth. Hearsay is always half falsehood, sometimes wholly so.

Always do a good turn when possible. It will be of benefit to you some day. Even if it does not no evil can come of it, and it is always a satisfaction in the darkness of brief mortal life to strike a light when you can.

External ornament has its place, for God is the maker of flowers, humming birds and peacocks. But the place is low in the scale of being. Highly ornamental human beings are lacking, as a rule, in those mental qualities that constitute the true grace of man or woman.

It is easier to destroy than to make. It is easier to find fault that to be correct. The censorious are rarely faultless; and in the history of the world the men who have lived to any purpose are those who have looked pitifully on weakness and been severest on their own shortcomings.

A slanderer thinks not of the michief he does. He speaks for the pleasure it affords to his own vindictive feeling. He is a brother to the "busybody in other men's matters." Both are avoided at last, except by fellow-scorpions. Good men are contented to bless others, and are silent on the evil even concerning their enemies.

ILLUSTRATION OF TEXTS FROM NATURE

"Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life" (Prov. 4:23).

Circumstances have much to do with making the scope of our lives; yet one's own personality, one's resources of character and energy, count for more.

A spider has spread her network over the window. It looks like a commercial map of the Atlantic, with the tracks of the streamers running in every direction, converging at the great ports, such as Liverpool and New York. Her webs are the spider's highways; she seldom leaves them, and she need not, for, like other monopolists, she has pretty well covered the spots of advantage. Her web practically measures her life; it bounds her opportunities.

But observe that she produces the web out of her subtsance. In her body she first manufactures the silken liquid, which hardens into fiber. Paying this out, as a ship lays a cable, she crawls over the glass, or swings off through the air, leaving behind her a parmanent connection between the solid objects she touches. Her first voyage thus establishes a route to be traveled again and again, just as our first venture in virtue or vice may establish a habit which we will follow to the end of our lives.

"The water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water, springing up into everlasting life" (John 6:14).

Humanly expresse dogmas, though drawn from God's word, are like barreled water from a pure and sparkling spring. They lose that celestial effervescence of which Jesus spake; "springing up," literally bubbling. "Then, alas, if the barrel has had something else in it, and has not been thoroughly cleansed! Few minds are not coated on the inside with prejudice, the sediment of our peculiar training or of our habitual desires. It is refreshing to get back to just what God says, and as he says it

"They looked unto him, and were lightened" (Ps. 24:5).

To keep the face in shadow we must look away from the sun; so depression and fear are possible only as the heart averts itself from the shining of God's promises.

"He hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows" (Isa. 53,4).

Watch the eddies, how they swirl about against the stream! See the cross-currents of wind which fret the surface! How the tiny wavelets curl up stream! And yet note how the bubbles and foam are carried along in the direction of the river's flow. The love of God is the great river ever pouring on goodward; our distress and worries do not stay it for an instant.

"I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil" (John 15:7).

It is known that the protoplasmic cells are chemically the same in grass and reptile, bird and man. Yet they work out all the various species according to a multitude of infallible rules—just as the same silk knits itself into the diverse patterns set above the loom.

So the material of all human lives is substantially the same. We have the same human nature and similar circumstances, but what a diversity of experiences and characters! Who makes us to differ? The one Being who clothes the lily, and gives plumage to the gird, using the same material substance. We know his desire for each one of us; it is that we be "perfect, even as our Father in heaven is perfect." If we yield ourselves to his will the commonest resources of life, which in some tempt only to evil, will minister to the very likeness of the Christ within us.—J. M. Ludlow.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Bro. Huggins:

As it is time for the renewal of my much loved paper we will send three dollars; the extra dollar and a half is for the Helping Fund. We must scatter the good news of the return of our blessed Lord. We want to thank the editor and all the dear ones who furnish us with such good articles. We love to hear from the isolated ones, if they only write a few lines. Let us know that you are a living branch. The isolated ones have our sympathy. Dear ones, be not discouraged. Our blessed Lord is watching over his scattered children, and will not leave nor forsake them. God will be with you, if you put your trust in him. Please let us hear from you often.

Your sister awaiting the return of the blessed Lord,
MRS. W. H. EIDEMILLER.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I will write a few lines to you, thanking you and the dear helping brethren for the dear old Restitution. Every paper seems better. I do enjoy the good sermons so much. They cheer me up, and I feel like saying, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." I am getting old, am 77 years old. I have been looking and waiting many years, and have never got discouraged, for I know he will come at the appointed time. Whether I am asleep or awake, I will hear his call, "Come, ye blessed of my father." Oh, dear ones, that have been looking for our Lord these many years, may you have your lamps trimmed and burning, ready to enter into the joys of our Lord.

A few of the faithful ones here have started a class of Bereans. We meet every Sunday and search the Bible. There are only six of us, but we hope by God's help we may get others to come and learn the good news of our soon-coming Lord. We can do nothing without God's help. We ask the prayers of God's people, for the prayers of the righteous availeth much.

MRS. E. A. MORRILL.

A CHRISTMAS WORD OF CHEER

Dear Readers of The Restitution:

A Christmas word of cheer was not sent you at Christmastide, as per promise made to Bro. Huggins. Christmas came too soon. Busy writing bits of rhyme for girl and boy, and for the older grown among my friends, and in sending off little tokens, cards and letters, the days slipped by, and the opportunity for writing you was gone.

But I can still wish you Christmas joy, for its good tidings, its peace, its good will to men, its praiseful songs, the gladness of having given of our best to the King and to each other, were not meant to make the sunshine, the delightsomeness of a single day, but to fling their radiant rays of joy over all the days of all the year.

So I pray that the shining of Christmas may not lessen for any one of you as the days go on, but that its shining may grow brighter and brighter as you realize more and more clearly what God is going to accomplish through the gift to the world of "only a tiny babe that made a woman cry." May all that Christmas means be yours—its joy, its hope, its faith, its foretold life, its promised inheritance, its expected peace, its everlasting bliss.

There is war on the earth now, but with the birth of a Savior a song was sung of a coming time of peace. There is sin now—O such an overwhelming, crushing, destroying, desolating flood as it is looking, as if its waves could never be stayed—and yet the time is coming when sin will be no more, for is not the devil to be destroyed who brought sin into the world, and death by sin?

There is suffering now, but a time is coming when there will be no more pain, no bitter crying over the dear forms we have not power to ease.

There will be no sudden sickness, Bro. Huggins; no hurried taking of the beloved to the hospital, for he who was born so long ago at Bethlehem will be here, and all things will be made new.

Is it any wonder that I find it impossible to be sad for long?

"[illegible] little [illegible] within my head
What happy melody is bred,
What singing thoughts go laughing past,
What jocund love my heart holds fast.
Nor how I have to walk my feet
To keep from dancing on the street."

Even this cruel war is not maddening to me, for though I feel for the sufferers I know that God is thereby opening up a way for the home-going of Israel, for they too are to be sharers in the Lord will yet have mercy on Jacob and will yet mas one. The mountains must be threshed and the hills be made small before God's purposes for blessing the world can be carried out.

Armageddon is not yet. Nor has God yet pleaded with all nations in the valley of Jehosophat for his people and his land. But any time now Christ may come and snatch his bride away. She is to escape the awful things that are coming upon the earth, between the gathering of all the kings of the earth to battle and the final capture of the city of Jerusalem by the nations. The Jews must be dwelling safely in their own land, and be possessed of great wealth in cattle and goods before the battle or battles of Armageddon come.

The feet of the Lord stand upon the Mount of Olives. The King comes and all the saints with him. The Lord reigns over all the earth, shortly after the nations have captured Jerusalem. "For the Lord will ye have mercy on Jacob and will yet choose Israel and set them in their own land" (Isaiah 14:1). "And they shall dwell therein, even they and their children and their children's children forever."

The twelve apostles will sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel, and Jesus will reign over the house of Jacob forever. A restored paradise, a rechosen people, saved nations, and deathless rulers, joy without end. This is what Christmas means.

"Rejoice and be glad, the Redeemer hath come, go look on his cradle, his cross and his tomb."

Remember that he rose and ascended to heaven to prepare a place for us, and that he is coming again to receive us unto himself, that where he is we too may be also. Pray God to hasten the day. "Come, Lord Jesus! Come quickly*"

THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOSPEL

The gospel began in the creation of our first parents, Adam and Eve. The Lord God said: "Be fruitful and multiply; replenish the earth, and subdue it, and have dominion" (Gen. 1:28). The word "dominion" contains the germ of the gospel, and implies that the one addressed was promised a right to rule over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. It will be shown as the gospel is evolved that this ruler was to rule in righteousness. Before he could attain to this exalted position he must be tried. After the creation all things were pronounced "good" and "very good." As yet Adam and Eve had not been tried, no character had been developed. The reward to become a ruler must depend upon the keeping of the law under which they were placed. "Of every tree of the garden thou mayst freely eat; but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it, for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."

In the garden we find that there were trees from which they might pluck fruit and live; also "the tree of life." It is evident that Jehovah purposed that they might eat of this tree and live forever. The way to this tree was guarded, and could only be reached through obedience to the law.

We learn through the following history that they did not keep the law. They were therefore driven from the garden and compelled to till the ground from whence they were taken. Instead of Adam becoming a righteous ruler he became a common laborer, and required to eat of the herb of the field in the sweat of his face. It was further announced that he would return unto the ground, "for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." It is further stated that Adam lived nine hundred and thirty years, and he died. All that Jehovah accomplished though the first Adam was that he begat sons and daughters. From these must come a righteous ruler and a righteous race. The disobedience of Adam introduced into the world two forces, one for righteousness, the other for evil. The development of righteousness can not be accomplished under the very pleasant environments of the garden, but while we live in "this present evil world." For our trial we are placed among a people who know not God. In this world we are measured by Jehovah's righteous law. None are righteous—no, not one. The highest favor to which we can attain is to be counted righteous in this life, which is our "trial period." The reward, or gift of eternal life, will be given to the overcomer.

"Behold," said Jesus, "I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his works shall be" (Rev. 22:12). There is nothing surer than the promises made to those who have taken upon themselves the name of the Mighty One. It is written for our comfort, "I am he that liveth and was dead; and behold, I am alive for ever more, amen, and have the keys of hell and of death" (Rev. 1:18). The victory that Jesus obtained over death and the grave through obedience is an assurance that we through being obedient may obtain eternal life through the resurrection from among the dead. D. C. BEREAN COLUMN NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

Edited by Leota B. Hanson, 3401 Magnolia Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Bereans:

I have been thinking of a verse in the second chapter of Genesis: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul" (Gen. 2:7).

In this description of the creation of man we find nothing that would lead us to think an immortal soul had been placed in a house of clay to reside for a time and later fly away to realms of bliss, or everlasting torture, where the body is overtaken by death and decay.

It seems to me man may be compared to an electric lamp. When the electrician wires a building to be lighted by electricity he places the wires in position, puts the switches in place, hangs the fixtures with the delicate coils of wire in each lamp, perfect and ready to light. But still they are useless until connected with the current from the power plant. Then when the switch is turned we have live wires, and the building is flooded with light. If the wires get broken or become disconnected the lamps become useless as they were before, for they have no power in themselves, as man has no life in himself except as he receives it from a higher source.

"If he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath all flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again into dust" (Job 34:14, 15). Not just the house of clay, but man himself shall turn to dust when the power is withdrawn that gives him life; for "the body without the spirit is dead" (James 2:26). "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it" (Eccles. 12:7). Death every man may expect until the great Life-Giver comes. He has said: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die" (John 11:25, 26). "As the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given unto the Son to have life in himself" (John 5:26). It is the spirit that quickeneth, the flesh profiteth nothing. The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life" (John 6:63). But if the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you" (Rom. 8:11).

Thus if we live in harmony with the word and are led by the spirit of God (Rom. 8:14), we have the promise of life as the gift of God through Jesus Christ our Lord. May we all so live that we may be accounted worthy to obtain this precious gift.

Your sister in Christ,

MRS. MAE MERCER.

JOASH

The name is a contraction from Jehoash, meaning "Jehovah supports." He was the son of Ahaziah, king of Judah, and grandson of Athaliah, the daughter of Ahab and Jezebel.

Athaliah, like her mother, was daring, determined, unscrupulous and outrageously wicked. She was a Baal worshiper, and wielded a great influence over her husband, King Jehoram (2 Kings 8:18), and was her son Ahaziah's counsellor to do wickedly (2 Chron. 22:3).

After the death of Ahaziah, his idolatrous and heartless mother, Athaliah, endeavored to destroy all of the male members of the house of David, that no king might arise out of it afterward, and she really thought she had accomplished it; but Joash, one of Ahaziah's sons, was preserved, who escaped death after the manner following: Ahaziah's sister, Jehosheba, wife of Jehoida, the high priest, went into the king's palace, found her nephew, the infant Joash, unharmed among those that were slain, stole him away and hid him and his nurse in a bed chamber. He was kept in secrecy in the temple of the Lord for six years, during which time Athaliah reigned over Jerusalem and the two tribes.

When Joash reached his seventh year the high priest revealed to some trustworthy men the fact that the house of David was not extinct, and showed them the rightful heir to David's throne. Plans for detroning Athaliah and reinstating the rightful heir were entered into. At the appointed time both the temple and the palace were carefully guarded by armed men, Joash was brought in, crowned and anointed king of Judah; and the multitude rejoiced, clapped their hands, and cried "God save the king."

When Athaliah heard the tumult she hastened into the temple, and there saw the young child standing by a pillar, with the royal crown upon his head, and the princes and trumpeter by his side. She took in the situation at a glance, then in anguish of heart rent her clothes and cried, "Treason, treason!" She was hurried from the temple and put to death with the sword. Then the coronation ceremonies went on, and the king and people pledged loyalty to one another and to God. The country was freed from idolatry. For at least twenty-three years, while Jehoiada lived, this reign was very prosperous.

But after the death of Jehoiada Joash fell into the hands of bad advisers, at whose suggestion he revived the worship of Baal and Ashtaroth. When he was rebuked for this by Zechariah, the son of Jehoiada, Joash caused him to be stoned to death in the very court of the Lord's house (Matt. 23:35). Two of his own servants conspired against him for the blood of the sons of Jehoiada, and slew him in his bed in the fortress of Millo.

Joash's reign lasted forty years, from 878 to 838 B. C. He was buried in the city of David, but not in the sepulchre of the kings.

OBITUARY

Sarah Bowman

Sarah Reisinger Bowman died December 27, 1915, at Lewis, Iowa, aged 83 years, 10 days. Born in Ohio, married to A. Huston, who died about a year later. To this union one child was born. Several years later she married J. Bowman. Seven children were born to them. He too was claimed by death when the children were young, leaving her alone to fight life's battles and care for thirteen children, five of whom were her sisters. During this time she lived in Iowa and Illinois.

Laboring under physical disabilities, always a hard worker, yet never too busy to search the Scriptures or stop and discuss some Bible topic, considering it her duty, always kind and ready to assist where sickness or trouble were concerned. Her Bible and hymn book were always close at hand. When a child of ten years she joined the United Brethren church; one brother was a minister in that denomination. She afterward affiliated with the Campbellite belief, which she held for fourteen years. Later, mainly by her own diligent study, the truth dawned upon her and she was baptized by Bro. Stevenson in Plum River, near Lanark, Ill. She had the privilege of hearing but few gospel sermons, nevertheless for forty-five years she has held fast to the "blessed book," her faith in God and his promises never wavering. Her wish was to have just one star in her crown, and she would be thankful.

Short funeral services were said in harmony with her faith. The Congregational pastor read the 15th chapter of 1 Cor and used as a text Titus 2:13. Besides the children she leaves a large family of grandchildren and great-grandchildren to mourn her loss. Her faithful Christian life is an example to all who knew her. She sleeps in Jesus, and we hope to meet her in the kingdom where God will deal kindly with her patient service. Her granddaughter,

THOUGHTS ON OBEDIENCE

"To obey is better than sacrifice, and to harken than the fat of lambs" (1 Sam. 15:22).

The countless millions of planets created by Him and cast out into endless space swing around in their orbit in sublime obedience to his laws, in perfect order and without the variation of a single moment in a hundred years.

"Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people" (Jer. 7:23).

If during this life, his time of trial, a man proves that he can be relied upon to unquestioningly obey God in all things, in the age to come God will add to his obedience immortality, comeliness of form, glory the brightness of which will dazzle the eyes of the beholder, and all the powers of an endless life. But without obedience God will add nothing.

"Behold, I set before you this day a blessing and a curse—a blessing if ye obey the commandments of the Lord your God, and a curse if ye will not obey" (Deut. 11:26-28).

We may rest assured that the infinite wisdom of God could never permit him to create an immortal rebel. Therefore we may be quite certain that he will not confer the unspeakable gift of eternal life upon any mortal man, unless that man has first proven under actual trial that he may be relied upon to render prompt and unquestioning obedience under any and all circumstances.

"Though he were a son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered. And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him" (Heb. 4:8, 9).

The entire universe obeys God exactly, promptly and unquestioningly. So far as we know, man is the only rebel. He is a stubborn animal. A law is an abomination to him. When one interferes with his pleasure it is his pleasure to break it. In the cradle his first conscious act is to rebel against and resist maternal authority. As a youth his greatest ambition is to reach his majority and become his own boss. This goal reached, he still finds both civil and divine laws demanding obedience. He who can not consent to obey forfeits the right to live in the glorious age to come. But "these as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things they understand not, and shall utterly perish in their own corruption." They shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not awake, saith the Lord."

TWELVE QUESTIONS FOR ROMANISTS TO ANSWER

1. If the Protestant religion began with Henry VIII, how can it be accounted for that all the Protestant religion is in the Roman Catholic Bible?
2. If the Protestant religion was not in the Bible, would the Protestant Church take such pains to distribute the Bible?
3. If the Roman Catholic religion is as old as the Apostles, how can it be accounted for that there is no mention in the Bible of the Mass, nor purgatory, nor confession to a priest, nor the intercession of the Blessed Virgin?
4. If these doctrines were taught by the Holy Apostles, would they not be found in their writings?
5. If they were not taught by them can they be true doctrines?
6. If the Bible and the doctrines of the Roman Catholic Church agree, would not the Roman Catholic Church be as anxious to distribute the Bible as the Protestant Church is?
7. Were the Holy Apostles ever afraid that the people should read the Bible?
8. Did not the Apostle Paul say of the Bible that it "can instruct us to salvation by faith in Jesus Christ" (2 Tim. 3:15)?
9. Is not the Bible the word of God?
10. Can it be wrong to read the word of God?
11. If we refuse to search the Scriptures, as the Redeemed commanded us to do, shall we not have to bear all the blame of being in error (Matt. 22:29).
12. Must not every man give account of himself to God when we stand at the judgment seat of Christ (2 Cor. 5:10)?—Selected by Sister S. Roxana Wince.

MARRIAGE

When a young man wants to marry a girl he has already made up his mind that she is worthy of him, otherwise he would not wish to marry her. The next thing for him to do is to make a rigid examination and cross-examination of himself to see whether he is worthy of her. In this he should be unsparing of his own faults and shortcomings. If he comes to the conclusion that the girl is better than he is, let him at once and resolutely set himself to reform his own character and to eradicate its defects. If, on the other hand, he finds that he can conscientiously say that he deserves her hand he may safely conclude that, if her affections are not preoccupied by another, he can win her by fair and honorable and open means and without resort to clandestine plans or practices.

Some have spasms of activity when everybody is active and then subside when the rest grow dull. There are others who are steadfast. Whatever they are they are always. They do not depend on the impulse about them for their impulse, and so they do not vary with the temper of their surroundings. We say of such men: "We know where to find them."

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the Saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13: 3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:28), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). TELL HIM NOW

If with pleasure you are viewing
Any work a man is doing,
If you like him or you love him,
Tell him now;
Don't withhold your approbation
Till the parson makes oration,
And he lies with snowy lilies
O'er his brow.

For no matter how you shout it
He won't really care about it
He won't know how many teardrops
You have shed;
If you think some praise is due him
Now's the time to slip it to him,
For he can not read his tombstone
When he's dead.

More than fame and more than money
Is the comment kind and sunny,
And the hearty, warm approval
Of a friend;
For it gives to life a savor
And it makes you stronger, braver,
And it gives you heart and spirit
To the end.

If he earns your praise, bestow it:
If you like him, let him know it
Let the words of true encouragement
Be said;
Do not wait till life is over,
And he's underneath the clover,
For he can not read his tombstone
When he's dead.

FALSE BRETHREN

I have been in perils among false brethren (2 Cor. 11:26). After Paul's miraculous conversion he seemed to be in constant danger from the people he was preaching to. Thrice was he beaten with rods, thrice shipwrecked, five times received stripes, once was he stoned by the Jews—the very people who should have been his best friends—but they were blinded, and overlooked the gospel age, and were a jealous race, and could not bear the idea that the Gentiles should become heirs to the promise made to Abraham. And as Paul preached this doctrine to the Gentiles, after the Jews refused to ilsten to it, they were exceedingly mad at him. Paul was sadly persecuted, but he endured it. And wrote to Timothy, "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution;" and that "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived" (2 Tim. 3:12 13). Christ said a man's foes shall be they of his own household (Matt. 10:36). How true this is in regard to the church! And how it hurts to have our own familiar friend, in whom we have trusted, that has eaten of our bread at our table, lift up his heel against us (Psa. 41:9)! "The men that were at peace with thee have deceived thee, and prevailed against thee; they that eat thy bread have laid a wound under thee, there is none understanding in him" (Oba. 7).

A false brother is one that is not genuine, or real, counterfeit: one that deceives you. They are the worst enemies the Church of God has. Those that claim to belong to the Church of God and preach a gospel that Paul did not preach, and Christ did not command his disciple to preach; and claim they are the real followers of the Blessed Savior; and try by every means in their power to induce you to give to their organization and support their paper. They say their organization is not so narrow! Well, we will admit that, but when we read in God's word the command of Jesus, to "Enter ye in at the straight gate: because straight is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it," we have a great desire to be one of the few that find it. And we cannot see any prospects of finding it only in the straight and narrow way. Every way that is counted as too narrow is the broad way, and it leads to destruction, and many go in thereat.

We know it is hard to refuse to brother these "broad" people, for they in times past have worshipped at the same house; partaken of the same bread and wine, in remembrance of the Lord's death till he come (1 Cor. 11:23, 29). But when they claim that we are too narrow, and do not represent the "Church of God," and go and organize another body and worship on broader principles, what else can we do? Still they want unity, but in order to have unity we must drop our narrow way, come into their "Ministerial Association," deny all creeds, believe what you like, but do not make it a test of fellowship!

No, no, brother, we cannot do that, for the scripture tells us plainly there is something we must believe in order to be saved; and that something is the gospel that Paul preached; and if we do not believe that gospel we are accursed: "Paul is authority." for God chose him to bear his name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel (Acts 9:15). Paul strongly exhorted his brethren to unity, to all speak the same thing, that there be no divisions among you: but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment: be of one mind, live in peace: and the God of love and peace shall be with you. Be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous.

not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing: but contrawise blessing: knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing (1 Cor. 1:10; 2 Cor. 13:11; 1 Pet. 3:8, 9). Who inherits the blessing? Those that obey the commandments of the Lord. He that overcometh shall inherit all things. Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city (Deut. 11:27; 28:2; Rev. 21:7; 22:14). God does not command anyone to walk in the broad way. Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein; for the time is at hand: Blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book (Rev. 1:3; 22:17).

What is the blessing? It is the inheritance the followers of Christ receive through him: as the promised seed of Abraham. The inheritance is the land promised to Abraham and his seed, also the blessing of the nations through the same seed (Psa. 2:8; 22:27, 28; Gal. 3:8, 9, 16, 18, 29).

Dear brethren, we do not all speak the same thing, so there is a grievous division, and it seems as if our foes were of our own household (Matt. 10:36). Can we give up the word of God for the word of man? No, never. If it could be proven that we do not teach the gospel, then there might be some excuse for us to change our views, but this same gospel has been before the people nearly 2,000 years, and no change has been made in it. So we do not think that man in his short period of existence has any right to set himself up as greater that the gospel as preached by Paul. Neither has he any right to say the straight and narrow way, as taught by Christ, is too narrow.

We have no right to add to or take away from the word as written (Rev. 22:18, 19). When we encounter those who wish to do this they are such as Paul styled "false brethren" (Gal. 2:4; Acts 15:1; 2 Cor 11:13; 2 Tim. 3:13; Titus. 2:1; 2 Pet. 2:1; Psa. 119:104, 128). Paul warned the different assemblies that taught the gospel, to avoid them: to not keep company, to have no such custom, to be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers, to withdraw from those that do not walk after the tradition which he received of us: from such turn away; rebuke them sharply, reject the contentions; receive him not into your house (Rom. 16:17; 1 Cor. 5:11, 11:16; 2 Cor. 6:14; 2 Thess. 3:6; 2 Tim. 3:5; Titus 1:13, 16; 3:9, 10; 2 John 10,11).

Certainly when one gets outside of the gospel that Paul preached, he is preaching a "false gospel." We know no other name for it, and we cannot accept the false for the true. We are persecuted for it and Paul said we should be (2 Tim. 3:12). The Lord knoweth them that are his. And let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity (2 Tim. 2:19).

A Christian will find it cheaper to pardon than to resent. Forgiveness saves the expense of anger, the cost of hatred, the waste of spirits. It also puts one in a frame of mind that makes the practice of other virtues easy.

"THE HOLY ROMAN EMPIRE OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE"

The revival of the old Roman empire is taught by at least two prophecies (Rev. 13:3; 17:8, 11), and we believe that no past revival of this empire can fulfil all in these prophecies. Also while Italy, France or Austri-Hungary might in some points fit to this past beast or beast head that received a deadly wound, yet we believe that only Germany can fill all the prophecy. And while there has been much strife between expositors of the historical and futurist schools, the one class making these beasts all past, and the others wholly future, we believe that strife should end if both the past and future of these powers are admitted.

For instance: How could the revelator show the harlot Babylon in her last hour of judgment and destruction, if she had not had a past birth, maturity and defilement? How could he show a beast that lived, died, and revived, and a head of another beast, that lived, died, and revived, if these beasts had not both a past and future history? As our best light at present fits Germany to these prophecies, we deem a brief history of the Roman empire essential to a proper comprehension of the prophecy.

The Latin kingdom was founded by Latinus in Italy 1239 B. C. It was conquered by the Romans 640 B. C. This empire did not include southern Italy.

Rome was founded by twins, Remus and Romulous, B. C. 753. In legend, their father was Mars and their mother Sylvia, and being lost in a cave they were suckled by a she wolf. A strong Roman empire was built up, but wealth had concentrated into the hands of a few, and fierce strife between the wealthy and the labor slaves overthrew the monarchy and set up a republic, B. C. 509. Here the clay of democracy began to mingle with the iron of monarchy (Dan. 2) Greece and much of Africa were added to the Roman states, B. C. 146, and Spain, 133 B. C., and part of Britain was added by conquest under Claudius, B. C. 54-41; and Jerusalem was subdued by Pompey, a Roman general ,B. C. 63.

B. C. 60, Rome consisted of seven great states, which were ruled by seven governors, over which the great triumvirate, composed of Caesar, Pompey and Crassius, were the supreme power, thus making the seven heads, or states, and ten horns, or rulers of the dragon of Rev. 12, or heathen Rome. The second triumvirate that succeeded this was composed of Octavius in the west, Anthony in the east, and Lepidus in Africa. B. C. 31, Octavius succeeded in making himself emperor of the whole Roman world, and thus the iron subdued the clay, and the empire was restored, and peace reigned until A. D. 67-70, when Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus.

Under Trajan, A. D. 51-117, the Roman empire extended its boundaries to the utmost limits it ever attained. The Mediterranean Sea was called "a Roman lake," because surrounded by Roman territory, a condition we expect to see again when the empire is restored, when this sea will become "the lake of fire and brimstone" for the destruction of these beastly powers (Rev. 19:20; 21:8).

The decline of the empire and the rise of republics, or the clay, began under Commodus, 180-192 A. D. Then under Diocletian, 281-305, the clay was again put under the iron of despotic monarchy.

The dragon is a symbol representing all that is adverse to truth and righteousness in Pagan Rome, from its birth, politically, religiously, and financially, until its destruction beyond the millenium (Rev. 12; and 19:20; 22). But A. D. 323, under Constantine, the dragon gave his seat (Rome), and his power and great authority to a leopard-bear-lion-like beast, when the empire was made Christian in name (Rev. 13).

From 538 A. D., to 606 A. D., when the papacy was exalted as a horn on the beast, another symbol is required to represent what Bishop Newton calls "a kingdom within a kingdom," where the emperor and pope arise as two horns on the beast. Hence the two-horned beast or "false prophet" (Rev. 13:11-19; 20:19) is seen "arising out of the earth," which represents a fixed or established order of government "waters" represent many nations in revolution and commotion. As this beast works in conjunction with, and in the sight of, the first beast, it must represent a false religious power modeled after the civil power, in the same territory, and whose main purpose is to induce the people to worship the beast or his image, both of which have the dragon spirit and voice.

Under Constantine IV, Christianity in name was made the religion of the empire, 323-337 A. D., and the capital was moved from Rome in the west to Byzantium, now Constantinople, in the east. Fierce civil struggle followed, and at the death of Theodosius the Great, 395 A. D., the empire was divided between his two sons, Honorius and Arcadius, Honorius ruling from Rome and Arcadius from Constantinople. From this date the two legs of the image of Daniel 2 and the two wings of the eagle (Rev. 12), commence, and the empire has never since been re-united.

Let the reader not forget here that one of these legs and feet was in Italy, and the other was in what is now Turkey. Hence in the revival of this beastly empire we should look for five toes or horns in the east, and for five in the west (Dan. 2; Rev. 17).

After 400 A. D., the Goths, Vandals, Huns and other barbarian tribes, invaded the western empire and finally broke it up into many states again. The fall of the empire is dated from 476 A. D., when Adoacer, a German warrior, trained under Attila, the Hun or Hungarian, was made king of Italy, and head of the confederate barbarian states. Here the clay again ruled over the iron. He formed an alliance with the Byzantine emperor, Zeno, and thus the two legs of the image were perpetuated (Dan. 2).

Under the dragon, Germany was not a part of the Roman empire, but came in under the leopard beast period. In the 8th century after Christ, Charlemagne, the great emperor of France and Germany, built up a strong empire, ruled it from the west, which was greatly increased in size and power under his successors, Otto I and Otto II, from 962 to 983. The latter defeated the Saracens in Italy, and many other barbarians, and brought them under his sway. Otto I was crowned by the pope as Caesar or Kaiser of the western empire, with the iron crown of the Lombards, 962 A. D.

From 538 A. D., when the Roman emperor, Justinian, exalted the bishop of Rome to the headship of all the Christian churches of the world, and from 606, when the emperor Phocas gave the pope temporal power, the papal power continued to increase greatly, but especially under Charlemagne in the 8th century, until the emperor became jealous of the pope's power, and much strife and bloodshed resulted from the controversies as to which was the supreme horn or power, the pope or the emperor.

From the time of Otto I, 962 A. D., we may date the beginning of "the restored Roman empire;" and here is where some would say: "The deadly wound was healed," and "the beast that was and is not" had "ascended out of the bottomless pit" of non-existence (Rev. 13:3, 14; 17:8) It was not the woman on the beast that received the deadly wound, as Seventh Day Adventists teach, but the beast, or empire; and as only a part of the old empire was at this time revived its complete resurrection must be future.

After this restoration under Otto, the empire is known as "The Holy Roman empire of the German people," because Germany was the main head of the beast or empire, and also because of the claim that the empire and the holy Catholic church were one society. For 300 years, from 962 A. D., the emperor was crowned first at Aachen, Germany, as king of Germany, and then at Milan, as king of Italy, and then at Rome, as universal emperor of the Roman empire. But he had to be first king of Germany before he could be crowned universal emperor of the Roman world (West's M. Hist.)

THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOSPEL

No. 2.

The disobedience of Adam brought the curse upon the earth. Under these conditions the race would have gone down into the dust from whence they were taken, as did their head. There were no provisions by which men could obtain eternal life, as "the tree of life" through which this gift might be obtained, had been removed. In order that righteousness might be counted to a portion of the race, Jehovah concluded all under sin (the scripture has shut up together all under sin—Diaglot) that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe (Gal. 3:22).

Gentle reader, have you reasoned out the proposition that all were shut up unto sin that those who believe might be counted righteous? Salvation from the beginning was based upon faith. Paul makes that plain in writing to the Roman church. He said: "The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death" (Rom. 8:2). Without this release from the law of sin and death, Paul would have remained as one of the victims of death. He was of the dust, and would have returned to dust again. There is but one means by which we may escape death, viz., by accepting the promise by faith of Jesus the Christ. This brings us to this conclusion: that the Adamic life leaves us in the grave; the Christ life redeems us from its power.

The resurrection is Jehovah's means of redemption. The apostle writes, "If the spirit of him that raised Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you" (Rom. 8:11). In this scripture it is plainly taught that the spirit of God can only effect those who have this spirit dwelling in them. This spirit is obtainable through obedience to the divine law, the gospel of the kingdom of God. It is retained through a righteous life.

If all would believe and understand that, known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world (age), much ignorance would be eliminated and God's purpose more clearly understood. His purpose was that one of the race would be made a righteous ruler. Adam having failed, another of the race must be found. The apostle Peter tells us "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is long suffering to usward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance (2 Pet. 3:9). The provision is ample for the whole race, but assured through faith.

In measuring time there is a period from the time in which Adam sinned to the promise made to the seed of woman in which there was no promise of a future life. This was a judgment period. Each party in this tragedy received a just retribution, commensurate to the sin committed. After this the woman is promised a seed who should bruise the head of the serpent's seed. The woman's seed was to suffer a wound, but not unto eternal death. The gospel is evolved through this seed. It was to be "a survival of the fittest." It took centuries to accomplish God's purpose in the development of the one seed, but was accomplished through the selection of the best of the race.

BIBLE STUDENTS SEE GOD IN WAR

Nebuchadnezzar's Dream Is Explained in Great Struggle in Europe

Through the events of the war in Europe, the Rev. J. Boyd Jones sees additional fulfillment of the word of God. He told his congregation at the Central Christian Church last night that Bible students find indications of the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth as a culmination of the world struggle.

Next Sunday he will talk on "The Battle of Armageddon," and the following Sunday on "The Millennium." In his address last night he said:

"That God had a purpose in the creation of the world and placing humanity upon it, no student of Holy Writ will deny. That he has a plan and program of the ages will be admitted by men who have faith in a great first cause. Men who have accepted the Bible as the inspired word of God claim that God has made a revelation of his will to us. The question open to discussion is how much of his program has he revealed? It is here that students of the Bible disagree. In the past men who have given their time and thought to the study of the prophecies have been very dogmatic and hence the more conservative students have been disgusted with their "cock-sure" interpretations, and time has proven that many were very foolish indeed.

Hidden Things Revealed

"But because blunders have been made in the past, is that a valid reason that we should not continue to search the Scriptures daily? The conviction is growing upon many that things hidden in the past are now being revealed.

"One of the most striking interpretations given of the future is found in Daniel's explanation of the great image seen by Nebuchadnezzar. We have history to prove that a part of the interpretation was true, and we think that with what is now taking place we can explain the rest of the dream.

Image Represents Countries

"Let us stand in the presence of this great image. The head was of gold, and Daniel told Nebuchadnezzar that the head stood for his kingdom; the arms and breast were of silver, representing the Medo-Persian empire; the belly and thighs were of brass, and as the Grecians conquered the Medo-Persians, so we think this part of the image stands for that empire; the legs were of iron, and the Romans, who conquered the Grecians, may well be described in prophecy as a kingdom of iron; the feet and toes were of iron and part clay, showing they would not unite. With the passing of the old Roman empire came 10 that have mingled in the past, but never united permanently. Daniel declared that in the days of these kings would the God of heaven set up a kingdom that should never be destroyed.

God's Coming Is Seen

"That God is getting ready to set up that kingdom on earth is the conviction of many; that the battle of Armageddon is soon to be fought. The devout Jews in every land have waited long for deliverance and who can tell but what this bloody war will make way for their return to their beloved Jerusalem? Israel's God is the God of today, and if we could wipe from our eyes the blindness of materialism and downright infidelity, we would see the handwriting on the wall, and to many of us it would mean 'weighed and found wanting.' "—Selected by Sister Elliott.

CHICAGO "BURR MISSION" CHALLENGED TO COME OUT IN THE OPEN—SECRET OPPOSITION REBUKED

To the President and Members of the Burr Mission, 2301 Wentworth Ave Chicago.

Sirs: Your anonymous communication, consisting of marginal comments on an article of mine which appeared in "The Restitution," relating to orthodoxy in general and to DeForrey and his associates in particular, came duly to hand. Not having your name I can not write personally to you. I sincerely hope, if you are as desirous of combating error and spreading truth as you appear to be, you will take advantage of this occasion to do so.

It is most noticeable how you confine yourself to personalities and make no attempt to disprove any of the statement in my contribution to which you so strongly object. I am not impressed, therefore, by your anonymous and dramatic appeal to return to orthodoxy; for the more I study the scriptures, the more I become convinced that "orthodoxy" and the Bible do not agree. Orthodoxy (so-called) can not express much of its teaching in the language of the Bible---not only so, it is guilty of using the very words of scripture to deny the plainest statements of God's Holy Book, and is obliged to coin words and phrases in an endeavor to bolster its untenable position.

Your attempt to take refuge in great scholarship is puerile. I am not aware of your individual ability, so do not comment on it; but I am very certain that "orthodoxy" is unable to claim a monopoly of talent in that respect. I judge it is, generally, more safe to accept the translations and renderings of the eminent scholars who translated and revised the English Bible, than any obscure individual interpretation of the Greek, such as yours or mine.

If you will frankly and fairly, by the use of Biblical English, used as translated in its commonly understood grammatical sense, disprove (or attempt to disprove) the arguments brought forword in my article as being unscriptural, we will welcome your efforts, for we are desirous of getting all the truth we can. Do not be like a Methodist minister, who recently challenged me to debate, and when I wrote accepting on the above conditions, he immediately withdrew! I can not find language strong enough to condemn anyone who will attempt, as you have done, to make a knowledge of original Greek necessary, before a poor sinner can understand God's mind regarding sin and its penalty, and righteousness and its reward. Orthodox denial of John 3:16 in its plain literal English (which no one disputes is a good translation), would make God a liar and the English Bible a farce. For the sake of mortal perishing sinners, I pray you beware!

THE PERILS OF OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

They increase superabundantly as we approach the last days of this dispensation. This the prophetic word has foretold, "lovers of pleasure and disobedient to parents;" but the fault is not all to be taxed to the young folks; indeed, the parents are greatly at fault in all our country for indulging the boy or girl in every desire for the gratification of their wishes. How can we expect strong men and women in Christ Jesus, if the child is allowed to gratify every prompting of the flesh?

This is a national fault of the home; the fruit of which is seen in the young holdup bandits of our cities. The current has set in so strong for pleasure at any price, and that the "world owes me a living," when in fact the world owes us nothing for which we have not paid an equivalent. Of all the agents leading in the direction of evil is the public dance hall, and the moving picture shows, which are the masterpieces of the enemy in leading the young of this generation in the downward path that leads to perdition.

The dance hall is a worldly pleasure, and its fruits are evil—too many of its votaries go wrong—and he who is a friend of this world is an enemy of God—"ye can not serve God and Mammon."

In the moving picture shows the mind is made familiar with acts of violence, robbery and the like, tending to weaken the moral susceptibilities of its votaries.

The best antidote to the evils of excessive worldly pleasures is the daily reading of the word of God. To the young people of our day who are obedient to the voice of the Spirit of the word, there is a bright prospect that they will enter the kingdom without coming under the dominion of the enemy—death. How good and full of wisdom are the words of the spirit: "Seek now thy creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."

I will add a few words from the pen of R. R.: " 'My son . . . . receive my words, and hide my commandments with thee' (Prov. 2:1).. Nothing more unpalatable in the way of advice could be uttered in worldly circles. But here and there, there is a responsive ear, in which the words are uttered not in vain. 'My words,' the words of God are received, and embraced, and stored deep down in the inner man: and there they must remain to be effectual for their work, and here they cannot remain without steady renewal in the daily reading of the scriptures The human mind is very leaky, especially to divine ideas; a constant supply is the cure. 'Nothing else will finally satisfy the taste which they generate. They will be an ever living and available power of action. But for this a man must stoutly fight, else this wise policy will be taken out of his hands through chronic oppositions and revolts of the worldly mind, within and without. Having taken the right cue from the spirit's voice, let him close his eyes to the devil's din that would call him in other directions, and go straight on to the heavenly city.' "

KILLING THE PREACHER

Someone has compiled the following rules for killing the preacher. If faithfully practiced we believe they will prove effective—they will kill his influence and ambition, kill him mentally, morally and physically:

Stay away from church, especially on bad days, when you know the crowd will be small.

Stay away from prayer meeting because you know the crowd will be small or someone is on to lead you don't like.

When the sermon is over leave the church in a hurry without speaking a word to the preacher, a word of encouragement.

When you get sick don't let him know it, and then abuse him for not coming to see you.

Never invite him and his family out to dine in your house. They never enjoy a social call.

Pay just as little as you can on his salary, and grumble about that. This makes him feel good.

Never give him anything but the little amount you promise. It would make him think you appreciated him.

Always have a fool excuse to offer when he wants you to do a little work for God.

Don't ever go to see him or his family and then raise old "Billy Cain" because he doesn't come to see you twice a month.

Act as cold and indifferent toward him as you can, and he will think you are dignified.

Sorrow, in some instances, hardens and narrows the mind; but in all well-constituted characters it softens, enriches, ennobles.

EDITORIAL

Think much, talk little, write less.

A good name, like good will, is got by many actions and lost by one.

Repentance without amendment is like continually pumping without stopping the leak.

One thing is certain: The man who sets out to give you a piece of his mind hasn't much to give.

One gains courage by showing himself poor; in that manner one robs poverty of its sharpest sting.

The only man who never makes a mistake is the man who never does anything.—(Theodore Roosevelt.)

Jesus says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Some believe, but refuse to be baptized. Therefore, they cannot be saved.

A man must know the Gospel before he can believe it; he must believe it before he can obey it: he must obey it before he can be saved.

Our dear Brother R. A. Daniels writes: "The grim reaper has visited our home and claimed my dear wife." The "king of terrors" shall reign till the return of the King of kings, and Lord of lords." "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly!" Sister Daniels' obituary later.

A note from Sister Ada Ashute says: "I am sending this card to let you know that we have a new baby girl. She was born January 18, 1916. I pray God will spare her and her two brothers to grow up and serve the Master." Amen.

We lost about fifty subscribers during the past year because we advocated the Sonship of Christ as an essential article of faith (1 John 5:4). We urgently ask faithful brethren to take a kindly and helpful interest in The Restitution this year, and see if they can not get as many new subscribers as our duty to God and fidelity to his word caused us to lose in 1915.

January 20th, Brother Ernest H. Blyth and Miss Leda Grabe, both of Columbus, Ohio, were united in marriage in the Church of God in this city. The church was beautifully decorated, and many brethren, sisters, and friends were present to witness the simple but beautiful ceremony, and to wish them well as they begin their new life. We all pray that they may soon become "heirs together of the grace of life, that their prayers be not hindered" (1 Pet. 3:7).

"The Holy Roman Empire of the German People," an article in this number by Brother W. L. Crowe, is the first of a series our brother proposes to write on prophetic themes. We consider futuristic interpretation of prophecy a whim of the flesh, a figment of the imagination, and are sorry Brother Crowe has woven into his otherwise excellent articles this Catholic speculation. But his articles are of great historic value, and we commend them to the attention of the reader.

We have been away from home considerably this winter, and at this writing we are on our way to Brumfield, Ky., to hold a series of meetings. Readers have doubtless noticed that The Restitution comes out as good when we are absent from home as when we are present. "There is a reason." Sister Hazel Hettinger, a good proofreader, kindly takes charge of The Restitution when we are out of the city. Brother Fred Blyth also renders valuable help. Readers of The Restitution, as well as ourselves, are deeply indebted to this sister and brother for the work they do freely and cheerfully in the interests of our paper.

Robt. G. Ingersoll approved the beatitudes. In his lecture on "What Must I Do to Be Saved?" he quotes, "Blessed are the merciful," "Blessed are the pure in heart," and after each beatitude he exclaims "Good!" He overlooked the fact, as all Universalists and sentimentalists also do, that these "blessings" carry with them an implied malediction; that the light and shadow go together even here in Christ's beatitudes. Do you demand the "proof"? Well, you shall have it! "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." What is this but the sunny aspect of the corresponding truth, "Cursed are the unmerciful, for they shall not obtain mercy"? "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Certainly, but then it follows that the impure shall not see God, and consequently are not blessed. To describe one class of men as blessed is to imply that the other classes are excluded from the blessing.

MISQUOTED AND MISUNDERSTOOD SCRIPTURES

Mistakes are often made in quoting and understanding texts of scripture. Many of them are unconsciously made in assuming mere conjectures to be facts; others are plain "mistakes"—mistakes pure and simple. Clergymen of wide reputation often make them; and it is surprising how frequently even brethren and sisters, who ought to know better, fall into such errors. We now give samples of the errors we mean:

That men were forbidden to eat animal food before the flood.

That the serpent was a snake (Gen. 3:1).

That Cain was branded ((Gen. 4:15).

That "the sons of God" were angelic beings ((Gen. 6).

That negroes descended from Canaan, who was cursed by Noah (Gen. 9:25).

That Balaam intended an exclamation in Num. 23:23: "What hath God wrought!"

That Joel gave Sisera "butter" to drink (Judges 4:19; 5:25).

That "fifty thousand and seventy men" were killed at Bethshemesh for looking into the ark (1 Sam. 6:19).

That God charged the angels with folly (Job 4:18).

That wisdom, as personified in Proverbs, refers to Christ.

That "a just man falleth seven times," means that he falls into sin (Prov. 24:16).

That "these little ones which believe in me," were literal children (Matt. 18:6, 10, 14).

That Jesus was the last person John ever baptized (Luke 3:21).

That Jesus meant little children by "lambs" (John 21:15).

That Paul preached a long-continued discourse in Troas (Acts 20:7).

That "baptism for the dead" alludes to anything but exposure to death by persecution on embracing the gospel (1 Cor. 15).

That "conversation" in Phil. 3:20, and elsewhere means discourse.

That "touch not, taste not, handle not," is the apostle's interdict (Col. 2:21).

That "abstain from all appearance of evil" means keep from what may appear evil, though it is not.

That "providing for his own house" is "a pocket edition of selfishness" (1 Tim. 5:4).

That Paul speaks of dividing asunder soul from spirit (Heb. 4:12).

That Enoch, from whom Jude quotes, was a book, divinely inspired, but which unfortunately (?) has been "lost" from the inspired canon.

From Brother Adams we learn that the new hymn books are on the press, and will soon be ready for delivery. This book is by far the most complete collection of suitable songs and hymns which the Church of God has ever had. Much credit is due Brother Adams and the Nebraska Committee, and also to Sister Goss, of Cleveland, for their untiring labors in compiling the material for this hymnal, as well as the work of getting the funds collected for the expense of printing, electrotypes, etc. The book is not published for profit and will be sold practically at cost, and the plates will be preserved for future editions. A price will be named by the time books are ready for shipment. Several have not yet sent in the money for their pledges to the printing fund. This is now needed to take care of the cost of binding, shipping, etc. Twenty or thirty more pledges ($2.00 each) are needed to complete the work.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brother Huggins: The tears flowed fast today as I read Sister Wince's letter, "Suffering, Working and Toiling," in The Restitution.

Sister Fry's question, "Does it pay to send papers to others?" has so often come to me. I have talked to strangers, have sent them papers, tracts, booklets without number, have passed on in my work and have never heard from them again. I have tried in broken tones to tell the gospel story, and have felt a heartache to know if any one cares. My greatest comfort has been in this promise and command: "In the morning sow thy seed, and at eve hold not thy hand; for he who knows the sower's need a bounteous recompense will send."

It is Sister Fry's blessed privilege to know that at least some of her seed has grown, and let us hope will bring forth a hundred fold in the harvest time. Paul may plant and Apollos water, but God alone can give the increase. I am glad that my faith in God's promises never wavers.

Brother, wait a little longer:
Let his love cast out all fear:
Let your faith in him grow stronger,
As redemption time draws near.

Yes, by all means let us continue to send out the paper, talk, write and give out tracts if by all means we may save some.

In these days of war and turmoil we may be sure that God has not forgotten the world, but is working out his purposes. He is using the madness of men to carry out his plans. Let us watch and be faithful.

Yours in hope,
J. J. BRONSON.

Peaceful and harmonious relations in human society, the blessings of friendship and the joys of affection can be the share only of him who can govern his feelings instead of allowing his feelings to govern him.

Nightly rest and daily bread, the ordinary use of our limbs and senses and understanding, are gifts which admit of no comparison with any other: yet, because almost every man we meet possesses these, we leave them out of our enumeration of blessings.

OBITUARY

John McClelland was born in Clinton county, Indiana, January 30, 1835, and died in Kokomo, Indiana, January 21, 1916, aged 80 years, 11 months and 21 days.

He was united in marriage to Naomi Hornaday November 12, 1857. To this union was born eight children, five of whom with his wife have preceded him in death. He leaves to mourn his loss three daughters, Mrs. Martha Blessing, Mrs. Effie Stanbro, Mrs. Rena Mann, and one adopted daughter, Mrs. Nellie Hines, all of Kokomo, Indiana; and besides these, nine grandchildren, eight great-grandchildren, and many other relatives and friends.

He became a member of the Church of God at Hillisburg many years ago and continued a faithful adherent to the faith till death, looking for the coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, and for the reward of the righteous. "Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep."—By his children.

Funeral services were held from the M. E. Church in Seircleville, Indiana, at 9:30 A. M., January 24, 1916, conducted by the writer, and Brother McClelland was laid to rest in the nearby cemetery.

Remarks

After spending Thanksgiving with the new church north of Holbrook, we came to town preparatory to going to Mansfield. But the brethren thought some in Holbrook wanted to hear the truth, so Brother Wilson hired a hall, and we started meetings on the 6th. The house was well filled for the first half of the meetings, then came the practice for the Christmas holidays, and the attendance dropped off. The interest was good, and we believe the seed sown will germinate and bring forth fruit. Several seemed about ready to take a stand for the right. But why did they hesitate? God alone can tell. That is one of the strange experiences we have. They seem just as much interested and just as near ready as those who start, yet they held back. Is it some hidden cause? Sometimes we see two stalks of corn start and both look healthy and grow alike for a while, and then one seems to stop growing, while the other goes on to maturity. Some unseen enemy has gotten at the vitals and checked the growth. So it may be with those who hear the Gospel. Something without or within prevents further growth.

We are now at home for a few days' rest after having been away since before Thanksgiving. We spent all the holidays away from home. One good brother out in the State sent a fine goose all ready for roasting, which was greatly appreciated by those who were at home; another good brother sent some of the substantial to help prepare the Christmas dinner. So after all the table was not bare. How these little tokens bind us together! How much they mean! They look small of themselves, but they speak volumes. God bless all for good cheer and help in spreading the blessed truth.

ALMUS ADAMS, Evangelist.

LEADING IN PRAYER

By Auntie Wince

Many a time young persons feel troubled when it becomes their duty to lead in prayer, whether it be in family worship, Young People's Meeting, Sunday School, Prayer Meeting, or in the general congregation at church; not from any desire to shirk what, in their inmost hearts, they consider a real privilege and a sacred part of Christian life, but from the fear that their addresses to God may not be such as will help others to lift their souls upward.

They want to have not only this power, but the power also to prevail with God that their prayers may be heard and answered. They want the annoying, disturbing thoughts of what others may think of their prayers from a literary or oratorical standpoint, to be shut out, and to be alone, as it were, with God, confident, sure and restful.

To gain this power they must not only wrestle at home in private prayer with God, and be sure that their relationship with the Father has not been broken by the committal of wilful sin, but they must know beforehand what the lesson for the day is to be, and make due preparation that their prayer may accord with the lesson. Jesus taught his disciples how to pray. He gave them a pattern whereby they were to fashion their prayers. This pattern we are to follow. No one goes to a king, or to any great man with no definite idea of what he wants, or how he is to present his petition. He would be but a poor trembling stammerer were he to do such a thing, and would most certainly be sent, unrewarded, away. Men, in such case, know what they are going to ask for, and study how to ask, before they go, and if their petitions are for others as well as for themselves, the added names carry added weight. If it is not proper to go to any earthly king with a petition without making special preparation it is certainly not right to go to God without. It may seem very strange to be told that you must study for your prayer, but that is the only way whereby you can come to God with confidence, and without any annoying thoughts or fear of those who are listening.

Great men never speak to an audience without preparation. Their "words have weight with others" for this very reason. Then why should men not study to pray as well as to speak? One man said, "God puts no premium on slovenliness. You need God's help if you have done your best to make yourself ready for his service. You have no right to ask his help if you have neglected preparatory thought and prayer."

Make outline plans for your prayers. If any one is sick note the fact. Do not forget those who are in trouble, and ever and always keep the great need of the unsaved in your heart. "Turn the lesson of the day into a prayer"—"a real prayer, addressed to God." It will have "its effect and its reward."

Study the Psalms; commit the prayerful ones to memory. Note the prayers of Moses, of Isaiah, of Jeremiah, of Daniel. Pray for your nation. Pray for the putting down of all evil, and above all else, pray for the coming of Jesus, that God's kingdom may come and his will be done on earth as it is done in heaven.

And dear, preaching brethren, do not, I beg of you, call upon your young people to pray, without telling them some days before that you are going to do so. The sudden shock, the rapid rush of blood to the head, that will be almost certain to follow your unwise action, will unfit them for the sacred service, even if time for reverent thought and preparation were not needed.

TAKES COURAGE TO SAY THIS

"In all too many homes the spirit of invalidism is a household goddess at whose shrine each member of the family does devotion," says Dr. R. S. Carroll, in an article in the Scientific Monthly.

The productiveness of tens of thousands of American homes, the writer asserts, is being dissipated through the humoring of the self-centered, sympathy-craving, wilful and unnecessary invalids. Isn't this the first time anyone has had the courage to criticise the professional "shut-ins?"

The drain these exacting invalids make on the family purse is not their only sin. Their greatest crime is the slavery they impose on the daughters and sisters who carry the trays, fill the hot water bags, strain the orange juice, hunt up the drafts, administer the alcohol rubs, smooth the wrinkles out of the sheets, and so on every five minutes all day.

And this "economic and spiritual waste" persists in great measure because many doctors find these invalids a most reliable source of revenue, at the cost of no anxiety to themselves.

The number of these wilful shut-ins would be reduced to the minimum in a month if all physicians were honest and brave enough to speak the truth, as Dr. Carroll has done."—Selected.

GOOD ENOUGH

"Do you think you can support my daughter in the style to which she has become accustomed?"

"No, sir, but I think I can support her in the style to which her mother had to become accustomed when she got married."—Selected.

Equable life makes an old person a comfort to himself an example of healthful prudence to his friends.

AMBITION

That life is a poor one which is without ambition—which has no object to work for, no height to strive to reach. A person may be good and kind-hearted while willing to live in idle ignorance and let the world go on growing in wealth and wisdom without his taking an active part and interest in its onward movements—he may be good, but most certainly he is dull of mind and sluggish of body. No individual destitute of ambition will make his mark in the world. He will come and go; few will note his coming and few will grieve at his going. Ambition it is that gives men the energy and the will and the determination to accomplish great things.

A good wife is the most faithful and constant companion a man can possibly have by his side while performing the journey of life. When a woman loves she loves with a double-distilled devotedness. Her love is as deep as the ocean, as strong as a hempen halter. She will not change, except it is in a very strong fit of jealousy, and even then her love lingers as if loath to depart, like evening twilight at the windows of the west.

CHARITY

True charity is the sweetest and most attractive of qualities. It smooths away the angles and rubs off the roughness and diminishes the friction of life. It adds grace to daily courtesies and makes burdens easier to be borne. The loving heart is the strong heart. The generous hand is the hand to cling to when the path is difficult. There is room for the exercise of charity everywhere—in business, in society and in the church; but first and chiefest is the need for it at home, where it is the salt which keeps all things sweet, the aroma which makes every hour charming, and the divine light which shines star-like through all gloom and depression.

REDEEM THE TIME

We are enjoined in Eph. 5:15, 16, to walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise men, redeeming the time, because the days are evil. To redeem time is to improve it. What have we done in the year that is past to redeem the time? We take so little note of time and it slips by so swiftly that we are hardly aware of its flight. A day, a month, or even a year, does not seem much to us unless we think of it seriously. But what is of more value than time? Time and life—what a combination for good if well employed! How can we best redeem the time? I think Paul helps to answer this question in Gal. 6:2, where he says: "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." But someone may say: "I have more than I feel able to bear without trying to help someone else." But Christ does not mean for you to be thus burdened, dear one. He says: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord and he shall sustain thee" (Ps. 55:22). So you are carefree to do what your hands find to do. Another text, this time by the Great Teacher himself, in Luke 10:27, says: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbor as thyself;" and Jesus adds: "This do, and thou shalt live."

This text is an epitome of the gospel; so full and complete is it that if obeyed in the spirit and the letter it is all that is necessary to produce a perfect Christian. It brings us to the ideal Paul had in mind in Eph. 4:13, where we all come into the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. We are in this blessed state when "we hence forth be no more children tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love, we may grow up into him in all things, which is the head even Christ." We all want to be like this, a grand Christian man or woman, not a pigmy or dwarf. I know of no better way to redeem the time than to living up to these texts. Let us "sow to ourselves in righteousness and reap in judgment; break up our fallow ground, for it is time to seek the Lord till he come and rain righteousness upon us (Hosea 10:12).

Beloved ones, do we realize that the time is short? I Cor. 7:29 says: "But this I say, brethren, the time is short," and Rom. 11:12 warns us that "the night is far spent, and the day is at hand: therefore cast off the works of darkness, and put on the armor of light." Let us begin this year with renewed consecration to God; let us be workers together with him. Then we can point our fellow-men to "the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." Nothing else is worth while. We are living in the time of the Laodicean church. The church is haughty and self-satisfied, boasting that she is rich and hath need of nothing. But God says she is wretched, and poor, and blind, and naked. Do you recognize the picture in today's church? O what a miserable plight to be in! Let us watch lest we grow lukewarm, for God will not tolerate that condition in his people. Let us anoint our eyes with the eye salve of his word and buy of him "gold tried by the fire." Let us repent of our shortcomings, and pray that our "sins be blotted out when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord." Lord, help us to redeem the time.

ALICE B. CURTIS.

Persevere in whatever calling you adopt. Your progress may be slow and results seemingly meager; but that is no reason for growing faint-hearted. Remember how the little brook persistently winds its way to the river and the river to the ocean—both reach their destination.

Every man who succeeds inclines to ascribe all the credit to his own ability shrewdness, industry; but when he fails he lays the blame wholly upon others, upon circumstances, upon fate.

One must fall in love with duty in order to do one's duty with content. Such love is passionless. Duty gives neither kisses nor caresses.

He that cannot forgive others breaks the bridge over which he must pass himself, for every man has need to be forgiven.

GOSSIPS

The idle levy a very heavy tax upon the industrious when by frivolous visitations they rob them of their time. Such persons beg their daily happiness from door to door as beggars their daily bread, and, like them, sometimes meet with a rebuff. A mere gossip ought not to wonder if we evince signs that we are tired of him, seeing that we are indebted for the honor of his visit solely to his being tired of himself. He sits at home until he has accumulated an insupportable load of ennui, and then he sallies forth to distribute it amongst all his acquaintances.

"There is not," says one of these wiseacres, "there is not in the New Testament any recognition of the New Testament Canon." Yet Peter intimates that after his "decease" his epistles would pass down through generations, and would "stir up" the minds and keep in the memories of believers his teaching—that the ywould have them "always in remembrance" (II Pet. 1:13, 14, 15). And in chapter 3, verses 15 and 16, he says that "all" of Paul's epistles were in the New Testament Canon, with "other Scriptures." O ye wise men, see how foolish God has made your wisdom (I Cor. 1:20)!

Give a boy tools, and let him find out for himself whether he has any mechanical taste or not. Do not discourage him, as parents are apt to do, by saying, "Oh, it is of no use for you to try to do anything with tools! I never had any taste that way, and of course you have not." If a boy finds he can make a few articles with his hand it tends to make him rely on himself; and the planning that is necessary for the execution of the work is a discipline and an education of great value to him.

To give much and expect little is one secret of good fellowship. Love will never be constrained; it melts away under the least touch of tyranny. The best beloved is he who gladly pours out the wealth of his affection without measure or comparison—who trusts his friend and feels grateful for his love and confidence, but who exacts nothing.

As it is the manly man who wins and satisfies a good woman, so it is the womanly woman who pleases and retains the desirable man. She need not be soft or silly, or weak or nervous—she may be strong, vigorous, resolute, and brave; but, whatever she is, she must be womanly in order to please.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that can not fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with questions more important to man than others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear brethren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. Single copy, 10 cents; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

HAVE YOU HEARD ABOUT THE NEW HYMN AND SONG BOOK?

A new Hymn and Song Book is now in the hands of the publishers. This book has been compiled and edited by Bro. Almus Adams and a committee selected by the Nebraska State Conference. We feel safe in saying it is absolutely free from doctrinal error, and yet has retained all the dear old favorite hymns we love—the good ones of half a dozen publications.

Write for particulars.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21, Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58), the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23) Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:11-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13: 3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:28), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). PREACHING THE TRUTH

A Narrative Reciting the Experiences of a Believer Preaching "The Truth As It Is in Jesus"

William Brown

The Blacksmith Questions Mr. Hamilton

Ladies and Gentlemen: Mr. Hamilton speaks of my contentions as "heresies," so I suppose I am, in his opinion, a heretic. Well, I find that history informs us that all who have contended faithfully for the "truth" in every age have been considered "heretics" by those who know not the truth, and the doctrines they preached were called "heresies," by the religious leaders of their day. Stephen was stoned to death for heresy, and the Apostle Paul confessed before the Roman Governor "that after the way which they call heresy so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets." If to believe all things that are written in the law and the prophets is heresy, then I am glad to take my stand with Paul and plead guilty to the charge. Calling me a "heretic," however, does not prove that the righteous go to heaven at death; and I want to call the attention of this audience to the fact, that my opponent has utterly failed to produce a single passage of scripture which can reasonably be said to prove that the righteous go to heaven at death. Before I get through I intend to prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that this doctrine is absolutely false, and that to accept it is to reject the Bible. I ask you also to notice that my opponent has departed from the subject, and has used a great deal of his time questioning me about "the soul." I am just as well satisfied, however, that he has done this, for the doctrine of "the immortality of the soul" which he believes, is at the root of all religious misconception. This doctrine is the great dividing line between truth and error. You cannot enter the domain of religious truth until you cross this line and leave this doctrine behind you. My opponent in his closing remarks tells us it must be true, because so many believe it and he mentions the Hindoos, Chinese, Mohammedans and even the Greek philosophers Socrates and Plato, etc. Well, all I can say about this is, that unless he can find some more reliable witnesses his case is sure to be thrown out of the court of common reason. Who would care to have a question which involves eternity submitted to the vote of heathen idolaters who bow down to the stock of a tree and worship the work of their own hands? What means had they of knowing the truth about immortality or the future reward? They had no revelation from God: and they could not of themselves penetrate beyond the boundary line of human experience. One by one they went down in death; also their fathers, mothers, sisters and brothers; they buried them or sacrificed them to their gods of wood or stone and then they saw them no more; none returned from the great abyss of death to tell them what was there. And so their testimony, like all merely human testimony on this matter, is worthless. We thank God that he has given us a book which tells us whence we came, what we are, and whither we go. To this book, the Bible, let us appeal.

Mr. Stephanus then proceeded to question Mr. Hamilton.

Mr. Stephanus: Mr. Hamilton, can you tell me of a single instance recorded in the Bible of one going to heaven at death?

Mr. Hamilton: What about Enoch and Elijah?

Mr. Stephanus: Did they die?

Mr. Hamilton: No, they were translated, so the Bible says.

Mr. S.: Exactly, and the fact that they were taken from the earth alive and in full bodily form does not prove that those who die go to heaven. I repeat my question, Can you tell me of a single instance in the Bible of one going to heaven at death?

Mr. H.: What about Christ?

Mr. S.: Did Christ go to heaven at death?

Mr. H.: He went there after he arose from the grave.

Mr. S.: Then it was after his resurrection that he ascended to heaven?

Mr. H.: Certainly, after his resurrection.

Mr. S.: Did he go to heaven in bodily form?

Mr. H.: Yes, in bodily form, his disciples saw him ascend.

Mr. S.: Is this the way you contend that men go to heaven at death?

Mr. H.: No, only their souls go there; their bodies remain in the grave until the resurrection at the last day.

Mr. S.: Exactly; and what I want to know is this: there are a great many deaths recorded in the scriptures, many of them righteous men and prophets; can you tell me of one single instance where one of those who died expressed the hope or expectation of going to heaven when he died, or do you know of a single instance where the Bible speaks of them as being in heaven after they died?

Mr. H.: Well, no. We are not told so, and in fact I do not think the "grand secret" is ever revealed to us until, as Lord Tennyson expresses it, "we have crossed the bar."

Mr. S.: Then it is a secret that is not revealed until after death?

Mr. H.: I am inclined to think so.

Mr. S.: In view of the fact that you are still alive, how did you come to know this grand secret so well that you were willing to enter into a debate on the subject?

Mr. H.: I have every confidence in the truth of the faith I hold. While there may not be any definite statements in the scriptures which express our belief in so many words, yet there are guide posts along the way that point in that right direction, and which indicate the course we should take, and though "now we see through a glass darkly," the time will come when we shall see face to face."

Mr. S.: That is a sad admission. It is equal to saying. I may be right, but I am not sure. I would commend to you the exhortation of Peter, who said: "We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well to take heed as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn and the day star arise in your heart" (2 Pet. 1:19). Mr. Hamilton, what is your honest belief with regard to all the righteous dead of past ages and those also who have died in our day?"

Mr. H.: I believe they are in that happy state pictured in Rev. 14:1-3, in which it speaks of them as being in heaven playing upon harps, and singing the new songs.

Mr. S.: Are you not aware that this is a picture illustrating events that are still future?

Mr. H.: I prefer to consider it as a literal statement.

Mr. S.: You commit yourself to considerable absurdity. In the first place you will remember that when John saw this vision he was on the isle called Patmos (Rev. 1:9), and island in the Aegean Sea; and it says he saw a lamb with 144,000 on Mount Zion. Now Mount Zion is in Jerusalem, which at this time was a heap of ruins in possession of the Romans. Now if you consider this statement in Rev. 14:1-3 as a literal statement, then you commit yourself to the belief that John, from a remote island in the Aegean Sea, saw in Jerusalem, some hundreds of miles away, a lamb with 144,000 standing on a hill in that ruined city. Mr. Hamilton, do you believe this in its literal sense? And I would also like to know if you think the four beasts mentioned were literal beasts, and if the harps of this multitude were attuned and their voices lifted in song to the brute creation?

Mr. H.: Well, you put it rather strongly. I had not considered it quite so literally as that.

Mr. S.: Just another point. If the righteous are in heaven playing on harps, they must have bodies, seeing that fingers are required to play a harp. Now you said a little while ago that it was only "the soul" that went to heaven; and by "the soul" you mean something that is "immaterial, without body or parts." How do you explain this?

Mr. H.: That is easily explained. Paul says in 1 Cor. 15:38: "But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him."

Mr. S.: Then you think the soul enters a new body when it gets to heaven?

Mr. H.: Yes.

Mr. S.: Do you believe in the resurrection and judgment to take place at the last day (John 5:28; 6:39, 40)?

Mr. H.: I do.

Mr. S.: What is to be raised?

Mr. H.: The body.

Mr. S.: Can the body live without the soul?

Mr. H.: Certainly not.

Mr. S.: When this great day arrives and the body is raised from the dead, and the soul in heaven has already taken up its residence in another body, you will have two bodies for one soul. How is this difficulty to be adjusted?

Mr. H.: I refuse to answer.

Mr. S.: Very well; we will not press you on that point, as we appreciate your difficulty. I would like to ask you, however, what the resurrection and judgment are for. What purpose do they serve in God's eternal plan?

Mr. H.: It is the time when God takes account of his servants to see how they have served him, and to divide the sheep from the goats, and reward the righteous and punish the wicked.

Mr. S.: But this has already been done, if your theory be true. The righteous are in heaven and the wicked in hell. The "Westminster Confession of Faith," which is the statement of faith accepted by the Presbyterians states that the souls of the righteous at death do immediately pass into glory, and on the other hand the souls of the wicked go into a state of torment. Here then, according to this theory, there are millions of souls in heaven enjoying its bliss, and other millions of souls suffering the tortures of hell. Are these souls to be brought back from heaven and from hell to stand before the bar of justice and mercy?

Mr. H.: As far as I can see they must stand before the Judge at the last day.

Mr. S.: What for?

Mr. H.: To be judged.

Mr. S.: Judged! After they have been condemned or approved?

Mr. H.: I must admit it looks incongruous.

Mr. S.: It is worse than that; it is a reflection upon God's wisdom. It would appear as if God, after the righteous had been basking in pleasure for ages and the wicked had been writhing in torture for an equal period, had become apprehensive that a mistake might have been made, and that some who were in hell should have been in heaven and vice versa, and so he brings them all together again for judgment. I say it is a reflection on an all-wise God which no true believer would entertain for a moment. Mr. Hamilton, have you ever considered the case of Hezekiah?

Mr. H.: Yes, I am quite familiar with his history; he was one of the best of Judah's kings.

Mr. S.: I want to read to you the recommendation which the word of God gives him. It is found in 2nd Chron. 31:21 as follows: "And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the commandments, to seek his God, he did it with all his heart and prospered." Now if this heaven-going theory is true, don't you think that a man like Hezekiah would be sure to know it?

Mr. H.: No doubt he did.

Mr. S.: Why then, when he came to death's door, did he weep and lament and pray to the Lord, and when the Lord answered his prayer and added fifteen years to his life why did he bless and praise him? Was he glad because the Lord kept him out of heaven for fifteen years more?

Mr. H.: Well, it does seem strange, but then we are all timid in the face of death.

Mr. S.: Have you ever noticed the reason Hezekiah gives for not wanting to die?

Mr. S.: It was not timidity or uncertainty. On the contrary he knew exactly where he would go at death and what state he would be in. He expressed it in the following words: "Behold, for peace I had great bitterness; but thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption; for thou hast cast all my sins behind my back. For the grave can not praise thee, death can not celebrate thee, they that go down into the pit can not hope for thy truth. The living, the living, he shall praise thee as I do on this day" (Isa. 38:17-19). So you see it was because he knew that death would place him in the pit of corruption and beyond the power to praise and serve the Lord that he lamented at the thought of death. Mr. Hamilton, do you still think that Hezekiah expected to go to heaven?

Mr. H.: It does not appear so.

Mr. S.: There was another great king of Israel who is referred to in the scriptures as a man after God's own heart (Acts 13:22). Have you considered his case?

Mr. H.: You refer to David.

Mr. S.: Yes. What became of him at death?

Mr. H.: I suppose he received the reward of the righteous.

Mr. S.: Have you ever read Acts 2:34?

Mr. H.: I can not recollect. I suppose I must have read it sometime.

Mr. S.: It states distinctly that David did not ascend to heaven. and the 29th verse tells us that he is both dead and buried." Have you ever considered the 11th chapter of Hebrews?"

Mr. H.: Oh, yes. Many times.

Mr. S.: What do you find there with regard to the reward of the righteous?

Mr. H.: I have not noticed so much about the reward, but have always considered it a grand dissertation on faith.

Mr. S.: Are you aware that the 39th and 40th verses tell us plainly that they died in the faith, and did not receive the promised reward, that they must wait until a future day when all will be rewarded together?

Mr. H.: I had not noticed that.

Mr. S.: Have you ever read John 3:16?

Mr. H.: Yes. I have preached dozens of sermons from that text.

Mr. S.: What about John 3:13?

Mr. H.: Let me see; why, I don't seem to remember it.

Mr. S.: The next time you preach from John 3:16 I would advise you to extend your vision just three verses above and read the context in the 13th verse. In conclusion I have one or two questions on the soul. Do you really believe the soul is immortal?

Mr. H.: With all my heart.

Mr. S.: What is an immortal soul?

Mr. H.: An indestructible, imperishable, never-dying entity.

Mr. S.: Is your belief based upon the testimony of scripture?

Mr. H.: Yes, the scriptures speak often about the soul.

Mr. S.: About an immortal soul? Can you give me a single passage that speaks about an immortal soul?

Mr. H.: Well, I don't know that the words "immortal soul" are used; but still the soul must be immortal, otherwise man would disappear altogether.

Mr. S.: If I produce from the word of God passages of scripture which prove that the soul is destructible, perishable and subject to death, will you accept the fact that man is mortal and unconscious in death?

Mr. H.: You would have great difficulty in proving that.

Mr. Stephanus then addressed the audience.

Ladies and Gentlemen: I have a few moments left, and I want to call your attention to the fact that my opponent has utterly failed to produce a single testimony from the Bible to show that the righteous go to heaven at death, or to prove that other point which he has brought up, that the soul is immortal. Now the following facts have been brought out in this discussion:

1. There is no record of any of the righteous having gone to heaven at death.

2. It is positively stated concerning one righteous man (David) that he did not go to heaven. And concerning the righteous of past ages, that they did not receive their reward as yet

3. It is stated in the new testament that no man hath ascended to heaven.

4. There is not a promise of heaven to the righteous in all the Bible.

5. The only argument advanced to support the doctrine of the immortality of the soul is that the soul must be immortal, an assertion without proof.

And now in closing I have the following facts for your consideration:

1. The soul is not immortal, because it is spoken of as being destroyed (Ezekiel 22:27; Acts 3:23), of dying (Psa. 78:50, Job 7:15), of being saved from the grave (Psa. 49:16, Isa. 38:17).

2. The righteous do not go to heaven at death, because, in the first place, there is no passage of scripture which says so; and in the second place it is distinctly stated that "the righteous are to be recompensed in the earth" (Prov. 11:31); that they are to inherit the earth (Matt. 5:5); that they are to dwell in the earth forever (Psa. 37: 22, 29); that they are to reign on the earth (Rev. 5:10).

There is much more that might be said, but I think the subject has been sufficiently discussed, and I am sure that those who have eyes to see and ears to hear will recognize the fact that the things we have contended for are the true teaching of the holy men of old who wrote the scriptures by the power of God. (Time called.)

MANAEN, THE FOSTER SON OF HEROD THE GREAT

By S. Roxana Wince

The Acts of the Apostles is a wonderful story book. If we had never read it I think we would not lay it down, once we had commenced it, until we came to the closing verse of the last chapter. But some of its stories, fascinating as they are, no one seems ever to have unraveled and retold either for children or grownups. That of Manaen is one of these. Acts 13:1 says he was "brought up with Herod the Tetrarch," that was Herod Antipas, the son of Herod the Great, the latter being the wicked Idumean or Edomite king of the Jews, who murdered Marianne, his beautiful Asmonean wife; her brother Aristotulus, the high priest; her grandfather, her father and uncle, his own sons, his friends, his subjects and the innocent babes of Bethlehem.

Who would have thought that the foster son of such a man would ever become a teacher of the religion of Jesus, one of the founders of a prominent church, and one among those chosen of the Lord to lay dedicating hands on Paul and Barnabas? But somehow the gospel found him and set him to preaching for the very Christ whom Herod had sought to slay.

Herod Antipas and his brother Archelaus were sons of the same mother, Malthace, a Samaritan, and were brought up at home with their foster brother, Manaen, and their half brother, Herod Philip II., son of the infamous Egyptian Queen, Cleopatra, but the two first named were afterward sent to Rome to be educated, says Smith's Bible Dictionary. Jamieson, Fausset and Brown say that Antipas and Manaen were "brought up with a certain private person at Rome," and refer to Josephus as authority. Joanna, the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward, was a follower of Jesus, and ministered to him of her substance, and it is thought that the nobleman or courtier whose son Jesus healed also belonged to Herod's household. Did Joanna, did the courtier, have anything to do with teaching Manaen about Jesus? We can only guess.

We find him at Antioch, a town on the river Crontes, in the northwestern part of Syria. Barnabas too was there, and Simeon that was called Niger and Lucius of Cyrene, the latter a kinsman, and an after helper of Paul. Of Simeon and Manaen no mention outside of this 14th chapter of Acts is made.

The disciples who had been scattered by the persecution that followed the death of Stephen had traveled as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the word to none but the Jews. But others, "men of Cyprus and Cyrene," when they were come to Antioch, spake unto the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus. "And the hand of the Lord was with them, and a great number believed and turned unto the Lord" (Acts 12:19-27) (Simeon and Manaen coming probably from Cyprus or Cyrene). And that is how the church at Anticoh was founded.

Barnabas was not there at the first, but the church at Jerusalem, hearing about the wonderful work that was being done, sent him forth, "who when he came and had seen the grace of God, was glad. * * * For he was a good man and full of the holy spirit and of faith, and much people were added unto the Lord." This was the same Barnabas who took Paul to the church at Jerusalem and told them the story of his miraculous conversion, and now he wanted Paul, and set out to hunt him up. And when he had found him he brought him to Antioch. "And it came to pass that a whole year they assembled themselves with the church and taught much people."

And Simeon and Lucius and Manaen, "as they ministered to the Lord and fasted, the holy Ghost said, 'Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them.' And when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away."

How little Herod thought when he adopted the little Manaen that he would be one of the number who would set about preparing the cabinet for the coming kingdom of that baby king of the Jews whom he supposed he had put out of the way forever.

No wonder the Lord laughs and has in derision the rulers who set themselves against him. In vain may they break his bands asunder and cast away his cords from them. He will set his son upon his holy hill of Zion. I glory in the story of Manaen for this very reason.

CULTIVATE THE SPIRIT OF FORGIVENESS

"Then came Peter to him and said, Lord, how oft shalt my brother sin against me and I forgive him? Till seven times?" (Matt. 18.21)

If you ask an intelligent Roman Catholic why their church teaches so many things not authorized by the scriptures asually they will quote 2 Thess. 2:15: "Therefore, brethren, stand fast and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word or our epistle." In Rom. 6:17; 2 Tim. 1:13; Jude 3, Paul makes clear what he means by "traditions." Our Lord was continually having trouble with the scribes and the pharisees respecting the "traditions of the elders." His disciples were often influenced by this.

In Amos 1:3 we read: "Thus saith the Lord, for three transgressions of Damascus, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof." The traditions, or rather the opinion of the elders, determined that this text meant "That three offenses are to be remitted, but not the fourth." Peter being influenced by the judgment of many of the doctors of the law, puts the three and four together and asks whether he must forgive "till seven times." This attitude of heart and mind is that of the fleshly mind. We often hear brethren say: "I forgive, but can not forget." In other words, their forgiveness has "a string attached to it," ready to renew estrangement at the slightest supposed slight or provocation. Notice our Lord's answer to Peter: "I say not unto thee, Until seven times but until seventy times seven." Our Lord means by this nothing less than that we should forgive a brother or sister an indefinite number of times.

Read carefully Luke 17:1-5. Our Lord knew and intimated how much sin and scandal is occasioned by a severe, quarrelsome temper in his brethren. Jesus realized that this spirit would not only stir up the corrupt fleshly mind of those with whom they contend, but would lead others to think meanly of a profession which has so little efficacy to soften and sweeten the temper of those who maintain it.

Read Matt. 6:12, 14, 15; 18:15-35. Our Lord's disciples recognized the beauty of this arrangement, but how could they comply with the conduct required and prescribed by this rule. Notice we are required to forgive all those who do not repent (change their mind); we are to pray for them and to wait for an opportunity of doing them good; but our friendly intercourse with such as have been evidently injurious and obstinately (self-willed) persist in their evil attitude, and our confidence in them, or esteem of their character, must necessarily be in some measure interrupted. Read Matt. 5:43-48; Rom. 12:14-21.

Some people are so constituted that insult and ignominy affects them but little; this proceeds from a callous and indifferent temperament. People of this disposition are usually cold, phlegmatic, stoical, insensible alike to kindness or unkindness. But not so with the brethren of Christ. The truth softens, mellows and refines our natures and dispositions. Peter says so: "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature" (character or disposition). Paul expresses this same thought: "For they verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasure; but he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness." Again in Rom. 8:9: Paul says: "If any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his."

Peter knew Christ probably better than any other man; listen to what he says: "Who when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." "Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness; by whose stripes ye were healed." Beloved, there are scenes in the life of Jesus that arrest and hold my attention as though spellbound. At the climax of his own terrible woe and sufferings, forsaken by his loved and trusted brethren, forsaken apparently by his own loving Father; prostrate, nude, his limbs and arms extended upon that cruel cross; the shout of fiendish delight of his false traducers and murderers; the cruel nails piercing those hands that blessed so many, and those weary feet that trod the winepress of God's wrath alone—amid all this his faltering voice mingles with the shout of his murderers: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Beloved, your nature and feelings, my sensibility to pain, can never equal the tender sensibilities of his holy mind and disposition; he especially was keenly sensible to ingratitude and injury, whether this was manifested in the malice, of undisguised enmity or the treachery of trusted friendship. Have we this wonderful mind of Christ? Can we forgive and forget? Notice his first thought after rising from the dead is of those who had a few hours before basely forsook him and fled when he most needed their love and sympathy: "Go tell my brethren"—what? "Tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you unto Galilee." And in that room, gathered together in fear of the Jews "came Jesus and stood in their midst, and said unto them, Peace be unto you." * * * Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord."

There is one character I dearly love in the Old Testament, and that is Joseph, the type in so many ways of Jesus. Read the account of how he forgave his brethren and wept over them, but there lurked a sting in his greeting to his brethren "Whom ye sold into Egypt." Jesus nowhere reminds his disciples of their lack of loyalty to him; all is forgiven. He forgives and blesses them. Glorious benediction, "Peace be unto you."

Beloved, make this year our best year. I have resolved to harbor no resentful thought, indulge in no bitter recrimination, not to surrender my mind to any sullen fretfulness. I will endeavor to cultivate the law of kindness in my heart. Beloved, let you and I strive to put the best construction on the failings of our brethren—yes, in fine, everybody. Do as our Sisters' Aid Society intends to do: Make no injurious comments on the frailties of others, no unkind and uncharitable insinuations, remembering the scriptural injunction, "Consider thyself, lest thou also be tempted." When inclined or disposed to cherish an unforgiving spirit toward another, think—if thy God had retained his anger for ever, where wouldst thou have been? If he, the Infinite One, who might have spurned thee for ever from his presence, in oblivion and death, hath had patience with thee and forgiven thee all; wilt thou, dear brother or sister, on account of some petty grievance, which thy calmer moments while in prayer, in secret alone with God, would pronounce unworthy of a thought, indulge in the look of cold estrangement, the unrelenting word or unforgiving deed? "If any man have a quarrel against any, even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye."

EDITORIAL

We are sorry to report that Brother Chas. P. Graham died in Wapella, Ill., January 19, 1916.

There are few things which contribute so largely alike to the happiness and success of each individual and to the welfare of the community as for men and women to pursue excellence in their work for its own sake, and find in that excellence a pleasure which recompenses them for all the toil they have undergone.

Paul, the "great scholar" Paul, "expounded and testified the kingdom of God, and persuaded them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets" at Rome for two whole years in his own hired house, and he did it with "all confidence"! (Acts xxiii:23, 30, 31). How could he preach the kingdom and Jesus "out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets" "with all confidence" unless he had "all confidence" in their writings? Those writings wherein Paul had "all confidence," our Higher Critics have no confidence in at all!

Through one who believes Jesus is Joseph's son, we are informed that he has come to share the conviction of "great scholars," that is, he now doubts the authenticity and inspiration of many parts of the Old Testament. On the other hand Paul says he believed "all things which are written in the law and in the prophets" (Acts xxiv:14). "All things." This from the apostle Paul, and he an "educated gentleman," too!

THE IMAGINATION OF THE YOUNG

Not only or chiefly for intellectual progress should the imagination of the young be strengthened, but for moral growth. The child should be trained to think more about others and less about himself, to imagine the physical condition, the state of mind, and the feelings of another, to put himself in his place, and as far as possible to enter into his individuality. In this way sympathy is created, and the desire to do him good and not evil springs up. No crusade against selfishness can be half so effective as this.

THE SACREDNESS OF A PROMISE

One of the most important precepts to be gravely and solemnly urged upon the consideration of the young is the sacredness of a promise. There are persons who would shrink in horror from the charge of habitual untruthfulness who yet do not hesitate to break any pledge which they may make when it comes in conflict with the selfish desire of the hour. That they disregarded it in a fit of anger is put forth as a grave and befitting excuse by those who should be ashamed of so childish a plea. The early training which produces no better fruit than this case needs have been sadly defective. Let parents and teachers look to it that strict integrity with regard to this keystone of moral excellence be carefully enforced by line upon line and precept upon precept, and, better still, by example upon example.

WHY I BELIEVE IN SICKNESS AND TROUBLE

Not because I want to, but because I have to. Because I believe in quinine, which isn't half so sweet as sugar, but is a much better febrifuge. Because I don't believe that an athlete can train for a Marathon race on ice cream and soda and fudge. Because I don't believe that pickle and cake are good muscle-builders for the tennis and basket ball girl. Because I believe that the greatest victory of the Revolutionary war was Valley Forge. I believe in the strengthening discipline of sickness and trouble because men don't go to a rose garden to look for ship timber. I believe that Napoleon was defeated by his succession of victories while Wellington was victorious through his many defeats. Because I believe that America was discovered while a starving navigator was being turned away from palace doors under the smarting scourge of scientific geographers. Because I believe a man who never had an ache never had a pleasure. Because a horse that is allowed to feed himself from the bin and have the run of the pasture never wins a race. Because I believe in the old Arab proverb, "All sunshine makes the desert." Because a snow-fed river lasts through the summer drouth. Because Jacob saw a vision that all the world still looks at, when his head was pillowed on a stone in the desert. Because David learned to govern Egypt in the cave of Adullam, and Joseph learned high statecraft in an Egyptian prison. Because people who get everything they want and get it easy, die crying for the moon. Because I believe in this "world ye shall have tribulation."—Selected.

A NEW YEAR'S SERMON

"Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip" (Heb. 2:1).

We have reached the close of another year. Many persons look back and are not satisfied, and they say, "Well, we will turn over a new leaf." and they honestly are anxious to accept the brighter hope, and to have the better joy. To such I wish to speak of three things you ought not to do; and of three things that, by the grace of God, you ought to do.

I. The Three Things You Ought Not to Do

1. Never study astronomy without a telescope. Look at the stars just as they are on a clear night, and view the heavens by day, and you will get a very false idea of the sky. You will think some of the stars revolve around the earth, and that the earth is the center of the universe. And why? Because you look with unaided eyes. The eye needs the telescope.

Men talk of God who know nothing about him. They look at him through human eyes. The Book of God is the Christian's telescope. Then, at the beginning of the year make it your resolve, "I will read the Bible." "I'll look at God and Jesus Christ through his Word."

2. Never trust in wishing. A great many people think they are free from sin, because they say, "Now we are going to lead a new life." An old Italian proverb says, "The road to hell is paved with good wishes." Railroad trains are not run by wishing. Young man, you say, "I'll get to the kingdom of heaven." Where is your power? "Oh," you say, "I'm a man of intellect; a man of will; and when I make up my mind, I'll do it." You'll be just like a piece of thistle-down in a cyclone. What you want is the help of the Lord Jesus Christ; the power of a living, personal Redeemer, and the gospel, "the power of God unto salvation" (Rom. 1:16).

3. When going up a mountain, never be your own guide. A great many young men do not want their father's or mother's advice; nor the minister's advice. They can paddle their own canoe. With them all wisdom dwells. Yet has anyone ever seen tomorrow? Then take him for your guide who knows the path. "You have not gone this way before." Christ knows the destiny of the universe. He knows the end from the beginning.

II. Three Things You Ought to Do

1. Seek first to obtain the pearl of great price. In the East some Mohammedans wear a green turban; it is a mark of great honor; it shows that they have been to Mecca. People say, "Look! look at that man, he has been to Mecca!" But we do not want to go to Mecca, but to the cross of Christ, that people may say, "Look! look at that man who has been to the cross!" Neapolitans say, "See Naples and die!" We say to you today, "See Jesus Christ and die—die to sin forever."

2. Be sure you have a place of refuge. If a storm is brewing out on the Atlantic you will see the vessels making for a harbor, and the harbor will be crowded. They have a place to go to. If you have no place to go to, you are like a ship out on the Atlantic. Jesus Christ is a shelter in the time of storm. "He is a hiding place from the wind, a covert from the tempest."

3. Have a place to live in. The young man says he has had plenty of home life. But you need a place where you can live for ever and ever. The child lives in its mother's arms; the bough lives in the oak; the branch lives in the vine, and the soul lives in Christ.

COMMUNICATIONS

Someone has asked through the paper whether they can fellowship in the breaking of bread with a sister who plays for dances. I do not see what Bible authority they would have to disfellowship her, and the Bible must be our guide. I can not find where the Bible forbids dancing, neither do I think it encourages it. I find where it admonishes us to "keep ourselves unspotted from the world." "Come out from among them, and be ye separate." Are we looking for the coming of the Lord? If so, we should always try to do that which will be pleasing to him. If we have any doubt in our minds as to whether a certain thing is wrong or not, let us be on the safe side and deny ourselves the pleasures of this world rather than displease the Father. He has done so much for us; I do not think we half realize what he does do and will do for his children who live close to his commandments. In the case of destroying Sodom, only think for the sake of ten righteous people he would have spared that wicked city; but when the ten righteous could not be found, and he must destroy the city, he called out the ones who were worthy of protection.

Brothers and sisters, let us strive every day of our lives to live close to God, and in these last evil days he will watch over and care for us. Let us never neglect meeting with the brethren, either in a church capacity or in a social way, for we are always built up and strengthened by doing so. Let us put aside the little hindrances that keep us away from the house of God, for all temporal things will soon pass away.

If the sister under discussion is playing for dances because she feels it is necessary to supply temporal needs, let us hope that some other way may open up so that she will not have to do it. And in the meantime that she will not let it interfere with her Christian duties, and that the brethren of her church give her a helping hand rather than disfellowship her.

MARY KNOWLES.

HOW ARE THE DEAD RAISED UP?

I wish to suggest a few thoughts on resurrection and future life in the hope that they may be useful to the brethren. I am alone in the truth here, and it is with a keen sense of regret that I notice how the brethren are divided on the question of resurrection.

There must be many others who, like myself, are seeking to learn the truth, and are finding it difficult to decide just where truth lies on a subject of which we have so few details. It is not my intention to advocate any theory, but rather to examine some of the thoughts presented by others, compare them with what is written in the Bible, and leave the reader to form his own conclusions.

"How are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come" (1 Cor. 15:35)? To ask this question in doubt and unbelief is foolish, as it then shows doubt of the powers of God; on the other hand, to ask it with a sincere desire to learn the testimony of the scriptures on this subject may be wise and useful.

What is man? If we can find the time to answer this question it may help us to learn how man is reformed and his identity preserved after he has returned to the dust. "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul" (Gen. 2:7). In the formation of man we have—

First: A divine plan on record (Gen. 1:26).

Second: A divine workmanship.

Third: A model in the person of God himself.

Fourth: Dust of the ground.

Fifth: The breath of life coming from the fountain of life—that is, God (Psa. 36:9).

These things were all united in the person of Adam. He stood upon his feet a living man. This applies to men in general. What about the individual; where does personal identity come in?

My thoughts on this question are that personality and identity are the result of two causes: First, a variation of the divine plan. No two people are exactly alike. There is also a difference of the use we make of the God given powers in the development of character. Over the latter only have we any control.

In support of my idea that God has a special design for each individual man, I call attention to the following examples:

Isaac; Samuel; Samson; Isaiah; Jeremiah, John the Baptist; Jesus Christ.

I submit that the special physical and mental qualities with which these men were endowed were not accidental; on the contrary, they were the result of divine design, and in each case the design adapted them for the special purpose they were to fulfill.

In the case of Christ (Ps. 139:15): "My substance was not hid from thee when I was made in secret and curiously wrought in the lower parts of the earth. Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being imperfect, and in thy book all my members were written which in continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them." Here we have absolute proof that the identity of Christ was on record before he was formed. That this record would preserve his identity at birth and at resurrection. He could not be mistaken for another man.

What is true of Christ is true of all his people, even down to the smallest detail. Even the hairs of our head are numbered.

The second means of identification is the use men make of their God-given powers in the development of character. This record supplements the original divine design; and these two records constitute individual identity.

I now take a step forward in my subject when I state that these records become physical. When Christ was born in Bethlehem and grew to manhood his character developed and grew with him. Not only were his actions recorded in heaven, but they were recorded in his physical being. Character makes or mars the physical man; and none can hide its records, try how they will.

Actions repeated become habit; habit continued becomes character; and character writes its record in the flesh, whether we will or not.

We have, then, two sets of records: one the physical man on earth, the other recorded in God's book in heaven. The first is weak, subject to decay and death; the second is safe in God's keeping.

I will now endeavor to illustrate my thoughts of personal identity by reference to the graphophone. One great mark of personality is the human voice. Let us suppose that Gladstone had spoken into the receiver of a graphophone; it would now be possible to reproduce Gladstone's voice—not some other voice, but Gladstone's voice, in which would be preserved his identity, or rather one item of his identity. This was made possible by the record which has been preserved. If all the records were destroyed it would no longer be possible to reproduce the voice, unless someone was skillful enough to reproduce from memory every line and tracing on the original record.

If so much can be done by man, can we doubt the power of God to reproduce the individual man and preserve his identity?

Form

I now present a few thoughts about form. Growing in the forest, we call it a tree; felled and cut into lengths, we call it logs; at the mill it becomes timber; in the hands of the carpenter it becomes a box, a table or a boat. In each case the name attaches to the form, and not to the material.

In the case of man dust of the ground in the hands of the Divine Workman becomes Adam; not because it is dust, but because it has assumed that special form. By "form" I understand not only the outward appearance, but all that marvelous mechanism of the human organism that excited David's wonder when he exclaimed: "We are fearfully and wonderfully made."

Material

My next thought is that identity does not attach to material; if it did it would change many times during an ordinary life. The material that once was part of man may change, and in course of time become part of vegetable or animal life, while the man is still alive, without the change affecting his identity in the least.

Life

We are now ready to consider life. There is only one source of life, that is God; and though life may be manifested through many organisms, there is only one kind of life. The life we possess now and eternal life does not differ in kind, but rather in duration. We know that our present possession of life will end, but look forward to time when we shall live again to die no more.

Death

We may define death as loss of life. It is the nature of all organisms when life is lost to return to the original unorganized state. Man is no exception to this rule. His breath goeth forth, he returns to his dust. I therefore conclude that when man's form is dissolved and returned to dust the man is non-existent.

Believing thus, how important the question, "If a man die shall he live again?" Now that the dead are raised up (live again), Moses, Job, David, Peter, Paul, and, greatest of all, Jesus Christ, teach, and teach in language that can not be misunderstood. This fact is the basis of our hope and the means by which God purposes to fulfill those great and precious promises. Peter tells us that it is by those we are to be made partakers of the divine nature.

Character and Nature

Here I wish to say a few words about character and nature. These terms are often confused and used interchangeably. By "nature" I understand those qualities bestowed on us by pro-creation and birth as distinguished from a certain line of conduct which, persisted in, becomes habitual and is known as "character."

Men differ very widely in character, but all have the same nature; the good and the evil alike grow old and die. No line of conduct, no matter how noble, will prevent the hair growing gray, the step feeble. It is our mortal nature, and leads to the grave.

In the gospel God has revealed his purpose to bestow on man a divine nature. My studies of the scriptures have convinced me that the development of a pure and noble character is an indispensable pre-requisite to endless life. Such a character can only be the result of faith in and obedience to the gospel. First, by the remission of the sins that are past. second, by a life of patient continuance in well doing, culminating in a resurrection to glory, honor and immortality.

Character can not be bestowed on an individual by a divine act. In contrast to this, we know that in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, we can be changed from the mortal to the divine nature (1 Cor. 15).

Then, pure in character and deathless in nature, the saints take the kingdom and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever.

Brothers and sisters of the Church of G what records are we writing in our daily lives? are they such that we can meet our Lord with joy and not be ashamed at his coming? God grant that it may be so. JOHN PARKER.

"THE HOPE OF ISRAEL"

In company with Sisters Lang and Huggins we called recently at the home of Mrs. Waffle, in Cleveland. She denied, during the conversation in the afternoon, all faith and hope in the Abrahamic and Davidic covenants. We addressed a letter to her a few days later, and as it deals with some of the vital aspects of the gospel, we pass it on to the readers of The Restitution:

Dear Mrs. Waffle:

I am sending you this letter to thank you for the privilege and pleasure of calling at your home last Wednesday afternoon. When anyone asks me for a reason of my hope I always feel it is my duty to give the same "in meekness and fear" (1 Pet. 3:15). "The servant of the Lord must not strive," says Paul; "but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient; in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth" (2 Tim. 2:24, 25). It was made quite evident to me by my first interview with you that you breathe the spirit of benevolence and humanity toward man, and of reverence, subjection and devotion toward God. I can not think, therefore, that you will be displeased if I approach you again in an effort to instruct you in meekness and in prayerful endeavor to get you to "acknowledge the truth."

At the meeting in your home last Wednesday it was developed by reiterated affirmations that you were hoping for one thing, and I another. Now as there is only "one hope" offered in the gospel (Eph. 4:4), one or both of us must be wrong—both can not be right. The matter is so vital as to jeopardize our salvation, and therefore we should give it serious, deliberate, sober thought and study. Accepting Mrs. Bailey as a competent exponent of your views, if I did not grossly misunderstand her, you believe that the covenant God made with Abraham, and also the covenant he made with David, belong only to these patriarchs and their natural descendants, the Jews; they have no application either to us or to Christ. Now I am bold to say that if the word of God means what it says, and is to be believed at all, both these covenants belong to Christ and his brethren. In speaking of his "kinsman according to the flesh," who certainly were literal Jews, Paul says: "To whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises" (Rom. 9:3, 4). Were these "covenants" and "promises" exclusively for his "kinsman according to the flesh?" Were they for the Jews only? Are they intended for the Gentiles, and offered to them in the gospel? As an apostle of the Gentiles (Rom. 11:13), Paul is peculiarly fitted to answer these questions. Listen now to him in language specifically addressed to the Gentiles: "Ye being in times past Gentiles in the flesh. * * * At that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world; but now * * *" (Eph. 2:11-13).

In this scripture the apostle Paul, who was "circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew of the Hebrews" (Phil 3:5), distinctly says that the same "covenants" and "promises" which were made to his "kinsman according to the flesh" are offered to the Gentiles. You must see from the apostle's language here, Mrs. Waffle, that "the Gentiles are made fellow-heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel" (Eph. 3:6). If then we are aliens from the "wealth" that is "common" to Israel (for this is the meaning of the word "commonwealth"), and if we are strangers to the "covenants of promise" which God has made to Israel, we are in an unfortunate predicament indeed. If we choose Israel's "covenants" and "promises," make them ours, we become "partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel;" if we reject them, say they belong to the Jews and not to us, we make ourselves "aliens" to the one and "strangers" to the other; and the result is we are left in the world without the gospel, covenants, promises, hope. Christ and God! We must make our choice. God help us to choose wisely!

The hope of the gospel springs out of the covenants made by God with Abraham and David, and which was renewed in promise to the prophets, and fully elaborated by Christ and his apostles over twenty centuries ago. You understand that these covenants were limited to Abraham and David themselves; at the most they do not extend beyond their own descendants. You call them "Jewish" and "temporary" covenants; and you regard them as entirely distinct from the gospel. But God affirms that his covenants and commandments are good for "a thousand generations" Deut. 7:9). It has been pointed out explicitly by inspiration that the law of Moses did not fulfill the Abrahamic covenant. (Rom. 4:13, 14; Gal. 3: 14, 17, 18). And Paul, who says there is the "one hope of our calling" (Eph. 4:4), says that his hope was Israelitish: "I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto the fathers" (Acts 26:6). In the seventh verse he identifies his hope with the hope of the twelve tribes. Do you say this was the Jewish hope, not Paul's? Then listen to him as he clanks his chains and declares: "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain" (Acts 28:20). If there is only "one hope," and Paul had the "hope of Israel," I ask you, Did Paul have the right hope? Since he wore chains "for the hope of Israel," was not Israel's hope his hope? Was not then "the hope laid up in heaven, whereof ye have heard in the word of the truth of the gospel (Col. 1:5) the hope of Israel?"

Along with Paul I place the Hebrews as eminent Christians. They were called to the "great salvation, spoken by the Lord" (Heb. 2:3), and were "holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling" (Heb. 3:1). Paul prays that the great shepherd of the sheep might make them "perfect in every good work to do his will (Heb. 13:21). In the 11th chapter of Hebrews, dating from Abel (verse 4), and including all believers in the intervening ages, Paul speaks of the ancients seeing the promises of God afar off, and "were persuaded of them, and embraced them" (verse 13). They suffered the reproach of Christ (verse 26), and obtained a good report through faith (verse 39). "They desired a heavenly country; wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God, for he hath prepared for them a city" (verse 16). Now seriously a few questions: Do you expect a greater salvation than "the great salvation?" Are we believers holier than "holy brethren?" Do we have a more heavenly calling than "the heavenly calling?" Are we promised a more heavenly country than "a heavenly country?" Are we promised something better than "the hope of Israel?" Then show me your covenants and promises for your hope. Your theory requires you to throw away God's covenants and promises made to Abraham and David; you say they do not apply to you; you confess you are an alien and stranger to them, and yet instead of being without Christ, hope and God in the world, as Paul emphatically avers, you claim to have Christ, hope and God in a superlative degree! Abraham, "the father of all them that believe" (Rom. 4:11), and therefore your father faithwise if you are a believer, even him you discredit and subordinate for yourself and his other children. Is this a becoming way for children to treat their father? "If ye were the children of Abraham ye would do the works of Abraham" (John 8:39). We must have Abrahamic faith and Abrahamic works. And in order that our faith may repose on what God promised Abraham, "When God made promise to Abraham," says Paul, "because he could swear by no greater, he sware by himself" (Heb. 6:13). Now if you are willing to believe God on oath let us listen: "Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise, the immotability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath" (Heb. 6:17). Why? "That by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us; which hope we have as an anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast, and which entereth to that within the veil; whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus" (Heb. 6:17-20).

From this reading it appears that what is written concerning Abraham is applicable to us (Rom. 4:23, 24); that Isaac and Jacob, as well as ourselves, are "heirs of the promise," "heirs with him of the same promise" (Heb. 11:9), that the Abrahamic promise is a "strong consolation" for us; that believers have "fled" to this oathbound covenant: that they have taken "refuge" in it, and have laid hold upon "the hope set before them" therein; that "the hope" of this covenant is the "anchor" to which the souls of believers are tied; and that it is "sure and steadfast" in this world of doubt and uncertainty! Mrs. Waffle, are you an heir of this promise? Do you get "strong consolation" out of this Abrahamic covenant? Have you "fled" to it as a haven of "refuge" in this stormy life? Have you "laid hold of the hope" it offers? Is it the anchor of your soul? It is "sure and steadfast," and we exhort you to "embrace" it at once (Heb. 11:13). If ever you become interested in God's covenants and promises; if ever you become desirous of learning what they are, what they promise, and how you can become an "heir of promise," and have the hope, Christ and God they offer, my humble assistance can always be had for the asking.

Praying God with much entreaty that you may be "blessed with faithful Abraham" (Gal. 3:9) by becoming "an heir according to the promise" (v. 29),

Yours in the Abrahamic covenant,
ROBERT G. HUGGINS.

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27); the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28, 29); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-54); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20), and eternal life only through Christ the Life Giver (John 3:16, Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1:5-15); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12, 28:23, 31). "THE HOLY ROMAN EMPIRE OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE"

Concluded

In these centuries the German-Roman caesar or kaiser was the civil or temporal head of the empire, and the pope the spiritual head, and both claimed to rule by divine right as God's appointed vicars in the Kingdom of God on earth. Rome became Zion and the seat of God's throne, and pope and emperor wielded the rod of iron with all authority over heaven, earth, hell and purgatory. The people were permitted to kiss the pope's big toe in fullfilment of the second Psalm. "Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are they that put their trust in him" (the pope).

In this empire it was as impossible to think of a Christian in the empire who was outside the church, at it was to think of a Frenchman outside the French people. All born in the empire were born into the church; character counted for nothing.

From 896, to 904, nine popes were set up and deposed by Roman Lords for self-interest, amidst furious struggles and bloodshed. Otto III deposed the pope for refusing to swear allegiance to the emperor, and set up another, his cousin Bruno, by the force of his armies. He then set up his own seat of government at Rome, which caused neglect of the home government, which later caused revolt and division in the government. He died at Rome before his schemes to make Rome the center of power were completed. By 1,000 A. D. many Slavs were added to the empire, such as the Poles, Bohemians, Hungarians, Serbs and some Russians.

Under Henry III. of the German-Roman empire three popes all claimed supremacy as vicars of Christ at the same time. Henry deposed all three and during his reign filled the papal chair four times with German popes. In 1073, Pope Gregory VII. gave his whole energy to making the papacy the head of the empire above the emperors, to which he said the empire should be subject, body and soul, as to God's vicar and representative in all the earth with a church court to which all dignitaries were amenable for trial. This court consisted of arch-bishops, arch-deacons and chief-priests. They all had power to impose fines and penalties in penances and money indemnities, and with all power to punish, expel or to destroy heretics.

Like the Chinese emperor, both the Roman emperor and the pope claimed their "seat in the sun," as a man child of heaven by divine right (Rev. 12). The papacy was modeled in every part of its organization as a perfect image of the Roman government. Hence since the beast of (Rev. 13) represents a confederation of nations under monarchial rule, "the image of this beast" must be a similar federation under monarchial principles; hence the papacy perfectly fills the prophecy of the two horned beast or false prophet, although their future revival is predicted (Rev. 13:11-18; 19:20).

Their popes and emperors not only blasphemed God, and exalted themselves above all that is called god, but also caused millions who would not worship this beast-image to be put to death, and also allowed no buying or selling without the images of men and beasts were engraved (Rev. 13:15-17, Kings 10:14). (Read our tract on "the Mark of the Beast.")

In the 9th and 10th centuries there were three imposing figures: The German emperor of the west, the eastern emperor at Byzantium, now Constantinople, and the pope at Rome. The Holy Roman empire centered in German for the "blood and iron" power of militarism, and in Rome for its religious head and source of unity. Otto I. had succeeded in uniting many of the German states in one vast empire, and this restored empire, composed of nations of a dozen different languages, continued as a united federation of nations until 1100 A. D. With Pope Gregory VII., or Hildebrand, in A. D. 1077, began the most blasphemous claims of popes, as "supreme Lord of the Universe," "Vicar of Christ," "Lord, God, the Pope," etc., which his successors till the 14th century endeavored to magnify.

It was Pope Gregory VII., who published an anathema against any layman receiving any bishopric from any one but the pope. Henry IV., emperor of Germany, and of the Roman empire of Germany and of the Roman empire, opposed the pope, and the result was the pope absolved all his subjects from allegiance to the emperor, and his influence was so great that the emperor would have lost his empire had he not made a pilgrimage to Canossa, where the pope was in 1077, with his army, where he was forced to do penance by fasting and standing barefooted in the cold, outside the pope's residence, for three days.

From this incident we learn of the power the popes attained over a superstitious people, and what Bismarck meant when he declared, "Be sure we shall not go to Canossa."

Under Frederick the I., 1150 to 1190 A. D., was added to the German empire in 1230, and is now the head of the empire.

In 1254 Germany and Italy broke up partnership, and by 1400 A. D. the Roman empire had ceased to exist only as to Germany, from which Italy, England and France had become separated, and the union between the popes and emperors had become dissolved. (Hence if this was the end of the two horned beast, its revival with pope and emperor again on the head of the beast empire is future. Rev. 19:20). The empire now was no longer called Roman or Holy, but only German. See West's Hist. p. 95.

Between 1254 and 1273, or for 19 years, this old empire had broken up into over 300 separate states, some republics and some monarchies. These 19 years are called "the great interregnum" or "the reign of fist law" or anarchy, during which time there was neither King, emperor, or order in Germany. (Is this when the beast went into the bottomless pit? Rev. 17). No successful attempt at revival or union was made for 600 years.

Wm. I., of Prussia, in 1861, bent his whole energies toward reviving and reuniting these petty states, in which he found an able assistant in his iron chancellor, Bismark. By unscrupulous and daring policy, Bismark overrode all laws and authorities but his own will, and by craft and deceit, under his "blood and iron" policy, he banished without trial those suspected of treason or lack of sympathy with his plans, and deliberately planned the Danish war of 1864, and the six week's war with Austria in 1866, and the France-Prussia war of 1870, because he saw in these wars the hope of building up a strong military machine, and through outside enemies to organize and to unite all the German states into one empire, and now all eligible males, over 20 were forced to take three years in the military training. Other nations now adopted this plan, and thus began a burden of taxation, and a loss of time and of useful labor, that must sometime be thrown off or bankrupt these nations.

England is almost a democracy, while Germany is as autocratic as Russia. To criticize the emperor ever so lightly meant to land the offender in prison for lese majesty. In 1898 there were 70 German editors in prison for socialistic utterances. Bismark at first tried to break down the pope's power, but fear of the new Red spectre of socialism caused him to retreat and to restore the priest's salaries, in order to unite the monarchial principles of the pope with his own iron policy, to silence the voice of the socialistic agitators, and to banish this nightmare of monarchs and militarists from the empire. Germany had become the seat of evolution, higher criticism, socialism, scepticism and of military despotising but, as a salve to soothe the socialists, many socialistic reforms were adopted, yet the power of empire was due to organization, co-operation, paternalism and monarchial rule, rather than to individualism or personal liberty.

In the great work successfully carried out of uniting all these clay and iron states (Dan. 2), the Germans feel that they have demonstrated their England and France were again subjected to the Roman empire, and the pope was the supreme horn on the beast until the 14th century. Prussia fitness to restore the old "Holy Roman empire of Germany" and then to resurrect this old world empire (Rev. 17).

W. B. CROWE.

ARE WE PUNISHED BY OUR SINS, AS WELL AS FOR THEM?

"For Godliness is great gain; having the promise of the life that now is, and that which is to come."

Christianity in practice, and in final outcome, exemplifies the great God-wrought law of nature—the survival of the fittest. Those who claim the discovery of that law, misapply it. It is not the strongest that survive, but the most useful. The sheep has no defence against the wolf; yet the useful sheep has survived the vicious wolf; the cattle, horse and ass, the lion, tiger and leopard; the domestic fowl, the hawk and eagle, and the useful grains, fruits and vegetables; the useless weeds, thorns and thistles.

It is true the survival of the modest but useful against the strong and useless, is due to the intervention and supervision of man's higher intelligence. It was designed of the Creator that he should perform this part; such is his mission on earth (Gen. 1:26, 2:17-18). The Creator has, however, reserved to himself the supervision of the law, in its application to mankind, and has so arranged that it shall operate to eliminate the morally degenerate, whether a nation, race or family, and that the morally fit shall ultimately survive.

Although at times "grievous wolves (Matt. 10:16, Acts 20:29) "beasts" (Rev. 13:7) and "horns" (Dan. 7:25), have rent and scattered the fittest of the flock, yet ultimately as in nature the useful, although seemingly the weakest, shall survive. The great Shepherd of the sheep, that leader of the flock—the Lamb of God— although crucified, shall in the end, triumph over organized cruelty and wrong, and the fittest shall survive into the Kingdom of God (Rev. 20:4, 21:7).

It is in a measure through the operation of this law that godliness is profitable in this life. Christianity for example, forbids excesses and immorality. It is well known that excesses and the forbidden vices lead to physical degeneracy. Our bodies, it teaches, are as it were "temples of the living God," and we must do nothing which will defile these temples; otherwise "If any man defile the temple of God, him will God destroy; for the temple of God is Holy, which temple ye are. Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God" (Cor. 10:31). Education, knowledge and wisdom, which teach how to so live as to prolong life, and retain health, are a part of the ritual of Christianity, and other Bible teachings, temperance, chastity, sobriety, patience and industry, contributing as they do to physical and mental vigor and longevity, are essential Christian virtues, while revellings, intemperance, lust, anger, malice, jealousy and envying, vices which tend to shorten life, and produce unhappiness, are condemned and forbidden. It is plainly stated that those who indulge in such passions, shall not inherit the Kingdom of God.

To illustrate: Christianity forbids the liquor habit. "Drunkards," it says, "shall not inherit the Kingdom of God." and wine drinking, (they knew nothing of whisky, rum, brandy, beer, etc., in those days,) is condemned. It is plain, therefore, that no one can be a consistent Christian and indulge an appetite for such things.

The use of intoxicating liquors is forbidden because it leads to moral and physical degeneracy, while its distributing places, saloons and public houses, are hot beds and resting places of sin and crime, and the resorts of criminals. Its fruits are sin, crime, misery, wretchedness, poverty and death. For the reason nature, ever alert to preserve the race and eliminate the degenerate and unfit, sets about the destruction of those who drink, even pursuing their offspring through the law of heredity to the third and fourth generation (Exo. 20:5), until there is either reformation, or the family becomes extinct. Thus the lives of upwards of sixty thousand drunkards are sacrificed to the drink habit each year in this country, who pass a way into forgotten graves, like the drunken princess of Babylon, to "sleep a perpetual sleep and not wake" (Jer. 51:39, 57).

Nature in the enforcement of her laws, is ruthless. If the hand is put into the fire, it will be burned regardless of the rank and condition of the owner. So in her effort to destroy the degenerate, she lays her hand heavily on the moderate drinker also, who in far greater numbers than those whose deaths are directly traceable to alcoholism, find early graves through its influence.

The experience of the great Mutual Life of New York, covering a period of twenty years, for example, shows that the expectancy of life of the total abstainer, to be 23 per cent longer than that of the moderate drinker. As no insurance company will take risks on habitual drunkards, these comparisons are between the moderate drinker and the total abstainer only. The experience of the Scepter Life Assurance Society of Scotland, covering the period from 1884 to 1905, shows the death rate of moderate drinkers to be 79, as against 55 for the total abstainers.

The expectance of life of saloon keepers, bar keepers and other associated with the liquor traffic, is of the lowest—so low indeed, that life insurance companies refuse the risk, or if taken at all, it is for a shorter term, and at a higher premium. The expectancy of life of ministers of the gospel on the other hand, is of the longest.

The average expectancy of life in Christian countries is between 30 and 40 years, while that of the society of Quakers, noted for their temperance and moderation, is upwards of 50 years.

What more eloquent and convincing testimony is needed to show the profitableness of Christianity, which forbids the habit; and nature views the moderate drinker as well as the drunkard, as degenerate, and unfit, and seeks to eliminate him in order that the fittest may survive. Nor does it stop with the drinker himself, but his progeny, if begotten under the habit, comes into life handicapped with physical, mental and moral degeneracy. What a world of misery also, the drink habit entails. The eminent Mr. Gladstone, rightly said that it fills more graves, and brings more misery on the world than war, pestilence and famine combined. Tell me, are not those that indulge this habit justly punished by their sin?

Secondly: The tobacco habit is a twin brother of the liquor habit. The weed was unknown in Bible days; otherwise "tobacco drunkards" would undoubtedly have been included in the same category with alcholism, and forbidden the Kingdom. It will require a powerful stretch of the imagination to discover anything to the glory of God in its use. We cannot imagine the Lord Jesus Christ with a cigar, pipe or a quid of tobacco in his mouth. It is a vice, a companion of evil and evil-doers. Did you ever notice that the cartoonist usually depicts the saloon habitue or grafting politician, and others of that stripe, with hugh cigars in their mouth cocked at an angle of 45 degrees? It is a twin of the saloon, and the use of it is immoral and degenerating.

That it is an evil, leading to physical, mental and moral degeneracy, is evident, because nature seeks to eliminate those who practice it. So marked are its effects, especially on the young, that some states forbid the sale of cigarettes by law.

While no comparative statistics are available showing the effects of tobacco on length of life, such as those supplied by the life insurance companies regarding the use of intoxicating liquor; yet there is abundant evidence that its use is also a slow but sure method of committing suicide. The experience of the U. S. Government surgeons in examining candidates for enlistment in the army for the Spanish-American war, clearly proves this. Large numbers of young men who were tobacco users, were rejected because the habit had made them physically unfit to stand the hardships of the service. The British surgeons had a like experience in examining applicants for enlistment, for the Boer war. The children of habitual tobacco users usually lack mental, physical and moral strength.

A Christian being forbidden this habit, escapes the diseases which it entails and consequently enjoys a longer, happier and cleaner life. Who can deny but the indulgence of this vice brings its just punishments?

Thirdly: The social evil is vigorously denounced by the Bible, and is particularly abhorred of nature, which afflicts those who indulge it with filthy, terrible health, and life destroying venereal diseases. The indulgence also saps the fountain of life, weakening the body to the attacks of the germs of disease, bringing hundreds of thousands to untimely graves. Thus again nature strives to eliminate the unfit, while the Christian, who refrains from this evil, escapes the penalty, and proves that "godliness is gain."

"Adulterers, whoremongers, fornicators and abusers of themselves with mankind," says Christianity, "shall not inherit the Kingdom of God." Again the question comes: Can anyone deny that those who indulge in these sins are punished by them?

Fourthly: Many other evil doings and forbidden practices, which lead away from the Kingdom of God, to that "perpetual sleep" from which there is no awakening, such as murder, theft, the inordinate desire for wealth and coveteousness, forbidden of Christianity, are intimately associated with the drink habit, the tobacco habit, or the social evil. By far the greater number of murders are traceable either to the saloon or the social evil. Thefts, covetousness, inordinate desire for wealth, are inspired by an inordinate desire for gain, to consume on these fleshy lusts. Anger also, with malice, jealousy, envying and other evil passion, are propagated from the same root, all tending to destroy health and happiness and shorten life.

These are some of the negatives, or the "thou shalt nots" of the Christian's Guide, the Bible, forbidden in love by the Father, for the profit of his children, to insure length of days and greater happiness in this world.

"My son, forget not my law, but let thine heart keep my commandments, for length of days and long life and peace they shall add to thee" (Prov. 3, 1, 2).

STERLING P. GROVES.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOSPEL

Jehovah's purpose, as revealed in the gospel, has been covered through traditions that have been handed down since the beginning of the race. In every covenant made with the fathers we see plainly stated that the promise is to the one whom God named "the seed." This selection began with the two sons, Cain and Abel. Each was required to bring an offering through which righteousness would be counted. The history of this transaction plainly shows that Jehovah required a sacrifice in which the animal became the covenant victim. This pointed to the slain lamb, the seed of the woman, or Christ, whom Paul said: Is our passover slain for us.

It was the blood or the death of this victim that could count righteousness to the one offering the sacrifice. Righteousness is not the result of a well ordered moral life, but is an honor counted to us by Jehovah because of our faith in his plan of salvation. To Abel the offering of a sacrifice was faith in what he had been taught by the Lord. Paul states in Heb. 11:4, "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts; and by it he being dead is yet spoken of." Thus we see that Abel was counted righteous because of his faithful obedience. He spoke of the promise to the seed of the woman through the sacrifice he offered. Paul in writing to the Roman church says: "Abraham believed God, and it was counted to him for righteousness. David describeth the blessedness of the man unto whom God imputed righteousness without works, saying, 'Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin,' " or will not count sin (Rom. 4: 3-8). Abraham believed the same promise as did Abel, Seth, Noah and others of the ancient worthies. Paul in writing to the Galatian church says: "The scripture foreseeing that God would justify the nations through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, in thee shall all nations be blessed" (Gal. 3:8). He further stated (verse 16): "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many, but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ.' From these scriptures it is evident that the blessing will come to Abraham through Christ. By referring to the original promise as recorded in Genesis, we find that Abraham and his seed were promised a land forever. The land to which Abraham was called is known as the land of Canaan. This land situated between the great river of Egypt, and the river Euphrates. It is the original garden of Eden. When the family of Noah was dispersed, Canaan, the son of Ham, took possession of the part bordering on the Mediterranean Sea. To Abraham and to his seed this land was given forever. Abraham and his family lived in this land, and he was buried here. It is necessary that we believe that his inheritance o fthe land was future, as was the manifestation of the seed, which is Christ. Abraham's promise and blessing was greatly enlarged when he willingly offered at a burnt offering his only son, Isaac (Gen. 22). His seed was to be multiplied at the stars of heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore. Further, this seed will possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed. This is not the unit seed, Christ, who will be the righteous ruler over the whole earth, and will extend peace to the whole habitable. His dominion shall extend from sea to sea, and from the river to the end of the earth. Amen.

D. C. ROBISON.

ETHICAL TEACHINGS OF THE BIBLE
REPLY TO "A SISTER"

We would like to offer a few thoughts that suggest themselves to our mind, in reply to "A Sister's" communication in Restitution, of January 25. The editor promises to give place to those who write on either side of the question. To our mind this is a wrong way of suggesting what the proposed replies should be, for we are requested not to give our advice, but admonished to speak as the oracles of God, and if we do that, we will not take sides, for the word of God is not yea and nay (2 Cor. 1:17).

It appears to us to be a fruitful source of error to imagine that all of the ethical teaching of Christ to his professed followers can be made to cover every specific act. There are those who think that verbal commandments ought to be found in prohibition or otherwise, of tobacco using, theatre going, card playing, or the exercise of certain rights as citizens. To such we say, "ye cannot so learn Christ." In the nature of things this would be an impossibility, as many things that now form a part of the world, (which we are commanded not to love), were unkown at the time the New Testment was written. What then, are we without law and many things left to the caprice of the human mind to decide? Nay verily, for our Saviour enunciated the principle that is to govern us, when he said: "Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth; but I say unto you, that ye resist not evil" (Matt. 5:38). Peter once asked the Lord if seven times were enough to forgive the brother that sinned against him, and the Lord replied, "I say not unto thee, Until seven times but until seventy times seven" (Matt. 18:22).

We might also cite the incident of the young man who inquired what he must do to have eternal life. The Lord replied, "Keep the commandments." To this the young man said: "All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?"

Then the Saviour said: "If thou will be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor and come and follow me."

These illustrations show us that something more than simple obedience is required. The spirit of love must cooperate with obedience to make our service acceptable. To be Christ's, then, the motive of our actions should not be, because it is commanded alone, but because it is "Holy, just and good." The pleasure of God and Christ is not in ceremonies, but in loving obedience to their will. In Christ we can always find a model for our actions, and if truly desirous of following him, that we may be living epistles "known and read of all men," our uppermost thought when confronted with perplexing questions will be: How can I follow Christ, so pure, so Godlike, so much above all possibility of attainment? That very thought, if conscientiously followed, will serve as a final court of appeal to all our difficulties, and bring such a blessing that he who seeks a plain prohibition before he sacrifices a pleasure or right, can never experience. "Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glory me. " (Ps. 50:15).

W. S. TOMLINSON.

A MUCH NEEDED WARNING

When we are baptized into Jesus Christ we accept and pledge our allegiance to him.

First, as Savior, signified by his name "Jesus." Thus we agree to look to him and depend upon him for all benefits which can come to mankind, either individually or nationally. We look to him alone for the accomplishment of all reforms of which the world stands in need.

Second, we accept and pledge our allegiance to him as king, signified by his title "Christ." Such allegiance separates us from the world politically just as surely as our acceptance o fhim as the Savior from sin and death separates us from the world religiously.

It is possible to obey any law of God according to the letter without rendering obedience to it according to the spirit, but it is impossible to obey one of his laws according to the spirit without rendering obedience according to the letter also. Take for instance the law making necessary baptism. It is possible to go through the form of being dipped under water without in the least realizing that it symbolizes the death and resurrection of Christ, which is a demonstration to us of how we must be rid of the flesh nature and given the spiritual. Such obedience to this law has no more of a purifying, saving element in it than the formal obedience rendered by Jews to their ceremonial laws. On the other hand, no matter how thoroughly we realize the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus, and no matter how many times we admit that it is through this process that we must be brought to perfection, we have not rendered true obedience according to the spiritual meaning of bactism, until we obey according to the letter, by going through the form.

"Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mnids, that ye may prove what is that good and perfect and acceptable will of God." That is, we are not to form or shape our lives and conduct after the pattern of the conditions and habits which pertain to the flesh life of this age, but we are to step across into the next age and shape and form our lives and conduct according to the pattern of conditions and habits (which pertain to the spiritual life to be lived in that age), which pattern is Christ." We can not step across into the next age physically now. This will be impossible until the resurrection. But we must step across mentally, by having our minds renewed through the teachings of Christ and thus prove and demonstrate to the world what is the good and perfect will of God.

"Judgment also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet; and hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies and the water shall overflow the hiding place" (Is. 28:17). "For the time is come that judgment must begin with the house of God; and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God? And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and sinner appear (Pet. 4:17-18)?

From the foregoing scripture we can not but conclude that God's judgment, or distinguishing between right and wrong, between things belonging to the flesh nature and things belonging to the spiritual, between the characteristic habits of this life and the characteristic habits of the next (fully demonstrated by Christ), is without leniency whatever. He has drawn a distinct line between things belonging to the flesh nature and things belonging to the spiritual, and his judgment will be laid squarely on that line, and we must stand wholly on one side or the other. He will not bend and curve the line to include some on the spiritual side who has knowingly clung to some part of the flesh nature, or who has indolently neglected to learn what pertains to the flesh and what to the spiritual nature. The character we have to offer him must meet the line of his judgment as squarely as the plummet meets the base line.

"It the righteous scarcely be saved," contains a much needed warning. According to these few words those who have been justified—freed from the death sentence hanging over them before belief in the gospel—and thus accounted righteous, are to be scarcely saved. It stands us in hand to examine ourselves critically to see if we are meeting God's requirements, to see how much of our thoughts, actions and habits are flesh, and how much are spiritual.

BUSINESS

It is certainly a great misfortune when the daily work of men or women is so distasteful that they are glad to dismiss all thoughts of it as soon as it is over. The work itself must suffer in quality, having had no heart put into it, and the performer of it sacrifices a large portion of life's most solid happiness. There is, however, an opposite extreme that some truly conscientious people fall into—that of carrying their daily business into all their waking hours. There is hardly a counterbalancing feature in this habit of mind. If even the work itself was benefited thereby there might be some justification, but the truth is that every business duty needs complete liberation from the strain of it at times.

A VISIT TO KENTUCKY

We left Cleveland Monday, January 31, 1916, for Brumfield, Ky. How we came to undertake this trip is explained by the following letter:

Brumfield, Ky.,
December 6, 1915.

Dear Brother Huggins:

I have started twice before to ask of you a favor, and have backed out each time before sending it, because I know you are a busy man. For this reason I have hesitated to ask you to do more But I shall ask you now if it will be possible for you to hold a meeting for us this winter. We are not able to pay much more than your traveling expenses, but we are very hungry to hear some good old sound gospel sermons. We want the true bread of life, not sandwiched with men's theories, nor sliced and crumbled away with higher criticism. We appreciate your work in The Restitution very much. Please let us know, as soon as you can, what your decision is.

Your Sister in Christ.
SADIE SKEELS.

Christ has said: "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." This promise does not depend for its fullfilment upon the one who is hungry having money. "He that hath no money" is invited and promised the gospel feast equally with the opulent. Money or no money we felt that this call must be attended to. We therefore "set our house in order" for a time of absence, and took our departure for the mountains of Kentucky, January 31, and arrived at Junction City, Ky., at 10:30 the same evening. We remained over night in this so-called "city," and taking the train the next day, we arrived at Brumfield, our destination, about 3:30 p. m. Here Bro. J. F. Carpenter met us, and drove us to the home of Bro. Frank Skeels. There was no public meeting for the evening, and for this we were glad, as we felt pretty tired. A few brethren and sisters, however, came to Bro. Skeel's home, and a couple of hours soon sped by in agreeable conversation Further notes on our trip will be given next week, the Lord willing.

THE SPIRIT OF GOD

What the spirit of God really is seems to be very clearly shown by Paul, in 1 Cor. 2:71—to close of chapter. Speaking of "the things which God hath prepared for them that love him," that "eye hath not seen," he says: "But God hath revealed them unti us by his spirit; for the spirit searchest all things yea the deep things of God. For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man but the spirit of God. Now we have received not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are freely given us of God; which things also we speak, not in words which man's wisdom teacheth, but in words which the Holy Ghost teacheth, comparing spiritual things with spiritual. For who hath known the mind of the Lord that he may instruct him? But we have the mind of Christ."

Now if the spirit of man that knoweth the things of a man, is the mind of the man, is not the same thing true of God? Is not his spirit his mind? Our last verse virtually says that this is so. To have the mind of Christ is to have the spirit of Christ. If we have not his spirit we are none of his. There does not seem to be any great mystery about it. Now the things that are freely given us of God, which things also we speak, are the words which the Holy spirit or mind of the Lord, teacheth. If we have these words hid in our hearts and have our lives molded by them, we have the mind, or spirit of the Lord, and of Christ.

AUNTIE WINCE

CHRISTIAN LIBERTY.

"Brethern, take heed lest by any means this Christian liberty (privilege) of yours become a stumbling block to the brethern that are weak, and through your knowledge shall the weak brother perish for whom Christ died." (Rom 4:25; 1 Cor 15:3.) But when you sin so against the brethern, and wound their weak conscience, you sin against Christ. (1 Cor 8:9, 11, 12.)

Therefore if theatres, card playing, dancing and a companion of unrighteousness wound my weak brother, I for one would not do them, even if they did not harm me. "For brethern, you have been called unto" what the apostle Paul calls Christian liberty, only use not this great privilege for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another (Gal. 5:3).

If we live in the spirit let us also walk in the spirit (Gal. 5:25).

Walk in the spirit and you will not fulfil the lust of the flesh (Gal. 5:16).

The spirit is the love or power of God that abideth in you on account of righteousness (Rom. 8:9; 2 Cor. 6:16; James 4:5-17).

According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that has called us to glory and virtue (2 Pet. 1:3-18). The reward of the righteous or overcomer is sure (Ps. 19:7, 8, 11; 58:11; Prov. 11:18; Rev. 2:7, 17, 26; 3:5, 21).

CHAS. ANDERSON

IT MAY BE

It may be, dear reader, that in all the days of your life you have failed to gather what men call wealth. Only the simplest necessities may be yours to enjoy, while your neighbor reclines in comfort and luxurious surroundings, you may toil from day to day, content with the meager wages of honest labor; your name may never be spoken in terms of praise by press or people; you may never be called a warrier bold, or statesman wise; neither science nor any of the useful professions, have advanced a fraction through your efforts. Even your very existence may not be known except in the immediate neighborhood of your humble home. In short, you may have totally, and miserably failed, in every worldly undertaking, and ambition, and yet if you have loved God and kept his commandments, and so secured his promise of eternal life, and a part in the glories of the ages to come, your life will have been a grand success, overshadowing, and overtoping, the many achievements and selfish ambitions, of the rich and powerful of this world, as the clouds of heaven o'er shadow the earth.

It may be that by shrewd and skillful management and great industry, you have accumulated a great fortune. You may have mastered the sciences, and bent the forces of nature to your will; you may be perhaps a great general, and like Napoleon, or Alexander, have caused the world to tremble; men may bow and cringe, and give place before you; they may run at your beckon and leap at your command, and yet, if you are not found among those exalted ones who rise to meet the Lord when he comes, your life has been a gigantic failure. Better had you never been born; for "what shall it profit a man if he gains the whole world and lose his own soul," or be cast away?

THE COMFORT OF GOD

As I sit here and look out of the window the cold, bleak wind is blowing thirty miles an hour, and driving snow and carrying on its wings misery and much suffering. Sitting here surrounded by good friends and substantial walls and the base-burner going full blast, I can almost bid defiance to the cold outside.

But I know these bleak winds as they go howling by will soon find many homes to enter. Through the cracks will the unwelcome guest enter to pinch and bite and torment the inmates. And as they are bitten "by Jack Frost," he seems to laugh or at least have no pity while they shiver. Then if it was in our power, how quickly would we banish those winds and bring warmth to those poor shivering ones.

Then when I look away from this material scene, I see another. I see the cold winds of adversity blowing everywhere, carrying sorrow and disolation on it's wings, more lasting than the other. When our ears and fingers are bitten by the frosty air the cuticle will probably come off, but will grow on again, and our discomfort is soon forgotten. But when bitten by the icy words of a brother or sister, it freezes to the bone, and refuses to heal. When the mercury drops we put on an extra coat, or put in the stove a little more coal, and put extra covers on the bed. Just so when we meet with the frost of adversity; we need extra warmth. Oh, the opportunities we let go by! When we meet a brother or sister cold and shivering, with the bleak winds of adverse conditions it is our duty to comfort them. Jesus said, "I will send the comforter." Paul says, "Comfort another with these words." Yes, we meet those who are cold and in despair, almost ready to give up. But a few kind words and a little cheer and they begin to thaw out. God in talking to the children of Israel, said: "As one whom his mother comforth, so will I comfort you." No one can give more comfort than mothers, and God wants us to comfort one another, and shed cheer and warmth every where. Are we each one doing our share of this great work, or are we dwelling in the frigid zone of spirituality? What a vast amount of good would be the result if every child of God would resolve to never speak only in kind tones! Icy words and frigid manners do not belong to the child of God. In these last days, how much need for warm hearted Christians! Just listen to this scripture, 2 Cor. 1-4: "Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God." Just as God has comforted us, so must we also comfort others. But do we? We have to answer that for ourselves. If not, we have failed in a duty. I am afraid we are waiting to do too much in the next age. We have a lot to do here. Let us then be warm and cheerful, and shed rays of light and emit warmth wherever we go.

MEGIDDO MISSION, ROCHESTER, N. Y. SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1916.

"BE NOT CONFORMED TO THE WORLD."

By the late Rev. L. T. Nichols July. 21st 1907.

There is but one way that we can be certain that some day we shall walk the streets of gold. And as we walk around on this earth of ours, and come in contact with so much sorrow, pain, and degradation, and sin and iniquity, it causes our heart to yearn to go where all this will be done away, and we shall be permitted to walk those streets of gold, where every one we come in contact with will be healthy and vigorous, strong, joyous and happy. Such a time is coming, and although to the human mind the chariot wheels seem to drag, yet in another aspect we see it hurriedly passing, passing on, and it will not be long before that wondrous time arrives, and you and I will have to face the great Judge of all the earth, before the great white throne, and it will be told then whether we shall walk the streets. of gold, or continue on in the path we have trod in which will be meted out to us destruction.

There are only two ways. You remember our Master in speaking of it in that wondrous sermon, the first sermon, the very first sermon he preached on the mount, declares there are but two ways, and now if we are only in the strait and narrow way we know there is life at the end of it, and that life will be given to us if we only follow in the narrow way.

But the human mind does not like to be cut down and have to walk in such a strict way; they like to loiter and swerve to the right hand or the left according to their own notion. But when we come to realize we must become armed with the mind of Christ, as we were talking to you last evening, in order to be prepared and ready to enter the golden paved street city and enjoy the wonders of eternity, it seems we would not be so foolish as to follow our own inclinations, inasmuch as it has been plainly revealed, it has been told us long beforehand, that it leads to destruction. In the broad road, the wide gate, we are allowed all the sway and room we may desire, but Jesus says it leads to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat. We may realize also if we are with the masses in the broad road, taking part in their follies and vanities, we may know, no guess work, we may know we are on the way to destruction.

God is merciful. Oh, how wondrous is his mercy! He has no pleasure in the death of the wicked, he declares to us. But that wondrous Being, possessed with all wisdom, and having all knowledge, He cannot do otherwise in allowing a free moral agency to set before us and hold out to our view the beauty and grandeur of Eternity on the one hand,—and He is so good and merciful that He portrays on the other hand the darkness, the vale of sorrow and pain and destruction at the end of the broad road. He sounds the warning voice all the way through, painting it out in words that man never dreamed of. And we never would have thought that the human mind with all the glory and grandeur portrayed before them of the ceaseless ages yet to roll on, to enjoy that long sweet rest in, that it would be our own choice to follow our own ideas, our own notions, and walk in the broad road that leads to destruction. That stamps the Bible as divine, as we look around and see the wide, vain world following in the wake of vanity. And how true will be the saying of Jeremiah which will pretty soon be fulfilled before our very eyes! It is sure to be. The Gentiles shall come from the ends of the earth and say, "Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity and things wherein there is no profit."

Oh, to think that this teaches us a wondrous lesson! It inscribes on the heart of the instructed ones the same as Jesus declared in his first sermon on the mount, all nations are in the road going to destruction. If they were not in the broad road, the great masses of mankind, it never could be fulfilled that they shall come from the ends of the earth and confess that they have inherited lies, vanity and things in which there was no profit. And when we come to realize this, it seems as though we would have a longing, oh! such an anxiety to get into the narrow way. But therein lies the trouble, all the vanities of the world must be cut off; we cannot indulge in the pleasures and comforts of this world; for He is true, whether we drink it in or not. You remember, our Master was so interested in it that he not only proclaimed it himself to those around him, but told it to you and me to "be not of the world even as I am not of the world." He was interested in the matter, not simply leaving us with his own word, but he went everywhere preaching the gospel, bearing it to a dying world and telling them not to be of the world for the world passeth away; and not only that, but the things of this world will pass away with it, and we'll meet our end, our doom. And we realize more as the time passes by the shortness of this life.

It impressed me so yesterday, as that man in vigor and strength, a young man too, a lawyer, he seemed to be quite an honest young man, so much so that we engaged him to do our business, and he has been doing it ever since we have been here, and he seemed to be healthy and strong and robust, but all at once as he was sitting in his chair, poring over his law books, the lady told us yesterday, he complained of a pain, he said he guessed he would have to quit, but he still kept tugging on until he was through with the documents he had in hand, and he then arose and went home, and the next trip he made was to Mt. Hope Cemetery. I saw a notice in the paper, and I could hardly believe my eyes, I read it down that such a lawyer, Fred Prosser Salisbury, had died and was buried at such a date in Mt. Hope Cemetery, and and I hardly dare think it was so until I stepped into his office and found it was only too true. And do you know, beloved friends and sisters, it is only a question of a little time, only a question of a few years at the most until such a notice will be heralded in reference to us? There are, I can see before me now, several that ten years would number their days, if Elijah did not come; ten years would number the days of several in this audience. And if we could only realize how quickly ten years will fly by, it does seem we would not be interested in the vain things of the world. It seems our minds would be occupied and all taken up in reference to what must I do to secure a home that will never be taken away, a life that will never end, a vigor of constitution that will always glow with beauty, strength, and glory, and a joy and comfort that will roll on and keep up with the times of eternity. These wondrous blessings, how they outshine the short, fleeting, passing joys of earth! and yet somehow or other the present vanity and pride and frivolous things of this world seem to engage the mind of every nation on earth, and they are all following in the one wake, taken up with the things of this life; and they would rather have the pleasures of sin for one short season, than to have the glories of eternity without end. For my part I have made my choice, my heart is fixed, and the seal is placed for eternity. I have cut loose from the things of this world, and I am only laboring to gain the grand future, and to get you to do the same; and if I only accomplish this feat, if I can only perform this work, do you know I have performed the greatest work of any one, or of all earth's potentates put together? They never performed such a work as this will be. And my longing anxiety is for us to look at ourselves, as the Apostle declares, "Look to yourselves that we lose not the things that we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward." Oh, to get that full reward, that grand eternity, that sweet by and by, that land of rest, where sorrows will will never come! It seems as if we would prefer that to the short things of this life, inasmuch as we know, no guess work about it, we know by experience and by what we see surrounding us, that life is short, its pleasures will soon flee, and all will be gone.

We see them dropping off one by one, one by one, one after another, the wide world over, and by and by we will drop off too, and then what will be our condition? Wouldn't you give ten thousand lives like this to the service of the Lord, if it were only in your power then? But it will be too late then, too late then when the dark hour of death settles in; "As the tree falleth, so shall it lie," says the Almighty.

There can be no change then, when the time has come. Like that lady Sister — was telling you about last evening. To all appearance it seemed that no one in the house had better health than she, and all at once she was stricken down. They called in the best physicians, and they had the honesty to say, "You will never recover, you will only last a few days at the most; the disease has got such a hold that it will take you right down. You were never sick before, but now you will go." They told this to her friends, and told as much to her. And Sister — was called on, and she went there and stopped by her bed-side and talked with her; but her only ambition was to have a nice silk dress on, to be all dressed up and poised off when she was laid in her coffin. It was too late. It was too late then to make amends. "Oh, that I had only seen my folly before!" If we could only realize this, if we could only see and realize it before it is too late; for when the grim monster marches on and lays his cold, repulsive hand upon our shoulder, there is no getting away from him; it is just impossible for us to avoid him or shunt him off. He is there to stay. And, sooner or later, he will take a firm, fast hold of us and we can never shove him off.

And now, now that we have a little time and opportunity left, shall we not discard the things of this world, inasmuch as they do not tend to make us happy? Of course there are degrees of joy or comfort to those who take part in its vanities, but they are so short they are not worth mentioning, they are not worth considering. If they were going to last and we were going to have its pleasure forever there would be in some sense, there would be a little cause, for our following in its wake; but, inasmuch as death when it comes and our eyes close in slumber, our joy and comfort ceases; and then to realize that though we have lived our days in pleasure, says the Bible, though we have spent all our days in pleasure, yet we shall be cut down and wither as the green herb; we shall be laid in the grave like sheep. Ah! that will be our condition. Is that what we desire? Is that where we want to be found when that day comes; be laid away and sleep throughout the endless ages of eternity our eyes forever closed to the beauty and grandeur and beatitudes of the wondrous future? Not I; and I hope not you. I hope you will make a better choice than the things of this world; for you remember our blessed Lord declared through the Apostle he chose for the specific purpose of imprinting this wondrous faith on our minds, and Jesus also went everywhere teaching and preaching the glorious gospel system, and he caused it to be reiterated by the Apostle who said, "Know ye not" — Oh! it is a dreadful thing not to be made acquainted with this — "Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God; whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God."

He will wipe them out of existence like the dust of the earth; they will perish as the green herb and wither and decay in the end, says God. But to him who puts his trust in the Lord and keeps his commandments, he says he will find a hundred-fold more pleasure now, and in the age to come life everlasting.

What a difference! What a contrast! A hundred-fold in this life. It was a hard and difficult matter at first to read this understandingly; but we have passed through the experience and we can testify that we have found an hundred-fold more than what you could possible enjoy in the world. And as soon, just as soon, as you get where you will work with all your heart, and cut loose from the things of this world, and have your affections on eternity, working for that alone, and so soon as you realize and really sense and believe without a lingering doubt that you are in the narrow way and there is a grand life before you, there will be a comfort, there will be a joy, there will be a pleasure a hundred times greater than you could ever experience in the world. But then this does not come of our own volition, it is not something that comes rolling along like a mighty tempest bursting with fury over land and sea, or a rain storm sending down its torrents of water to refresh and replenish the earth, or like a tornado rushing with mighty force over the country; it only comes by our vigilance and faithful work in the service of the Lord, by getting right down and reading the testimony which says to us in plain words, — "Be not conformed to this world." Does it not say so? "Be not conformed to this world but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." Rom. 12:2. We were all in the broad road or we couldn't be transformed.

You need a work performed upon you, every soul that enters the bright celestial glory must be transformed, and how is it to be accomplished? By sitting down and folding our hands in lazy lock, or dropping on our knees and praying to the God of heaven? No, no: "but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." Go to the wondrous Record and there read and find out what change we have got to make in order to gain the bright home in glory, and it tells you you cannot conform to this world; and shouldn't we be content? How long would the things of this world last anyway? Only a little while, only a little space, and then it will all be over; and then will either stand before us the open pearly gates dazzling in their beauty and grandeur, and within the city its golden paved streets and bright, running streams of crystal clearness, its beautiful shores decked with every manner of flowers to greet our eye, where zephyr breezes will ever blow and sweet perfume will be wafted everywhere, or on the other hand will be the cold, chilly grave, cold death will stare us in the face without a joy or comfort. We will look across, as the testimony declares, we shall only see it with our eyes but not partake of it.

It tells you right out, if you go the way of the world, if you join in with them, and make friends of the world, you will only see it with your eyes but you can never partake of its glories. As you look across to the golden strand and see the glorified ones clothed in majestic splendor, robed in spotless purity, and clad with such joy and happiness which will beam out of every pore of their being, and you notice the gate is closed, and our Master says, "It is too late," methinks you will then wish that you had left the world alone; for it will only recede and go down, down, down, at a rapid rate to destruction, and only the faithful ones will survive, only those that walk in obedience to his commandments will be permitted to pass through the pearly gates. Jesus said, "Ye, ye;" — who are the ye? He says they are the ones that say, "Lord, Lord and do not the things that I command you; and ye shall see Abraham and Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God," and will look over with your eyes and see the wondrous prize they have gained, the beauty and glory they have gotten, the long sweet rest they have started, the bright celestial home they have been given, but you will never be permitted to enjoy it; you will see it with your eyes, but ye yourselves thrust out; and then he says, as the result of it, "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." We will see what we have lost.

But we can have this portrayed before us now, and why will we be so foolish as to lend any thought of conforming to the world? why had we not rather be with the few? for Jesus said, — not man, not I, if I were the author of this, if I were the one that told this story, if I were the founder of this gospel message, then throw it away. But when Jesus, the blessed Son of God, declares to us, as he did to the multitudes by which he was surrounded, that strait and narrow is the way that leads to life, and few there be that find it, how content we should be, how happy it should make us to be with the few, and how unhappy if we are found with the masses. It would seem as though we couldn't rest with them or take any comfort with the multitudes, because Jesus said the broad way leadeth to destruction. And why take joy and comfort with the few? Because he said, strait and narrow is the way that leads to life, and few there be that find it. I'd rather go with the few and find life and glory, peace, joy, happiness, riches and honor, than to go with the multitudes the same length of time, only a few moments, only a few days, a few at the very most. I'd rather go with the few, for these few short years, and find those endless riches and that life, that supreme joy and comfort and that eternal happiness, than to travel with the multitudes for a few days and find destruction, sadness, sorrow and pain until we are destroyed from off the earth.

He is going to destroy them from off the face of the earth because they would not obey him, and he will raise up them that will obey. He has plenty of time, and thus in our lesson, as he declared, "The spirit of the Lord is upon me," and I tell you unless you preach this same gospel, the spirit of the Lord will never be upon you. You may think so, but it will be far from being the spirit of the Lord, for he tells you the spirit is the truth, and it has never been upon you because we read, "The Lord hath anointed me to preach glad tidings," — to whom? Not to everybody, but "the Lord hath anointed me to preach glad tidings to the meek." And do you know what Jesus said in his first sermon? "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." The meek are the ones who are going to possess the land throughout the endless ages of eternity; but the other class will be destroyed. "And the Lord hath anointed me to preach glad tidings to the meek, he hath sent me to bind up the broken hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound. To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord and the day of vengeance of our God." You are not only to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, but the day of vengeance of our God. They both go hand in hand together, and just as certain as there will be a day of glory, and an acceptable time, so certain there will be a day of vengeance too, and destruction will sweep over all the earth and carry away all those who have not yielded obedience, and in their place will be born and brought up a nation that will obey him, until his covenant will be fulfilled, — "As surely as I live, saith the Lord, all the earth shall be filled with my glory." And he tells you, "Israel is my glory." All the earth is going to be filled with Israel. Although few in number now, they will increase by and by; for you remember he declares, "As certain as the earth bringeth forth her bud and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth, so the Lord God will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all nations." It will be certain; by and by his praise will spring forth, and how will it be done? He tells you just how it will be done. He says, "My people shall a be righteous. I will fill the earth with my glory. My peopl rael are the ones who have God for their strength, whose od is their all."

Oh, do you know, do you remember on what conditions od will be our strength? Said Paul on that wondrous occas-on, "Come out from the world and be ye separate, saith the ord, and touch not the unclean thing and I will receive you; nd I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and aughters saith the Lord Almighty." Upon what conditions? He says you cannot have me for your God unless you come ut from the world and separate yourself from it, and become peculiar people, zealous of good works.

And if you do that you can be his sons and daughters, "and will be your God," who said it? – "Saith the Lord Almight-." That is not man. And here it says, "Thy people also hall be all righteous, they shall inherit the land." – I wonder ow long? – "forever." "They shall inherit the land forever, he branch of my planting, the work of my hands that I may e glorified."

That is to be his glory. The glory of the Lord is Israel, the ones who separate themselves from the world, and who isclaim and disown the multitudes of the world, and who re not conformed to their ways and doings, their vanity or their sayings. But be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds, and become the Israel of God; there is no other way to be accepted. And then he says, I will fill the earth with my glory. How? "A little one shall become a thousand, and nd a small one a strong nation." When will it be? "I the Lord will hasten it in his time." Don't, don't be afraid, don't get discouraged. I the Lord will hasten it in his time.

We are living in an age now which is the most trying of all ages, we are living in the tarrying time, and we find some saying, "Oh, I don't know about the coming of the Lord, he told us he was coming before, and I don't know about it." If we didn't find them saying this, the Bible wouldn't be true. They say, "Where is the promise of his coming?" Oh where? They don't stop to realize that God declared there would be a tarrying time in which they would say, "The Lord delayeth his coming." But no, no, he does not delay his coming; but there is a tarrying time, a waiting time, and we have entered that time and it won't be very long until it will be fulfilled before our very eyes, and we will see a turning of the tables, the mighty prophet Elijah will come, and I tell you, — oh! there will be a change then, and it will cause this one and that one to say, and they will come from the ends of the earth and say, "Surely our fathers have inherited lies vanity and things wherein there is no profit;" and it will cause them to cut loose from the world as they never did before and deny themselves and become one of the little ones that will become a thousand. A strong nation will be formed from this little one, we few small ones, the little flock. And, said Jesus, "Fear not little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." A little one shall become a thousand until the earth is full of his glory, full of immortal and incorruptible beings.

Shall we be one of the little band that are going to multiply their offspring without number, until they will fill the earth with the glory of the Lord, until they will be the seed of the blessed of the Lord, covering this mighty earth of ours and filling it with his beauty and glory as the waters cover the great deep, as the result of His workings and His pow This is sure to come, by and by, by and by it will be her but the question arises, Where? there is no question abo it coming, but the question is, Where, where will we be Will we be found among the little flock or shall we be foun among the vain multitudes of the world whose only aim is t get rich, and to enter into its frivolities and its fashions, whi only cause the money to go out to no use. Instead of putti it in to spread abroad the mighty work of the Lord, they sim ply use it to deck and adorn themselves as though they were the only ones of any account. But no, the Lord calls upo us to consider him, and tremble at his word, or he says, " will never confess you when I come in that wondrous day to call you to account and reward you for your doings. If you deny my words, if you are ashamed of me or the wondrous Truth," he says, "of him will the Son of man be ashamed when he comes in the glory of his Father and all the holy angels with him." Wouldn't you like to witness and wouldn't you like to have our blessed Lord own and bless you when he comes with all his holy angels with him? I would; I would rather be owned then by that Personage than to stand as one of earth's monuments, as one of the greatest men on earth; for their glory will not last, they go to the tomb and are forgotten. Oh, how true! The Bible told us this hundreds of years ago, they are gone and forgotten, and another rises and takes their place, and still another arises and they are forgotten and the scripture is fulfilled. "One generation cometh and another goeth, but he that doeth the will of the Father abideth forever." We, then, will not be cut down in that great day but will be the little flock to whom He will give the kingdom, and it will be in his own time.

Oh, he has plenty of time; you may scoff now, but he says, "I the Lord will hasten it in His time." Oh, that time is soon coming, and it will be ours to enjoy if we only pay attention to the gospel message: To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn; to appoint unto them that mourn in Zion those that lament their transgressions, those who are weary of the toilsome, sinful world, those that will not be comform ed to this world. Those whose heart the gospel messag strikes will lay down the vanities of the world, and begin to work for something eternal, and something that will give us more joy now. "To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion to give them beauty for ashes." Oh, it is only ashes you get in the world, it is compared to the dust of the earth; and he says he will give unto them "beauty for ashes, the oil of jo for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heav ness, that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord that he might be glorified." That is how He will fill the earth with His glory that He might be glorified. By and by they will listen to the wondrous message, altho few in number now, yet out of the few He will swell the num bers until there will be a great nation which will fill the earth with His glory, until they will be so numerous that the wor will be inhabited.

And then to think of it, the ages will roll on and on, and when you have lived, – why! Sis — and Sis – , when you have lived ten thousand million years, your life will have just be gun, and then the joy and happiness will begin to swell o and untold comforts will be ours, beyond all that we can even ask or think, exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think, and then just to think of the life we will have to enjoy those things in! I don't think the things of this world, just a mess of pottage, can be compared to it. Do you think I would be so foolish as to make choice of the things of this world?

Oh! do you know you can have more health and joy, and real lasting pleasure and comfort in the narrow way than you ever could in the broad road? In no other way can you get so much. And when you cut loose from the things of this world you will feel your health will gain, and you haven't got to pay attention to the fashions of this world; you can absent yourself from everything of the world and put on a plain, nice, sweet, decent garb in which we can take comfort and peace; and, more than all, for inasmuch as we know the Lord told us so to do, we can get more joy out of it than we could in anything else. And then, by and by, when Elijah comes, when he arrives on the stage of action and says you have walked as the Master told you, to come forth now with me, come out and begin the mighty work until will be fulfilled the lesson we heard this morning where it declared unto us that all nations are going to be covered with the robe of salvation, with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom decketh himself with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth herself with her jewels; and her seed shall be known among the Gentiles, and their offspring among the people, all that see them shall acknowledge them, that they are the seed that the Lord hath blessed.

Just take a walk after meeting down to our gardens, and there you have a living monument to its truthfulness. He says, "As the seed that is sown in the earth, and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth," so certain this will be. And as you take a walk down there you will see there are no weeds there. Bro. - - are you here? He has got a few weeds in his garden, I noticed this morning, but if you all keep your garden as clean as the preacher, — I keep my garden clean, you won't find any weeds there; and that is the kind we want to be in the spiritual, no weeds there to choke out the spiritual, the word. But if we keep the weeds out, the garden will grow and God will water the earth and we can see it bud and bloom and bring forth fruit. See the hundreds and hundreds of quarts of strawberries we got, and the bushels upon bushels of peas and string beans, and the corn that is coming on, and the potatoes that are on the road. And all this as we see the works of nature, the mighty God says, as certain as we see the garden spring forth, so absolutely certain he will perform what he has been talking about; and we see a living monument, a living witness, to these things. Every time we see the grass spring forth, or the tree yield her fruit, or the garden yield her increase, that is something as a living witness that these things are sure; one is just as certain the other.

Beloved Brethren and Sisters, when we have this assurance, when we know the wondrous future can be ours, how foolish to make choice of the things of this world! why not make choice of the better? Like a man said to me the other day who owed me a little money; he says, "I can't pay you yet, I am only getting $3.00 day, or thereabouts, and when Saturday night comes it is all gone." "And where has it all gone to?" He says, "I don't know; I know where lots of it goes to, it goes for the vanities of this world. I have to dress my wife and child, and my wife has got to put more on to the dress than the dress is worth, and then she has got to pay more for mak ing it than the whole thing is worth. And do you know, I had to pay out $ 25.00 for her dress!" That is where it goes. should think they would take lots more pleasure in a plai dress, and not have to lead a dog's life, and they are alway behind. A man said the other day he had been laboring and tugging to get a little ahead, and he wanted me to sell him a place; finally I did consent to it. He said he had been gettin $90.00 a month, and he had a son getting $60.00 a month and a daughter getting $30.00 or thereabouts, and he says, "We have been working and tugging and yet we have neve owned a place; the money just came and went, and it has al been spent in the vanities of this world, that is the most of it has gone there, spent for things that are no good, something that will benefit no one. But the money has gone, and now am going to buy a place. I have saved up $500.00 and I wil pay you twenty-five or fifty dollars a month." Finally I let the poor fellow have the place, and he jumped at the chance, and the man seemed to be so happy to think he had started on the way to own a place.

Do you suppose - - well I never could have contented my self or have taken any comfort, I never did, and here I am getting old, and I never could have felt easy if I had owned nothing over my head. I always wanted to own a place so that when old age came on, if I didn't want to do a day's work needn't, or if a rainy day came I could have something t cover me. I always labored to that end; and every one ca have the same if they will do the same. Like that man, — h said, "I am going to stop paying out money for the vanities o the world, and I am going to save up until I have a house." "Yes," I said, "don't spend a dollar for a thing that is not nec essary until your house is paid for." And so he has started i and is going in that direction, but I don't know how he wil turn out. But how much happier we are, nothing to worry a bout at all; the only thing is: Are we living strictly in obed ence to the heavenly commandment?

Beloved Brethren, may this wondrous story, the wondrou future mapped out in the divine Record have such an influ ence on your hearts that it will cause you to no longer be con formed to this world, but cause you to be transformed into a child of the living God, ready and prepared to pass the pearl y gates, and with me in the soon coming day not only see the reward of the righteous, but enter in and enjoy it, and be a possessor of it because we have been willing to be happie now, happier in fearing the Lord. The Almighty made no mis take; we are happier when we are found living in obedience to the truth, and cut loose from the pride and frivolous thing of the world. And thus we find recorded, happy is the man happy is the woman that feareth alway; and the only reason we are not happy is because we are not cutting loose from the things of the world, our mind is not staid on higher and more wondrous things.

May God help us to have these things fixed on our heart a never before, and then conversion will be the result.

"The law of the Lord is perfect converting the soul." You can't be converted unless you listen to the gospel message, and f you listen and take heed to it, it will convert you, and when ou are converted you will be a happy man from that time on; yes, and from that time on you will live in more happiness than you could possibly get in the world.

May God help us to this end. I will now give way to Sister Hembree.

"CHRIST DIED FOR OUR SINS ACCORDING TO THE SCRIPTURES."

Extract of sermon by Rev. Maud Hembree.

Our lesson today is a wonderful chapter, and if you and I ive out all this 6th chapter of Romans teaches, it will bring to us salvation. The apostle says, "Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we that are dead to sin live any longer therein?" The first death here spoken of is death to sin, yet all the religious world, when they read this, think it has reference to natural death. They do not understand the different deaths referred to in the Bible. There is first a natural death which comes as the result of mortality, because the human system wears out, or is destroyed by disease. People do not live to be as old now as in olden times when they understood better the laws of nature, but we had with us once an old gentleman who lived to be 93 years of age, when he died a natural death. Then in Eph. 2:1 Paul tells us we were dead in trespasses and sins. When you and I walked according to the course of this world, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind, we were dead in trespasses and sins.

In Col. 3 we will read of still another death: "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." The apostle is talking to those who are alive, so far as the natural life is concerned, but he says, "Ye are dead." Not in trespasses and sins, but they are dead to the world, dead to sin. Continuing, the apostle will tell how to die this death: "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry: for which things' sake the wrath of God cometh upon the children of disobedience: in the which ye also walked some time, when ye lived in them. But now ye put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another, seeing ye have put off the old man with his deeds."

Any man who walks in any of these evils after coming under covenant to God, still belongs to the old man. In the Bible we find two men, representing classes, spoken of: the new man, composed of all the faithful; and the old man, composed of all the unfaithful. By turning to the Greek Lexicon we find the definition of the word "man" is generic, meaning either man or woman. It does not mean an individual man in either the English or the Greek, from which I was reading. In Dan.7:27 we read, "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him" -- many in one, a multitudinous man; the new man. This is how the Bible speaks of this man; those who put away all wrath, anger, malice, etc.

In the 12th verse of Jude we read of a class who, after knowing the law and making a covenant to serve God, turn back to the weak and beggarly elements of the world and become dead in trespasses and sins the second time, therefore are said to be "twice dead." We have now given you four deaths: natural death; dead in trespasses and sins; dead to sin; twice dead; and now in Rev.21:8 we find still another death spoken of, the penal death, or as it is termed, "the second death," death because of transgressing God's law. Suppose a man condemned to die in the electric chair, he does not die a natural death, but a penal death. So when we read Rom. 6 we must remember these qualifying terms.

All denominations, even the Christadelphians and Russellites, believe when they read the 3d verse of this chapter that it is Christ's literal death on the cross referred to, but go to the 10th verse and it will tell what death it is: "For in that he died, he died unto sin once." That is the death we must be baptized into, his death unto sin. We all have to die this death unto sin, for it says: "Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God." It was the Jewish rabble that put Christ to death on the literal cross, but this death to sin he had to die is just as we have to die, following in his steps.

You all know the old theory of the plan of salvation is that Adam brought upon humanity natural death because he transgressed God's law; but no, Adam's sin never brought natural death upon any one. Adam was mortal and would have died a natural death anyway; and so would we die a natural death whether Adam ever transgressed God's law or not. Go to John 8:51 and read what Jesus said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death." Not that he would never see natural death, no, no; but when Jesus made this statement the Jews thought he meant natural death, and they said: "Now we know that thou hast a devil. Abraham is dead, and the prophets; and thou sayest, If a man keep my saying he shall never see death." He had no reference to natural death, but meant if they would keep his saying they should never taste penal death. Couple this with Rom. 6:23, "For the wages of sin is death." The penal death is the wages of sin, the wages the unfaithful shall receive at the Judgment; "this is the second death." Oh, the whole world is drunk on the fable the Old Mother put into the golden cup, that, because of Adam's sin, natural death was the penalty visited upon all mankind! But the wages of sin is death, and God never changed the wages.

In Matt. 20 Jesus tell us the kingdom of heaven is like unto a householder which went out early in the morning to hire laborers into his vineyard. Away back in the beginning of this day of salvation he was hiring laborers and putting them into this vineyard of the Lord, which, the prophet tells us in Isa.5:7, "is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah his pleasant plants;" and now, down in the eleventh hour of this day of salvation, near the end of the 6,000 years of man's probation, God is still calling men and women into this vineyard. When will they receive their wages? Not before they are judged. The Lord is more merciful than man, and he will never execute penalty upon a man before he is judged. And when will this Judgment take place? Says Paul, in II. Tim.4:1, "I charge thee before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom." It will take place at his appearing and kingdom. When he comes we shall receive one or the other of the rewards offered in his Word: eternal life on the one hand to the faithful; and eternal destruction, or death, on the other hand, to the unfaithful.

Says Rom.6:6,7, "Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. For he that is dead is freed from sin." It will not free you from sin to be carried up to Mt. Hope Cemetery and put in six feet of Mother Earth; but to die to sin will free you. Christ had to die to sin, and so does every member of this body of Christ, this new man, have to die with him: "For in that he died, he died unto sin once: but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord." Now he is going to tell us how to die: "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God." For he says in the 16th v., "Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" Not sin unto natural death, but if you follow the ways of sin you will get penal death, "second death." "But God be thanked that, though ye were the servants of sin, ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness." These verses destroy the whole fabric of the faith of the churches. The only way to become free from sin is to obey from the heart that form of doctrine delivered unto us.

What a belief the churches have! They think we are condemned because Adam sinned, and then are redeemed from that condition becaused Christ lived a sinless life and died on a literal cross to appease the wrath of God because of Adam's sin. They claim we do not have to do one righteous act for salvation; Christ did it all for us. What a terrible doctrine they are following! But we are condemned because we sin, and are justified because we do righteousness.

In II.Pet. 3:15,16 we read that "our beloved Paul . . . hath written . . some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction." Why, if this were natural death Paul was talking about, even a little child could understand. The first thing almost, we learned there was natural death. Our grandfather, or our grandmother, or perhaps a brother or a sister died and we learned about natural death; and for my part I never knew of any other death until I learned this blessed truth. Well, it will not do to just skim over the surface, but we must get right down and believe what this Word says, -- instead of going to catechisms and commentaries of men. Paul gives us a rule by which we can know of which death he is speaking, which we find in I.Cor.2:13, "comparing spiritual things with spiritual." If Mr.Russell and the churches would heed this rule, when they read the Scriptures, they would see these spiritual things. They would not just see a natural man, but would see a wonderful, multitudinous man composed of all the faithful, and another multitudinous man composed of all the unfaithful. They haven't this spiritual discernment or they would not say it is literal death spoken of in Rom. 6 and many other places; and when they read blood of Christ they would not think of the literal blood, but would understand that blood is used in metonymy for word.

I have no doubt this was the greatest task Brother Nichols ever encountered in digging out truth, to get the straight of these different deaths. We read in I.Pet.2:21, "For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow in his steps" He did not die as a substitute, but as an example of perfect obedience. We can die to sin as did he, but we cannot change this vile body; that he will do when he comes, will save us because we have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine.

There are three classes in the Bible, two under covenant one never enters into covenant. In Hos.6:7 it tells us, "These like Adam (margin) have transgressed the covenant." They are under covenant, are not like the outside world, but like Adam have agreed to serve the Lord and have transgressed the covenant. In speaking of this class in Rom.1:18 it says, "The wrath of God is revealed . . against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men who hold the truth in unrighteousness." I want you to get this into your mind, for it is a qualifying term the Lord gives. In the 31st v. he says they are "covenant-breakers," and they know the judgments of God; therefore, because they know them, they are inexcusable. - Indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish will be visited upon those who hold the truth in unrighteousness; "but glory, honor and peace to every man that worketh good." But in the 12th verse he tells of a class that perish without law, outside the law, but those who come under covenant will be judged "in that day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ."

"For as many as have sinned without law shall perish without law; and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law." All who sin without coming under God's law, the law of faith, shall perish without coming to the Judgment, while those, both just and unjust, who come under God's law will have to appear before the Judgment seat to render an account. How often people misquote the Bible in trying to prove a false theory. When we bring out the Bible teaching that those who are uninstructed "shall remain in the congregation of the dead" and never see light, they will say, "Why, Jesus said, 'All that are in their graves shall hear his voice and come forth.'" There is no such passage to be found in the Bible, but it does read, "For the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth." It is plainly qualified by the definite article "the." "All that are in the graves," a certain class, shall come forth, while the rest who are found wandering out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead. The faithful, sleeping dead shall have a glorious resurrection to life and immortality. Having followed in the footsteps of Jesus, and died to sin as did our Savior, they will gain the victory over death and the grave, to live forever in His presence; while the unfaithful shall come forth to shame and contempt, to finally go down to the second death and perish forever, because they would not forsake their evil ways.

Sunday morning, Sept 3d, our missionaries returned home om Asbury Park,N.J. , where their efforts met with singular uccess, in as much as during the four weeks' visit they left in hat city 5,5[illegible]3 books. Being desirous of making another trip efore Oct 1st, the natal day of our late beloved leader, Rev. .T.Nichols, on which date all endeavor to gather home to ay loving tribute to his memory and life work, preparations ere immedately in hand which would enable them to again eave home Sunday night, Sept. 10th, for a return visit to Cleveland, O. , the Misses Eunice D.Ingham and L.May Flowerday journeying to Vermontville, Mich. , where resides Miss .M.Wright, formerly from Hot Springs, Ark. , who for two ears has kept up a regular correspondence with the friends o whom now the hospitable doors of her home in Vermontville are thrown open. We trust the visit may be mutually of n upbuilding nature and that as a result of visiting the surounding towns and villages, which our Sisters propose doing, many may be enlightened and aroused to the importance of studying the God-given Chart, which alone will take any vessel into the haven of everlasting life and peace. From the keyboard of the "Harris Visible," on board the launch Megiddo, is ticked off from time to time news of considerable interest relating to the efforts and achievements of the launch's enthusiastic crew. Running to Cayuga Lake, the first stopping place was Cayuga, thence they moved to Union Spring, Aurora, and Kings Ferry, to which place Brother Thatcher and three other young men journeyed by automobile Saturday, Sept 9th, loaded with fruit and home made viands particularly palatable to the appetites of healthy, hardworking young men. About dusk, some six miles away from the launch, they recognized a familiar figure whose cap bore the name "Megiddo" and soon all were on their way to the boat. Supper being over the printer of the party prepared a poster to the effect that the "Megiddo Progressives" of Rochester would hold public meetings on Sunday at 3 and 7: 30 p.m. , in the Odd Fellows' Hall, to which all were cordially invited. Loading the instruments into the automobile, and as many passengers as space would permit, the rest of the party riding bicycles, they started out to Kings Ferry six miles distant from the landing place. On arriving they rendered songs and musical selections announcing the meetings for the following day. On Sunday afternoon, to a large and appreciative audience, the subject matter under consideration was, Hell and the Devil, the Death State and Resurrection, and in the evening, when about 200 came out, the chosen topic was, The Last Days.

The Presbyterian minister, who was present at the afternoon's service and who stayed to converse and ask questions during the time intervening between the services, seemed greatly impressed with the attitude of these brave defenders of the faith, expressing his surprise and enquiring of them the reason of their oneness of mind, when there exists, as he confessed, so many and varied opinions in the churches. The explanation given was to the effect that the beliefs of the day are not founded on the Bible, but are an outcome of the thoughts and imaginations of the heart of men which have, as Paul declared they would, turned them away from the truth to fables (2.Tim. 3:4); when, as the Bible declares, we must "all speak the same thing, and be perfectly joined together in the same mind and the same judgment." I. Cor.1:10.

At the conclusion of his own sevice he returned to hear from them again. Later news tells of splendid results of these meetings, of good sales and many experiences of real worth and interest. They are gradually working down to Ithaca, the last stopping places being Heddens and Meyers, where it was found necessary to send home for an express shipment of books.

Saturday, Sept. 2d, Brother Johnson and family arrived home from the Adirondacks, and on Sunday morning, after an absence of several months, were able with thanksgiving and gratitude to assemble again in the little church they so dearly love, and to whose music. until stricken with sickness, Brother Johnson was wont to contribute. Much as we would like to keep them with us, it is feared that our Brother's health may necessitate a long trip West for the winter months. But we are assured that Paul's words to his Roman brethren are just as applicable now as when penned, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Rom.8:28.

During the month of August, Brother Flowerday's automobile can be credited with having taken to the far-away rural districts the splendid total of 1,599 books. On one such trip they met and talked with a gentleman from whom they are in receipt of the following communication:

"Dear Brother in Christ: -- I have received the papers, for which I desire to thank you. As I look over my fields to see what the prospects are, I think you too are anxious to know what your labors are bringing forth. As no dead person enjoys flowers, I will hand you your bouquet while you are living by saying the literature has done us a world of good. There is no adulteration in those works for they are whole truths and some of them cause one to take a square look at oneself. Our neighbor, the sick lady, has been over to see us. She was very much impressed by your daughter's words. Now I hope to be able to send you a few dollars to help the work along for it is God's own work you people are doing . . . Pray for us that we may see clearly as you do.

G.F.B."

Other gleanings from the field may be of interest to our readers. "Long Beach, Calif. Dear Sir and Brother. Sometime ago I sent for an assortment of your publications and after reading them I found them interesting and I have come to the conclusion they are truthful. I have been lending them around and sending them to friends, so that most of them have been lost or not returned, consequently I have decided to send for another supply, I am enclosing a list of what I desire and possibly I may send for a large supply later as I think they should be read by every preacher in America.

Yours for God's Kingdom on earth.

WHY ARE THE PEOPLE IN IGNORANCE OF TRUE BIBLE TEACHING?

By the late Rev. L.T.Nichols. January 13.1907.

To realize we are indeed living in the dark, dark night, and the world are all unenlightened in regard to the great and wonderful plan and purpose of God, the alwise powerful Being! All the nations of the wide earth are wrapped in midnight slumber. And how full of gratitude our hearts should be to think and realize, yea, know that we have been awakened out of the deep, dreadful slumber, that sleep that carries all its sleepers into the great vortex of destruction; awakened out of this condition for the specific purpose of walking in obedience to the things that the day brings to light. In this day we are commanded to work. We are commanded not to slumber, but we are commanded to run in this race that is set before us. But in order to do this, we cannot expect to run if we are in the night; for he that would run in the night will stumble. The darkness will surround him, so that obstacles cannot be viewed: he cannot see them, consequently he will stumble headlong into ruin and destruction. But we are commanded to awake out of sleep.

You remember Paul was so anxious in reference to this matter that in the long, dark night of slumber, in which he predicted the world would be fast asleep, we find him declaring that we are to "awake out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." "Awake!" is the commandment in the thirteenth chapter of Romans. Awake! arise! "Arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee light." For it cannot be expected in this slumbering condition -- we needn't expect, as long as we are in this midnight darkness, that Christ will give us light. We must have the clarion note sounded in our ears and then it begins to awaken an interest in us, and it will begin to bring us out of slumber into the light of the morning, into the light of the wondrous day before us, into the day of salvation which will ultimately end in the saving of every one who will truly awaken; awaken for the real purpose and the only object of keeping in the day. No longer walk as others walk in the vanity of their minds; no longer walk as other Gentiles walk, as all nations walk in the vanity of their minds. There is a well guarded way marked out; there are those that are pointing out the way, and commanding for us to walk in it; and if we pay attention, and open our ears, and awake out of slumber in this midnight darkness by which we are surrounded, we can hear. Although, you remember, there is a commandment in Isaiah written for our instruction, which comes home to us.

He declared, "I heard the voice of the Lord saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me." And the answer came from the high and lofty God, "Go and tell this people, Hear ye;" [illegible] in slumber that it is quite impossible to awaken most of them, and some will never awaken from their midnight slumber.

"And he said, Go and tell this people, Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not." He has given you a prediction foretelling what the results will be. I it was properly rendered it would read, "Go tell this people (preach to the people, make a declaration) Ye shall hear bu will not understand." They will not take it to their heart; they will not depart from evil; and they sav, We will not understand. It is not the idea that individuals cannot comprehend these wonderful truths, but they "see and understand not." What is the idea we are to get from it? If we let the Almighty place his own qualifying terms here, we wouldn't get ourselves into any difficulty. But if this text we have just called your attention to should be presented to all the ministers o the wide earth, they couldn't explain it to you; they couldn' give you any intelligent rendering of it. It would seem fron the reading of it, if we had nothing else to guide us, that th Lord had closed their eyes.

It says, "Make the heart of this people fat, and make thei ears heavy, and shut their eyes, lest they see with their eyes and hear with ears, and understand with their heart, and convert, and be healed." As though the Lord was going to sen the mighty gloom of darkness, and close the eyes of all nations so they couldn't see or understand! But, says the prophet, Ye will not understand, ye will not hear. I made a proclamation, I sent my prophets, rising up early and sendin them, but ye would not hear. This is equal to the statemen of our Master, 'Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life. (John 5:40.) They are the ones that understand not. What understanding? It is not so obscure and intricate that the can't understand it, but it is that they will not depart from ev they are shown the narrow way, but they will not walk in And thus, as we turn back to the prophet and let him expla it, it becomes easy to comprehend. Job 28:28, "And un man he said, Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdo and to depart from evil is understanding." Yes, "to depa from evil is understanding."

Go and say, They will hear and will not understand; th will not depart from evil. That is what understanding is, th which will cause us to reform and come in and conform to t law of God.

We are thankful that God, in presenting the narrow way Truth, puts before them and says, "Choose ye this day wh ye will serve," Our choice is to serve the Lord; but they cho the broad way. Their ears have become closed and their e are shut tight; and the result is the world is in midnight da ness. But there is something that causes this: we step fart back of the condition of the people, and the cause is presented in the testimony of the prophet when he calls our attention to this very fact; when he calls our attention and says there are those who love to slumber. We turn to the prophet and let the Almighty bloom it out and use the right term; he will tell us these sentiments clothed in the proper words; and it will be so easy to comprehend them.

"Declare this in the house of Jacob, and publish it in Judah, saying, Hear ye." Go and make a declaration; go and proclaim to the people the wondrous power of Me, the mighty and Everlasting One. Go and say something: "Hear now this, O foolish people," -- he introduces another phrase, -- a people that will not hear -- "and without understanding; which have eyes, and see not; which have ears, and hear not." Ah! they are foolish because they will not depart from evil; they have ears, but they hear not; and eyes, but they see not: -- all redundant; it comes back on them. They have eyes, but they see not; ears, but they hear not. It is not that the Almighty has given them ears, and then closed them so they cannot hear; but they are a foolish people. You will find one of these texts in the sixth chapter of Isaiah and the other in the fifth of Jeremiah. They have eyes, and they see not. Jer. 5:22, "Fear ye not me? saith the Lord: will ye not tremble at my presence, which have placed the sand for the bound of the sea by a perpetual decree, that it cannot pass it; and though the waves thereof toss themselves, yet can they not prevail; though they roar, yet can they not pass it? But this people hath a revolting and a rebellious heart; they are revolted and gone." They would not listen. I made a proclamation, I performed on my side; I sent my prophets declaring to them, but they would not hearken. Why? because they are a revolting people, they have gone astray. They are in that condition, under the ban of the priests, under the ban of the clergy, under the ban of their rulers. Like begets like. The congregation will be like their teachers; and if the heads love to slumber, I tell you the congregation will be slumbering too. As the divine testimony declares -- and it gives us the qualifying terms -- they have a revolting heart; "they are revolted and gone." 24th verse, "Neither say they in their heart, Let us now fear the Lord our God." That is equivalent to saying, Don't let us fear the Lord our God. What does it say back there in the 28th of Job? He couples two things together. Yes, the fear of the Lord and understanding are put before us so conspicuously that we cannot mistake the idea; we cannot fail to understand; we cannot fail to see. If we open our eyes and our ears, you and I can see and view the wondrous Truth as it is in Jesus.

Job 28: 27,28. "Then did he see it and declare it; he prepared it, yea, and searched it out." Yes, the Great One has searched and found it out. "And unto man he said, Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding." Yes, to depart from evil; but they are a foolish nation, this wide world of ours are a foolish people. "Neither say they in their heart, Let us fear the Lord our God." They will not awake out of their lethargy; they love to slumber; and thus it declares in the 56th chapter of Isaiah. We find it recorded of this very class of individuals in these words: "All ye beasts of the field, come to devour, yea, all ye beasts of the forest. His watchmen are blind: they are all ignorant, they are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark; sleeping, lying down, loving to slumber."

That is why, they have closed their eyes, they will and the watchmen, they have done this, they are blind, norant. Oh, to think! is this true that all the watchmen professed watchmen, are ignorant? It says so, and we f fulfilled before our very eyes. As we look out into the lightened world, we find they are all ignorant of the grand and purpose of God. Their watchmen are blind, all igno all dumb dogs, sleeping, fast asleep, lying down, loving to sl ber. No wonder the cry came to us down from the apos times to awake out of sleep! "Awake thou that sleepest, .. Christ shall give thee light." I do not wonder that such a p clamation came sounding out, when he declared and saw the prophetic language. He saw all nations would be asle they would apostatize and follow their watchmen, and the are all loving to slumber; -- and then they are D.D's. How propriately they have applied D.D. to their name! for they dumb dogs, loving to slumber. They don't want the wondr light of Truth, they would rather lie down and slumber. A it says they love to slumber; they are lying down, asleep, blin they are all ignorant, sleeping, lying down, loving to slumb yea, that is not all, they are greedy. This shows you it has no reference to literal sleep, a man fast asleep is not greedy, he is lost and unconscious for the time being; but here is spiritual darkness, "spiritual wickedness in high places," spiritu slumber of children that have been led astray into the dark bypaths of the world, the unenlightened ways of the world loving to slumber; hence he says, "They are greedy do which can never have enough, and they are shepherds th cannot understand."

Oh, it says they are watchmen! they are shepherds! This is the testimony says, they are professed watchmen; and it wi tell us still further in reference to those that slumber. We g back farther and we find it recorded without any mistake: Isa 29:5, "Moreover the multitudes of thy strangers shall be lik the small dust." Paul declares they are "strangers to the cov nants of promise," strangers to the wondrous light of heaven they haven't been made acquainted with the wondrous truth of the Bible; and so he sounds out: "Moreover the multitud of thy strangers shall be like the small dust, and the multitud of the terrible ones shall be as the chaff that passeth away yea, it shall be at an instant suddenly." 6th verse, "Thou shal be visited of the Lord of hosts with thunder, and with earthquake, and great noise, with storm and tempest and the flame of devouring fire." "And the multitude of all the nations" - here are the great masses of mankind, it is not only the ministers, not only the shepherds, not only the watchmen, but they have succeeded in wrapping all nations in the midnight darkness; they have caused all nations to be enveloped in the thick, murky night, until darkness prevails from one end of the ear even unto the other. As the prophet declares, darkness cove the earth. "Arise, shine; .. for darkness covers the earth, a gross darkness the people." Isa. 60:1,2. Oh, a good reason why we should let this wondrous Truth shine out, inasmuch the earth is covered with darkness. And he said to the mighty multitude, Isa. 29:8, "It shall be as when an hungry man dreameth, and, behold, he eateth; but he awaketh, and his soul is empty: or as when a thirsty man dreameth, and, behol he drinketh; but he awaketh, and, behold, he is faint, and soul hath appetite: so shall the multitude of all nations be, that fight against mount Zion." 9th v.

"Stay yourselves and wonder;" -- how appropriate! Oh, to think we can wonder! Is it not a wonder that they are all ignorant? When we look over the plain teachings of the Bible it seems as though someone would have stumbled on to them; but the Almighty says it is because they have a rebellious heart; they have ears, but they will not hear; they have eyes, but they will not see; they are a revolting people. The nations are a revolting people, they will not hear. But it declares, "Stay yourselves and wonder; cry ye out, and cry;" - go and proclaim, go and say to the nations, to the people that have ears and hear not, go and declare something in reference to them; they are all ignorant. I tell you, a man that will not come up honestly, and come to the Bible teachings and pore over its pages, and accept of the light of truth, you can make up your mind who he is: he is ignorant; he has closed his eyes and will not hear. "Stay yourselves and wonder; cry ye out, and cry; they are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink."

This woman that sits on the scarlet colored beast, riding forth in the sea of nations, -- she is on a scarlet colored beast, red and gory in her pride, dressed in fine linen and purple, riding forth in her gorgeous array; and he says, Cry, she hath made all nations drunk on her wine. "Cry ye out, and cry; they are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink." 10th ver. "For the Lord hath poured out on you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes: the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered." Yes. "For the Lord hath poured out on you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes; the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered." The prophets, the rulers, the seers, the watchmen and your shepherds, they are all ignorant. 11th ver. "And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, (they all tell you Revelation is a mystery, and it is become as the words of a book that is sealed) which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed."

They say, "I can't explain Revelation to you, it never was given for you to comprehend." The prophet declares there is a vail over their eyes, and the prophetic statements tell you the very condition the world would be in.

Now, I want to know what epoch of time he had reference to? This special epoch had reference to the 1260 years of darkness, when truth lay dead; or, as the historian says, when it was in "its seeming tomb." We'll turn over and see what condition we were in when the clarion note was sounded forth in our ears. Daniel says, "When I heard the voice of his words, then was I in a deep sleep," (not one ray of light) and my face in the dust; when thy words came unto me "my face was toward the ground." (Dan. 10:9)

When the clarion note of Truth came, I was in a deep sleep, in midnight darkness of the world. How true! Can we not see when we first heard the truth we were in the midnight darkness, surrounded in the murky night, without a single syllable or glimmer of the wondrous light of heaven? Now said the prophet, When thy words came to me I was in a deep sleep, slumbering; but I want to know what special epoch of time this refers to? It refers to God's people in the latter days. 9th v.

"Yet heard I the voice of his words: and when I heard the voice of his words, then (when ? .. when I heard the voice o his word) was I in a deep sleep, with my face toward the ground." At the end of the long night of darkness someone heard the voice of the living God and awoke, -- had the eye of their understanding enlightened. I am not going to stay and tell you all about the eighth and ninth of Daniel today, I hav not time for that.

Daniel saw something; he had a vision of the time to come He says, "Yet heard I the voice of his words: and when I hear his words then was I in a deep sleep on my face, and my fac toward the ground." 10th v. "And, behold, and a hand touched me, which set me upon my knees and upon the palms o my hands." At the time of the end, there is a time in whic God's people are represented as being on their knees and th palms of hands, in a trembling condition. After hearing th words of God, it took time to have our senses exercised t know how to walk, to be able to discern between good an evil. And now, said the angel to the beloved one, (Daniel signifies the beloved of the Lord, and it declares he was "a ma greatly beloved.") "understand the words that I speak unt thee, and stand upright; - when he had spoken this word unto me, I stood trembling -- for unto thee am I now sent." I hav come to cause thee to depart from evil. "I am come to mak thee understand what shall befall thy people in the latter days; -- befall whom? Thy people. When? In the latter days. -- "fo yet the vision is for many days;" or, it covers a long period o time.

From Daniel's day down to the present period, he said ther would be a time they were wrapped in slumber and midnigh darkness; and said to you, away down in the latter days, tha when the words of Truth came to the beloved of the Lord, found them fast asleep, with their faces earthward. The belo ed one awoke, and looking heavenward for the knowledg from above, (which is first pure, then peaceable, gentle an easy to be intreated) stood trembling.

But the seers, the shepherds, the watchmen, they declar No, no, you needn't have any of those characteristics in yo just depend on the blood of Christ to be made clean, and yo will be whiter than snow, without this wisdom. "The fear the Lord is the beginning of wisdom: and to depart from ev is understanding;" (Prov. 9:10, and Job 28:28) but they sa you haven't got to have one those fruits to be saved. "Th wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, ge tle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits and if we have this wisdom dwelling within us, we'll be fill with good works.

And thus it declares, When this wondrous Truth came to m it found me asleep; and he says this shall be for a people " the latter days," in the great time of the end when the wor is wrapped in midnight darkness; when, as Paul declares us, "They that sleep sleep in the night; and they that be drun en are drunken in the night. But ye, brethren, are not of th night but of the day;" showing you it had no reference to l eral night, literal sleepers, nor literal darkness. Ye, brethre are not of the night, but of the day. Every child of God de onstrates, more or less, he has to go into Nature's repair sh and take a little sleep or slumber; but it is not that kind night, or sleep. Beloved brethren, it is not that at all, but spi ual slumber. And these dumb dogs love to slumber; they have said the Bible is sealed; all the seers and pastors and shepherds say it is sealed. They have closed their eyes so they cannot see; they have ears to hear, but they will not listen to the wondrous words of truth, and cry out to the wide world, they are all drunken, not with wine, but they are drunk upon the doctrines of the old Mother. · And as we find the wondrous Truth being unfolded before us, it tells they are drunk on her wine. She calls on us to drink the old dregs, and Paul says they are drunk; and not only Paul, but Jesus, in his last letter, said this old woman had made all nations drunk on the wine of her fornication. God doesn't make them drunk, but he says, Go and proclaim to this people that they are drunk. God made them drunk, too, in another sense: He sends the wondrous Truth and blinds their eyes, "lest they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them." (Matt. 13:15.)

But, says Paul, The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not; that is the god that has blinded their eyes to the wondrous truth as brought forth in the Divine Record. And he says, "Moreover, brethren," – what does our lesson start out with? "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant," and he says they are all ignorant – they are dumb dogs and shepherds and pastors of the world, drunk on the wine of the old Mother of harlots; they are all ignorant; and he says, "Moreover" – besides what I have told you before, (in the previous chapter) "I keep under my body," --Oh, I want you to understand that "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection; lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." And "Moreover" – not only that, -- he says, I don't want you to be ignorant; about what? "how that all our fathers" -- away back, every child of God, all our fathers, every one, every true one-- I've been telling you about those that are drunk, and false watchmen and teachers, dumb dogs, loving to slumber, those of whom it is said when the book is handed to them that are learned, they say, I cannot read it because it is sealed; it is too deep for us to comprehend, and God never intended it to be understood; (and we find the apostle crying in our ears today, that such a state of things would exist, they all say this is the state and condition that should exist in the latter days, and we find it fulfilled to the very letter.) It makes the mighty truth gleam out with resplendent beauty and glory; it causes the real truths of the Bible to shine out to the unenlightened mind, and causes us to put our trust in the mighty God instead of the arm of man. "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; and did all partake of the same spiritual meat;" - yes, "they did all eat of the same spiritual meat;" and I tell you, beloved ones, unless you eat this same spiritual meat, you will never have strength enough to awake out of slumber. It all depends on eating this meat; we must partake of this spiritual meat which all our fathers ate. I ate it, says Paul, and it is something for you to partake of; and all our fathers did partake of that meat that declares we must bring our bodies into subjection, lest when we have preached to others we ourselves should be a castaway. And he says, Moreover, brethren, I do not want you ignorant how that "all our fathers were under the cloud, a all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto M in the cloud and in the sea." Yes, they were all envelop the night of darkness; they were found in the same con as Daniel, in a deep sleep; but they were all made to ea same spiritual meat, "and all drink the same spiritual d for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, that Rock was Christ."

Oh, it wasn't a literal rock that followed along, neither w it a literal Christ; but a spiritual Christ, and a spiritual R Christ Jesus. That was the meat they all ate, the "same sp ual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Chri What Christ is that? The "I," the Truth, "the bread that ca down from heaven, which if a man eat thereof he shall li forever;" that is the spiritual meat and drink you and I mu drink of in order to be saved. But the world are what? Th are all ignorant of the wondrous Truth; and as we look o and go from place to place all over this benighted world, w find there is not a man enlightened. How veritably true is th Bible! and how we should press it to our heart! It is the on light to guide us in the narrow way, where so few travelers are found, -- so few in number, in the narrow way are found. And it declares unto us, "All our fathers did eat the same spiritual meat." But -- Oh consider! think of the next sentence! it almost makes my heart flutter! We have been found in midnight darkness, we have been made to eat of this spiritual meat, "But – with many of them God was not well pleased!" Oh, to think! shall we fill that bill? With many of the enlightened ones God was not well pleased. Oh, how few! All the pastors and shepherds and teachers are ignorant; they all love to slumber, and are all out of the way. And then, under adverse circumstances, the clarion note is sounded to awake people to the wondrous light, and with many of the awakened ones God is not well pleased. How few! how few indeed! awake to righteousness and sin not. This is the commandment, to awake to righteousness and sin not. That is the reason, the great difficulty; but is not the wondrous prize sufficient? the grand, celestial glory of the good time coming? the very idea of the grand old prophet coming again? But we are the only people that know anything about his coming. You may travel the world over, and you will never hear such a sermon as this; you may travel from Dan to Beer-sheba and you will never hear a minister telling you about that testimony in Malachi 4:5, "Behold, I will send you Elijah the proppet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord." You may travel from Dan to Beer-sheba and you won't find it taught, but the very thought! the very idea – "I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. 6th verse. "And he shall turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to the fathers, (all our fathers ate the same spiritual food; and when the children are turned to the understanding of the fathers, they will eat that spiritual food) lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." I would like to know, if you and I were privileged to start out tomorrow, – I would it was so, – Elijah would knock at the door and say to this little band, I am he that sat under the juniper tree. I am he that was spoken of, that said, "I only am left, and they seek my life to take it away." I am he that passed over the river Jordan, and took off my mantle and smote the stream thereof and it piled up right and left, and my comrade and myself walked over on dry land. And we discoursed on the way, in the mighty wilderness of sin, – the only two walking in the narrow way, while the vast, wide world lay engulfed in darkness; the only two conversing on the wondrous Truth. I am he, who said to Elisha, If thou seest me when I am taken away, then my mantle shall fall on thee, and thou shalt act in my place; and thou shalt preach the wondrous Truth I have left to thee in charge. This Elisha, the one who saw Elijah, and his mantle fell upon him, so that when he went back, and with the mantle parted the river and passed over dry shod, and began to tell the mighty world of these things. The grand old prophet Elijah is coming again; and if he comes, who would not be glad to hear him say, I am he that passed over the river Jordan with Elisha, and as we walked along, a mighty whirlwind enveloped me and I was taken up into heaven, lost to view; was borne away from Elisha, and he saw him no more. Oh, Elisha must have looked in wondering astonishment as he saw his comrade ascend higher and higher! The whirlwind carried him away until he was lost from view, no more to behold his lovely face until we, we Brethren, – Oh what an honor! – until we are permitted to awaken Elisha from death's slumber. And we will say, Here is the old prophet! The first time he will ever be permitted to view his face, will be through our instrumentality.

Oh, is it not sufficient! is it not worth while? It should be worth everything to us to have the divine prophetic statement fulfilled in us; for it declares to us, I don't want you ignorant "concerning them which are asleep. . . For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even them also that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise."

Ah! the Lord himself shall descend with a shout, and when he comes the trump will have sounded, the dead be raised. And then he says we "shall be caught up together, . . to meet the Lord in the air." I.Thess.4:13 to 18.

Dont you see the dead are all raised when Christ comes? Oh, what an honor! And this is what will befall the people in the latter days: we'll have the honor and glory of not only awakening the nations, but the sleeping dead. Old Elisha will come forth, and we'll say, "Elisha, this is Elijah; do you recognize the old prophet?" Oh, how gladly he will grasp his hand! how fleetly he will step up to him and press him to his side! and he will say, "Elijah, I believed you would come again, and raise me from the dead." I think one such meeting will pay us for all we have ever done! to see them meet and greet one another, and see their joy. Oh, the joy it will bring to us, to think we had been the means of bringing the two old prophets together! Oh, the blessed privilege of viewing their face and beholding their joy and comfort! (The clock strikes 12.) My! how time gets away. Well, I am going to take this up tonight, right where I left off. I had enough mapped out for twelve sermons. I was just lost in these wondrous testimonies this morning; I didn't know when you came in to meeting. They were piling one on top of the other, and I haven't had an opportunity of bringing them up to you today. Well, Sister Hembree, you can talk for five minutes.

"I HAVE GIVEN YOU AN EXAMPLE, THAT YE SHOULD DO AS I HAVE DONE."

Extract of sermon by Rev. Maud Hembree.

If we were building a literal house and some one would come and tell us we were building on the literal sand and that if we continued building the structure would go to destruction, how thankful we would be and what care we would exercise, if wise, to seek a solid foundation; but how carelessly we go about the building of this spiritual house, this house we are silently building each day! How much more diligent we should be in building this house, for we have only one opportunity to build it, only one life in which to perform the work! This house is builded by wisdom, and Paul tells us in I. Cor .3:9, "Ye are God's building;" and in Heb.3:6 he says, "Christ as a son over his own house, whose house are we." His brethren are the house, God's building.

In this 13th chapter of John, our lesson, Jesus said, "I have left you an example, that ye should do as I have done unto you;" and then he adds, in the 17th v., "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." Jesus took water and washed the disciples' feet and wiped them with the towel wherewith he was girded. Now, we ask, is this the literal feet Jesus meant we were to wash? I have told you before about the Dunkard meeting we once attended, where the women, in their little bonnets and kerchiefs, were on one side of the church, and the men on the other; a woman going round with a basin and towel washed the feet of the women, while a man performed the same office among the men. Of course it was merely a form they went through, for they had previously washed their feet at home, so they were perfectly clean. If Jesus meant the literal when he said, "I have left you an example, that ye should do as I done to you," then we would wash one another's literal feet; but we have learned from the Scriptures of truth that literal feet-washing was not the example Jesus left us. Any one ought to know how to wash literal feet, and all who gain eternal glory will keep their feet clean and will not be above washing another's feet if it becomes necessary; but we find the feet that must be washed are the feet that the world knows nothing about. There are other than literal feet spoken of in the Bible, as we will find by turning over to I.Cor.12:12, "For as the body is one (not a literal body), and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ." Ah! there are different members in this body, as the 14th v. says: "For the body is not one member, but many." There are different members of the body, taken out in different epochs of time: Christ the Head of the body and the others the different members of the body. And there are feet, for he continues, "If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole body were hearing, where were the smelling? But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him. And if they all were one member, where were the body? But now are they many members, yet but one body. And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head, I have no need of you. Nay, much more those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary." Yes, Christ the head of this body would never say to the feet, I have no need of you. The feet, those taken out in the last days, are very necessary to hold aloft the word of truth. "And," he says, "those members of the body, which we think to be less honorable, upon these we bestow more abundant honor; and our uncomely parts have more abundant comeliness. For our comely parts have no need: but God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honor to that part which lacked." Ah! there is a part of the body that lacks. But what do we lack? Last Sunday we had in our midst four blind people, three persons who had to be brought to church in wheel chairs, one a cripple, another enfeebled by age and disease, and another by sickness, and we have those who are deaf as well as those who are dumb. I think we lack something; we lack the power of healing, which the apostles had in olden times, the power to restore the sight of the blind, to cause the deaf to hear and the lame to walk. We lack the power to speak in tongues; we lack the power to raise the dead, as Lazarus was raised. Jesus delegated that power to his apostles, but it all passed away; the gifts of the Spirit ceased, "and now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three." Yes, only three remain; the gifts were to be taken away from the body, they would lack those, and only faith, hope and charity remain.

We walk by faith in this age, and you know Jesus said to Thomas, "Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed." There will be a greater blessing to those who walk by faith, for he is going to give more abundant honor to that part of the body which lacks. What a wonderful consolation! What virtue would there be anyway in believing, if you had to wait to see the dead raised? If we could go to Mt. Hope with the power to say to our sleeping leader, "Come forth," and he would stand before us as in former days, it would be an easy matter to believe.

In the 27th v. the apostle says, "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." But the old Mother and all her daughters think it was the literal body of Christ that hung suspended on the cross, when they read of the body of Christ. Paul, in speaking on this subject in Eph.1:23,24. says that Christ was given "to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body." There are many members in that body, and that body will have feet. In Heb. 10:10 we read that "we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all." Every member of this body of Christ must die to sin. They must be as the previous verse expresses, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God." And by which will we are sanctified. Doing the will of God is what saved Christ, the head of the body, and we find that doing this same will is what is going to be the salvation of every member of the body. What is the body? "Now are ye the body of Christ, and members in particular." Oh, this is a wonderful thing, this body of Christ Jesus has qualified it and made it as plain as it could be made just what his body is, so there can be no doubt to those who are instructed. Every one of this body has to be sanctified by the word of truth.

When Jesus said to his disciples, in Matt. 5:29, "If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee," he had no reference to a literal eye. There might be a member of this body who could see, one with a good intellect, but if he will not walk in obedience, cast him from thee; for it were better to cast him off than that the whole body should b stroyed. You do not have to cut off your literal hand nor p out your literal eye, if they offend you, but even though one who can see the beauties of truth, we must cast him for all such will contaminate. Paul said in I.Cor.5:6, "K ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?" Th why Jesus said we are to cut off every member that offe If they will not come into submission, cut them off, they contaminate; there will be poison there. Oh, it is this lo unleavened bread of sincerity and truth we must partak and all who will not eat must be cut off.

Paul said to his brethren, "Know ye not that the unrighte shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: ne ther fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminat shall inherit the kingdom of God." Don't you be deceived think the unrighteous are going to inherit the kingdom of G all such will never gain it. "And such were some of you: ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." he says ye are washed. This is the washing that will avail, ing washed in this word of truth, this Spirit of God ("My wo they are spirit and they are life." -- Jno.6:63.).

The apostle was writing to his Corinthian brethren, and said, "Such were some of you: but ye are washed, ye are san ctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesu What does Romans 2:13 say? "For not the hearers of the la are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified. What a consolation! Though you have done these things, you can wash and be clean, we find in Isa.1:13, "Wash you, m you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil." That is the kind of washing Jesus gave them an example to follow, and, if you follow this example and wash from all evil, though your sins have been as scarlet, they shall be white as snow. All we have to do is to cease to do evil and learn to do well, then we shall live through a gladsome eternity. There will be no cutting off, because we have kept these wonderful commandments.

In Matt.5:19 we read, "Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven." We cannot break one of the least commandments. But from this rendering you might think such a one could squeeze in and be least in the kingdom. We have the Greek Testament here -- King James' gave it, "He shall be called least in the kingdom," but the Greek reads, "He shall be farthest from the kingdom of heaven; he shall not attain unto it at all." Yes, he will be shut out and not attain unto the kingdom of heaven at all, unless he ceases to do evil. This is really wonderful, to find this reading that such a one shall not attain unto it at all, because the author of this Testament did not believe we had to keep every commandment for salvation. The next verse conveys the same mighty truth, "For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." There are plenty of scribes and Pharisees around, I mean those who make a profession of religion as they did in the days of Jesus, but if you do not wash up and keep this body clean, and have your righteousness exceed theirs the kingdom of heaven will never be your portion.

Now with these testimonies in our mind we should be ready to read John 13 intelligently. I believe Jesus really took water and literally washed the feet of the apostles, but there was a lesson to be taught; for when Peter said to him, "Lord, dost thou wash my feet?", Jesus answered and said unto him, "What I do thou knowest not; but thou shalt know hereafter." If it had been literal feet washing, would Jesus have said, "What I do thou knowest not; but thou shalt know hereafter"? You do not now understand, he said, but you shall know hereafter what the dirt on the feet is. He knew that Judas was going to betray him and be taken away, therefore he said, "Ye are not all clean;" and, also, that down in the feet of the body there would be some dirt to be washed away. So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, "Know ye what I have done to you? Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am. If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you." He had washed their feet, had labored and reproved and warned them in order to get them to become cleansed. He says, I have given you an example of how to cleanse the body; had told them if the right eye offend they were to pluck it out, and, knowing Judas was going to offend, he showed how they were to cleanse the evil out of the body.

"If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." Not happy because you wash the literal feet, but because you get rid of the dirt and filth of the body. And how do we become cleansed? In John 15:3, Jesus tells us, "Now ye are clean thru the word which I have spoken unto you." This word is the water we must cleanse in, and it is the water Jesus told the woman of Samaria would be in all who partake "a well of water springing up into everlasting life." (Jno.4:14).

Now that I have instructed you and you know these things, said Jesus, "happy are ye if ye do them." Not happy to get down and wash literal feet, but what that represents. A child could learn to wash literal feet, yet that would not make it happy, but Jesus carried the lesson right down to the feet of the body that would have to be cleansed, and told them they were not to become weary in well doing. Down in this time of the end, in the feet of the body, we have not the gifts of the Holy Spirit, that is the part we lack; but we have this Word, this water of life, in which we may wash and be clean.

In Rev. 3 Jesus is teaching the same wondrous truth. He says, beginning with the 2d v., "Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die: for I have not found thy works perfect before God. Remember therefore how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast and repent. If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou not shalt know what hour I will come upon thee. Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with me in white, for they are worthy." Those who know the times and seasons will be watching, and upon them Jesus will not come as a thief; they shall walk with him in white because they are worthy, because they have not defiled their garments. It is not our literal garments, we know, for our literal garments become soiled at our work, but it is the robe of righteousness, "the fine linen, clean and white; for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints" (Rev. 19:8). "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed i white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the boo of life, but I will confess his name before my Father and be fore his angels." Oh, what would you give to have Jesus con fess your name in that wondrous day? But it will be only fo those who wash and become clean. This was written for u down in the time of the end, for the "generation to come;" and he says, "Behold, I come quickly: hold that fast whic thou hast, that no man take thy crown."

Jesus does not want lukewarm beings, moving along lik snails in this work, but he wants those who are all warmed up in this wondrous way of truth; he wants them to have a zea directed by knowledge. He says, "As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent." For all such, those who wash and become clean he will have a wonderful supper, a glorious feast, for he said he would eat no more with them until he ate anew in the kingdom of God. "To hi that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, eve as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." I have showed you how to walk, he says, have lef you an example to do as I have done, to overcome all evil a I have overcome; so if you will do this you will be permitte to sit with me on my throne, to rule and have dominion with me through the endless ages of eternity.

LOCAL NEWS.

With the shortening of the days we realize the rapidity o Time, for but as yesterday we were welcoming spring endowed with her power of resurrection to life and her wealth o beauteous adornment, which now, touched with the cold finger of autumn, are being seared and turned to somber shades of amber, red and gold, reminding us that sooner or later all things must be brought under the law of displacement. Material riches may be amassed, worldly fame and renown, so much courted and sought after, attained, but these canno grant perpetuity of existence. Nothing abides but character, a holy life, a new creature; these are more enduring than all other distinctions, for worldly knowledge and attainments benefit humanity for but a short space of time. They are of such short duration and all efforts and strenuous endeavors of the noble and good to establish reforms and bring about a better state of affairs politically, socially and morally are frustrated by those who accrue wealth or some other selfish advantage or satisfaction from the existence of these same evil systems, of which the earth will be cleansed and purified when Christ returns to establish his Kingdom of which there will be no end. Isaiah the prophet, divinely inspired, referring to this wondrous time, declares, "The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down, and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day. In that day a man shall cast his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, which they made each one for himself to worship, to the moles and to the bats: to go into the clefts of the rocks, and into the tops of the ragged rocks, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth." -- Isa.2:11,20.21. Dear reader, whoever it may be, stop! look! listen! Jesus says, "And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be over charged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." Luke 21:34,35. The world passeth away with its knowledge, its fame and its glory, but, says the Divine writer, "He that doeth the will of God abideth for ever."

Saturday evening, Sept. 23d, the joy of home coming was again experienced at the Mission, when, after an absence of four weeks, we welcomed home the "Progressives," who have been operating our Mission yacht, "Megiddo," on the east shore of Cayuga Lake. Their stopping places were Cayuga, Union Springs, Aurora, Kings Ferry, Lake Ridge, Heddens, Meyers, Ludlowville and Ithaca. From these places, by the aid of bicycles, the young men every day covered many miles of country roads and have been instrumental in creating an interest in the much neglected, but greatest of all books — the Bible. At several of the above mentioned places the "Progressives" held public meetings, which were well attended by interested and appreciative audiences. Through the courtesy of Mr. W.T.Jordan, of Lock Berlin, they were enabled on their homeward journey to hold a public meeting in the hall which was the property of this gentleman, which he not only placed [illegible] disposal, but had previously announced the meeting [illegible] hall was well filled; the young men at- [illegible] conclusively from the Bible that "Good [illegible] a vision." A year ago Mr. Jordan [illegible] when the yacht was on one [illegible] which in the meantime he has made quite a study. On their outward journey to Cayuga this gentleman again hailed the unique craft when passing through one of the locks, requesting of its occupants some musical selections, but, as the shades of evening were drawing on apace and they were disirous of covering a certain number of miles, they sang to guitar accompainment those inspiring, well known words, "Have Faith in God." Mr.Jordan requesting them to notify him in good time of their intended return, which they did, with the above gratifying results that will long be remembered. Reviewing the trip we cannot but conclude it was a very satisfactory one, for, whether the meetings were indoors or on the shores of the lake, as they were in some instances, there were always those who expressed their thanks and gratitude that their attention had been called to what before they had not realized the importance of. The total number of books left in the district of Cayuga Lake was 4,676.

As encouraging evidence that their efforts are not in vain, Brother Simmons has received the following communication from a gentleman in Fulton, N.Y.:

"Dear Friend, — Was glad to receive your most welcome letter and hope you and your friends are in good health. I have been taking every opportunity to study the books and I tell you I never got anything better in my life, I have had many talks with people of different denominations since you were here. One man said it cleared up a lot of mysteries for him. I like to hear them say that. I have talked with the minister you visited but I am of the opinion he does not know half what he believes; I never did. It is shocking how they cling to certain verses and never think of looking for an explanation. One man I talked to believes every sinner will burn forever and ever and never die or be consumed. I feel very sorry for all such. I shall be sending shortly for another supply of books. Wish you could have been here longer, I never had so good a time in all my life. Should be glad to hear from you often. Write about anything pertaining to your work.

Yours truly, P. O."

While rejoicing over the returned and the narration of their varied experiences and adventures we would not forget the efforts of those who are still absent in the field, but who we expect by the date of present issue will have returned to our midst, when we hope for a short season to enjoy the pleasure of unbroken association so seldom afforded. They write from Cleveland, O., in a very hopeful, encouraging strain of the progress of the work being carried on in that city and adjacent towns and villages, two of our workers mentioned having visited homes for 11 miles on the state road to Akron, O., and felt greatly repaid by the number of intelligent, interested people they met and conversed with on the soon-coming Kingdom of God and the condition of the world which is fa[illegible]ening for destruction. Not literal destruction, but destruc[illegible] of all sin and sinners. They met here and there those who [illegible] convinced that it will take a mightier power than that of m[illegible] to bring this world into subjection, and to subdue its [illegible] nations. To such they unfold with gladness God's wonde[illegible] plan of salvation, which will, though men deride and i[illegible] be fulfilled to the very letter. Total of books for week [illegible] Sept. 23d, 2,700.

A lady in Santa Paula, Calif., thus expresses [illegible]

"Dear Sir, — In 1908 there came to my door [illegible] vassing your religious works. I purchased three and after reading them was interested in the way you explained the Scriptures and thought I would get more later. That same fall I left the city, met other conditions in life and did not get them sent for. The other day in looking through a trunk I found the books and now will you kindly send me a list of all your publications?"

This was done and a few days ago this lady sent in an order for over nine dollars' worth of books to be sent to Canadian addresses. As we sent them on their way, silent messengers to convey the good news of God's saving truth, it was with the fervent desire they would accomplish that whereunto they were sent.

We are now able to credit a gentleman living in Boise, Id., with having sent for seven dollars' worth of books on the "Sabbath." We trust the efforts of this friend may be richly rewarded.

Mr. and Mrs. H.A.Bates, recently of Pomona, Calif., are staying in Stephens City, Va., endeavoring to interest their friends, and all who will listen, in the way of truth and salvation. They write reassuringly that their time has not been spent in vain. Mr. and Mrs. Bates are intending to make Florida their home, climatic conditions being more favorable to Mr. Bates' delicate health.

Our "out door" preacher, Mr. Wade Helmar of Dayton, O., sends for another supply of books and recounts experiences of interest and opposition which will, in every God-fearing heart, cause the light of truth to shine more clearly; for the Bible rule is to compare spiritual things with spiritual, but as Paul declares, "The natural man receiveth not the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE CANAANITES.

It is not God's way to justify himself at the bar of his creatures' judgment. He acts and speaks autocratically. But in this matter he has deigned to explain his decrees. Men read the Bible story in the false light of the evolution craze. They picture to themselves a number of semi-civilized tribes on the upward path of progress exterminated by an invading horde of religious fanatics. But the Christian knows that they were a degenerate and apostate race, whose destruction was decreed by a God of infinite mercy, because they had given themselves up to unnatural and loathsome sin. Four centuries had passed since Sodom fell. And among the citizens of Sodom not even ten could be found who were clear of the evil. What, then must have been the condition of the land when God at last called in the Israelites as his executioners? Of the guilty nations there was one that seemed still to merit pity, and on account of that nation the judgment was delayed. If for four generations the favored people were left as strangers in a strange land, it was "because the iniquity of the Amorites was not yet full."

(Sir Robert Anderson, who thus speaks in "The Bible and Modern Chriscism," adds that the destruction of the Canaanites was a difficulty to his faith until he acquired a larger knowledge of human nature through his connection with Scotland Yard.—Editor.)

HOW TO REST

Many women seldom rest; they seem not to understand what rest—real rest—means. To throw oneself down with a newspaper or book is not rest; it is only a change of occupation. To sit down and keep the fingers flying over some sort of fancy-work, as if one were pursued by a demon of unrest, is certainly not rest. But to lie at full-length on a hard surface, arms extended at the sides, head back,.with no pillow, eyes closed, all cares and worries dismissed—this is rest. This will smooth away wrinkles in face and in temper; this will give an air of repose to the tired, anxious, nervous woman; this will take away many an ache and straighten out rounded shoulders and craned-out necks.

CONDUCT THE CHARACTER.

The idea that so long as a thing is good to be done it must be done at all hazards is a very demoralizing one. It puts conduct above character, whereas conduct is chiefly valuable as it is the natural fruit of character. Not only should we consider the intrinsic quality of the motive we present, but also the effect of its being strongly and frequently excited. For motive becomes habitual by repetition as well as action. Every time we arouse cupidity or avarice, envy or rivalry, hope of public applause of fear of the public frown we help to form a corresponding character; and we may well inquire what is the object that, when gained, will be worth such a price. That this should be done thoughtlessly and unconsciously, as it often is, shows a great deficiency in our moral condition.

EXERCISE

In order to be beneficial, exercise should be taken when the system is sufficiently vigorous to be able to meet it, as is the case after a lapse of from two to four hours after a moderate meal. If exercise is delayed till some degree of exhaustion from the want of food has occurred, it speedily dissipates the strength which remains and impairs digestion instead of promoting it. Early morning exercise has been favoured; but it is as much to be reprobated as early mental or physical labour, because at that time vitality is at its lowest ebb, and needs stimulation rather than further depletion. Certainly none but the gentlest exercise should be taken until the exhausted system has been supplied with abundant nourishment.

NEIGHBOURS

It is well to find out slowly and by degrees what neighbours really are before you allow them to be intimate; one soon begins to see if they are desirable or the reverse, and no disagreeableness ensues if little by little you see less of them. There are very few neighbours, even if intimate friends, whom one cares to see every day; their society is apt to pall if one sees them too often. In fact, friendship with near neighbours, however nice and charming they may be, is best sustained by not too constant intercourse. There are very few people we can see daily and not tire of; one does not meet more than one or two in a lifetime.

RUDENESS.

One can not always protect oneself from rudeness; that comes to all the dwellers in this not wholly socially satisfactory world. To be snubbed however is impossible to one who keeps the position to which he is entitled. He is foolish to accuse himself of having been pushing his way where he had no right by asserting that he has been rebuked by anybody. If he is capable of taking the high ground that is his wherever it may please him to go, of course he at one stroke does away with the possibility of being rebuffed by anybody whomsoever.

GOOD THINKING

Among the many arts which should be sedulously taught and earnestly studied, the art of thinking well should stand pre-eminent. Everybody thinks; it is an involuntary mental process that comes with the first dawn of intelligence and continues through life. But to think well is a rare art. Most of our thinking is desultory, wandering, and confused—a sort of litter of things good and bad, useful and useless, without arrangement, plan, or purpose. Good thinking always has an aim; it is a straight path to truth. It longs for great spiritual things and chooses the nearest way.

Emerson says, "The will of the pure runs down from them into other natures, as water runs down from a higher into a lower vessel." If we ourselves are true and noble, simple and sincere, we need not fear that our efforts to elevate and to purify others will ever prove a failure.

BIBLE QUESTIONS

If Paul said that "Jesus Christ shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom (2. Tim. 4:1), how can anyone be rewarded or punished before Jesus returns to this earth?

If the Thessalonians, when converted to the truth, "Turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven" (1 Thess. 1:9, 10), how is it that Protestants and Roman Catholics are waiting to be taken to God's Son in heaven?

If the Bible says there is but "one hope" (Eph. 4:4), and that "the hope of eternal life," to be bestowed at the second appearing of Jesus Christ, "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began" (Titus 1:2); "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ" (Titus 2:13); that being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life (Titus 3:7), what right have any to teach that men have eternal life now, and that the coming of Jesus is something which does not concern his diciples?

If we already possess immortality, why should the apostle Paul, exhorting "By patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life" (Rom. 2:7)?

If we are by nature immortal, why should the apostle exhort into "Put into immortality" (1 Cor. 15:53)?

If the soul is immortal and "can never die," what did Isaiah mean when he wrote, "When thou shalt make his (Jesus') soul an offering for sin," and Jesus himself when he told his diciples that "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death."

If the soul at death does not die, how can this verse in Isa. 53:12 be explained: "Therefore will I divide him with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he hath poured out his soul unto death"?

If Christ was immortal and hence could never die why did he tell John, that, "I am he that liveth, and was dead: and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell (hades, the grave), and of death" (Rev. 1:18)?

"To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8:20).

GEORGE B. ALLDRIDGE.

A TWO-FOLD WORK

This is what the household of faith has to prosecute The health of the Body depends largely upon the recognition of these two branches or departments of labor. All outside work dealing exclusively with first principles has the tendency to develop mere gladiators; on the other hand when the operations are confined too exclusively to the inside of the house, the tendency is to contract the sympathies, and a dangerous liability to become fossilized and penurious. A healthy state of things requires the two works to go on simultaneously. Saintship and soldiership want to go hand in hand. The creation of faith and the confirmation of it are equally important. Two kinds of increase attended this two-fold work in the first century, and we have the result stated apostolically in these words: "So were the churches established in the faith, and increased in numbers daily" (Acts 16:5). Both kinds of work faithfully prosecuted will yield a thanksgiving harvest, we have no doubt. Some reach this point, but we fear many do not. We are fearful that many think they have little to do, besides securing their own salvation; while others seem to bend all their energies with a view to numbers; and our experience for more than 35 years confirms the impression that this latter, one-sided course, favors a harvest of bastards and not sons; and that the work carried on in a dry, lifeless, calculating, commercial spirit is very apt to produce a crop of dry bones; and the work done by mere intellectual competency without any heart in it beyond what is pumped up for the occasion will yield a sparse and sickly increase in the direction of edification. When men of humble carriage, apt to teach, of good report; men who keep Christ to the front and themselves in the background, men of patience and real love both for the truth and the brethren, unostentatious servants year in and year out, who can be relied upon for a hundred different services great or small—men who not merely shake hands with the truth and the meetings, but who encircle them with the arms of affection, men of faith and prayer—these are the men who do a much needed two-fold work—we have workers of this class, and may the Lord of the harvest give us more laborers of this stamp, we pray.—Sel. by Bro. W. S. Tomlinson.

Bro. Beck came to America in 1840, and settled in Maryland, moving to Ohio in 1884, where he lived till death. He was united in marriage to Miss E. M. Grinale in 1858. To them were born ten children: John E., Margaret, Mary, David, Frank, Alma, Albert, Mauriel, Charles and Ora. John E. and Mauriel preceded their father in death. Bro. David and Frank and Srs. Pool, Ora and another sister, whose name has slipped my mind, are faithful workers in the Church of God at Springfield, their faithful church. Bro. Beck, together with his wife, was baptized into Christ in 1872, and have been faithful workers in the Lord's Vineyard from that time to his death. For the last three years the writer has been his pastor, and in Bro. Beck he has found a true brother; one who was always present at services.

The funreal services were conducted in the home by the writer, assisted by Rev. D. K. Lehman. After the services he was laid to rest to sleep until awakened by his Master. One by one the older ones are falling asleep. Who will take up their "work?"

J. H. ANDERSON.

Whoever is wise is apt to suspect and be diffident of himself, and upon that account is willing to "hearken unto counsel;" whereas the foolish man, being, in proportion to his folly, full of himself and swallowed up in conceit, will seldom take any counsel but his own—and for that very reason because it is his own.

EXPOSITION OF HEBREWS 10:26

"For if we sin wilfully after that we have received a knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin."

Many dear brethren have been perplexed with this scripture, and for all such we offer the following words of exposition:

1st. Sin may be committed and forgiven (Luke 11:4), covered (Rom. 4:7), blotted out (Acts 3:19), through the intercession of Jesus (1 John 2:1).

2nd. Sin for which there is no forgiveness (Luke 12:10; Matt. 12:31), is "blasphemy against the Holy Spirit."

To what kind of sin does the verse under consideration have reference? For a correct understanding of the passage we must keep in mind the exhortation of verse 23: "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering." If faith wavers good works will be neglected (vs. 24), then the forsaking of assembling of ourselves together, followed by the wilful sin.

Consider verses 24-39. Taking the chapter as a whole, it is evident we have a description of the sin of apostacy. To sin willfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth is to sin against the truth after we have had convincing evidence of it, to resist the spirit of truth, give up the hope set before us in the gospel as the only way of salvation, and reject Jesus as the Savior, after having known and professed the Christian religion; to fall away and apostatize completely. For such there remaineth no more sacrifice of sin. We ought to thank God for this scripture, for it teaches that he is at all times willing to help us until we desert him.

VITAL ACTIVITIES

It is generally supposed that our vital activities are something either to be restrained or let alone. When they run to excess and destroy the balance of our nature every voice proclaims the duty of governing and curbing them; otherwise we are content to let what we suppose to be "well enough" alone. Life, however, is positive, not negative. It is the performance of every duty and the exercise of every function in the fullest manner that constitutes a happy and valuable life. Duty requires us to carry on all our vital activities—to let none languish or decay.

It is undeniable that the more fully we come to know the average man or woman the more unexpected good we find in them and the greater allowance we see ought to be made for their defects. One good rule, then, for securing justice in this matter would be to speak no ill, and, as far as possible, to think no ill, of strangers or enemies, simply because in the one case we have no adequate means of judging, and in the other we are disqualified from doing so by our feelings.

Of all the dispositions with which mortal man may be born there is no other that on the whole is so likely to assist him to make his way through life satisfactorily as that of being born a man of expedients. Whatever gifts of wealth a man may chance to inherit, he is sure sooner or later to come to grief unless he inherits also the art of managing them. It is by no means enough to get a fortune; it is necessary to use one's wits to preserve it.

It is probable that not a little harm is done in the education of the young by unduly appealing to the sense of wonder. Wonder is essentially a stupid emotion; it certainly is the one that stupid people are most eager to gratify. In lieu of wonder however we may very usefully stimuate curiosity; and this may be done in a general way by the representing everything as leading us on, if properly considered, to views and truths beyond itself.

Every man has a natural inclination to communicate what he knows; and if he does not do so it is because his reason and judgment are strong enough to control his inherent propensity. When you find a friend who can exercise absolute power over the communicative instinct, wear him in your heart. If you have no such friend keep your own counsel.

Life is not very different, as one might think, east or west, in country or in city. Anywhere a man may be a gentleman if he will. Anywhere one may do honest, faithful work if he will. Anywhere one may make great intellectual advancement if he will. And these are the marks of a man.

There is a loyalty, which is higher than any government, any party, any cause, or any friend can claim; it is the loyalty we owe to our honest convictions of truth and right. Whenever these conflict with lower claims the latter must give away.

There is no harm, says Sir Walter Scott, but, on the contrary, benefit, in presenting a child with ideas beyond his easy and immediate comprehension. The difficulties offered—if not too great or too frequent—stimulate curiosity and encourage exertion.

Respect goodness, find it where you may. Honor talent wherever you behold it unassociated with vice; but honor it most when accompanied with exertions, and especially when exerted in the cause of truth and justice.

A busy life, with good principles, strong purposes, and wisdom enough to secure a fair cultivation of the different sides of the nature, is one of the most important factors for securing a ripe and happy old age.

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:18), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:28), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 8:15); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). PREACHING THE TRUTH

A narrative reciting the experiences of a believer preaching "The Truth as it in Jesus."

William Brown

The chairman then arose and asked the audience not to leave until he had held a short conference with the debaters, after which he would make an announcement.

He then turned to Mr. Hamilton and the blacksmith and asked them if a new subject should be taken up for the next meeting, or if they wished to continue the discussion of the same subject.

Mr. Hamilton at once replied that there would be no further discussion of any kind as far as he was concerned.

"Do you mean to say you will not go ahead with the debate," asked Timothy.

"That is exactly what I mean. I am sorry I entered into it. I don't think any good purpose can be served by such a discussion. It does not affect our salvation either one way or the other whether we believe in Mr. Stephanas' interpretation of scripture or mine. All a man has to know is 'that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin,' and I am sure we all accept that."

"What have you to say about that, Mr. Stephanas?" asked Timothy.

"Well, if that last statement is correct and that is all we have to know, I have been wondering why it was necessary for Mr. Hamilton to absorb all the information in that pile of books on the table, and why the community pays him to preach, for I am sure Farmer Jones could tell the people 'that the blood of Christ cleanseth us from all sin.' This idea that it 'makes no difference what we believe' is absolutely wrong, for Christ said 'he that believeth the gospel and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be condemned.' Now it is impossible to believe the gospel and believe the things which Mr. Hamilton teaches, therefore I say let us sift the matter to the bottom. I am ready to continue the discussion."

"What do you say?" said Timothy turning to Mr. Hamilton.

"I have nothing further to say," said Mr. Hamilton, and turning away he started toward the door.

The End of The Debate

Timothy and Mr. Stephanas talked together for a few minutes and then Timothy called the audience to order and announced that Mr. Hamilton had refused to go any farther with the debate. He also announced that the home of Mr. Stephanas was open to any who were interested to know the truth of these important matters, and that he would gladly spend his evenings with any, who would call upon him for the discussion of Bible subjects. With some expressions of regret that the debate could not be continued. Timothy brought the meeting to a close.

After closing the meeting Timothy congratulated the Blacksmith on the way he had handled the "Word," and assured him that he would be among those who could take advantage of this help in the evenings at his home.

He then sought out Doris and escorted her home. There was a strange strained silence between them as they walked along the country road. Doris's expression and demeanor seemed to say, please don't ask me any questions. Timothy was quick to interpret it and so they walked along the way in silence until arriving at the Hamilton home where they bid each other "good night."

The Thorny Path, The Narrow Way

There were very few indeed who availed themselves of the offer of the blacksmith to spend his evenings with them in Bible study. A few came at first, but soon dropped off until eventually the only visitor was Timothy Berea, who availed himself of every opportunity to visit the Stephanas' home.

Many a night this earnest young Bible student and the devout blacksmith sat facing each other across the table with their Bibles open before them until far into the night, seemingly oblivious to the passage of time, so deeply engrossed did they become in their studies. Timothy soon began to see the truth expressed by the poet, that—

> "And so the child imposes on the man.
> The priest continues what the nurse began,
> So they believe because they were so bred;
> From childhood, most have been misled."

He soon began to see through the shallowness and inconsistency of modern religion, and longed to be connected with a religion that reflected the simplicity and truth of the teachings of the meek and lowly Jesus of Nazareth and his fishermen apostles. The Sunday morning services became irksome to him, and the sermons, many of which were preached for his particular benefit, were a trial of his forberance.

There seemed to be so much human philosophy and so little of God's word, so much sentiment, and so little reason, and a studied effort to please rather than to hold forth the faithful word. As he advanced in his Bible studies he became more and more alienated from the worldly church, and the time finally came when he announced his severance from it. He talked about his new belief, which he referred to as "the truth," to every one who would listen, but he soon began to see that people shunned him, and that they would sometimes take a circuitous route to avoid meeting him and being drawn into conversation with him. He was pointed out in the street as one who had become a religious fanatic, and sometimes they said an infidel. In his own home, where fervid love was wont to reign, a coldness developed until there was a frigidity of atmosphere that seemed to freeze the fountains of the heavenly currents of love. His mother's attitude particularly troubled him. She had always been profuse in her manifestations of affection toward him, but now she was cold and formal, and took little interest in anything he said or did. In addition to this almost unbearable condition, Doris had hidden herself from him for three weeks after he left the church. Truly he had found the pearl of great price and he was paying the price of all that he had, to obtain it.

Timothy said nothing about these things for a time, but endeavored to bear his own burden with all the fortitude he could command. He soon lost his light hearted demeanor and began to go about his daily tasks with a heavy heart. Instead of improving, things went from bad to worse, until finally he could stand it no longer, and he determined to seek relief by unburdening himself to the one who now appeared to be his only human friend, Paul Stephanas.

And so one evening, after a trying day in the field, he went down to the blacksmith's home and told his story to a kind and sympathetic listener. Mr. Stephanas did not seem at all surprised, and when Timothy got through he remarked: "I have wondered why you have been so long in coming to tell me this. Yours is no new experience. Full well do I remember my own trial; and there are hundreds of true believers today who can tell you of similar experiences at the time when they obeyed the Lord's command to come out and be separate (2nd Cor. 6:17)."

"But why should it be so," said Timothy, "in view of the fact that it is called 'the gospel peace?' And when Christ was introduced to the world at his birth the angels sang, 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.' How is it then that instead of peace we have dissention and estrangement and enmity in our homes?"

"The gospel of peace," replied the blacksmith, "is the good news or glad tidings of something to come, and not something that now exists. The song of the angels was prophetic and will not be realized until the world is brought under subjection to Christ. When the master appeared 1900 years ago, it was not to bring peace, but to preach peace to come. You know Timothy when it will come; it is when the kingdom of God is set up on earth and then as Isaiah tells us, 'The work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever' (Isaiah 32:17). Have you ever noticed the Master's words concerning this? In Luke 10:51 he says: 'Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you nay, but rather division; for from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three. The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father, and the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against mother; the mother-in-law against the daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law,' and Matthew's account adds—'And a man's foes shall be they of his own household.' So you see your position today accords perfectly with the predictions of the Lord some 1900 years ago."

"It is wonderful, and it makes me feel ashamed to think I should have complained at all, but Mr. Stephanas, I have come more particularly to see you because I want to be baptized into the name of Christ. How can it be arranged?"

"Why, that can be arranged quite easily," replied Paul. "It is customary for us to hear the confession of faith of the candidates for baptism in order to ascertain whether they fully understand the 'first principles of the truth' before they are baptized; this is as much for their sakes as it is for the keeping of the purity of the faith, for you know, baptism, which is not proceeded by the acceptance of the true faith, is not valid.

"That is quite right and reasonable," said Timothy, "otherwise you would soon find yourselves a mixed multitude such as we find in the modern church. Well I am ready now to confess the faith. I don't want to lose another day, for Christ may come at any moment, and I want to be ready when he comes."

After Timothy had made the "good confession of faith" in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Stephanas," the blacksmith arose and reached his hand across the table and shook hands with Timothy, congratulating him on having witnessed a good confession.

"The question now is," said Timothy, "when and where can I be baptized?"

"Before we consider that," said Paul, "I have something to tell you. How long is it since you saw Doris Hamilton?"

A dark shadow flitted across the young man's countenance at the mention of Doris's name, and there was a pained expression on his face as he replied, "I have not seen her for three weeks, and I suppose now that I have espoused the cause of the truth, that Doris and I have reached the parting of the ways."

"Don't be unduly cast down," said Paul; "I saw Doris last night, and am happy to tell you that she too has witnessed a good confession, and is ready to be baptized as soon as arrangements can be made."

It would be useless to attempt to picture in cold type the expression on Timothy Berea's face at this announcement. He was speechless with astonishment. He tried to speak but could not; strong emotion choked his utterance, and for a moment he broke into half hysterical sobs.

When he had regained his self control, he apologized for having made such a spectacle of himself, and asked if Doris had made any reference to him.

The blacksmith assured him that she had, and that she had explained that her father had forbidden her to see you. She said she had determined before taking any action either in obedience or disobedience to her father's command, that she would try to settle once and for all this question of religion. During the past three weeks she had read and re-read one of our books entitled, "Christendom Astray," and when she came here last night she was fully persuaded that Christendom, so-called, is astray from the truth of God, and that the things we believe are in harmony with God's word, and I must confess, I was astonished at her answers; and the best of it is, she is determined to embrace the truth in the face of her father's threat to disown her. As she expresses it, she loves her parents dearly, but then Christ has said, 'he that loveth father or mother better than me is not worthy of me.' Now Timothy I would like you to arrange is possible to go with me to Jamestown Sunday morning, and Doris and you can both be baptized and received into fellowship by the believers there. I will write to night and let the brethren know we are coming, and if it is satisfactory to you we will meet at the railway station in time to catch the early morning train.

We will not weary the readers with further details of these arrangements; that Sunday morning found all three on the train on their way to Jamestown some twenty-five miles distant, where there was a meeting of the Church of God. Both young people had a story to tell of a stormy time at home before they left for the station.

Baptized Into Christ

On arriving at the city they were met by a number of the brethren, who conducted them to a bathing place near by where the swimming pool had been reserved for them for the occasion. Quite a number of the believers had gathered to witness the baptism and take part in the service.

When the candidates were prepared for the immersion one of the brethren made a few appropriate remarks and offered a prayer; they entered the water with one of the brethren, and the question was then asked of each of them, "Do you believe the things concerning the Kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ?" Each answered "I do," and the brother thereupon immersed them, saying, "On this public confession of your faith you are baptized in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, for the remission of your sins."

When they had come up out of the water and were again fully dressed, and were returning to where the brethren were assembled, they heard the brethren and sisters singing a hymn. As they listened to the words of the hymn they were deeply moved by it, for it contained the exhortation and encouragement intended particularly for them:

"O speed thee Brother on thy way
And to thine armour cling:
With girded loins the call obey
That grace and mercy bring.
There is a battle to be fought,
An onward race to run,
A crown of glory to be sought,
A victory to be won."

The baptismal service over, they repaired to the hall where the brethren held their services, an upper room with simple furnishings. In fact, the whole service and worship of these brethren had a sweet simplicity about it that made one think of the meetings which the apostles and early believers of the first century must have had before pagan ritualism made its encroachments upon and corrupted the true Christian church.

On the way back Paul left the young people by themselves, while he found a seat in another part of the coach. On arriving at the village they started on foot for the Stephanas home, where they were to have dinner.

On the way, after a somewhat embarrassing silence, Timothy turned to the blacksmith and said, "Brother Stephanas, I have something to tell you; since it has developed that Doris and I are no longer welcome at our parents' homes, we have concluded to solve the problem by making a home of our own, and not only so, but in starting our new life in the truth we have come to the conclusion that it would be good for us to be where there is a meeting. We talked the matter over on the train, and have decided to get married and live in Jamestown, where we can attend the meeting. I feel sure I can find employment there that will enable us to live comfortably, and at any rate, even if we have to economize, we will be happy together in our new-found faith and will try to grow strong in it. What do you say, Bro. Stephenas?"

"Well, I don't know," replied Paul, "that there is much to be said; the matter seems to be pretty well settled, and all that I can say is that I wish you every happiness and shall pray that God's blessing may rest upon you."

On arriving at the Stephanas home they sat down to a substantial meal prepared by Mrs. Stephanas, after which they spent the afternoon in pleasant conversation. The young couple seemed to throw off all their former reserve and reticence and to feel quite at home with the blacksmith and his family.

Just before they left Paul took Timothy aside and said to him, "Well, Timothy, I also am leaving Drearyville next week to return to the city."

"You are!" exclaimed Timothy in surprise. "What is the trouble?"

"Oh, it is simply a question of providing for my family," said Paul.

"I am surprised," said Timothy, "for I always understood that there was a good business here."

"And so there was," said Paul, "until I began preaching the truth, then I discovered that first one and then another stopped bringing their work to me. I did not mind it so long as I was able to make ends meet and provide for my family, but since the debeate with Mr. Hamilton almost every member of his church has ceased bringing his work to me, and I find they are taking their work ten miles away to the next town, where the owner of the shop has had to employ extra help to meet the unexpected increase in his business; there is nothing left for me to do but seek employment elsewhere, so I am going back to my old position in the city. I do not regret that in the least, for I feel that my work here for Christ and the truth is ended. I can not have the schoolhouse any longer, and there is no other place for the public preaching of the gospel; and so the door of utterance being closed to me, like the apostles of old, I will shake the dust of the place off my feet and leave it to its idols."

"And you never said a word to me about it," said Timothy.

"No, I knew you had trouble of your own, and I did not wish to add my own to what you already had," said Paul.

"Well, I am glad at least that you are going to the city, for then we shall be near you," said Timothy, "for we never want to be far away from Mrs. Stephanas and yourself."

About a week after this Paul Stephanas, now back in the city, received a letter from Timothy stating that after all Doris and he were not coming to the city to live. When he had told his mother of his determination to leave the village she broke down and wept. She would not hear to their leaving, but said her home was their home and begged them to stay. She confessed, furthermore, that she had been reading the word of God until she was fully convinced that the things it set forth were the truth, and now she wanted to be baptized into Christ in the true sense of the term, and wanted to know how soon this could be done. Timothy also referred to Dorcas, his sister, having acquired a knowledge of the truth, and in closing his letter said that, God willing, they intended to visit the city every Sunday morning if possible.

Thus ends this narrative of "Preaching the Truth," and we feel sure that the experience of all those engaged in this glorious, though arduous and discouraging work, will attest the fact, that it is not overdrawn picture, but truly represents some of the hardships encountered by those who sacrifice themselves from day to day in the work of "preaching the truth."

I am glad a dear "sister" has raised the question of right and duty, concerning the connection and participation, of members of the Church of God, with public balls and dances, as I am persuaded that it is a matter that is agitating the minds of our young people everywhere, and also one that is seldom mentioned in our dear old Restitution. If such amusements and associations are harmless, and in harmony with the will of God, as revealed in his word, our young people should be allowed to frequent such places, and freely enjoy themselves. And any sister, or brother, could blamelessly engage in the business, of promoting, furnishing music for, or managing balls and public dance halls, and in that way perhaps, turn an honest penny. If there be no harm in them, then our church leaders and elders, our parents, and grandparents, in the truth, should feel free to go to the dance hall, and in a comfortable seat, where they would not be in the way, enjoy the scene and music, without shame or doubt.

If, however, the practice be wrong and evil, if it be a fact, as we firmly believe, that the ball room and dance hall, and the craze for dancing engendered there, have been the means of causing countless thousands of our pure young girls, not only for this life, but also for the life to come; if it be a fact, that a girl under the subtle influence of the dance craze, with freely and unreservedly give herself into the embrace of a comparative stranger, whom she would hardly recognize on the street, and with her head on his breast, and as close to his life, listen to cunning words of flatter, or impure suggestions; if under the same evil influences, she will speedily learn to unblushingly wear a gown in the ball room, in which she would be ashamed to be seen in on the street; if it be a fact, as reliable statistics prove, that over seventy-five per cent. of the fallen women of our great country were once innocent and happy girls, but were ruined by the evil influences of the dance hall—then it surely becomes the duty of each and everyone who bears the name of Christ, to honor that great name, by refusing absolutely to have anything whatever to do with such a monstrous evil. God will provide shoes, and other necessaries, for the children of his people, if they but trust in him, and labor for them in harmony with his will and purpose.

I think our "sister" makes a grave mistake, when she concludes that "there is nothing definite, in the word to go by," in this matter. True, the word contains no express command, concerning modern balls, and dances, for the simple reason, that the modern suggestive round dances, such as the "tango," "turkey trot," "bunny hug," and other extravagant and impure creations, so common and popular in these last evil days, were entirely unknown, when the Bible was written. The dancing of ancient days, was performed by the sexes separate, each dancer going through the exercise separate and alone, hence no mention is found, of the modern, suggestive and demoralizing exhibitions. But while not mentioned in the word, our "sister" must admit that its influence upon the young and innocent, is evil, rather than good. That the introduction of our boys and girls, for the first time into a ball room, with its sensual music and odors, its low cut and extravagant gowns, the familiar positions, and suggestive movements of the dancers, would be vastly different in effect, from an introduction of those same boys and girls into the church of God at Cleveland. Why? Because one is evil; the other is good. The devil presides in one; the one God reigns supreme, in the other. A night in the first, and they emerge with garments spotted and soiled with the filth of the world, dirty, filthy, hateful stains, which only the blood of Christ is able to cleanse. A few hours in the church, and they come out pure and white, and a crown of added knowledge on their brow. Surely none will deny, that the modern dance is evil. Its fruit also is evil. Nothing good was ever gathered from its branches. Let us, then, to the word for its condemnation.

Paul tells us that "evil communications corrupt good manners." Again he expects us to "be not overcome with evil, but overcome evil with good." Peter tells us to "eschew evil, and do good." Paul says, "let us not do evil, that good may come." Dear "sister," note this passage carefully. It seems to fit your case exactly. Read it over again and ponder it well in your heart. "Let us not do evil that good may come." The temporary good that will come to the little ones in the form of shoes, etc., can never compensate for the evil that may enter into their little lives, because of the example that mother has set them in the dance hall. Dear "sister," it may be a comely and harmless looking tree, but its fruit is entirely bitter. How bitter. I pray God these little ones may never cause you to know.

Paul cautions the Philippians to "beware of evil-doers." Not mingle with, and aid them in their business. Our Lord said, "A corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit." Surely our "sister" knows that a dance hall is a corrupt tree. The Lord says, "I will punish the world for their evil." It matters not whether it be the dance evil or the drink evil, but for all evil, of whatsoever kind the God of heaven threatens punishment. Therefore dear "sister," I beg of you to listen to the loving call of the spirit. "Come out from among them, and be ye seperate, O my people."

Thus you must see my "sister," that any act which is evil, is forbidden, by the higher or moral law of God, which governs, or should govern, his chosen people, in all things. It is, "do right though the heavens fall" and, "shun the appearance of evil." Dancing is not the only evil act, or practice, which must come under this rule, or principle. There are multitudes of them. As an example, we will cite one parallel to this one in question.

To produce sweet and harmonous music at our home, or in becoming places or occasions, is right and pleasing in the sight of God. But to render it at a saloon, gambling den, or house of ill fame, for the purpose of entertaining the inmates, and increasing their business, receiving a part of the proceeds of the business, in payment for our services, would be evil, and a very great sin, not to be justified by any circumstances, even though there be no direct command, prohibiting it. Those scriptures which condemn and fix a penalty upon the commission of all evil, covers the whole ground—completely covers it.

We have taken upon us, and into our keeping, the precious name of Christ. Together with him, we are called the sons and daughters of God. We are expected, and commanded to so live, that we shall by our acts glorify God, and bring honor to his great name, and the name of Jesus Christ, his only begotten son. Shall we then, dare to drag that great name, through the filthy mud and mire of a common dance hall? What would the patrons of folly and evil pleasures say of us? They claim to be God's chosen people, and pretend to be purer and better than we. But we notice, they are helping along nobly with the dance, and they seem to enjoy it, just as much as any of us—don't hardly know how we could get along without them, as they furnish the music, and we could not dance without music. Shall this be said of any of God's chosen people, that pecular people, that Holy nation, God's kings and priests? God in heaven forbid!

To be recognized by God, and acknowledged as his sons and daughters, is an unspeakable privilege. And, Oh, how careful we should be, that we cause no dishonor to rest, by any act of ours, upon that great name! Better for us had we never been born.

Duty cannot be neglected without harm to those who practice as well as to those who suffer the neglect.

It is always safe to learn even from our enemies—seldom safe to venture to instruct even our friends.

"THE RESTITUTION"

When we say, "The Restitution does not seem quite so good this week;" or "I did not care much for the last issue," are we doing anything to make it better? Are we giving it our prayer, or "moral support," our financial aid? Very few in the Church of God have much of this world's wealth, because Paul said not many rich, not many noble of this world are called. There is not one so poor but he can speak words of commendation, can send up to the throne of grace fervent prayer for its continued usefulness, and that God would accept and sanctify it to himself. There is not one but can express his gratitude to those who direct and manage and edit it. Stop and think one minute before criticizing; if those noble brethren had not come boldly and fearlessly to the rescue, the paper might not have been spared to use.

"The dear old Restitution;" how vacant our homes would be without it! Let it be cut off from us for a little season and we feel its loss as that of one of "our home people." God bless The Restitution and those beloved brethren who have made it what it is. Their names are doubtless written in heaven, and when all the hidden things are brought to light, our Lord himself will reward them. And those whose names are written on the editorial page—did they not when permitting their names to be placed there, tacitly agree to write often to the paper? I remember seeing a little article by S. H. Thomas a few years ago in which speaking of an article by a brother, he said: "Do not let such a pen be idle. Come often. The brethren need your help." I often think of these words, as week after week I read these names of special contributors, and nothing appearing from them. God has made it plain that we are held responsible for the talents he entrusts to us, be they few or many. Not a servant is left without responsibility. To each one is given talent. That some of us have only one will be no excuse if we wrap it in a napkin where none can see it. We will have to give an account of it to the Judge as truly as the one having ten. We cannot all occupy the place in the church as pastors or teachers—all have not gold or silver to give to the cause; but we all have some gift of God, and such as we have we are commanded to give to his service. Brethren, beloved in the Lord, let us during this year that is opening before us, be more zealous for the truth, more active in the service of the Master. Then if the Lord calls for us this year, he will find us "occupying" when he comes.

FLORA A. WOOD.

The large proportion of sins committed against the laws of right are done without reflection, and many of them are bitterly repented of too late.

A VISIT TO KENTUCKY

From natural and historic viewpoints, Kentucky is an interesting state. The brethren live in Boyle and Mercer counties. They are located in the famous Blue Grass Region, a section of Kentucky which is noted for blue grass, hemp, tobacco and beautiful horses and women. Harrodsburg, county seat of Mercer county, is the oldest town in the state. It was founded in 1774. The Perryville battle, of civil war fame, was fought near the home and farm of brother and sister Bradley. In this conflict between the federal and confederate forces, seven thousand lives were lost between noon and twilight. When war was declared, Kentucky proclaimed herself neutral. Midway between the North and South, she naturally became the ground of contention between the Northern and Southern arms. Neutrality is generally a political pretense, and religiously it is always a transparent sham. The Perryville battle, led by Gen. Buell, of the federal side, and Gen. Bragg, of the confederate, was "indecisive," according to reports of history; but as a matter of fact it was decisive, at least so far as Kentucky was concerned, for Gen. Bragg withdrew to Tennessee immediately after the battle, which was fought toward the close of the war, and thus the state was left in the hands of Gen. Buell and the federals.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brother Huggins:

In The Restitution I have been reading somethings about the scripture which members of the Church of Christ had written. This is my first time to write to your paper, which I take great interest in. I am twelve years old. I take great pleasure in reading The Restitution. We have been having Bible schools which I take great interest in. Brother Anderson has been having good attendance, and good behavior. I attend his meetings when I am able. I enjoy studies on the truth.

LYDIA BURNSIDE

THE SURE PROPHETIC WORD

Peter illustrates the value of the sure prophetic word when he tells us to take heed unto it as unto a light that shineth in a dark place. That is just where light is needed and the holy apostle adds the comforting thought that the beautiful rays of light will illumine our pathway until the dawn of the bright day, whose glory will never fade. When Peter tells us how the prophetic Scriptures came in old time by the direct will and revelation of God, and therefore these Scriptures would need no private interpretation, many writers on prophecy could have very much abridged the subject. As to the use God intended us to make of the words of the prophets, we need not be ignorant. The question was propounded long ago. "How shall we know the word which the Lord hath not spoken? When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not,, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously."

That we are living in a remarkable period of human history is a fact so well established that merely stating it proves it. But what has given to the time in which we are living such deep and absorbing interest? The ordinary routine of human history does not explain it. "But there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets;" one who seeth the end from the beginning. In other words, the time is due for the unfolding of some of the eternal purposes of God, and we are assured that "God will do nothing until he reveals his secrets to his servants, the prophets."

Two of the most stupendous events in human history are just at hand; one is the literal, personal coming of Jesus Christ the Son of God; and the other is a complete change of the government of the whole earth. That all who believe it are safe to follow the sure prophetic word,, let us apply its divine rays to the dark places in human history, learn the grand truth God is unfolding before our eyes, for this word is a lamp to our feet, and a light to our pathway.

In appealing to the prophetic scriptures for proof of the two God-given facts we have stated, we are not begging the question. Some have been deterred from the study of prophecy, thinking it beyond the comprehension of ordinary minds, but Peter has assured us that no prophecy of scripture is of any private interpretation And Jehovah gives us the key by which we may clearly understand it. "If the thing spoken of does not follow, nor come to pass, that i sthe thing which the Lord hath not spoken; but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously, thou shalt not be afraid of him." Do you know, mortal man, that God has challenged you to set aside his covenant with David? Step forth and test it! Here it is: "Thus saith the Lord, if ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, that there should not be day and night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne." "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will perform that good thing which I have promised unto the house of Israel and to the house of Judah." "Thy testimonies are wonderful." Matrix, a mold, or die, that which gives form or shape, as melted metal fills the matrix, so must prophecy exactly fit the historic fact. When this fact is conceded the sure prophetic word can have but one meaning." O! Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not. Behold your is left desolate. For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."

Children of God scattered abroad everywhere, greeting! Let us lift up our heads and rejoice. "The Lord is coming: let this be, the joyful note of jubilee. And when we meet, and when we part, the joyful not of every heart"—rejoice, for the long dark reign of sin must soon be followed by the golden age of righteousness. Let each faithful heart cry out earnestly, "come, Lord Jesus; come quickly!" Let thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven.

Now if the fall o fthem be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their fulness?" That just such results followed the rejection of God's ancient people to both Jew and Gentile is now a grand historical fact. Then it is safe to say that Paul affirms that their "fulness" will intensify the result. Comprehend this grand truth but in a measure and who can but cry out raptuously, "O! the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable is his judgments and his ways past finding out!". Just when God has filled heaven and earth with signs of the coming of his Son, then sudden as a lightning flash comes the announcement by the leading Jews of the world to claim a place as a "New World Power." A canvass of the whole earth is to be made, and in October a Jewish congress will meet in Washington, D. C. This new government will have its headquarters in Palestine, and it will be represented in every nation on earth. People of God, have you heard of a "Nation" that is to be born in a day? God moves in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform; and he can make history fast.

BEREAN COLUMN NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

Edited by Leota B. Hanson, 3401 Magnolia Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Berean:

Christ had been speaking to his deciples and calling them the light of the world, and urged them to set a good example by the following words: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 5:16).

This should be the aim of every Christian. We know not whom our lives may influence. Then let us be sure if any follow our example it will be for their good. Let us try to make our life as much like Christ's as possible. When any one wrongs us, remember what Jesus asked for those who crucified him. Then we should be ready to forgive all those who wrong us; if we do not, how can we expect forgiveness for the many sins which we commit? We think the time for work is short, and we should not idle away our time, but do all we can to help others to see the light. With God's great love always in our mind, we should do our best. For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life (John 3:16).

Yours in hope of eternal life,
JESSIE CLAYPOOL.

A Letter From Brother Carpenter

Dear Bereans:

As we start in on the new year, I am sure we find many things to be thankful for. When we look back over the past year, gone forever, we can realize that God has been very good to us. With our many mistakes and short comings, he has permitted us to see the light of this new year. Let us make it a new year of greater and better things. Suppose we start in now and see how much more good we can accomplish this year than we did last year.

Not long ago I received a letter from a sister in the faith, asking me if I would write a letter for the Berean column; and it just seemed to me like a statement of something that I owed for. Sister Woodward has the right idea about those things. We are debtors to the cause, and we should not neglect it; but we do. Looking back over the past year, I do not see a single article that I wrote to the paper; and I can imagine there are dozens of our young people that have been about as neglectful as I have.

We know there are older one who are more capable than we, but we will be older soon, and the older ones will be no more, for we are going down the Valley at a fast rate. Probably we are not as faithful as we should be, but we ought to be faithful unto death (Rev. 2:10). There is work for all of us. Maybe we cannot all be teachers, or preachers, but each one must do his share. Let us be faithful in our Christian work, for the reward is to the faithful, the one who holds out to the end and overcomes.

Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised. And if we are faithful, we shall be blest with faithful Abraham. Seeing then that the promise is to the faithful, let us strive to be faithful, and when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, we shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.

Yours waiting for the King of Glory,
BENJ. H. CARPENTER.

What Seekest Thou?

In olden times when shepherds watched over a flock of sheep, if one should become lost he would seek for it until it was found. And so today, if something of value is lost, we seek for it until it is found. These things are for earthly gains.

How about the things for spiritual gain? Do we seek for them as we should, or do we pass them by for the present and think we will do that in the future? When should we seek the Lord, early in life, or wait until we know we have but a few years? Is it not possible we may wait until it is too late—until we do not desire to seek him?

If we diligently seek after the Lord we shall find him. We shall then enjoy the blessings of pardon, peace and joy. Having obtained the true wisdom w ewill be preserved from the ways of the society of the wicked and all real evil (Ps. 10:4).

We should seek him early, as God has premised to be the guide of the youth (Jer. 3:4). It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth (Lam 3:27).

If we seek and find him, and do not forsake him, he will not forsake us. God has not spoken in secret, or in a dark place, neither or we to seek him in vain. Let us seek the Lord that we may dwell in the house of the Lord forever.

IS EATING PORK FORBIDDEN?

"How Readest Thou?"

Question.—Is there any Greek MS. extant that prohibits Gentile Christians from eating pork, in Acts XV. by giving the word porkeias (swine's flesh), instead of porneias (fornication), as we have it in our present copies? If there are some, even a very few (and I am told there are a few), does it not give importance to the subject to consider whether the transscribers have not made a mistake in the many in this case, and not in a few, for you know there is not much dissimilarity in the two Greek words representing swine's flesh and fornication, as there is in the English, all the difference being the letter nu, instead of a kappa—one little short stroke added to a nu makes all the difference, so there is no great wonder if such a mistake has been made. Besides, why should "fornication" be here introduced along with three positive prohibitions against meats? . . . . . When Israel was chosen the Lord's people, the number of forbidden meats was greatly increased.

Now, I do not say that we are to be regulated by the law of Moses; but this I would suggest, that if we can perceive a beneficial effect from the copying after any usage or custom of the Israelites of old, would not common-sense say, do thou likewise? I believe that all physiologists agree that it is unhealthy. . . . . . The question is, was swine's flesh included in the prohibition? Jesus destroyed a great number of them, choking them in the sea. . . . . . Again, did not Antiochus Epiphanes defile the temple in Jerusalem by offering swine's flesh, and causing the people to eat it, as was common to the Greek nation? If that was wrong then, is it not wrong now for Christians to defile the temple of the Lord, which is now composed multitudinously of the bodies of the saints, by partaking of this unwholesome, unclean, and God-despised flesh."—J. W.

REPLY BY DR. JOHN THOMAS.

There is no such word in the Greek tongue as porkeias; and, therefore, there can be no genuine Greek manuscripts of Acts in existence, nor ever have been, with such a reading of the text. It is possible that some rascally Laodicean of the class referred to by Paul, as "forbidding to marry and commanding to abstain from meats," may have tampered with the "few" copies referred to; but even then, if he had been a Greek scholar, he could not have written porkeias, and have expected any Grecian to accept it as a representative of the contents of a Cincinnati pork-barrel. A Romish priest, by theory and practice incarnation of fornication and adultery; or a polygamous Mormon; or a Christian tired of the restraints of scriptural well doing, and predisposed to revert into swinedom, may be dissatisfied with the proscription of "fornication" from the list of good morals; may have in addition a positive disrelish for pork—such may be disposed to alter the text, and to sanctify the one they are inclined to, while they condemn the other as a sin "they have no mind to." But we repeat, whatever may have been the predisposition of the martexts, they never would have been so foolish as to substitute a word in a Greek manuscript that is not Greek at all! This would have been hyperbolical absurdity.

We repeat again, on the authority of one of the best European Greek Lexicons before us, that there is no such Greek word as porkeias in all Babel. There is PORK-eus, "one who fishes with a net called PORK-os; there is also another of the pork family called PORK-es, a ring or hoop; "not because they were put through the cartilage of a swine's snout to prevent them rooting, but a ring or hoop of gold passed round the place where the iron head of a spear was fastened to the shaft." And lastly, we have the word PORK-os, a "kind of fishing net;" and, according to Varro signifying in the old Attic dialect, in which the Acts of the Apostles was not written, "a pig;" in Latin, PORK-us; which some are trying to do, but will not, we trust, succeed.

Our correspondent's ingenuity in turning one word into another for the purpose of getting over a difficulty, is quite unnecessary. He deals with porneias, as he would in putting a new patch on an old garment; the consequence of which is often the making of the old rent worse than before. "A little short stroke" of his speculative shears is all that is necessary, he thinks, to a beautiful fit. But such patching is not at all to our taste. We prefer the old garment with all its imperfections to such attempts at renovation. If we were to accept his critical sleight of hand, we could turn porneias into something else than "pork." We would not "add any little short stroke" at all; we would only just drop the naughty and inconvenient nu or letter n, and then we shall have poreias, in the genitive case, signifying "running." Having made this discovery that porneias was a slip of the transcribers' pens in "in the many" manuscripts for poreias, as it might doubtless be proved to be if we only had the original autograph of the Acts by Luke, we might then go a step farther, and affirm that it was sinful to run, being contrary to the interests of the heart and lungs, for that physiologists had declared that it was unhealthy; for by running people got out of breath, or lost their wind, as the phrase is, which is very dangerous for those who have a tendency to "heart disease" or aneurism, or asthma, or something else; and that the apostles, having solicitude for the physiological weal of the spiritual Israel, wrote to them to abstain from running, and things strangled with blood." By this process we should have got rid of the interdiction of "fornication," so agreeable to the flesh (especially to ministerial flesh, wherefore it is styled "the ministerial sin"), and we should have substituted a fine subject for disputation, in which we should be enabled to figure as the hero of the piece. What a glorious superstructure we should have ereted upon the absence of th letter n! What a foundation for faith and practice! And what infinite scope for polemical display!

And such is the course invariably pursued by the Old Adam when he desires to distinguish himself in "theology." He is never satisfied with "the testimony of God," in its prophetic, apostolic, and historical unity; but he must be probing after something of no real importance, that opportunity may be afforded for him to shine to the glory of the flesh. He is a perfect crotchetarian, and unsurpassingly skilful in all the sophisticism of the craft. Nothing comes amiss to him, but "the simplicity that is in Christ." He cannot get along with this, for it affords him no scope for tinkering. He is a subtle genius, and more like "the old serpent" than any other in the menagerie of the present evil world. Let us beware of him, for there is mesmerism in his finesse.

How long will it be ere Christians come to a Scriptural comprehension of the relation of the Mosaic law to "the truth as it is in Jesus?" To those who would in anything put themselves under the law, do ye not hear the law which thunders in your ears from Sinai: "Cursed be every one who continueth not in all thiags written in the book of the law to do them?" It is of no avail to keep the law in one or more points, and to violate it in a thousand others, or even in one other. It must be kept "in all things," not merely in some things, by one who would commend himself to God by its observances. But it cannot be kept: first because of the weakness of the flesh; and secondly, because of political impediments—so that it is written, "by the deeds of the law no flesh shall be justified."

The righteousness of the law, however, may be kept, and must be fulfilled by all, both Jews and Gentiles, who would be saved. "The righteousness of the law is fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh," says Paul, "but after the spirit." Israel under the law walked after the flesh; that is, in its ordinances pertaining to the flesh; but the Israel in Christ in walking worthy of God, "walk after the spirit." These alone keep the righteousness of the law. Thus, they keep Sabbath, not in abstaining from all manner of work on the seventh day, or Saturday; but in ceasing or resting from their own works, the works of the old Adam, or the flesh of sin, as God rested from his. They eat also the unleavened bread of the presence, in eating leavened bread "with the unleavened (principles) of sincerity and truth;" the bread of the passover, and the show bread of the Holy Place, being typical, not of unleavened bread upon the Lord's table, but of the mystical body of Christ unleavened "with the leaven of malice and wickedness." The things of the law are not tylpcal of themselves, but of the things of the spirit. The oil in the golden lightstand did not typify oil, but spirit; nor the burning incense, literal incense, but the prayers of the saints; nor the paschal lamb, a literal lamb, but Christ personal and mystical; and so forth. How "barren," then, "and unfruitful in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ" must those minds be, that can rise no higher than the conception of a type terminating in a type, or in itself—oil ending in oil, unleavened bread in unleavened bread, incense in incense, meat in meat, drink in drink, day in day, and so forth, to the end of all crochets without end. Such, however,. is "the mind of the flesh," which can rise no higher than that which elaborates it. The mind of the flesh can only generate fleshly notions. The signification of the Holy Spirit in the types it cannot penetrate, because they are "spiritually discerned," or perceived by the testimony of the spirit exhibited in the word.

Paul's soul was vexed with all these modern speculations of the flesh in their original form. He was continually troubled on the righ hand and on the left, with "touch not, taste not, handle not this, that and the other thing, after the commandments and teachings of men." He admitted that they had a "show of wisdom"—nevertheless, he rejected them as the mere loathsomeness and garbage of corruption.

Speaking of these commandments of men, he says in Tit. 1:15: "To the pure all meats are pure; but unto them who are defiled and unbelieving nothing is pure (not even beef, mutton, or vegetarianism), but both their mind and conscience are defiled."

Again, in Rom. XIV:14, he says: "I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that nothing is unclean of itself." This vindicates the cleanness of swine's flesh, and knocks out the brains of the physiologists without ceremony. "But," he continues, "to him that esteemeth anything to be unclean, to him it is unclean." So, then, if anyone deem pork unclean, to him it is so, but not therefore unclean to other people.

There was a ground of objection to the eating of certain meats in Paul's day that does not obtain now. It was not so much a question among Gentile Christians about meats Mosaically clean or unclean; but about the eating of meats offered in sacrifice to idols. It was customary in those days to expose the animals offered, but not consumed in the temple, for sale in the shambles as holy meat. Now, the purchasers that ate them as sacrifices, were considered as partakers of the altar; and therefore fellowshipping the idol to which the meat was offered. When men abandoned idolatry for Christ, they held the sacrifices in contempt. Still some could not divest themselves entirely of the old superstitious feeling. They saw in the meat what when eaten identified the eater with the idol; so that when they saw a brother eat of it, it appeared to them like fellowship idolatry, which hurt their feelings exceedingly. Others, however, said, "Why, what nonsense to be offended! In eating, I do not fellowship idolatry; for the idol is nothing, and all meats are alike, one kind not being more holy than another." This was true enough in the abstract, but it had the appearance of evil, and might lead to Christians doing upon a principle of expediency and worldly policy, what those who had knowledge seemed to do, in the judgment of the weak. And so it turned out; for, to avoid persecution, "those who held the doctrine of Balaam, taught" their brethren of the house of "Balac to cast a stumbling block before" the believers, "to eat things sacrificed to idols, and to commit fornication." This eating was done in the conscience, not of the Christian eater, who despised idols, but in the conscience of the other---of the idolator, whom he sought to propitiate to the restraining of his persecuting spirit.

Here, then, were two mental conditions among the saints opposed to one another; the one termed "the strong," and the other "the weak." Paul was evidently one of the strong. He taught that "meat commendeth us not to God; for neither if we eat are we better; nor if we eat not are we worse." Still, for the sake of the weak brother, who, seeing the strong brother eat, might follow his example without his knowledge, and eat.; and in so doing, eat in fellowship of conscience with the idol, and thus be destroyed. Paul cautioned the strong, saying, "But take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumbling block to them that are weak. For if any man see thee who hast knowledge sit at meat in the idol's temple, shall not the conscience of him which is weak be emboldened to eat those things which are offered to idols; and through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish for whom Christ died? But when ye sin against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ. Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend or stumble, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend" in fellowshipping idols (1 Cor. VIII 4-13). Thus, in the question of eating meats, Paul said furthermore, "all things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient;" and because "all things do not edify," or build up. Whatsover is sold in the shambles, that eat, asking no question for conscience sake." Now, here is a command to eat swine's flesh. A swine was a sacred animal with the heathen. That is, they used to offer it in sacrifice. When, therefore, Paul says, "whatsover is sold in the shambles eat," the saying comprehends all animals in use as food; and consequently swine among the rest.

But these words of Paul are fatal to that "one little short stroke," by the addition of which our correspondent proposes to transmute nu into kappa, or n into k! Would Paul have thus authorised the eating of swine's flesh, if the letter he carried from Jerusalem to Antioch had commanded the Gentile brethren to abstain from swine's flesh instead of "fornication?" Such a supposition cannot be for a moment entertained. Paul is, therefore, not only favor of eating pork, but is also against the substitution of any word beginning with pork, for porneias as written in the document he bore.

Again, he says, that "the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit." The meaning of this is that the gospel of the kingdom of God believed does not cause the believr to make a distinction between meats as clean and unclean; or between alcoholic and other drinks. It does not create in him a conscience of this sort. It teaches him to eat and drink what he pleases, save blood and things strangled, with only this restraint, that he avoid excess in everything. Let your moderation, or temperance, not your "total abstinence," be known unto all. We are astonished that any brother claiming to be intelligent in the word, can so unprofitably consume his precious time in perplexing his brains about the countless notions with which the public mind of our generation is bewildered.

The gospel of the kingdom is opposed to and subversive of them all. Paul repudiates them, and do we. We see nothing in them commendable. In theory they are flimsy, and in the fruit resulting we have seen nothing and heard nothing that makes it pleasant to the eye, good for food, or to be desired to make one wise. On the contrary, we hear much calculated to make us loathe all such speculations. The Spirit predicted that "in latter times some would apostatize from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and to teachings of demons speaking falsely with hypocrisy, their own consciences cauterized, forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them who believe and know the truth; for every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused (swine's flesh not excepted) if it be received with thanksgiving; for it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer" (1 Tim. IV:1). When we read such a testimony as this, it points out a spirit which is not of the truth---the spirit of the Apostacy incarnate in the clergy of the day. We never mistake it, with all the godliness of its tone and phrase for the spirit of Christ It is the spirit of the flesh and essentially unclean. It speaks of the flesh, and is subversive of the truth. It pronounces swine's flesh to be "God-despised," though the spirit of God saith, "it is good, and not to be refused, if received with thanksgiving; for it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer." Here is a direct issue---God versus the flesh, alias the devil. Those may go with the devil who please, but we prefer God and liberty from all yokes of bondage and the traditions of men.—(Herald of Kingdom).

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21, Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-55); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). PRAYER

Our Father, bless, we pray thee, any who are in trouble or sorrow. Be in the sick chamber. Give peace and patience to thy servants. Help them to realize thy presence in their weakness, to look, not on earth, but beyond it. And if the outward house of this tabernacle be falling to pieces, may the light of God's love shine through the crevices. And may thy servants feel the confidence of those who know that, "even if the earthly house is dissolved," they have a building of God." Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Holy Spirit

Some subjects in God's word are of vastly greater importance than others. All professing Christians of whatever sect or denomination, they maybe, agree nominally at least that the knowledge of God the Creator, should take the foremost rank. In actual fact, however, is this the case? Ninetenths of the leaders of the churches are completely puzzled by the simplest questions relating to the Almighty. "They worship they know not what" in a truly literal sense. Christ, when discussing this very question with the woman of Samaria, said: "Salvation is of the Jews." Pagan worshippers worship many Gods—the Jews worship one God, and only one.

We have already given in previous articles ample proof that the doctrine of the Trinity is untenable, but we wish now to show that the traditional teaching regarding the Holy Spirit is even more astray from the truth than anything we have hitherto considered. Current theology maintains there are three Gods, namely—God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Ghost, (or Holy Spirit), and that these three are co-equal and coeternal. "God the Father," is a distinctively scriptural term (1 Pet. 1:2; 2 Pet. 1:17; Jude 1). The other two expressions are foreign to the Bible, and antagonistic to its teaching. That the Father and Son are both personal beings, is abundantly testified in the sacred writings, and no single statement can be brought forward which any sense nullifies that fact. It is remarkable, however, that relative to the Holy Spirit, the exact reverse is practically the case.

The doctrine of the personality of the Holy Spirit is built almost entirely on John XIV and XVI, where the personal pronoun is used. Did these passages stand alone, and had there been no previous references to the Holy Spirit in both Old and New Testaments, we might readily admit that such would be a natural interpretation to a casual reader; but when another construction may be legitimately placed upon them, which will bring them into harmony with others which cannot possibly be consistent with personality in the generally accepted sense, it is but right to do so. However, careful study of these passages gives abundant evidence that the orthodox view is incorrect, and is only attained by superficial reading, and a lack of appreciation of the laws relating to the requirements of grammar, as we shall see later.

The strong belief, as we have already said, in the personality of the Holy Spirit, is based principally on the two chapters referred to in John's gospel where the promise of the Holy Spirit, (the comforter, the helper or, advocate), is given Strange to say, it is contended that fullfilment of this promise took place at Pentecost, continuing from then until now. There was on that occasion no sign of personality, for the Spirit came as cloven tongues of fire, and any suggestion of a comforter seems to be entirely omitted. To my mind the gift of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost is the fulfillment of "the promise of the Father" (Joel 11:28; Acts 1:4; 11:3), and is not to be confused with the promises given by Christ. Reference to Joel 11:28 is sufficiently convincing that the "Spirit" there referred to is not personal—the figure used cannot apply to personality.

We think orthodoxy is right in teaching that Christ promised something new Something that did not then exist on the earth among them and could not do so while he remained (John XVI:17). How then can they affirm that the Holy Spirit or Comforter promised by Christ was a personal being—the third person in the Trinity, who, as they teach, was co-equal and co-eternal with the Father, taking part in the creation, and continuing throughout the Old Testament history?. It is clearly proven by the following passages that the Holy Spirit was already working in the lives of men in exactly the same manner up to and immediately before the promise was given by Christ, and afterward. There surely is something inconsistent here which seems to nullify the force of Christ's promise of "another" Comforter.

Luke I:15, 67.
Luke II:18, 25, 26.
Luke IV:1.
Acts II:4.
Acts VI:3, 5.

If the Holy Spirit referred to in the above quoted passages, is a personal being, then Christ's promise of a furture gift cannot be, and visa versa.

That the Holy Spirit wherever referred to is the same throughout scripture (except in manifestation) is, we think correct, but the insistence of its personal individuality leads to endless confusion and inconsistency, and the difficulty is greatly magnified by adding to it the Trinitarian doctrine.

Having expressed our disbelief in the personality of the Holy Spirit in the sense accepted by current theology, we will now endeavor to give what we believe to be some cogent reasons for so doing.

I. It is a most remarkable fact that only of God the Father, and of Jesus Christ the Son, do we read that they live. It might reasonably be assumed that God lives—that he is a "living God," yet it is repeatedly asserted in the scriptures in spite of the natural evidences which surround us. The case is different regarding the Son. He died and was buried, and proofs and statements are required to demonstrate the fact, and they are not wanting. Turn up the following passages in God's Word, then ask yourself the question, why is it no such testimony is made regarding the Holy Spirit?

Dent. 5:26; Josh. 3:10; 1 Sam. 17:26; Num. 14:21; Judg. XIII:19; Psa. 42:2; Psa. 84:2; Jer. X:10; XXII:24; Eze. 5:11; Zeph. II:9; Ezek 34:8; Dan. VI:26; Hos. 1:10; Matt. 16:16; Acts 14:15; Dan. 6:26; 2 Cor 3:3; 1 Thess. 1:9; Heb. 10:31; Rom. 14:11; 2 Cor 13:4; John VI:5, 7; Heb. 7:8; Rev. 1:18; Heb. 7:25; Job 19:25.

II. All descriptions of God the Father, and all appearances of the Son, are personal—none are impersonal—whereas, all manifestations of the Holy Spirit are impersonal—none are personal. For example see Luke 3:2; Acts II:3. This is worthy of careful consideration.

III. The Father and the Son frequently speak of their relationship to each other—the Holy Spirit never does so. Co-equality certainly is lacking in this respect.

IV. Both Father and Son seem to exercise control and authority over the actions of the Holy Spirit (Joel II:28; John 14:16; Psa. 104:29, 30; Matt. XII:28, etc).

V. Prayer is made to God, even by Jesus Christ, but prayer is never made to the Holy Spirit, nor is there any record of prayer by the Holy Spirit.

VI. The Holy Spirit has no personal name, and if a personality, would appear to be the only one living in God's universe without. Personal names do not require the definite article. The Father and the Son have many names. Why should the Holy Spirit be thus singular, if co-equal and co-eternal with both Father and Son? It would be absurd to say "the Peter," "the Jesus," "the John", etc.

VII. Paul writing to Timothy distinctively affirms that there is but "one mediator" (Intercessor or Advocate) between God and man—the man Christ Jesus" (1 Tim. 2:5; 1 John 2:1). This statement cannot be correct if the record given in Rom. VIII:26, 27, applies to the Holy Spirit as a personal being.

VIII. The scripture terminology used relative to the Holy Spirit, is altogether inconsistent with personality, and it is a most significent fact, that no such language is ever used respecting God the Father, or Jesus Christ the Son. Viz: "Pour," "pour out," "anoint," "baptize," "by measure," "quench," etc.

IX. The fact that the personal pronoun is used in connection with it, does not demonstrate that there is another God beside the Father. If we read of the Spirit coming, guiding, speaking, showing and teaching, we understand clearly enough that God does these things by the instrumentability of the Spirit proceeding from him, as Christ said, making various persons and objects his medium of communications. We would call attention to the fact that though the personal pronoun is used through the necessities of grammar, (as in French), the neuter pronoun is used also, as in 1. Pet. 1:11. It (the spirit) testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ." Wisdom is personified, sin is also personified.

X. The Revised Version, in spite of the recommendation of the American Committee, have retained the word "ghost" instead of substituting "spirit" in all places where the prefix "Holy" occurs; evidently because it seemed to them to favor the idea of personality, though in other instances, they have rendered the same word "spirit". By substituting the word "ghost" for spirit in their other passages, the absurdity of personality is very clearly demonstrated. Take for instance Rom VIII:9; 1. Cor II:11, 14; Job III:2; Phil. II:1; 1. Thess. 1:15; 1. John 5:7; Rev. 2:7; 1. Cor XII:3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 11, 13).

Were I to leave the subject here I should be greatly disappointed in my task, for I am no believer in pulling down what I believe to be error unless I have good hope of building something entirely better in its place. Put to practical test in the light of the foregoing remarks, what solid ground for comfort have orthodoxy got? By their own confession they cannot understand or even attempt to explain the doctrine of the Trinity, nor can they explain the difficulty in which they are placed when they teach that all three persons of the Trinity pre-existed the time of Christ and took part in the affairs of men, right up to the time when Christ promised to give them another Comforter. Who then is this other Comforter? How can he be the third person of an already existing Trinity? Our good friends make much of the contention that we exalt reason, instead of spirituality, interpreting the word, as if conflict existed between the two. We would ask them therefore to turn to Rom. XII:1, of the R. V., and notice the relationship existing there between what is "spiritual" and what is "reasonable." No comment is needed, for by this it is obvious that what is spiritual is also "reasonable."

We have previously stated that we agree that the Holy Spirit (except in manifestation) is the same throughout scripture, but we insist that the very variety of manifestation is itself a strong argument against personality of any sort, other than association with personality. We strongly object to the idea that the Holy Spirit can one time be a third person of the Trinity, and at another time an humble dove. God says he made everything after its kind, and those who know their Bibles, know how strong the divine disapproval of any departure from that law. Orthodoxy ignores that law and makes an absurdity an act of God. When, however, we recognize the fact that the Holy Spirit is the Power of the Highest, which proceedeth from the Father, that it is the "Spirit of the Lord." The spirit of God who is in heaven (Dan. II:28; Elec. 8:2; Psa. 102:19; 123:11; I. King 8; Mark XVI:19), we begin to understand something of its wonderful nature, and its operation in differing manifestation. By his Spirit he garnished the heavens (Job 26:13). By his spirit are all things created and sustained in life (Psa. 104:29; Job 21:14). The Spirit of God is everywhere; we cannot evade it (Psa. Bg. 12). It was by the Spirit of God that Samson did his marvelous feats, by this power Elisha detected his deception of Gehazi, and Peter the lies of Annais and Sappharia. Anna and others were also "full of the Spirit," as also Stephen. Christ himself used the Spirit of God (Matt. 12:28). It became the Holy Spirit when definitely set apart by carrying on the work of God's Holy Servant, Jesus, when thou didst "anoint." In what way then, considering all these various manifestations, had the Holy Spirit, as promised by Christ not yet been manifested so as to cause Christ to say, "He would send them another Comforter, Advocate or Helper (John XIV:16)? We get further information by noticing carefully our Savior's remarks descriptive of the promise, and the results accruing from its fulfillments. Notice Christ's expression that this promised other Comforter (thus implying a former one), is called "the Spirit of truth. Then turn to Malachi II:6; from this we get a reference to Dent. 33:10; and we gain the information that the Old Testament law was called "the law of truth." David with psalms calls the law "the word of truth" (Psa. 9:42, 142 ,151, 160). Notice how Christ after speaking of the Comforter, immediately speaks of those who keep his word, or rather as he says himself, not his word, but the Father's, and the comforting results that follow. Then he comes back again as it were, and talks to them of the Comforter, even the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in my name, to teach them and bring them to their remembrance whatsoever Christ had said unto them. Peter tells us "Holy men of old spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit"—or in other words, the Holy Spirit was manifested through these men in "the law of truth." That this "law of truth" was a Comforter and Helper"—the psalms of David alone give ample proof. David could say, "The law do I love." Truth is not a personality, but like wisdom, it maybe, and is personified. Notice other results that were to follow the special gift of the Holy Spirit, which at least three times Christ calls "the Spirit of Truth."

1. The Spirit was to guide unto all the truth.
2 To testify of Christ, or bear witness of Christ.
3. To show or declare things that are to come.

Now are not all these promises exactly fulfilled in the New Testament, and in no other way? Let us examine them separately and see.

1st. Do not all Christians agree that no man can be guided into all the truth apart from the word which is truth?

2nd. Do we accept any testimony or witness concerning Christ as authoratative, other than that given by the "Spirit of truth," or "Word of truth," which is the same?

3rd. Is realiable knowledge "of things to come," attainable an yother way than through the Old and New Testament, which are both manifestations of the Holy Spirit of God? And surely in both these we find "Comfort" and "Help," so that we may be able "to comfort others with the comfort whereby we ourselves are comforted of God." Paul speaks much of Comfort. He found the scriptures a great comfort (Rom. XV:4; 2 Cor. 1:3; 2. Thess. 2:17).

The Old Testament is one Comforter.

The New Testament is "another Comforter" (Psa. 119:49, 50; 23:4; Rom. XV:4).

R. H. JUDD.

THE FISKE—MOORE DEBATE

Proposition: Man is wholly mortal and is unconscious in the interval between death and the resurrection.

John Fiske, Jr., affirms. J. H. Moore, denies.

Mr. Fiske's Fifth Article.

Mr. Moore admits man to be a "soul." What kind of one was he before the introduction of life? As animals are souls, too, what were they before the introduction of life? As man is a soul, it follows that a living man is a living soul; a dead man is a dead soul. My friend says, "God made Adam a living soul." But how? Was it not by breathing into him the breath?

Job 32:13. If you will read "mind" instead of "soul," your difficulty is solved. In Psa. 62:22 "soul" means "life." Psa. 62:1; 103:1; 101:1, it means "mind." In Psa. 116:7, 8 it means "self." But if the soul was "delivered from death," is it not mortal? Matt. 16:26. "Soul" here means life. See the Revised Version. In Mark 14:34 it means "mind." But if it was immortal, the "death" mentioned would not be possible.

In Thess. 5:23; Heb. 4:12 "spirit" means "mind" while "soul" means "life." But if "spirit" means "immortal soul" and "soul" means "immortal soul," then these texts prove that each man has two "immortal souls"! Futhermore, if "spirit" and "soul" are deathless, then why pray for their "preservation?"

Matt. 10:28. Soul here means "life" or "mind." If "life," then it refers to the "future life." The Diaglot's rendering is: "Fear not them who can kill the body but are not able to kill the (future) life; but rather fear him who is able to destroy both life and body in the fires of Gehenna." But if the "soul" is immortal how could it be "destroyed"?

Mr. Moore objects to my refering the reader to the Hebrew and Greek for certain expressions. Are we not after the truth? If so, why object? Does he intend to confine me to a certain version? In commenting on Num. 9: 6 and others, I stated that soul meant body there, not that it everywhere had that meaning. One must judge its particular meaning from the way it is used. Hence your argument against my supposed position falls.

"Breath does not go to God." Read again Psa. 104:29; Job 34:14, and Eccl. 12:7 and be convinced that it does. If God "takes away" and "gathers unto himself" "their breath," has it not "returned"?

The brain is the thinking part of the body. When it is crushed it cannot think. When destroyed death will take place, and man will still be unable to think, or in other words "his thoughts have perished." But if the body doesn't think, then my friend's statements, "the body knows with the spirit," and "the body has lost its thought," must be abandoned.

"One breath." Leeser's version is, "They have one kind of spirit." So if the departing spirit of one is immortal so is the other, for they are of "one kind"!!! Once more I must say that the word rendered "breath" and "spirit" in Eccl. 3:19—21 is ruach. Read ruach instead of "breath" and "spirit," and you have what Solomon really said. Hence the "difference" Mr. Moore finds, does exist.

Job 27:3. "Spirit in my nostrils" means the "breath which God gave me." See margin, also Isa. 2:22. But what do you make it mean? Is man's immortal soul in his nostrils? Please answer. "Asleep in Christ are perished." Mr. Moore, how could the Sadduceean doctrine of the non-revival of the body cause immortal souls in heaven to "perish"? Were not all the souls from Abel to Christ in heaven before Christ's death? If so, how could the non-resurrection of Christ's body affect them?

"Shall never die." Man has two lives. "The promise of the life that now is, and that which is to come." Which of these did Christ refer to? "That which is to come." When will it be received? "In the world to come, eternal life." Then my friend is wrong in applying this to the "life that now is."

Before examining the word "spirit" allow me to submit more evidence on the soul question:

Souls die—(Psa. 22:20; 40:14; 56:13; 116:8; Job 33:28; Judges 16:30, margin).

Souls are cut off—(Ex.31:14; Lev. 7:21, 25, 27; 19:8; 20:6; 23:29, 30; Num. 15:30. 31; 20:13).

Souls can be touched—(Lev. 5:2; 7:21; 22:6).

Souls eat—(Lev. 7: 18, 20, 25).

Souls are bought and eaten—(Lev. 22:11).

Will the reader please count the number of texts advanced by us since the commencement of the debate, proving the death of the soul? And yet we could quote many more.

Biblical uses of the word "spirit" are being; life; mind; vital energy, etc. But it is never used to mean immortal soul. Here are illustrations of its uses: Jno. 4:24; Heb. 1:14. "Spirit" means being. In Job 27:3 it signifies "breath." Rev. 13:15 it is rendered "life." I Cor. 2:11 it means "mind;" Judg. 15.19 it means "vital energy." One must determine the particular meaning of the word from the way it is used. To illustrate: try to read "life" or "mind" in Judg. 15:19 and note the results.

Mr. Moore admits the spirit of man came from God. If it is a personality, then did it not pre-exist before entering Adam? Was it before entering him, alive and conscious? If not, when it entered Adam, did it or Adam become alive and conscious? If Adam, then when it left Adam, was it alive and conscious? If the spirit is a person, then when it "returns to God" does not this return prove the salvation of all both good and bad? If the spirit of God is in man's "nostrils" (Job 27:3), then when it "returns," is it a personality? If paradise is in hades, then when "hades is cast into the lake of fire," what will become of paradise? Please answer.

Mr. Moore's Fifth Reply

Owing to space in the P. C., being so small a paper, we cut out my affirmative on this proposition. Hence, I will bring in my arguments on the negative.

Mr. Fiske first says, "Mr. Moore admits man to be a "soul." What kind of one was he before the introduction of life?" Answer, he was not soul (spirit) before he had life. He continues, "as if animals are 'souls.'" There is nothing that is "soul" or spirit," till it has received life. For both "soul" and "spirit," are intellectual. And there was no intellect in material things without the breath of life. Trees, stone, all vegetation on the earth, has not intellect, for they (do not) breath the atmosphere. If they did, and became intellectual, they also would have "soul" or "spirit."

Yes, God made a living "soul" or "spirit." But he did not do it by giving him wind, the atmosphere; which is breathing the breath of life into his nostrils. Yes, you are right, when you say, "if you'll read 'mind' instead of 'soul' your difficulty is solved. Because the "soul," or "spirit" is the "mind," or intellectual faculty. Hence, it is not the "breath." I believe you will grasp this point, and trust you will acknowledge it. And I will give you another substitute. I want you to take John 4:24 and use "breath" instead of "spirit," and see if it will give sense as you have argued in one of your previous articles. I will here quote it, and want all to note it in particular: "God is a breath; and they that worship him must worship him in breath and in truth." (John. 4:24). My dear friend, this is the logical conclusion you have brought us to; you will accept your own logic? I presume you will agree with me, that the "breath" is the atmosphere we breathe, which God "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life (Gen. 2:7). But he did not "breathe" the "spirit" in man, but he formed the "spirit within him." "God layeth the foundation of the earth, and formeth the spirit of man within him" (Zech. 12:1).

Death doesn't necessarily mean "passive." If you die to sin, are you "passive" (Rom. 6:2)? As you speak of soul and spirit, "neither means immortal," but both mean intellectual. Now the question is, is the mind destroyed, or is it "transmigrated?" Therefore, let us pray that they may be transmigrated to 'heaven' instead of 'hell.' And hell is death, yet are they sensible of their misery.

In trying to justify yourself in one thing, you condemn yourself in another. Your reference to Job. 34:14. In trying to prove that the "breath" (atmosphere we breathe) goes to God, proves that the spirit and breath is not the soul. No, the brain is not the "thinker," but the part of man in which the "thinker" dwells. There is a state in which the "thinker" thinks without brain. God "thinks." When the "breath" leaves the body the spirit takes its flight, and the body has lost its thoughts; they have gone to God (Eccl. 12:7). Here the "spirit," which is "thought," goes to God. "Spirit in my nostrils" means he will breathe righteousness, and not "speak wickedness," or "utter deceit" (Job. 27:3—4).

My worthy opponent ought to know the difference of using words in the singular number or conjunctively, of which your long list of references refer. While the soul, inner man, is in the body, it often calls the two, "soul and body," calls them "soul." As, so many souls were saved from being drowned.

"Gehenna," "hades" and "tartarus," are all translated "hell," but have different meanings. In the sense of the Greek, "hades" means the "invisible," or, as the Bible Union renders it, "under world. "Paradise" or "Abraham's bosom" does not mean the same as "hades." It is included in hades but only contains the righteous between death and the resurrection. As you say, "One must determine the particular meaning of a word from the way it is used." In the same way "tartarus" does not mean the same as "hades." It is included in "hades," but only contains the wicked between death and the resurrection.

The rich man, though in "hades," was also in "tartarus," and Lazarus, though also in "hades," was in Abraham's bosom, or literally, in Paradise; and there was a great gulf between them. But neither of them was in "gehenna," represented by the lake of "fire and brimstone," as burning forever, prepared for the devil and his angels. This is the final doom of the wicked. When the saints die their spirits go to paradise (II Cor. 12:2—4; Eccl. 12:7). You see paradise is in heaven, where they at rest, or "sleep" till God comes (I Thess. 4:13, 14). When the wicked die they go to "tartarus," a place of torment, where they remain till the judgement. After the judgement, the wicked go into "gehenna," and the righteous into life eternal. The original Greek word "ionion," is translated "eternal," on one hand, and "everlasting" on the other.

"THE TRIUMPHS OF PERFECT LOVE"

Though I speak with the tongues of men and angels, and have not love, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling symbol.

Perfect love is the heart of God.

Love makes no demand that God cannot supply.

Love is never cold, but always hot.

Love bears up under false accusation.

Love conquers unreasonable passion.

Love overcomes every base emotion.

Love endureth all things, hopeth all things.

Love believeth all things and beareth all things.

Love is kind, and envieth not.

Love is not easily provoked, and thinketh no evil.

Love abideth and never fails.

Love will give victory over sin.

Love is the greatest thing in the world.

Love will cure the world of caste.

Love has no prejudice against race or color.

Love, perfect love is the heritage of every true believer in Christ. If we love not this love, we should seek for it, and not rest until it fills our entire being.

JENNIE McNEE,

LET US REASON TOGETHER

From whence have we received wisdom? Is it not from the teachings of the church of God taken from the infallible word? Who brought to us the glorious things of the Kingdom of God, the glad tidings of the salvation Jesus purchased for us, the hope of immortality through his name, the exceeding great—and precious promises of God? Was it not the church of God who showed us these things by opening the scripture to our understanding, clearing them of rubbish tradition had heaped over them? How our hearts throbed with joy; what happiness filled and fermented our whole being as these truths were brought to our understanding. Then as we went down into the watery grave, being dead, did we not rise to sit in heavenly places in Christ Jesus?. Did we not go on our way rejoicing, as did the man from Ethiopia?

All this came to us through the truth given in the scriptures of God, and held by all the faithful. What more can we find outside the church of the Living God? Is there any sect that can give us these precious truths? Do we seek more light? Let us seek it where alone it may be found, in that word which shines with radiance on the pathway of the just. That light whose rays will grow brighter as the day dawns made light by the rising beam of the Son of glory.

If we know these things are truth, we know those who hold and teach them are true and faithful witnesses for God. Why then join ourselves to another? Because some are loving, kind and gentle does not make their doctrine sound, or their position scriptural. There is one faith (belief), and only one given in the word of God; therefore we are exhorted to "take heed to the doctrine," to receive no other teaching, even through one like an angel of light presents it to us. It is a mistaken idea that we can go from the Church of God and walk in the path that leads to eternal life. There is one fold, and Jesus is the Shepherd of that flock. Then if we would walk with him we must come into and become one of that little flock, that little company to whom Jesus says, "Fear not, for it is the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom." Nowhere do we find this promise given to any other. Any other foundation than that which is built upon the word of God is sinking sand. Those measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise (2. 2nd Cor. 10:12). Because some brother has failed us, because some sister has forgotten the meekness and gentleness of Christ, will we be so foolish as to turn from the truth and go away from the Church of the Living God? To do so is only to hew out for ourselves broken cisterns which will not hold the water of life. God forbid. Let us keep the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace. "Journeying on toward the Kingdom hand in hand."

EDITORIAL

Nothing dies, not even life, which gives up one form only to receive another. No good action, no good example, no generous endeavour dies; it lives for ever in our race.

Brother J. F. Wagoner sends an article and says: "I have been in poor health for a few months, but am slowly improving at present. Kindest wishes to you and family, and God's blessing upon the Dear Old Restitution, and upon the household of the faithful ones."

A VISIT TO KENTUCKY

Brother Levi Skeels, originally of Columbus, Ohio, decided to emigrate from Indiana to Tennessee, and in transit a sick daughter, who is now Sister Bradley, detained him at Brumfield, Ky. While he tarried there, he redeemed the time by preaching the gospel of the kingdom. Large crowds attended his ministrations, and many substantial men in the community, interested in the message of life which Bro. Skeels so ably proclaimed, induced him to abandon his migration to Tennessee and settle among them. In this way the truth was planted in the soil of Kentucky in 1876.

The brethren there now only number about twenty-three. Although "few in number, little flock, by the world despised, forgot," they are the "few names" in Kentucky that stand for the truth, the truth, and nothing but the truth (Rev. 3:4). They act upon John's advise in 1 Jno. 4:1, to "try spirits, whether they are of God." If this test reveals that the preacher is a "false prophet," they declare he is of anti-Christ (1 Jno. 4:3), and sever all connection with him (2 Jno. 9:11). The sheep in wolves clothing smiles complacently and says: "I always preach the truth in my public ministrations; I only talk heretical opinions in private," the brethren simply reply, "Damnable heresies are rarely, if ever, preached in public; they are more effective when introduced 'privily' " (2 Pet. 2:1). If all our churches had acted on this principle, things would not be in such a medley in the Church of God today. Ministers are only servants of the church. Instead of preachers running the church, as is now the rule, the church should run the preacher.

Few and feeble as our brethren at this point are, they have built a church during the winter, and are free from debt for same. The building makes a cozy country church. It has thirty-three seats, and will hold two hundred comfortably. We gave fourteen sermons, which were fairly well attended. We left some in the community much interested in the truth. While the meetings were in progress Bertha L. Carpenter, wife of Brother Ethen Carpenter, and Lydia B. Carpenter, wife of Brother Ray Carpenter, were obedient to the gospel. During our stay we made our "home" with Brother Frank Skeels, but radiated among all the brotherhood. We spent many pleasant and profitable hours in the company of the brethren and sisters. May the Lord bless them, settle and establish them in the gospel message of life now, and give them an abundant entrance into his kingdom hereafter, is our prayer.

COMMUNICATIONS

I am sorry to learn that The Restitution has lost so many subscribers on account of your faithfulness to the truth as to Christ's parentage I have been a close student of The Restitution for a long time, and can say that I have never known you to endorse anything that has not the plainest testimony to support it. I am sending the paper to my brother in the hope that it may enlighten him as to the truth.

Your Brother in hope of life,
JOHN PARKER.

Please find enclosed $4.50 for my paper. I think I am behind one year. $1.50 is for the coming year, also $1.50 for the following names: Alace Strother and John Franklin. The Restitution is about all the preaching I hear, and I can not afford to be without it. Yours in hope of eternal life,
GEO. SLACK.

Dear Brother Nutt:

I am behind with my renewal, but delay has been unavoidable. Please find enclosed money order for $1.50 for another year The Restitution. It is like a friend paying a weekly visit. We are glad to at last hear about the new song books. We need them, and hope they will soon be ready to send out for use.

Success to editor, manager and helpers of The Restitution. In the blessed hope, MRS. R. M. WOODBURY.

To The Restitation:

My subscription to The Restitution is out—time expired January 1, 1916, but knowing that I was to change my address, I have waited until now. Enclosed is 1.50 for my subscription for another year. Please send me the paper, "The Dear Old Restitution." God bless all the dear ones who make it so good. What would we that are isolated do if we did not have the dear old paper.

Your Sister in Christ,
CLARISSA CAMPBELL.

To the dear ones of the household of faith:

Brother R. G. Huggins has just closed a series of meetings with the Brumfield church with good results. The church was encouraged to press forward toward the "Mark of the high calling" with renewed vigor. Two dear sisters were added to the little flock, waiting for the kingdom, which it is the Father's good pleasure to give unto them that love him.

Brother Huggins is still preaching the same old gospel that was preached unto Abraham. These dear old "exceeding great and precious promises" are about the only things in this old shifting, jostling world that change not, and is the only anchor where the weary storm-tossed soul can find rest. Though heaven and earth pass away, my word shall not pass, until all be faithful. Blessed promise; blessed hope!

SADIE SKEELS.

"A Sister" would like to add a few more lines to the truthful account already given in The Restitution of using my musical talent to play at a dance hall.

First, I consider my time too valuable to mingle with the general mob that attends these places of amusement for any other purpose but this, the making of my daily bread. As a business proposition I mingle with the same crowd that my accusers mingle with in their work. The dance hall is quite respectable place; there is no bar in connection with it. As my children need all I can make, I saw nothing wrong in playing there. I decided to study the matter carefully for myself, and if I could see differently, I would do different. My accuser, one of our people, came to me and said I must stop or they would have to cast me out of fellowship. I did not believe they had the right to do so on a question like this. I appeal to the church to know, if anyone can lay down a postive line for me to follow in my business as a musician. If they can say I must not play for dances, cannot I say that my accuser should not hire the same crowd to work with us in his berry fields every summer? This matter is very confusing to me. Bro. Huggins, please give me all the help you can on it. Your sister in Christ.

A SISTER.

(Upon our return home from Kentucky, we received a telephone call from Sister Pottorf, of Salem, O., to attend a funeral there. From Salem we went to Mt. Vernon, O., to attend to some work there which has long been neglected. To date we have not been able to find any time to write anything of moment for The Restitution. If the Lord wills, we shall soon be home, and when we catch up with the accumulated work and get settled, we shall try and say something for the special benefit of "A Sister." In the meantime correspondens are expressing themselves. Remember that those who defend the dance are as welcome to write as those who oppose it. We want to give both views of the subject a frank, calm and honest hearing, and then we can reach a decision about the matter that will be an intelligent decision.—Editor.

In copy of "Resitution," January 25, 1916, I notice an article by E. W. Knapp, subject, "Condemned."

Writers contributing to the different advental papers in the several states use the above word in a very limited sense. Adventists generally believe and teach that Jesus Christ will return to this earth with a handful of rich faggots, strike a match, light them and burn up the impatient with eternal fire, translating the "few" prior to this, thereby absolutely ignoring all the old prophecies, to say nothing of events which will occur numerated in the New Scriptures. I have learned that even the courts of the United States will not condemn a man to death without a trial, if the law is allowed to take its course, by a jury. Now, will any say that the U. S. courts are more lenient, humane, than the great loving Jehovah? Certainly not. Besides there is one certain power to deal with, which power is almost wholly responsible for the condition the people of the whole world are in today. Is there now, or has there ever existed a whole body of people who know, and obeyed the scriptures? No. And there never will under the tutorage of mortal man (But why not under the tutorage of the immortal God?—Ed.)

Every church sect applies the teachings of scripture somewhat different from others. Therefore there can be no unity such as Paul speaks of prior to the setting up of the fifth universal kingdom by Jesus Christ on the earth purified. Paul says all stand condemned, all have sinned and come short of the glory of Jehovah, and that Jehovah hath concluded all under SIN, that he might have—or extend—mercy to all. (Nay, friend Cone; Paul gives the correct version of the matter in Gal. 3:22: "The Scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise of faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe." —Editor).

Nineteenths of Christendom, and those outside, deny the Bible nature of man, death, burial and resurrection of Jesus Christ; and no power on earth will be able to convince them otherwise.

This is a veritable fact, and will so stand till Jesus the Christ "puts all enemies under foot," for "all enemies must be subdued." (Then these unbelievers, "enemies of the Cross of Christ," are doomed (Phil. 3:18).—Editor.)

Jesus told his apostles that in the regeneration they should sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. Again he said that he would send his angels to gather out all things which offend, and the sheep are to be placed upon the right of the judge, the goats on his left. Paul, speaking to his brethren, not those who had not believed and accepted the truth, says: "For we all must stand before the judgment seat of Christ." There cannot be a catching up, or away, of the righteous till they have heard the "well done," and the unrighteous, "depart."

If the word "regeneration" is a true translation of what Jesus intended in Matt. 19:28, what are we to understand by that word? To be governed by the references, in 2 Cor. 5:17; John 1:13, 3; Titus 3:5, there can be but only one true construction, which is to be born again. And this is the same as saying a coming out from among the dead ones by a resurrection at the second personal coming of Jesus the Christ. Just like Jesus told Nicodemus, "Except a man be born of water and the spirit," (or be brought forth from the dead by the POWER of Jehovah through Jesus Christ) he cannot enter into the Kingdom of Jehovah. This signifies that some will not be "born again" from the dead, and David makes the fact plain who they are, in his 49th chap. (see verses 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 19, 20). David compares their chances for a resurrection to those wholly given over to the accumulation of wealth, "brutish person;" "like the beasts that perish;" "like sheep in death;" "beasts that perish." "THEY SHALL NEVER SEE LIGHT," etc. This will be the condition of all irresponsibles. There will be no resurrection for lunatics, barbarians, nor the infantile would who have died before they reached an age of responsibility. In not a single instance has Jehovah made possible for the irresponsibles to come out of the Adamic death.

Paul says, "Where no law is, no transgression." Can the law of this part of the globe deal with the irresponsibles? No! Is a man more just than Jehovah? No! but the great majority of teachers make him less just than man, by teaching that all such characters will be resurrected regardless of any, or all conditions. Many thusands will appear at the judgment-seat of Christ condemned, but that does not spell a finality for them? (Editor.) Jesus said his apostles would sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel, of which the righteous member from among the Gentile, or heathen, will constitute a tribe. Because every Gentile, or heathen, must become a Jew at heart. A Gentile, or heathen, cannot enter Jehovah's kingdom before fleshly Jews made spiritual. When Jesus Christ with all the holy angels makes his debut, the Jews will be the first people to make the exclamation, "Lo, this is our Jehovah, we have waited for him." (If the Jews are "the first" to use this exclamation of welcome to our returning Lord, they certainly will put the saints to shame.—Editor.)

WORKING FOR JESUS

By S. Roxana Wince

"I wouldn't bother my head writing for papers if I were you," said a Methodist lady friend to me one day. "But I have been called to service," I replied, and she said no more. Truth is precious to us. We rejoice in it and we want others to share our joy. Our hearts go out continually to a world, "lying in the wicked one."

We want if possible to save some. Do we really? I so often ask myself the question, for when brought face to face with unrepentant ones I do not bring the question of salvation home to them in a personal way. Because they are with me but a moment and are gone. I do not keep back my faith; I tell my hope in a coming Savior and in literal resurrection, wherever I go, and the faces of many light up with joy. But Oh, if I could only do more than this; if I could only bring some dear ones into the fold, how happy I would be.

It is my place just to hold up the hands of those who are fighting with the Amalikites? Then I will do my best It may be that our young people need me here. How I wish I could show them what great things they can do for Jesus if they but will. God has not called them to be idlers in his vineyard. His command to them is, "Go work." Jesus has "left to" every man his work." The converted heathen realizes this much better than we do. I am ashamed at the contrast.

A young heathen convert was asked quite recently "why he did not work evening as well as day times like the rest of his fellow labors, and so earn nearly double wages?" He replied: "I can't. I am teaching." It was found out in making further inquiry that this poor boy, needing so many of the real necessities of life, was denying himself the chance of getting them, that he might go to his native village instead and teach his people the unsearchable riches of Christ.

Every night found him there with his Bible, reading and explaining "the story of Jesus and his love." It kindled my zeal, reading of him. I hope it may kindle the zeal of some dear young Christians who, instead of obeying God's command to "Go work in the Vineyard," are away spending the precious moments in the show, the theatre, or the ball room.

How many do they expect to convert then? Alas for the world, when Christians allow themselves to be wooed away from Christ. I had rather be found dead on my knees, in the heart of Africa, as Livingstone was.

Who will promise God, that, with his blessing, they will teach some person the truth this year, and thereby save them? Whether by personal conversation, correspondence, the giving of tracts or the sending of papers. I will do all in my power. Who will join me?

We have the blessed gospel as our tool to work with, and that gospel is "the power of God to every one that believeth—the words of Jesus are spirit and are life." If we work with these we are sure of the battle.

"The foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men." We may seem but fools to the world, and very weak, but. Oh, thanks be to him, he "hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty and base things of the world and things that are despised hath God chosen, yea and things which are not to bring to naught things that are, that no flesh should glory in His presence." So begin knocking at the door of somebody's heart and keep on knocking. You will be heard inside by and by.

We must give our hearts to Jesus
All our lives to work for him,
Fighting wrong with dauntless courage,
Rolling back the tide of sin.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Sometime ago the writer received a letter in answer to one he had written to a friend in which he set forth his reasons why he could no longer subscribe himself to the erroneous teachings and doctrines promulgated by Mr. C. T. Russell. The friend suggested that the writer had lost his hope in the "High Calling," had become materialistic and ceased to see or understand the "spiritual phase" of the Kingdom.

Well, beloved, probably I have read, re-read and studied the teachings of "Millennial Dawn," as closely, systematically and persistently as any man could in my stations of life. Had I gave the same careful attention to the study of God's word, my mind today would possess information and knowledge that would be in harmony with the thoughts of God, and his purpose respecting the destiny of the human family, than the teachings of Mr. Russell could supply.

In the "Watch Tower," of January 1915, under the captions "Natural Israel, not Heirs to Spiritual Promises," Mr. Russell argues that "Natural Israel" will receive material blessings, that "Spiritual Israel," which he limits to 144,000, will receive spiritual blessings. He is as clear as the day respecting the blessing that will fall to "fleshy or natural Israel," but is vague and dense in his reasoning respecting the blessings that God bestows upon the saints. The scriptures declare most emphatically that "there is only one hope." Abraham was promised the land upon which he stood for an everlasting possession (Gen. 13:14-17). Isaac and Jacob were also promised the land of Palestine for ever (Ges. 26:3: 28:13). The hope of David was that his house and his kingdom should endure forever (2 Sam 7:12-16), and that he should be raised from the dead (Psa. 68:20; 49:15). Solomon's greatest hope was the resurrection from the dead (Prov. 10:16, 25; 11. 4, 18 30, 31).

The expectation of Isaiah was that the Kingdom of God should be established on the earth (Isa. 11): and in the resurrection of the dead (Isa. 26:9); and Jeremiah placed his implicit confidence in the same (Jer. 5-17). Ezekiel and Daniel also believed the same (Ezek. 34:23 31 37 Dan. 12: 1, 2, 13). Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Micah, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechaviah and Malachi, all speak of the glorious state of this earth in the future (Hos. 13:14; Joel 3:16; Amos 9:11; Micah 4; Zeph. 3:20; Hag. 2:6, 9; Zech. 8:23; Mal. 1:11).

Turning to the New Testament we find that the hope there revealed harmonizes with the revelation in the Old Testament, though Christ made the things concerning the Kingdom of God and the resurrection clearer; for he it was who brought life and immortality to light by the gospel.

Mr. Russell in his article excludes from the 144,000 everyone mentioned in Hebrews 11, chapter. He holds out no hope for immortality to any who died before the resurrection of Christ.

Now beloved, let us open up the same word of God. Jesus says, "Search the Scriptures" Isaiah before him says: "To the law and the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." What is the Gospel? Simply this: "Good news concerning the Kingdom of God." This is the good news that God conveyed to Abraham (Gal. 3:8). I read a sermon by Mr. Russel about seven years ago in which he stated that there were three salvations! His books teach there are two: One for the church and one for the world. The sermon above alluded to another one for the "Ancient Worthies." How many gospels did Jesus teach? Listen: "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom of God (Mark 1:14). Notice clearly this kingdom that Jesus taught and believed in, is to be established upon the earth. "The Kingdoms of this world are becoming the Kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ (Rev. 11:15). The typical Kingdom of Israel is to be restored. "I will gather her that is driven out . . . will make her that was cast off a strong nation . . the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem" (Micah 4:6-8).

Notice again, the Kingdom of Israel was the Kingdom of the Lord. "Of all my sons, he hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the Kingdom of the Lord over Israel" (Chron. 28:5). What became of this Kingdom? It was overturned because of iniquity. "Iniquity shall have an end . . . I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him" (Ezek 21:25-27). In the meantime "The Children of Israel shall abide many days without a King" (Hos. 3:4). Notice the next verse: "Afterward shall the children of Israel return and seek the Lord, their God, and David their King" (Hos. 3:5).

Where did this Kingdom exist? Everybody can answer that. In Palestine, of course. Now Mr. Russell, how does this fit in with your ethereal and unseen kingdom floating around somewhere, the place your writings fail to locate? "The Lord God will give unto him (Jesus) the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Luke 1:32-33). "The Lord shall inherit Judah, his portions in the Holy land, and shall choose Jerusalem again" (Zech. 2:12). "Thou shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion" (Psa. 101:13). "When the Lord shall build up Zion he shall appear in his glory" (Psa. 101:16).

In Mr. Russell's lecture in the "Engineer's hall" last fall, he quoted this text to prove that Christ would raise again from the dead all man kind. "And he is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the whole world." In a flippant manner he asked those who differ with him, "Can you twist that?" May I honorably ask him if he can twist the scriptures quoted above, so as to prove that God intends to bestow upon his son the Kingdom he teaches? This Kingdom that Jesus taught God locates for us, it is surely to be set up in Israel's land. "Thus saith the Lord God (not man), behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathens whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land; and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel" (Ezek. 37:21-22).

Has God selected a chief city for the metropolis of this Kingdom? Surely, and like all its other features, it is here upon this old earth. "At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem" (Jer. 3:17). I was talking to a Jew recently, and quoted to him some of God's precious promises. My friend laughed. I laughed too, but it was for joy, as I called that, "He shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth" (Isa. 11:12). "I will take you from among the heathens, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you unto your own land" (Ezek. 36:24).

My Jew friend told me he believed in socialism. Well, my friend, "Go to it;" patch up and renovate these old governments all you wish to: God says he intends to overthrow them all. "The God of heaven shall set up a Kingdom . . . It shall break in pieces and consume all these Kingdoms" Dan. 2:44). "The Kingdoms of this world are becoming the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ" (Rev. 11:15). Mr. Russell, God does not include your "kingdom of the air," or the "Visiting of some other Planet." Listen: "His dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the river even unto the ends of the earth" (Zech. 9:10). "The Lord shall be King over all the earth: in that day shall there be one Lord and his name one" (Zech. 14:9).

Today Jesus is in heaven, a guest of his father. He has gone there to receive from his Father the Kingdom promised to him; when he returns it will be as he always claimed to be, Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews" (John 19:19). "David . . . being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne" (Acts 2:29-30). Who will Jesus appoint to be the rulers in this glorious Kingdom? Listen: "The saints of the most high shall take the Kingdom and possess the Kingdom forever" (Dan. 7:18). "To him that overcometh, and keepeth my words unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations" (Rev. 2:26, 27). Beloved brothers, memorize this verse; it is a grand one; it cannot be twisted; it is just as it reads. "And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people and nations, and hast made us unto our God, Kings and Priests, and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:9-10). Mr. Russell says "we" should be read "them" and "they." Beloved, don't tinker with the word of God. Paul says in I Thess. 2:12 "That we would walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his Kingdom and glory." What Kingdom and glory, Paul? The same that Jesus has in mind as recorded in Matt. 25:34: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Solomon knew just where the righteous would be recompensed; he says it will be in the earth (Prov. 11:31). Jesus taught the same: "Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth" (Matt. 5:5). This Kingdom, which my soul longs for, will be a blessing to all nations. "Wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy time and strength of salvation" (Isa. 33:6). "The nations shall bless themselves in him" (Jer. 4:2). "In that day shall there be a root of Jesus, which shall stand as ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek, and his rest shall be glorious" (Isa. 11:10). "Even so, come, Lord Jesus; come quickly" (Rev. 22:19-21).

IOWA BRETHREN, ATTENTION

As we have engaged Brother Joseph Williams to work for the Conference during this Conference year, and Brother Marsh is preaching on Sundays for us also, I will appreciate it if those who have subscribed to the work, or others who desire to have a part in it, will make such remittance as they can conveniently at this time. The Conference funds are running low so that I have thought best to make this appeal.

We would also like to hear from any of the brethren who want meetings.

TRIVIALITIES

It is not always easy in any sphere to discriminate between the trifling and momentous. It is often a matter of comparison, and judgment and experience are needed in the selection. Trifles are not to be confounded with details, which are often most important. Neither are things necessarily trifling because they are small. A kind look, a gentle warning, a cordial greeting, a slight service, are sometimes despised as trifles, when in truth they are signs of a generous and kindly nature, and carry untold blessings to their recipients. Many little things are far more important than what we miscall great ones; they may indeed be the true realities, while the others may be insignificant. If each one will faithfully examine the meanings and purposes of the various spheres in which he moves, and endeavor conscientiously to make them first in his heart and life, the trifles will sink into their proper and subordinate place.

It does us good to admire what is good and beautiful; but it does us infinitely more good to love it. We grow like what we admire; but we become one with what we love.

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the Saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:28), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). PRAYER

Our Father, we commend to thee all whom we love. We pray thee to bless them and ourselves. We ask thee to pour out thy grace upon us, to quicken our faith, to deepen our love, to make our lives more manifestly after the example of the great Lord and lover of our souls, and to help us in any and every way in which we can show forth the praises of him who hath called us out of the darkness into his marvelous light. Amen.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST WAR

Showing Some of the Causes, Extent and Results of the Present Conflict, as Outlined in the Prophecies of the Bible and Confirmed by the World's History

The conflict now raging in Europe, and extending to other continents, is now generally acknowledged to be the most heartless and appalling the world has ever witnessed. In number involved and methods of destruction the history of mankind affords no parallel. Coming at a time when it was the hope and belief of many that war would be no more, and that arbitration would be the rule of nations, when the cry of peace and safety had gone to the ends of the earth, it has caused men's hearts to fail them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth."

Will all nations be involved in the conflict, and what will be the results of the war? are burning questions of the day. Questions which can not be answered with authority apart from divine revelation.

In the Holy Scriptures we find a record of the past, present and future history of the world. The past and present have been confirmed by the researches of archaeology and profane history.

The ages of the past have ended in great destruction of human life, as Divine judgments upon the people, because of their wickedness.

The Antedeluvian age, 1650 years after the creation of Adam, ended with the flood of water, which destroyed all but eight of his posterity (Gen. 7:21). At the close of the Patriarchal age, 850 years after the flood, the armies of the Egyptians perished in the Red Sea.

Fifteen hundred years later, at the close of the Law age, Jesus of Nazareth was crucified at Jerusalem. Before his death he foretold the coming destruction of that city and the distress there would be in the land. And speaking of the Jews he says: "And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled" (Luke 21:20-24). This prophecy has been literally fulfilled, as today that city is still trodden down of the Gentiles, and the Jews are still scattered among the nations.

In the year 70 A. D. the Roman general Titus captured the city of Jerusalem after a siege of five months. During this siege 1,100,00 Jews perished. The remnant were sold in the slave marts of the world, and so were "sifted among the nations as corn is sifted in a sieve" (Amos 9:9). The city was destroyed, the temple burned and the very foundation stones were overturned by the soldiers in their mad search for gold. There was not "one stone left upon another that was not thrown down" (Matt. 1:2).

In 362 A. D. Julian, the apostate emperor of Rome, in order to falsify the prophecy of Jews concerning the rebuilding of the temple, gave the Jews permission to return to Jerusalem and rebuild their temple. The Jews flocked from all parts of the world to their holy city, and engaged in the work with enthusiasm, but their efforts were thwarted by the sudden bursting forth of flames from the ruins of the temple destroyed by Titus, which compelled them to abandon the effort in despair. The attempt was not renewed, but Julian, upon his deathbed, exclaimed: "Thou hast conquered, thou Nazarene, thou hast conquered!"

In 637 A. D. the city was captured by the Saracen Caliph, Omar, the successor of Mohammed. Afterward it was taken by the Turks. Today, on the site of the ancient temple, on Mount Moriah, stands the Mosque of Omar. So the prophecies of Jesus, his apostles and the prophets will be fulfilled, though the whole world should stand in opposition (Matt. 5:18). In them we learn that we are nearing the end of this Gospel age. They speak of the dread shaking of nations, the appalling loss of human life, and the destruction of property, and although "many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased" (Dan. 12:4), yet there shall be "a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time." How vain then for any man, or set of men, to attempt to establish peace upon earth, among the warring nations, when God's word says: "For when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them" (2 Thess. 5:2, 3), and again, "The ambassadors of peace shall weep bitterly" (Isa. 33:4). "The bringing in of peace and quietness to this troubled earth is reserved to the coming of the "Prince of Peace" (Psa. 16:8-10; Isa. 40:9, 10; Ps. 72:7, 8).

Causes of the War

The causes of the war, as given by the combatants themselves, are, on the part of the allies, "to put down militarism," while the central powers claim they are fighting for the "Fatherland." Both claim they are fighting to preserve the "rights of the smaller nations."

The candid student of the situation, however, sees other causes leading up to this conflict. The pistol shots which killed the crown prince of Austria and his wife in the capitol of Bosnia was but the spark which set aflame the pent-up passions of hatred and jealous fury, rankling in the hearts of the nations of Europe. The real causes reach back into the centuries. Ten times since the days of Peter the Great has Russia been drawn back from the coveted prize of Constantinople. In 1877 when the armies of the czar had almost reached the city's gates, a united Europe commanded, "Halt, and return to your own land," and the czar could do nothing but obey. Troubles in Morocco between German and France, Alsace and Lorraine; troubles about the building up of navies; the ambitions of Austria to absorb the Balkan States, while the Serbs were planning a greater Serbia; the desire of the great nations to possess themselves of the countries now held by the dying Turkish empire; the possession of Egypt, the Suez canal and ambitious designs on India; the tremendous burden placed upon the people to support huge military organizations, causing discontent and unrest among the laboring classes, who in some cases were upon the verge of open rebellion, making it a choice of a foreign war or suppressing revolts at home. In addition to the reasons given, which are clear to the careful student of events, apart from the Divine record, are the causes given in the scriptures of truth, which show the wide departure of nations and people of the world from the teachings and commandments, statutes and judgments of the living God, as revealed in his word. These causes and conditions have been revealed by the Creator through prophets and apostles, and are for our instruction and profit (Amos 3:7; 2 Thess. 3:16, 17). "Prophecy did not come in olden time by the will of man, but holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit" (2 Peter 1:19-21). Therefore their fulfillment is sure. It is to the believer as a light in a dark place. The conditions existing now, in these last days, are clearly shown, and are proven true by current events. Human selfishness is one of the reasons for the perilous times existing in the world (2 Tim. 3:1-5, 13). Selfishness leads to increase of crime, wars and distress. False teaching by religious teachers is also shown to be another factor of great importance. The people would be turned from the truth unto fables (2 Tim. 4:1-4). His watchmen would be blind, also ignorant of the truth of God's word, laboring more for the financial gains than for the flock (Isa. 56:10-12). There will be a howling of the shepherds when the Lord comes (Jer. 25:34-38). They shall fall like a pleasant vessel, and their pastures will be spoiled. Some of these teachers will be beaten with many stripes and some with few (Luke 12:35-48). They will have their portion with the hypocrites (Matt. 24:45-51). The watchmen who do not warn the people of the danger of their sinful course are responsible for their destruction, as Noah would have been if he had not warned the people before the flood (Ezek. 33:1-6). It does not refer to the warnings of politicians or civil rulers with regard to war preparedness to resist a foreign enemy of the nation, under which they live. The prophet or watchman teaching a word in the name of the Lord, without commandment, is to die (Deut. 18:20; 2 Thess. 2:8-12). The power of spiritualism is also one of the deceptive causes, which will gather the nations for the battle of Armageddon (Rev. 16: 12-14). Before the Franco-Prussian war of 1870 Louis Napoleon was promised victory by American mediums; Emperor William was assured of success by others, so each entered the contest certain of victory. History records the result. The conditions will be as in the days of Noah and of Lot. Before the flood the earth was corrupt and filled with violence. They were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage; they were building and planting, but the wickedness of man was great in the earth. As in the days before the flood, so shall the days of the coming of the Son of Man be. Feasting and reveling, the increase of domestic unhappiness and constant increase in divorces is the condition in the world today (Luke 17:26-30; Matt. 21:11-13, 24-27; Gen. 6:5-7, 11-13).

Many are running to and fro over the earth, and knowledge is increased (Dan. 12:4). Inventive genius is in evidence on every hand. Nahum described the cars of today, and it was to be in the day of the Lord's preparation (Nahum 2:3-6). Men's hearts would fail them for fear, the sea and the waves roaring (Luke 21:25-31). Note the fearful storms, cyclones and floods of late years, and especially how they are increasing (Hag. 2:6-9; Zeph. 3:6-9; Zeph. 1:14-18, 1-3). The heavens and the earth and all nations shall be shaken, then the desire of all nations shall come. The Lord will gather the nations and pour out his fierce anger upon them, because they have sinned against the Lord. The day of the Lord, a day of darkness and destruction. Here we find commands to the Lord's people that they may be hid in the day of the Lord's anger (1 Thess. 4:16-18; Isa. 26:19-21; 1 Cor. 15:51-55; Isa. 51:17-23; Jer. 25:14-16). They are brought from the graves and translated from among the living to meet the Lord in the air, and enter into chambers, until the indignation be overpast. The cup of fury taken from Israel and given to the nations who oppressed them. The cup of fury given to the nations, who drink and are moved and are mad, for the sword which the Lord will send among them.

Extent and Results of the War

All the kingdoms of the world will drink of the cup of fury (Jer. 25:17-33). They will drink and spew and fall to rise no more. The Lord says they shall certainly drink. Evil shall go forth from nation to nation and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth. It shall be a continuing whirlwind. It shall fall with pain on the heads of the wicked. The Gentile nations were to prepare for war, to beat the plowshares into swords and their pruning hooks into spears, which has been literally fulfilled by the warring nations (Jer. 30:23, 21; Joel 3:1, 2, 9-21). They have made swords and bayonets of the implements of agriculture. They will be gathered into the valley of Jehosiphat, near the city of Jerusalem (Rev. 14:19:20). Here they will be destroyed in the great winepress of the wrath of God. Then Jerusalem will be holy and the Lord will dwell in Zion. While the nations are preparing for war they will cry peace and safety (1 Thess. 5:1-5). At the first peace congress at The Hague 25 nations were represented; this was in 1898. In 1908, at the second peace congress, 47 nations were represented. All the nations, with few exceptions, sent delegates. Now the sudden destruction will come. The ambassadors of peace are weeping and discouraged, and well they may be, for their efforts will be futile. They shall cry peace, peace, when there is no peace. There will be weeping and howling among the rich. They will cast their idols of gold and silver to the moles and bats, and hide from the face of the lamb, and from him that sitteth on the throne (Isa. 33:7; Jer. 6:14; Jas. 5:1-8; Isa. 2:16-22). Daniel shows that the Turk, called the king of the north, because of tidings out of the east and of the north, which shall trouble him, shall go forth with great fury to destroy and utterly make away many. He shall come to his end at Jerusalem and none shall help him (Rev. 6:15-17; Dan. 11:44, 45; 16:12). Then the way of the kings of the east is prepared, showing universal conflict for his territory. "At that time shall Michael stand up," then the resurrection of the dead, after the time of trouble (Dan. 12:1-5; Ezek. 38:39; Gen. 10). In these chapters Gog is Russia, Ethiopia is Abyssinia, Libya is Tripoli, Gomer is Germany, Togamah, from his location of the north quarters, may be Sweden, Norway and Denmark. Sheba, Dedan and the merchants of Tarshish are England and her allies. In Gen. 10 we find where the sons, grandsons and great-grandsons of Noah settled, and from these the nations are located.

Although at present Russia and Germany are fighting each other, later on there will be an alliance between them, as shown in verses 2-6. Germany has already opened the way to Constantinople, through Serbia and Bulgaria. This is on the road to Palestine, where he will finally be destroyed, in combination with all the armies of the world, on the mountains of Israel. This combination of all nations, which is called Sheshack, or confusion, will fight against the Lord at Jerusalem. When the Lord comes the people of the world will imagine a vain thing. "The kings of the earth set themselves against the Lord and against his anointed." He overcomes them and his enemies are dashed to pieces like a potter's vessel. "All nations gather against Jerusalem to battle" (Dan. 2:44; Jer. 25:26; 25:30; Psa. 2:1-12; Rev. 17:12-14; Zech. 14). The Lord sends a confusion and a plague among them by which they are all destroyed. After this destruction "The Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with thee." In that day "The Lord shall be King over all the earth." The nations of them that are left will come up to Jerusalem from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of Hosts. The kings of the earth are cast into prison. The moon shall be confounded and the sun ashamed when the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem and before his ancients gloriously. Then death will be swallowed up in victory (Isa. 24:17-23; Isa. 25:6-13. He will rule the world with a rod of iron. The opening of the sixth seal is at the close of the great tribulation or papal persecution, which ended in the year 1779. A council of nations was held in Vienna, Austria, at that time, which took away his dominion, "to consume and to destroy unto the end" (Rev. 19:12-21; 2:12; Dan. 7:24, 25). This wearing out tribulation of the saints of the Most High, commenced in 538 A. D., and they were to be given into his hands "until a time, times and dividing of time" (Dan. 12:6, 7). The end of the time, 1260 years of persecution, would have been in 1798, but they were shortened 19 years. The papal power itself was allowed to continue until 1798, when Berthier, with a French army, took Rome and made the pope and his Nuncio prisoners of war. Thus ended his civil authority, excepting for a short time he was acknowledged ruler of Italy. This ended in 1870, when Victor Emanuel became their civil ruler.

Return of the Jews to Palestine

In 1898 Dr. Herzl and other Jews issued a call for a Jewish congress, to be held at Basle, Switzerland, in August of that year, to provide a home in Palestine for the Jews scattered among the nations (Ezek. [illegible]). Each succeeding year, in August, the congress was held at the same place, with increasing interest, till in October, 1908, the meeting place was transferred to The Hague in Holland. At this congress there were 100 delegates present from all the nations of the earth. The chief resolution passed was: "The Jews shall take pacific control of Palestine, by sending a stream of Jewish immigrants into the land. In March of that year the Sultan of Turkey had issued a proclamation to the Jews throughout the world, inviting them back to Palestine to take possession of their ancient home. Later in the same year he granted the permission to buy the land and secure title and live under the protection of the Turkish government. With this privilege gained which had been denied them for almost nineteen hundred years, wealthy Jews bought large tracts of land in Palestine and brought thousands of their oppressed brethren from Russia and other lands, furnished them with modern agricultural machinery from Europe and America, and settled them in agricultural villages or communities in the land of Canaan, which the Lord promised to Abraham and his seed as an everlasting possession (Gen. 13:14-17). These colonists have been wonderfully successful, and when the war commenced they were sending shiploads of oranges and other products to America and other countries. They are farming the land as in the days of David. They have found that the plains of Sharon and other sections of Palestine are underlain with an inexhaustible supply of artesian water at shallow depths, which they are using to make the "land which was so long desolate to become like the Garden of Eden" (Ezek. 36:35). When the war came there were 100,000 Jews in Palestine, 60,000 in the city of Jerusalem, and 40,000 in other parts of the land, dwelling in forty unwalled villages engaged in the pursuit of agriculture (Ezek. 38:11). They are now suffering under [illegible] hardships, and are being assisted by their Zionist brethren in America.

The Lord has also begun to restore to the land the former and the latter rains (Joel 2:21-27). Each succeeding year is bringing more and more rain to Palestine, until now there is an annual rainfall of twenty-eight inches.

The Zionist movement is spreading to the ends of the earth, and the Jews everywhere are becoming enthusiastic about once again returning to the land of their fathers, and becoming a nation in the promised land when the war is over. This the Lord has promised. "When he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him." "He will return to Zion and dwell in the midst of Jerusalem." Then he will set his hand again, the second time, to recover the remnant of his people which shall be left. And shall assemble the outcasts of Israel and gather together the dispersed of Judah, from the four corners of the earth." "With fury poured out he will rule over them (Hosea 3:4, 5; Malichi 3:1; Amos 9:11; Acts 15:16, 17; Rev. 1:7; Zech. 8:3; 12:2-14; Ezek. 20:33, 34). He will bring them into the wilderness of the people, there he will plead with them face to face, like as he plead with their fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt. He will purge out from among them the rebels, who will not enter into the land of Israel." "In his holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Israel, saith the Lord God, there shall all of the house of Israel, all of them in the land, serve him. There he will accept them." "One shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends." "And the Lord shall reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth, even forever" (Psa. 22:16; Zech. 13:6; Micah 4:8).

"The kingdom shall come to the Daughter of Jerusalem." "He shall judge among many people and rebuke strong nations afar off, and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation shall not life up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. But they shall sit every man under his vine, and under his fig tree, and none shall make them afraid." "And the Lord shall be King over all the earth." "Even so come, Lord Jesus" (Mi. 4:1-4; Rev. 11:15-18; Zech. 14:9; Rev. 22:20).—Issued as the official propaganda of the Central Washington Conference of the Churches of God of the Faith of Abraham. HOW WE MAKE OTHER PEOPLE

For Young Folks

By Aunti Wince

"Young Christian, walk carefully!" You are "the epistles of Jesus, known and read of all men," and we are making or unmaking other lives according to the manner of your walk. Let me illustrate, "I wish baby would'nt be so cross," said a little boy to his mother. "Well," she replied, "You are making baby. You and brother are with him more than any one else, and you can make him good if you try."

"Me make baby? How mama?"

"Yes, dear. He watches you and tries to do just as you do. Push your cap to one side and then look at him."

The little boy looked and there stood baby, his cap pushed over and his hands crossed behind him. He didn't like it and he said, "stop mocking me," and gave the wee one a punch that nearly upset him. Of course, baby-like, he screamed and struck back.

"Didn't I tell you that you were making baby," said mama. "Try the other way and see how it will work. Go and kiss him."

He obeyed, and instantly there was a change in the mood of the little imitator. He was all smiles now and ready for a romp.

"Don't lets make any more naughty into baby Paul," said the little brother, and Paul agreed.

I do not know who wrote the story, but it will help you to understand just what I mean, and also to vow, the Lord helping you, that "you will make no more naughty into people," but that instead, you will by your walk and conversation try to lead them to Christ. Resolve that you will do nothing no matter how innocent it may seem, that will lead others away from God. To you there may seem no harm in going to the picture show, to the theatre, and to the dance, and in playing cards in your homes, and in the homes of your friends, or in even furnishing the music for those who "trip the light fantastic toe." You do not see how the doing of these things can possibly undermine your moral and religious character, yet it will. Before you are aware you will choose to go to these places, instead of to the sacred place of prayer, and so strongly will you be drawn by their alluring pleasures, that no pleading, no warning will turn your steps aside. You have been caught like a bird in a snare, and with broken wing, "can never soar so high again."

In going to these plays, you have been "making yourselves," and the making has not been such as God will approve. You have been molding yourselves after the fashion of this present evil world, instead of conforming yourselves to the image of Christ. You have spotted your garments with the world; you have become "lovers of pleasure more than love of God." And that is not the worst of it. While you have been "making yourselves" you have been making others, and in a way that you can never undo. When you first stood up and confessed your faith in the gospel and in Jesus as your Savior, and was baptized into his name, your unbelieving comrades though there was something in your profession, and secretly wished that they too were followers of Jesus. And they might have been had you been faithful to your vows. How inexpressibly sad that "might have been." Oh! but it is a terrible thing to murder a human soul! I put it strongly because I want you to see just the results to which your participation in these amusements may lead. Your worldly companions have been watching you and have concluded there is no saving power in the gospel, you being in no wise different from them; and young boys and girls seeing you go to these places, think if a professed Christian can go, it is alright for them to follow your example. And so many sweet innocent girls fall by attending the picture show, the dance, the theatre! How thankful to God I am that I had no hand in causing the fall, the wretched lives and the violent deaths of some of my young friends, by influencing them to take part in these amusements. I should feel like a murderer, if I had.

And not only are young girls in danger, but beautiful, manly boys as well. Will you deliberately choose to lead these to ruin? You cannot live to yourself, nor die to yourself; it is impossible. Many a young boy is lead into crime by seeing an exciting picture show, or by hearing a robber story told on the stage.

I am so glad that God kept me from taking part in any of these amusements, and that I have used my influence in holding dear, young Christian girls back from doing so. I did not even take part in the kissing plays that followed the quiltings and paving bees—not after Mr. McLellan, a valued friend of my father's told his daughter and myself what he thought of young girls who would allow any young man to kiss them, much less every young man at a party. There should be no personal contact between man and woman, if the priceless jewel of purity is to be kept unsullied. Theis is not the case in the dance.

And another plea—though lower than those I have been making—can be urged against taking part in worldly amusements. It is a waste of money that belongs to the Lord and also a waste of time. What do you learn? In what way are you profited? The picture show might teach many profitable lessons, but it seldom does.

You must "watch." How can you when intoxicated by pleasure. Yet God commands you to watch, and you cannot shirk the duty.

Horatious Bonar, of Scotland, talks of the church, in this wise. "Men ask her," he says, "Why stand ye gazing into heaven?" Her reply is: "I am watching." Men think it strange that she runs not with them to the same extent of riot. She tells them, "I am watching." They ask her to come forth and join their gayety; to come forth and sing their songs; to come forth and taste their pleasures, that thus they may teach her to forget her sorrows. She refuses, saying, "I dare not; I am watching." The scoffer mocks her, and says, "Where is the promise of his coming?" She heeds not but continues watching, and clasps her hope more firmly."

And this must be your tttitude, my dear young friends, if you want a place in the kingdom. Any day now our Lord may come. Where do you want him to find you?

WHAT MAKES A MAN A FRIEND AND FOLLOWER OF JESUS CHRIST

Who so competent to settle such a question as Christ himself? And he says, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." "Whatsoever shall do the will of my Father who in heaven, the same is my brother and sister and mother." He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter the Kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven."

Now where shall we look for the practical reality corresponding to these statements? The commandments of Christ—who begins to try to live according to them? Is it the Christian nations who are ready for a pretext that may serve as ground on which to massacre half-civilized communities, and annex their territory, and who are instantly up in arms to avenge an imaginary insult? Is it the Christian merchant or tradesman whose one great aim in life is to amass a fortune? Is it the Christian statesman who, on entering upon his parliamentary duties, swears himself in? It is clearly useless to extend inquiries like these. We must look elsewhere for something that bears any resemblance to the varied forms of obedience which Christ enjoined. The divine reality is only to be found in those persons (by whatever name they may be called) who are daily endeavoring to carry out his precepts in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation. These recognize the fact that Christ's friends are those only who make his revealed will the standard of their behavior and who do what he has told them. Anything outside of this simple and reasonable definition is also outside of the circle of his recognition and is not Christianity, however pompously, it may put forth its claim to be so considered, and however swiftly learning, and rank, and station, and wealth, and numbers may rush to the support of its false and baseless pretentions. Selected by Mrs. H. E. Russell.

NOTICE TO INDIANA BRETHREN

The brethren of the several churches of God in Indiana are called to meet in quarterly conference at Plymouth, Ind., March 31st to April 2d. Important business will be transacted at this meeting. The new Constitution proposed at Argos last August will be brought up for final action. A copy of the proposed Constitution will be sent to the churches that they may go over it carefully.

Bro. J. H. Anderson has been engaged to speak for us at this time, and we look forward to a good meeting. May the Lord add his blessing.

FLOYD STILSON, President.
FLORA H. PRIOR, Secretary.

IMAGINATION AND SYMPATHY

It takes imagination to realize vividly anything outside of our own consciousness, but directly we have this keen realization of another's condition we are in some sort of sympathy with him. Who would tread upon a worm or wantonly crush a butterfly or kick a dog if he were vividly realizing the pain he was inflicting? And, still more, who would wound a fellow being by word or deed or look, who would oppress the poor, cheat the ignorant, or despise the feeble if the distress they created was ever present before them? So true is it that "Evil is wrought by want of thought as well as want of heart."

Good manners must have a solid foundation in kindness and self-control. To be genuine, they must be the fruit of sincereity and good feeling; and their exercise must be in conformity with the working of these qualities in the heart. No art can successfully counterfeit true elegance of manners and deportment. To be real, they must have roots deep below the surface in the soul and heart.

EDITORIAL

"I am with you" is a divine promise having a threefold application: He is with us to lead the way; he is beside us to share our burden; and he is behind us to follow up our work. His presence covers the past, the present and the future.

CRITIQUE ON THE RESURRECTION

In the Advocate of February, 1916, the editor, A. R. Zilmer says: "'Shall come forth' (John 5:29). No amount of argumentation can change the force of this testimony. 'Coming forth,' in this passage, is one thing; resurrection, whether of life' or 'of damnation,' is another.'"

In The Restitution of September 28, 1915, page 9, the reader will find a refutation of above claim. We here repeat substantially the arguments then presented, arguments Editor Zilmer has not and can not answer.

The Greek Word "Nekros" Means a Corpse

Are we purblind because we see corpses in the words "the dead?" Our orthodox friends have a more extended vision, we admit, for in this phrase they see immortal souls, deathless spirits, heaven, hell, etc. Now the Greek word translated "the dead" in the text he quotes (1 Cor. 15:52; Rev. 20:12) is nekros, and signifies primarily a dead body. It is so used throughout the New Testament, except on some rare occasions where it is used in a secondary or figurative sense for the dead in sin (Matt. 8:22; Lk. 15:24). Its use in this sense is always indicated by the context; for the phrase is applied in every instance to persons known to be possessed of physical life. But when not thus used it signifies a dead body, or, to use the word of our fellow-editor's choice, "a corpse." The senses Liddell and Scott's Dictionary give for "the dead," nekros, are: "1, A dead body, a corpse; 2, a dead man as opposed to one alive." It gives no other sense for the word used as a noun.

When we read, "The dead shall be raised incorruptible" (1 Cor. 15:52), we read that "the dead" (nekros), "a dead body, a corpse, a dead man, as opposed to one alive," shall be raised from the dead. Along with our orthodox friends, Editor Zilmer sees much more; he sees nobody dead, he sees a vast through of living people! Liddell and Scott say that nekros means "a dead man as opposed to one alive." If then "the dead" means the living, the living must mean the dead. Therefore the living are the dead; the dead are the living! Literary somersaults like these are close approximations to orthodox sophisms.

Resurrection of the Dead is Not the Immortalization of the Living

"'Coming forth,' in this passage, is one thing; resurrection, whether 'of life' or 'of damnation,' is another," says Editor Zilmer. In other words, "the dead" first emerge; then later somewhere, somehow, living men are "raised incorruptible," if righteous; or they are "raised mortal," if wicked. In both cases emergence is one thing, resurrection quite another! "The dead raised incorruptible" means that the living are raised incorruptible! "How say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead" (1 Cor. 15:13)." If "the dead" here means the living after they have emerged from the tomb, and "resurrection" their immortalization subsequently, you make out that while the Corinthians allowed that the saints would all emerge, they denied their change to immortality afterwards; and in the case of the wicked all agreed they would emerge, but some denied that they would be "raised" afterwards; that is, they would never suffer "damnation!" For the wicked to be damned after they emerge from the grave is for them to be raised from the dead! To be sent into outer darkness, to reap corruption, to die the second death, to go back to the grave forever, is for them to be raised from the dead! What snags, and snarls, and knots of theology are these! Again and again in 1 Cor. 15 Paul talks about "the resurrection of the dead;" but if coming forth from the grave is one thing, as your editor affirms, "and the resurrection, either of life or damnation, to which they come forth, quite another," there is no resurrection, there can be no resurrection of the dead." The dead can only emerge; the living can only be raised from the dead! When Paul affirmed there shall be a "resurrection of the dead," he played havoc with Editor Zilmer's fine-spun theory of emergence versus resurrection. His theory necessitates a new translation of the Bible, particularly 1 Cor. 15. "The dead shall be raised incorruptible," "The resurrection of the dead," and all similar expressions, must be amended to read: "The living shall be raised incorruptible," "The living shall be raised," etc. "If the dead rise not" will have to be revised to read, "If the living rise not, then is not Christ immortalized" (1 Cor. 15:5). We might go on at great length pointing out Paul's errors and blunders, as Editor Zilmer's theory requires, but we need not, as he will be able to detect them for himself.

Meaning of "Anastasis" and "Egiro," Greek Words Translated "Resurrection" and "Raised"

The word "resurrection" occurs in the New Testament more than forty times. It is a translation of the Greek word Anastasis. Ana means a "motion upward," and stasis means "a standing, the posture of standing." The compound word Anastasis therefore signifies "a making to stand, awakening, a restoration (of the dead), a making to rise and leave their place." The word "raised" is a translation of the Greek word Egiro. This word means "to awaken, wake up, stir, excite, to get up from bed, rise." Egiro, when applied to dead saints, simply rouses them from death to life; and Anastasis stands them upon their feet. Editor Zilmer's conceptions about the resurrection form no part of the meaning of these words.

"Coming Forth" is Resurrection

Like Russellites, Christadelphians are fond of ingenious and artificial distinctions. Since the close of the civil war they have been saying that "coming forth" is one thing and "resurrection" is another. They have repeated this nonsense till they think it is good sense. When we quote the words of Christ, "Thy brother shall rise again" (John 11:23), they promptly tell us "rising" is not resurrection. But, much to their confusion, we have in the 11th chapter of John a divine explanation of what "rising" means. Did Lazarus first emerge from the grave, and then afterward was he raised from the dead? Christ stood beside the grave; the stone was rolled away and the Master said in a loud voice, "Lazarus, come forth. And he that was dead came forth" (John 11.43). "Hold!" say a chorus of voices, "Coming forth is one thing; resurrection, another." These voices have said a thousand times twice told, "Lazarus was not raised from the dead; he only 'came forth.'" "He emerged, but was not raised from the dead," they repeat. But God says Lazarus was raised from the dead. "He that believeth not God hath made hi ma liar" (1 John 5:10). We give God's testimony on the subject in dispute, and leave it with the reader without comment.

Christadelphians Say Lazarus Only Emerged; God Says He Was Raised from the Dead

"Then Jesus six days before the Passover came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead" (John 12:1).

"Much people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there; and they came not for Jesus' sake only, but that they might see Lazarus also, WMOM HE HAD RAISED FROM THE DEAD" (John 12:9).

IF YOU LOVE THE TRUTH, READ THIS

Dear Brothers and Sisters who believe that Jesus is the begotten son of God, greeting: Did you notice Bro. Huggins' statement in last number of our paper, that "we lost about fifty subscribers last year because we advocated the Sonship of Christ as an essential article of faith." I am glad Bro. Huggins mentioned the matter. It seems to me that we can not afford to let our paper suffer for having done its duty. "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof," therefore if we have any money in our pockets it belongs to the Lord. Now, brethren, if one hundred of us who believe and love the grand old truth Jesus Christ is literally and actually the Son of God will send the dear old paper to a friend for six months the damage to our paper will be repaired, and who may say how many will come to a knowledge of the truth among those hundred friends? If the good seed falls into just one good and honest heart we will be amply repaid. If a dozen or more, it would be joy unspeakable. Now dear ones, individually this is only a trifle. There are few who can not spare so small a sum. I am sending my new subscriber herewith, and I ask each one of you to join me in helping to carry this burden. Surely it is our "reasonable service," and God, who does so much for us, has a right to expect so small a sacrifice from us. Don't put it off until next week. Do it now, and God will add his blessing.

S. H. THOMAS.

Editorial Comments

Since penning the editorial referred to by Bro. Thomas the stockholders of The Restitution have held their annual meeting, and from the Treasurer's report it appears that the deficit is much larger than we had anticipated. The Restitution has been published at a loss ever since we have been editor, but the deficit has been paid by a few liberal-hearted brethren. Iniquity abounds, and the love of many has waxed cold. Unitarianism has been doing its deadly work, and this has cut off considerable support, until now the every existence of The Restitution seems threatened. The Lord is standing at the door, we hear his steps in the signs of the times as he approaches. Can the brotherhood afford to let The Restitution die at the very threshold of his coming? Enchanting will be the King in his beauty when he comes, rapturous the bliss of the redeemed, if only we are found doing our duty when he appars. On an average we toil two days per week doing duties for The Restitution, and for this service we neither expect nor want recompense in money. The world loves its own, and pays its own with a liberal heart. When the world drinks wine, it pays the price; when it plays cards, it pays; when it dances, it pays; when it takes a notion to be religious, it pays; the world pays liberally and lavishdly for its own fun and pleasure, religion, every thing; but the truth has to skimp, coax and even beg for a living! The gospel of the Kingdom is supported with a parsimony that would make the world blush with shame! Brethren and sisters, let us shake off our indifference and covetousness. Bro. Thomas takes the lead in the right course; let us follow in his steps. We do not ask for a large donation from some rich brother, but we do ask that every brother and sister who can to double their subscription, which would double our subscription list, double our present insufficient income, place the truth before hundreds of friends, and introduce the gospel into hundreds and thousands of new homes. "Whatever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men" (Col. 3:23).

COMMUNICATIONS

Bro. Huggins:

I drop you these lines that you may know how thankful I am to you for sending me The Restitution. It is a welcome visitor to me. I get sound doctrine when I read its pages. May God give you health and all the grand old soldiers of the Cross who write for its pages to warn the people of a coming judgment. The time is short. The hands on the old time clock have moved up to the restitution hour. The white horse and his rider is coming. God bless you.

Your brother. JOHN WEEKS.

Dear Restitution:

My subscription for The Restitution is expired, but I can't get along without it. It has been a visitor to my family for over twenty-five years, and always comes laden with something good from the dear ones of like precious faith. It lifts the cloud and lets the light shine from faith to faith, and it tells of the old ones that have ended their fight of faith and of the new ones that have begun a new life in Christ. Enclosed is my subscription, and also for a friend.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed you will find money order. I am very sorry I neglected it so long, and hope you will pardon me for the delay. I have enjoyed the paper and so don't mind the money, but sorry to have neglected it and put you to the trouble of sending a bill.

SOME DANCE QUESTIONS

The following questions are submitted in Christian love to "A Sister." May God add his blessing, and gently guide her back from the dangerous ground on which she stands to the solid foundation of apostolic faith and practice. I trust the dear "sister" and all others who agree with her will understand that it is not they whom I attack, but rather the evil which they advocate. An enemy which threatens their peace of mind in this age, and their hope of life in the age to come.

If public balls and dances are not evil why should the principle Christian denominations of the world, except the Catholic, pronounce them so and prohibit their members from frequenting such places?

Is not the fact that the filthy and corrupt old harlot of Rome permits and encourages the most extravagant and immoral modern dances among its members, and allows even her priests to freely engage in the same pretty good evidence that it is an evil practice?

Did you ever know of any good, pure or godly thought or purpose to originate in a ballroom or dance hall?

I am firmly convinced that no fond mother ever tucked her little ones in bed, and after kneeling down and asking her heavenly Father to shield and protect them from temptation and all evil, and keep them pure and spotless from the filth of the world, and then spent the night at a dance at a dance hall. Try it once, my darling sisters, and see if you can do it!

If a man of God should go to a modern dance hall, and when the unholy revel is at its height should attemp to tell them of the love of Jesus, and preach to them the gospel of Christ, what do you think would happen to him?

If when our sister is preparing to attend the dance the Lord should come to her door, as he once did to Mary and Martha, and ask to stay over night with her, would our sister invite him to go with her to the ball? And if she should, I wonder if he would go?

If love of exercise be the only motive which prompts men and women to meet and dance all night, as dancers so loudly and vehemently affirm, will our sister please explain why men so seldom choose other men as partners? No matter how dearly a boy may love his chum or comrade he never, never chooses him as a partner in a dance. Not if there is a girl present. Will "Sister" tell us why?

It is written. "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." Dear sister, from the knowledge which your experience in public balls and dance halls has given you, do you really think that the scenes witnessed, the passions excited and the conversation usually heard at such places would in any way glorify the name of God? If not, then it is no place for God's people?

Did you ever know a man of whom it could be truthfully said: "He is a good man, approved of God; he reads often his word, and governs and molds his life by its teaching, and in his house is daily heard the voice of thanksgiving and prayer. He also attends regularly all public dances and balls in the neighborhood. He takes an active interest in them, supporting and encouraging such pastimes by his presence and financial support." Never knew such a man, did you, sister? Why? Because good and evil can not walk hand in hand together. Oil and water will not mix.

Now let us view an unthinkable and impossible pen picture. Our Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, and his apostles, in a modern dance hall, each with a pretty girl in his arms, going through the fancy steps of a modern dance! We shudder at the picture! Now let us substitute satan, and some of his imps for Christ and his saints, and instantly the picture becomes, in a certain sense, true and reasonable, and a wholesome lesson to those who frequent such places.

In all my long life I have never met a sister who loved the word of God, and who went to it often for wisdom and guidance, and who was often seen at the dance hall.

It has been truthfully said: "I do not know a good or honorable thing that can be said of the public dance hall. There is two sides to almost every question, but not to this." It aims at virtue, purity and honor in men, and all that is sweet, beautiful and lovable in woman. They are recruiting stations for the gutter and the underworld of our great cities. They are training schools of vice for our boys and pits of eternal death and destruction for our girls. A saloon is an unspeakable evil in any community, but the dance hall is a greater evil. Of what use is the Christian faith if it be not strong enough to keep us clean from such filth?

BATTLE OF ARMAGEDDON

The Sign of the Times

At the present time there is a great deal said about the battle of the great day of God Almighty (Rev. 16:14). At what time shall it take place? is it before or after the coming of the Lord? Jesus said: "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only." He also tells us what kind of a time it will be; he tells us to "watch." To the careless worldling, nothing unusual appears. For as in the days before the flood, they "were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away. So shall also the coming of the Son of Man be."

But ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief. As we follow the gleams of the great prophetic search light, can we see any signs of the approach of that great day?

First, Paul says, "That day shall not come except there came a falling away first." Do you see that being fulfilled? Do men turn away their ears from the truth and turn unto fables? Do you see men falling away from the service of God, and following after pleasures of the world?

Then after the falling away we may look for "The spirits of devils, working miracles which go forth unto the kings o fthe earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of the great day of God Almighty. Next verse in connection is the timely warning: 'Behold, I come as a thief: blessed is he that watcheth lest he walk naked and they see his shame."

For the mystery of iniquity doth already work, only he who now letteth will let until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming. Even him whose coming is after the working of satan with all power and signs, and lying wonders." Must we look for some supernatural devils or adversaries to come to our earth, from some far-off abode, to work miracles with all power and signs and lying wonders, to embolden the kings of the earth to gather for battle? or must we look among the works of men of corrupt minds, who have invented so many wonderful means of death and destruction? Are not the machine guns, the armored autos, the treacherous submarines, searching the sea for unsuspecting victims, the flying machines soaring the heavens, raining down from above missiles of death and destruction, and the wireless by which the doings of all these death dealing inventions can be extolled and abetted by the kings securely housed in their palace—are not all these inventions enough to embolden all the kings of the earth to come to battle, some through fear of destruction, others in hope of victory?

But all these things look differently to those who know these wonders to be "lying wonders," and that there is no victory in them, or by them. They all shall be destroyed by the spirit of his mouth, and destroyed by the brightness of his coming. The brightness of that glorious coming is that for which we are watching, for when we are told of the battle of the great day, we are told in the same connection: "Behold, I come as a thief: blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and they see his shame." The constant warning is "watch." Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man."

"But if the evil servant shall say in his heart, my Lord delayeth his coming, and shall begin to smite his fellow servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken; the Lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrits—there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. But ye brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief." "Ye are the children of light." "Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness."

The admonition to the beloved is: "Watch"; "Beware"; "Take heed, lest ye fall"; "Ye are the children of light." Therefore let us not sleep, as do others, but let us watch and be sober. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore when we see the kings of the whole earth gathering together for battle, it behooves us to "watch." "Lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh."

Remarks

Having finished my meeting at Holbrook. I was preparing to go to Moorefield when I received a message to go to Palmer to preach a funeral sermon. While so close to home, and sickness being in my family, I came home for a few days rest. As I had been exposed to the grippe since October nearly every day, I finally took it, and remained at home for three weeks. I then visited the brethren at Blair and Kennard, where we always have a very enjoyable visit. I was disappointed to be called away from Palmer so soon, as I had not met with them since conference, and they are a loyal set of brethren. I am now engaged in a very interesting meeting at Avery, a suburb of South Omaha. The result we will tell next month.

OBITUARIES

A. N. Whelchel

Albert Newton Whelchel was born August 3, 1864, in Hamilton County, Indiana. He was the son of Abraham and Mary A. Whelchel, and one of a family of twelve children. He was united in marriage to Rosa Young December 8, 1892, and became the father of seven children, namely: an infant Eelva, Agnes, William, Merl, Neva and Lois. The infant and Merl have preceded him in death.

He heard the gospel message and obeyed it in baptism December 23, 1897, administered by Bro. J. F. Wagoner, and united with the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. He has ever lived faithful to the gospel and his profession. He had been sick for a year and confined to his bed for fourteen weeks, but his faith in God had worked in him that Christian virtue, patience, that enabled him to endure his suffering without complaint. Such a life is the greatest eulogy that can be pronounced in his remembrance.

He passed from life February 19, 1916, aged 51 years, 6 months and 16 days. He leaves his beloved companion and five children to endure the loss of a faithful husband and a loving father. The community suffers the loss of a useful citizen and a good neighbor.

Funeral services were held from the United Brethren Church near Fortville, Ind., February 22, 1916, at 2 o'clock p. m., conducted by the writer, and burial was made in the Kinniman Cemetery, where Bro. Whelchel rests in waiting for the coming of Christ and his resurrection.

D. E. VAN VACTOR.

Isaac J. McLeland

Isaac James McLeland was born in Henry County, Ind., October 15, 1838, and died February 23, 1916, aged 77 years, 4 months and 8 days. In September he came to Clinton County with his parents, where he has since resided. He was united in marriage to Nancy Ann Menela in 1860, and became the father of three children, Dora F., Eva B. and Mary A. His wife died in 1875, and his daughter Eva B., on October 10, 1891. He was again married to Lucy J. Hinesley in 1887. To this union were born two children, James R. and Lucy M. These children and his two daughters, now Mrs. Dora F. Motts, and Mrs. Mary A. Motts survive him. They were all with him in his last illness, and did all that kind hands could do to alleviate the sufferings and administer to the needs of a kind and loving father. He had been in poor health for two years and had undergone a surgical operation without much relief. During the last six months he suffered severely, but came to the end peacefully. His last companion had preceded him in death in 1912.

On hearing the gospel message many years ago he yielded himself to the Savior in that form of doctrine once delivered to us, and was buried with Christ in baptism and united with the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith and has lived a life consistent with his profession, and died in full faith of the saving grace of his Lord and Savior, Jesus the Christ. Bro. McLeland has lived a long and useful life, and was held in high esteem by all who knew him, and the good he did will live for generations to come.

Funeral services were held from the late residence four miles north from Circleville, Saturday, February 26, 1916, at 11 o'clock a. m., conducted by the writer, and our beloved brother was laid to rest to await the coming of Jesus and the resurrection of the just. D. E. VAN VACTOR.

BAD TEMPER

Many people consider that "bad temper" is entirely voluntary on the part of the person who displays it. As a matter of fact, it is often to a very great extent involuntary, and no one is more angry at it than the bad-tempered person himself. Of course every one, whether he is born with a bad temper or has acquired one from habit, or has been visited with one as the result of disease or injury, should at least try to control it. But his friends should also bear in mind that bad temper may be, and often is, an affliction to be sympathised with, not an offence to be punished.

It is a great mistake, on going to settle in a new place, whether for a long or short period, to rush too suddenly into people's arms; it is so easy to take people up, and so very difficult to drop them. In fact, very many people will not be dropped; they make themselves so actively disagreeable if you try to avoid their society that you must perforce keep up a show of friendship, if nothing more; if they think there is anything to be gained by keeping up your acquaintance they will take care you do not shun them.

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1862

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21, Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:18, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the Saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:25, 26); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:11-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). THE BROKEN BRANCHES

Rom. 11:17-24.

Scattered and torn and broken,
  God's people are sadly waiting,
Waiting the longed-for token
  Of their promised gathering.

They, the true branches, withered,
  Lie prone in the blistering sun,
Like dried grass to be gathered
  When the husbandman's day is done.

But God is able to save
  And lovingly graft them again
Into the vine that once gave
  To them the rich floodings of life.

God's promises all are sure,
  Fulfillment is only delayed;
His purposes all are pure,
  And perfect the plan he has made.

In wrath they were torn and shattered,
  In love they'll be brought back again;
Their foes will then be scattered,
  And Messiah commence his reign.

J. J. BRONSON.

"THE TIME SHALL BE NO LONGER DELAYED"

By S. Roxana Wince

These are the words of the angels' oath as given in the Diaglott translation of Rev. 10:6. The common version reads, "Time shall be no longer," as if all measurement of passing days and months and years were to cease and probation end with the end of time.

And that is just what the common reader grasps as the meaning of the words. But manifestly this can not be, for is not the seed of David "to endure forever and his throne as the days of heaven?" Are they not to endure forever as the sun, and to be established forever as the moon? Not until God's covenant of the day and his covenant of the night can be broken will there cease to be day and night in their season. God expressly declares that "summer and winter and day and night shall not cease." How can they with earth, sun, moon and stars moving on forever, and measuring off days and months and years just as they do now? Men forget that the Book of Revelations tells us in symbols just what was going to happen beyond the Revelator's time. The rainbow angel was a symbol of the Reformation. His cry, "The time shall be no longer (delayed)" was the very message the Reformers gave to the world. The prevalent idea that the consummation was near at hand, perhaps not more than twenty years off, remained with Luther "even to his dying hour, and was a perpetual topic of consolation, encouragement and hope."

Melancthon held the same view. "He was persuaded alike from Daniel and St. Paul that the Reformation and protest against the papal anti-Christ, just accomplished through the light of the gospel, was the consumption and conviction of that enemy, predicted as to occur just before his final destruction at Christ's coming."

Bishop Latimer said, quoting from Paul: "The Lord will not come till the swerving from the faith cometh (2 Thess. 2:3), which thing is already done and past. Anti-Christ is known through all the world, wherefore the day is not far off." It was the universal view.

Luther did not believe that "he, nor any man, nor an angel from heaven, could fix the day or hour," but he believed, nevertheless, that all the signs which are to preced the last day had already happened." "The gospel," he said, "has been preached throughout the world; the child of perdition is revealed and destroyed in the hearts of many; the kingdom of Rome is declining to its fall; all the elements and creatures are in commotion and declining; ther is no longer any love or fidelity on earth. And Christ, come when he may, will find but a small flock of believers; excess in eating and drinking; the practice of usury, anxious cares, covetousness, extravagance in dress and building, and all manner of irregularity. Verily, wherefore, I conceive that the signs preceding the last day have all been fulfilled."

What was this but saying, "The time shall be no longer (delayed)?" Nothing could be clearer. And if the reader is not satisfied that this is the true explanation let him note that as the angel was clothed with a cloud, so a cloud of witnesses can be found, all holding that "Jesus would return and that with expedition." This was the hope of John Knox, who died just ten years after Melancthon. It was the hope of Calvin, who said: "Christ is our head, whose kingdom and glory have not yet appeared. If the members were to go before their Head the order of things would be inverted and preposterous, but we shall follow our Prince then, when he shall come in the glory of the Father and sit upon the throne of his majesty." He declared that "Scripture delays the crown of glory until the advent of Jesus." Latimer, who was burned at the stake before the death of Melancthon, said: "The end of all things draweth very near." Cranmer, Usher, Mede, Mason, Taylor, Gale and Burnet all held to the same blessed hope, that of the near coming of Christ and of the literal resurrection of the dead and of the receiving of the reward at his coming. It is enough—what need we for further witnesses?"

The very appearance of the angel symbolizes both the epoch in which and the people through whom the message would come. The rainbow—that God's new covenant of hope, through a priest, "made after the power of an endless life," would be part of the proclamation; "his face as the sun and his feet as pillars of fire," that it would be an epoch of light, all glorious light; the open book in his hand, that these messeengers would have the Bible, translated into the language of the people, so that all might read and understand.

"Greece, at the time of the Renaissance, rose from the grave with the New Testament in her hand." Then Gutenburg of Mentz invented movable types, and the first accomplished work of the printing press was the printing of the Bible in the Latin vulgate," either in 1450 or 1455.

Luther discovered one of these Bibles, left the Church of Rome and translated the entire Scriptures from the Greek and Hebrew between the years 1522 and 1532, though the Germans already had a version, made by some unknown person in 1466. Tyndale's translation of the New Testament was printed at Antwerp about the year 1526, his translation of the Old Testament at a later date. A French translation was made by Robert Peter Oliveton and John Calvin, which was printed between the years 1535 and 1540. Other translations followed. The symbol had found fulfillment. The little book was open.

The fulfillment of the vision was to occur under the sixth trumpet, and it was under this trumpet that the Reformers lived. They knew there was only one more trumpet to blow until "the mystery of God would be finished," and that it would be "when the seventh angel shall begin to sound." that the consummation would come. No wonder they wrote in perfect ecstasy about the coming of the Lord. No wonder they kept sounding out the angels' oath-given message that "time should be no longer delay." They recognized in Lutner's defiant thrusts at the pope "the cry with a loud voice as when a lion roareth," and the seven thunders that followed the cry as the bulls and anathemas of the popes; but they did not seem to realize that there would be a "tarrying time," during which "the little book"—the prophecies of John and other prophecies—would again be made prominent by preaching to "many peoples and nations and tongues and kings," as they actually have in these latter days. The "Rev." John Fletcher, who was born in Switzerland in 1729 and died in 1789, being the only one whom I have found to note the fact that "more books had been written on the prophecies in the past hundred years than had ever been known before." How many have been wirtten since! How many thousands of sermons have been preached! How many articles have been published in our papers and in tracts, scattered like autumn leaves!

How can we doubt that we are very near the time when our Lord will appear? My dear preaching brethren, I say unto you, as Hugh McNeile said in addressing an assemblage of ministers: "Watch, preach the coming of Jesus: I charge you, in the name of our coming Master, preach the coming of Jesus: solemnly, affectionately in the name of God, I charge you, preach the coming of Jesus!" The time is almost here. There can be no longer delay.

JERUSALEM

George B. Alldridge

"And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled" (Luke 21:24). David says, "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God" (Psa. 14:1.

It is beyond the comprehension of my mind to understand how any man can deny a belief in God if he has any knowledge of Jewish history. God's plan for the salvation of the human race centers in the Jew.

London is the personification of the British Empire, Washington of the United, Berlin of the whole German confederation, Paris is the life center of France, Rome the heart of Italy, etc. To the Jew Jerusalem means all this and much more; it means not only salvation to his nation, but also the nations of the whole world.

In Micah 3:12 we read: "Therefore shall Zion for your sake be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest." In the next chapter Micah's prophetic eye sees its restoration: "But in the last days it shall come to pass that the mountain if the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it" (Micah 4:1). God declares that he is God, and that there is none like him, for he has declared the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, "My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure" (Isa. 46:10).

Moses had an insight into what God proposed to visit upon his people: "The sword without and terror within shall destroy both the young man and the virgin, the suckling also with the man of gray hairs." I said, I would scatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to cease from among men" (Deut. 32:25, 26). In the twenty-ninth verse Moses says: "O that they were wise, that they understood this that they would consider their latter end." Verse 43 is striking: "Rejoice, O ye nations, his people; for he will avenge the blood of his servants and will render vengeance to his adversaries, and will be merciful unto his land and to his people."

If history confirms or verifies the truths stated by God in his written word, the Bible, concerning this wonderful city of Jerusalem, how it should strengthen our faith in the soon fulfillment of the prophecies relating to its restoration, life and power! "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen" (Heb. 11:1).

Jerusalem at the present time is really the goal, the prize, all the nations involved in this great war are now struggling for. Who will next occupy it? This is the question uppermost in the minds of all Bible students. Will history repeat itself by adding one more to its long list of sieges? In the past it is notable for the number of its sieges.

The tribe of Judah was the first to destroy it by fire, and its final destruction by Titus was foretold by Christ (Matt. 24:12; Luke 21:20). Fifteen centuries elapsed between its first and last desolation; it was seventeen times besieged, and twice consumed by fire. In this respect it stands without a parallel in any city, ancient or modern.

The Jebusites held the city during the judges and the reign of Saul until it was conquered by David (1046 B. C.), who erected a palace for himself. The king of Phoenicia assisted him with men and materials. Mount Zion then became the sanctuary of the nation. Solomon built the temple, his palace and the wall of Jerusalem. In the reign of Rehoboan (970 B. C.) Mishak, king of Egypt, invaded Judah, and Ferah, king of Ethiopia, in the reign of Asa (940 B. C.) The Phillistines and Arabians plundered the palace after Jehoram's reign. The Syrian invasion broke out in the reign of Ahaz (740 B. C.).

When Hezekiah began to reign he removed the idols erected to Baal, destroyed the brazen serpent of Moses, and cast the fragments into the valley of Kedron (724 B. C.) Nebuchadnezzar took Jerusalem by might in the reign of Zedekiah, and consumed it by fire (586 B. C.). The land was practically deserted, and the Jews taken into Babylon. The spot was still the center of hope and was held sacred by the Jews. By the decree of Cyrus the temple was rebuilt (516 B. C.). Alexander the Great succeeded to the throne of Macedon, defeated Darius, and became master of Asia Minor. He marched into Judea to inflict some punishment on the Jews. The high priest, Jaddus, in his pontifical robes, at the head of the priests and people, dressed in white, met the conqueror at the gates of the city, who saluted Jaddus with religious veneration. As he entered the temple sacrifices were offered up to God. The high priest showed him the prophecies of Daniel, which predicted the overthrow of Persia by a Grecian king. At his departure he exempted the Jews from tribute in the Sabbatical year.

Ptolemy took Jerusalem 320 B. C. Simon the Just repaired the temple, and peaceful times marked the reigns of succeeding monarchs until 217 B. C. The city became a prey to contending parties, and was under the rule of the Macedonians up to 172 B. C. Pompey took the temple in the year 40 B. C. Herod returned from Rome and rebuilt the temple 19 B. C.

Jerusalem was a Roman province 13 B. C. Christ was in the temple in the year 18 A. D., at the Passover 33 A. D. He was crucified and rose from the dead. Paul was converted 43 A. D. James was murdered and Peter imprisoned; the Jew and Romans were in conflict, which ended in the destruction of the city by Titus 76 A. D. For about fifty years it disappeared from history; in the reign of Adrian it emerged from its obscurity. After many changes, Jerusalem for eighty-eight years was in the hands of the Crusaders; in 1227 it was annexed to the kingdom of Sicily; in 1517 it was under the rule of the Ottoman Sultan, Selim I. The Pasha of Egypt took possession of it in 1802. In 1840, after the bombardment of Acre, it was restored to the Sultan, in whose hands it now remains.

What is the next event in the history of this wonderful city and land? We believe that all the glorious prophecies which refer to the re-establishing of the Jewish nation in Palestine is on the eve of fulfillment. "The Lord loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob. Glorious things are spoken of thee O city of God" (Ps. 87:2, 3). "Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before me" (Isa. 49:16). "For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth. And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all the kings thy glory; and thou shalt be called by a new name which the mouth of the Lord shall name. Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God. Thou shalt no more be termed forsaken; neither shall thy land any more be termed desolate; but thou shalt be called Hephzibah (my delight is in her), and thy land Beulah (married); for the Lord delighteth in thee, and thy land shall be married" (Isa. 62:1-4).

"And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem" (Isa. 2:3). See also Isa. 33:20; Mal. 3:4; Isa. 31:5; Jer. 30:18; Isa. 60:10, 11; 52:9, 10; Ezek. 48:35; Micah 4:2; Joel 3:20; Jer. 3:17; Psa. 132:13-17; Zac. 12:6; 8:22; 14:17; Matt. 2:6; Micah 5:2; Joel 2:16, 17.

GEMS OF TRUTH

In the beginning when God created the heavens and the earth—and all the animals, he caused it to be written, "Everything after its kind." And by way of emphasis "after its kind," is repeated seven times. And if we keep this truth in our mind when reading the word of truth, it will be a monitor pointing the way in which the truth will be found. For instance, when we read, "When the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them; the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown." Now if the "Sons of God" were angels—spirit beings, their offspring by their union with the daughters of men would only be half human—a mongrel race, contrary to the law, "Everything after its kind." The idea that spirit beings could co-habit and beget offspring by human beings is outlandish, and apocryphal in the extreme.

The same law of nature holds good in relation to our Lord Jesus Christ; first the natural, then the spiritual. When Adam transgressed the divine command, his nature was not changed; but his environment was changed, and he was denied access to the tree of life. But the second Adam in the same nature, by obedience, partook of the tree of life and he has attained to the divine nature, and is a pattern to be followed by all his brethren who aspire to be overcomers, and to sit with him on his throne.

In Gen. 8:20-22 another important truth is found. After Noah left the ark, we read: "And Noah built an altar unto the Lord; and took every clean beast, and of every clean fowl, and offered burnt offerings on the altar. And the Lord smelled a sweet savior; and the Lord said in his heart, I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake; for the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth; neither will I again smite every living thing as I have done. While the earth remaineth, seed time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease."

If we keep this utterance of God in our mind, it will free us from the almost universal error, that when Christ comes, every one, except his saints, will be destroyed—and the earth burned up. The holding of this cruel doctrine, casts a dark reflection upon its advocates. They even corrupt God's word, to establish their cruel, and unscriptural doctrines (Is. 2:1-5; Micah. 1:1-4).

Another bright gem is found in Gen. 22:15-18: "And the angel of the Lord called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time, and said, By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son: That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice."

This oath and promise of him that cannot lie, is not contingent upon anything that Abraham, or his seed may or may not do. It is the oathbound promise of the eternal God, who knows the end from the beginning, and with whom the past, the present, and the future, are one eternal now. Oh, how this good promise of our God should cause us to exalt and glorify His name! It is written: "Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and passeth by the transgression of the remnant of his heritage? He retaineth not his anger forever, because he delighteth in mercy. . . . Thou will perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old" (Micah. 7:18-20).

Again we read in Exodus 2:23: "And it came to pass in process of time, that the King of Egypt died: and the children of Israel sighed by reason of the boundage. . . . And God heard their groaning, and God remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob." In Exo. 3:2 we also read: "And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him (Moses) in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed." The burning bush—but not consumed—what a figure or symbol of Israel in affliction! And why are they not consumed? Because God is in the bush. For nearly two thousand years, Israel has been a burning bush, the fire hot past comparison, but the bush is not consumed. This is a great miracle, God's oath-bound promise is Israel's security that the bush will not be consumed. As it is written: "Though I make a full end of all nations . . . . yet will I not make a full end of thee." Jew and Gentile are interested in this oath-bound promise. No man can preach the gospel in its entirety, if he omits the blessing of the nations.

THE BURSTING BUDS

How old are you, reader? Sixty-five years? Not a very long time, is it, and yet I wonder if we fully realize how much that is wonderful and marvelops has happened in that short space! In our Lord's day men lighted their houses with a tallow dip, or candle. When you were born they did the same. No progression through all these centuries in the art of light, but in the space of one generation we have leaped from candle to kerosene, from kerosene to gas, from gas to acetyline, and from acetyline to electricity! We now turn night into day, and our lights illuminate an object at twenty-five miles, and may be seen for one hundred miles!

In our Savior's time the farmer reaped his grain with a sickle, gathering the grain in his hand and cutting it off a handful at a time, and placing it on the ground at his side in bundles to be bound. When you were born they did the same. No change or advance. Generation after generation used the same old sickle, until worn out, and it was then replaced by another exactly like it. Then came a wonderful instrument called a "cradle," with which one man could do the work of ten with sickles. Then, close upon the heels of the cradle came the old Johnson reaper, a machine drawn by horses, which cut the grain in a wide swath, laying it straight and true on a level surface called a "table," and a man riding behind raked it off in suitable bundles for binding. This was supposed to be the limit. Absolutely no room for improvement in harvesting. But, wonder of wonders, another machine quickly followed which raked off its own bundles, thus doing away with the rake-off man and requiring but one man, the driver, to operate it. When the first "self-raker" came to our neighborhood the farmers all turned out on a certain day to see it in operation, and after gazing in wonder for a time one old farmer said: "Well, by gum! Seems like they can do most anything these days. I wouldn't be a mite surprised to see a machine yet that will do the binding." And his neighbors laughed long and loud at such a foolish idea! Today not only that dream has been realized, but a modern harvester cuts, threshes and sacks the grain, leaving the sacks in piles on the field, ready to be hauled to market. All this in one short lifetime.

When you and I were boys, if we wanted to send a letter or message from New York to San Francisco it would require several weeks to accomplish it. Now we step up to the wall and say "Hello," and immediately the answer comes back "Hello!" Three thousand miles this little word has leaped—under sewers, over mountains, through the blistering heat of the alkali plains and the snow-capped peaks of the mighty Rockies ;through tunnels and across beautiful and fertile valleys, this little word has traveled, and the answer returned, in less than one second! Was there ever a greater miracle?

When you and I were boys, if we wished to cross the continent we must needs travel by stagecoach and other animal conveyances at great hardship and risk of life; only the most robust and strong could accomplish it. Today we step into a palace on wheels, don loose and comfortable clothing, lounge in easy and luxuriant chairs and couches, and with all the comforts of the richest home, servants to supply our every want, and in less than four days we are on the Pacific coast!

But space forbids mention in detail of modern wonders, of ocean ships so vast that one may carry in comfort the entire population of a large town and during the voyage provide them with all the comforts and even the luxuries of home, even to its printing office and daily papers taking the news of the world fresh from the air every morning as they speed across the ocean one thousand miles from land. If trouble or disaster overtakes them a call for help is sent out, and instantly sister ships for hundreds of miles in all directions are rushing to give aid. If the threatened disaster is averted the message is sent out and the sister ships return congratulations, and proceed on their way.

Nor may we more than mention the leaps and bounds of knowledge and discovery in the sciences and professions, of the increase of knowledge in the art of war, and the manufacture and use of engines of destruction. We sail and fight beneath the surface of the mighty deep; we walk upon its bottom and explore its secret places; we leap from its silent depths and launch sudden terror, death and destruction to our enemies; we mount on the wings of the wind and far above the clouds of heaven armies wage wars of selfish hate and extermination. We savagely tear and mangle our fellow-man, and our surgeons assemble the broken fragments of two, and of them make one living man; we rush here and there, swifter than the winds. Our "chariots" are mounted with flaming torches in this the day of preparation, and as they run the fir trees are terribly shaken. They rage and rush in the streets, and jostle against one another," and in the fearful wrecks many men are killed and mangled.

We turn our great glasses skyward and search out the mysteries of the heavens. We study the surface of the moon and stars. We make maps of them and all their mountains, valleys and water courses by name, while we dream of final communication with their possible inhabitants. And yet today, with all this vast knowledge, which has come to us in the short span of one generation, instead of bringing with it peace and happiness, we wrestle in bitter war, every man's fangs in the throat of a fellow-man, savagely tearing and rending each other as beasts of prey, plunging the world into depths of debt, famine, disease, sorrows and troubles beyond the mind of man to fathom or power of human arm to extricate. For six thousand years man has striven in vain to govern himself; and this war is the grand climax of all his efforts at self-government. Surely, the "buds are bursting," the day is dawning! Courage, my brother, my sister! The Lord is surely at hand! None so old or feeble but may hope to welcome in this life our dear Lord, and receive from him the promised crown of life and so never see death any more!

HARD-HEADED

"In understanding be men" (1 Cor. 14:20).

In some things we are to remain as children. We are not to grow away from their simplicity. Here the struggle is not to win new fields, but to keep hold of land originally possessed. In these things retention is our noblest conquest. "In malice be children." We are not to grow into the personal knowledge of the evil thing, and become experts in its deadly ministry. We are to seek our greatness in our ignorance. Or, if we have "advanced" into the dark experience, we are to renew our royal mastery by a wise retreat. In relation to some holy attainments it is the simple truth to say that going backward is the only progress "Except ye turn again, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."

But in understanding we are to be men. Indeed, one of our surest defenses against belittling feelings is the cultivation of a more spacious mind, a mind which moves reverently but freely in the realm of truth revealed to us in Jesus Christ our Lord. Bitterness is always the product of narrowness. A man may be proud of his largeness of mind, he may boast of the roominess of his creed; but if he be bitter and malicious it is a sure sign that his vital thought is contracted and that he has not found he glorious liberty of the children of God. If the atmosphere in the berth is pestilential it is because the port-hole is closed.

Mr. Roosevelt said some time ago that he did not know which quality is most productive of evil to mankind in the long run, hardness of heart or softness of head. That is a very suggestive word; but may we not add that softness of head produces hardness of heart? No man can be so cruel as the man of loose and undecisive thought. Soft thinking is allied to hard feeling. It is not the water which springs from soft limestone which is the sweetest and healthiest to drink; it is the water that comes from the hidden fortresses and strongholds of granite hills. If in understanding we are truly men our emotional strains shall be like unto the river "which maketh glad the city of God."—J. H. J.

CONVENTIONAL SHAMS

Nobody likes to be charged with insincerity, yet who is entirely sincere? It is one of the conventionalisms of society that its members seem to believe statements and professions which they know or suspect to be false; it is another that they shall pretend not to see and hear a thousand things of which only the blind and deaf could be really unconscious. This general dissimulation comes from a tacit understanding whereby the world consents, for the sake of peace and quietness, to recognize false pretenses as part and parcel of the amenities of social life. A man absolutely sincere is a very rare specimen of civilized humanity.

When men, weary with the world's battle, return to the shelter of their own home they need the kindness, the refinement, the high cultivation, the usefulness, the gentle piety which woman as she was meant to be knows how to afford them. The cultivation of a woman's mind cannot be carried too high, but it must be a cultivation proper to her—to her constitution, her marked gifts, her work in the world. Woman is equal to man—equal by being herself, and not a pale copy of him.

THE SIN OF DETRACTION

The inspired prohibition of the sin of detraction is plain and positive: "Speak not evil of one another, brethren" (Jas. 4:11). This prohibition is enjoined and enforced by a consideration stated as follows: "He that speaketh evil of his brother, and juedgeth (condemneth) his brother, speaketh evil of the law, and judgeth (condemneth) the law." Now, brethren and sisters are faulty; God's law is perfect (Psa. 19:7). How then can a defamation of sinful brethren be considered a defemation of God's word? How does speaking evil of our brethren involve speaking evil of God's law? It may do so by at least two ways.

1. To speak evil of brethren is to speak evil of God's law, because the sin of detraction says God's word is unnecessarily strict, that the Law Giver has arbitrarily curtailed our freedom. The law of God forbids the sin of detraction in the following plain words: "Thou shalt not go up and down as a tale-bearer among thy people" (Lev. 19:16). Now if we speak evil of our brethren we violate this divine command; we commit a nefarious error and a God-condemned sin. Now this is in fact a judgment of God's law, a setting it aside; saying it is too rigorous in its prohibitions. These are the facts in the case, whatever the pretentions may be. He who is guilty of detraction, therefore, says in actions, which always speak louder than words, that God's will is null and void. He not only makes war on his brother whom he defames, but he attacks God's law as well, and judges it to be as defective and faulty as his brother.

2. There is also a second way in which speaking evil of brethren may be called a condemnation of God's law. There are things in the affairs of life upon which the word of God does not pronounce any positive verdict. It is not necessary that it should, as God has endowed us with reason, common sense and conscience. Therefore he has acted logically in leaving us in many circumstances of conduct to be guided by our reason, common sense and conscience. In the exercise and enjoyment of these God-given faculties there are some things which one brother may do with the approval of his conscience to which another may take exception. What a fine opportunity here for the detractor to pose as so good and to decry his brother as so bad! He appoints himself pope over his brother's conscience. His conscience is better and therefore must boss his brother's. In God's word he can find no sentence of condemnation against his brother's conduct; he searches God's word in vain to find even an implied rebuke against what his brother does. But his failure to find any divine law in the case does not cause the detractor to hesitate; he proceeds to pronounce his brother's conduct as morally wrong. Whether God has spoken or not is of no moment to the detractor. If God has not spoken, he speaks; if God has not condemned, he condemns! In acting this way has he not made himself a judge of God's law? Has he not decided that in respect to these things God's law is too lax? He thus goes beyond the requirements of God's moral law; he pronounces it defective; he adds amendments to it; and, instead of being "a doer of the law," he speaks as evil of God's law as he does of his brother, consequently he becomes a judge of both. Brethren, beware of the sin of detraction. It condemns as imperfect, however slyly it may be done, the moral government of God.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Bro. Huggins: Enclosed you will find a money order for one dollar and a half for The Restitution Helping Fund, or for any other cause for which you can use it to glorify God.

Yours in Christ, CHAS. ANDERSON.

Dear Bro. Huggins: As my time is about expired for The Restitution, I will send you two dollars by bank draft, $1.50 to pay for one year's subscription to The Restitution, the fifty cents for the Helping Fund. I can not do without the paper, as we have no preaching here of the faith. I have not heard any of our preaching for three years, when Bro. Almus Adams was here. I have no one to talk to of the faith but my children and Sister Argent. She comes to see me once in a while, and we have a regular love feast talking about the glorious faith. I ask all the brethren and sisters to pray for us lonely ones at Sunnyside, Wash., that we may hold out faithful and meet you all in the kingdom.

From your sister, LUCY LAPP.

Dear Bro. Nutt: My time for the "Dear Old Restitution" has expired. I am enclosing post office money order for renewal ($1.50), and fifty cents for the Helping Fund. Let The Restitution keep coming. It is all the preaching we have. Don't see how we could do without it. We are isolated away out here in the southwest of Texas, and don't have any preaching, but there are a few of the faith scattered around, several miles apart. A few of us get together every fourth Sunday to break bread and worship our God. We would meet every Sunday, but we live so far apart we thought it would be better to meet once a month than not at all. I go twenty-five miles every fourth Sunday to meet with them. I ask you all to remember us in your prayers.

Your brother in Christ,
JAMES DELOZIER.

PSALM 23

1. The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want.
2. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures (margin, pastures of tender grass).
3. He leadeth me beside the still waters (or waters of quietness, or waters of rest). He restoreth my soul (life). He guideth me in paths of righteousness (margin, straitness) for his name's sake.
4. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death (margin, deep darkness), I will fear no evil; for thou art with me (Heb. 13:20). Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me (Ps. 119:75-77; Mal 2:6).
5. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies (see 2 Sam. 17:27-29); thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
6. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and (after that) I shall return unto the house of the Lord forever (see variolrum, Bible).

How often has this Psalm been the favorite study of those who love God's word! It so beautifully, so simply and clearly expresses the thoughts of each individual believer. Each one feels the Psalm was written and inspird expressly for his benefit. Like the Lord's Prayer in the New Testament, every word and every sentence is redolent with meaning.

The Psalm begins with the words, "The Lord is my shepherd." The emphatic use of the personal pronoun surely indicates choice. David knew much concerning the gods of the heathen roundabout—Dragon, Baal and Asktaroth; and this very knowledge gave emphasis to his statement. He knew they were many and helpless, and that in truth there was no God save the Holy One of Israel (Psa. 71:22; 2 Sam. 7:22; Psa. 86:8-10; 89:6-8). How often we find him claiming the Lord as his God (see Psalms 31:14; 104:33; 118:28; 48:14; 67:16).

King David rejoiced in expressing his appreciation of the Lord his God by appropriate names, such as "my Rock," "my Shield," "my Fortress," "my Defense," "my Deliverer." He was a man of war and looked out upon life from that standpoint. Yet even in his life occurred times of peace and quietness when he could speak of Jehovah as "my God with his mercy," and say that "his mercy endureth forever" (Psalm 106; 107; 118; 136).

This 23rd Psalm is almost entirely expressive of some of these wonderful names ascribed to God, not through the heat of battle and strife, but the result of calm, deliberate reflection of past and present events.

Jehovah Raphe, "the Lord is my shepherd." God has protected him from the lion and the bear.

Jehovah Ireh, "I shall not want," for the Lord will provide not only green pastures, but pastures of tender grass. How much one is here reminded of the 1st Psalm and 3rd verse of the tree planted by the rivers of water.

Jehovah Shallom, "he leadeth me beside the still waters, or waters of peace." "For thus saith the Lord thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel, I am the Lord who teacheth thee to profit; which leadeth thee by the way which thou shouldst go. Oh, that thou hadst harkened unto my commandments, then had thy peace been as a river and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea" (Isa. 48:17, 18; Also see Isaiah 66:12). And what is the result of this treatment of the sheep by the shepherd. "He restoreth my soul" (life). Each night as we retire to rest life might well be reckoned forfeited, but he restores it, gives it back in the morning, a constant reminder to us of that great future time when "joy cometh in the morning," the morning of the great awakening. And why does he give it back to us each day? Surely it is that he may guide us in paths of righteousness for his name's sake (see Psalm 25:11; 79:9; Jer. 14:7). David, like many before him and many who followed after, learned that paths of righteousness sometimes lead through the "valley of deep darkness," even the valley of the shadow of death; but he, like them, could say: "I will fear no evil, for thou art with me." How beautiful the promise in Isaiah: "When thou passeth through the waters I will be with thee, and through the rivers; but they shall not overflow thee; when thou walkest through the fire thou shalt not be burned, neither shall the flame kindle upon thee; for I am the Lord thy God, the Holy One of Israel thy Savior" (Isaiah 43:2). Jehovah Shammah, "the Lord is there," aptly expresses the thought, especially if we bear in mind Heb. 13:20 we get additional help.

David also learned while passing through trial to find consolation in God's judgments, as represented by the rod, and comfort in the promises of God as represented by the staff (see Psalm 119:75-77). To the present-day Christian the "rod" might very well indicate the Old Testament law (Gal. 3:24), and the staff the New Testament gospel.

Earlier in the Psalm David acknowledges his wants are supplied. Now he says his "cup runneth over," and he is confident from past experience that God, who has shown goodness and mercy hitherto, will continue to do so all the days of his life. But David did not stop there, for following this statement we get one of the many proofs that he believed God would give him by resurrection another life, a life without end, for the joyfully adds: "And I will return into the house of the Lord forever." R. H. JUDD.

WHAT IS THE GOSPEL?

Gospel is good news, or glad tidings. What is the good news about? It must be something that is of value to everyone. Popular theology says "that Christ died for you is the Gospel," and if you only believe that you will be saved. But the gospel is much greater than that. The Apostle Paul is an admitted authority, and this is what he said: "And the Scripture, foreseing that God would justify the nations through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed" (Gal. 3:8). There is much in this single verse, but the main thought is that the Gospel is the blessing of all nations. That is good news for all.

You will at once see that this opens up a glorious prospect for the world. Evil in every form will be uprotted, every problem will be solved, every burden that oppresses suffering humanity will be removed, all tears will be wiped away, even death will ultimately be destroyed, and God will be all in all (Isa. 25:6-8; 1 Cor. 15:24-28; Rev. 21: 3, 4).

Is that not good news? Is it not like the Great Being who even now, when man is estranged from him, "maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust?"

But you may say, "What about the death of Christ?" You may ask, "Is it not the Gospel?" It has its place in the divine plan of salvation, but it is not the Gospel. Do not be prejudiced by this. Ponder over this: that the Gospel—the blessing of all nations—was made known all through the ages, long before Christ was manifested. When Christ came what was the Gospel he preached? It is written: "Jesus went about all Galilee teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom" (Matt. 4:23). He said: "I must preach the Kingdom of God to other cities also; for therefore am I sent" (Luke 4:43). Could he have a grander theme? Did he not teach his disciples to pray: "Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as in heaven?" When that prayer is answered the Gospel will be realized.

Moreover, Christ sent his disciples "to preach the Kingdom of God," and 't'hey went through the towns, preaching the Gospel" (Luke 9:2-6). At that time they did not know that their Master was to die (Luke 9:43-45). How then can the death of Christ be the Gospel? This demands your serious consideration if you hold the popular view.

When did Christ die? He died because of sin. "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin" (Rom. 5:12). He was not the "one man" by whom death came. He was the obedient Adam. Life comes by him. "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead" (1 Cor. 15:21). "He was delivered for our offenses, and was raised again for our justification" (Rom. 4:25).

We can not now deal with all that is involved in the death of Christ. But since his death a new Gospel has not been promulgated. The same Gospel that was made known from the beginning still holds good. But after he rose from the dead the things connected with his death and resurrection were added to the Gospel of the Kingdom. "They believed Phillip preaching the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:2. See also 28:23, 31). The Gospel is now proclaimed in his name.

Upon the basis of faith in himself and belief of the Gospel God reconciles men through Jesus Christ now. And in the fullness of time, when his purpose is complete, the entire world will be reconciled to him, and he will be all in all.—Selected.

THE COMING KINGDOM

"Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter" (Rev. 4:1). "And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates, and the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared. And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty" (Rev. 16:12, 13, 14).

John when on Patmos was in the spirit, and could see the things in the future. He sees the rise and fall of kingdoms; the church going into the wilderness. He sees the Church of Rome a harlot woman with a purple and scarlet robe on; he reads upon her head that she is the mother of harlots. And as we pass down the ocean of time we find today that we stand at the last post before the coming of Christ. We see the sixth vial has been poured out; the river Euphrates is dried up. We see the three unclean spirits coming out of the crowned heads of Europe; we see them gathering the kingdoms one by one into this great slaughter house. The battle of Armageddon must be at hand. The prophet Daniel in vision was carried down the ages to our day. He saw the time of great trouble which is on the people of the world right now. The nations of Europe are in the greatest trouble this world has ever seen. John tells us when the time comes for the dead to be judged the nations will be angry.

And now while all these events go on we turn and look at the old time clock; we see the hands have moved up to the restitution hour. The white horse and rider are coming (Rev. 19:11). Soon the shout will go up, "The kindoms of this world have become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ" (Rev. 11:15).

Instruct your son well, or others will instruct him ill. No child goes altogether untaught. Send him to the school of wisdom, or he will go of himself to the rival academy. There is always instruction going on of some sort, just as in the fields of progress of vegetation is never idle.

GENERATION

As we understand it a generation is counted of various lengths, such as 33 or 100 years; and when applied to Matt. 24:34, "This generation shall not pass," if we apply either of the numbers to the signs given, especially to the darkening of the sun, they all fail, as the Son of Man has not made his appearance yet: but if we count a generation as reaching from Abraham to the second coming of Christ, as we see it is employed in Psa. 22:50. If the text does not count all believers in all time, when are we to count the seed for a generation? If it is only for one hundred years, who will be saved. Other passages carry the same idea, such as Psa. 14:15; 24:6; Matt. 1:1; 1 Pet. 2:9. "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood," etc. If Peter had only reference to those who lived in his lifetime, how are we benefited by believing the gospel of the kingdom? But if we count the seed from the time of Abraham to Jesus Christ's second coming as a geenration, there is harmony; for they as well as we are all of one faith, hope, mind and one family, and are brethren or "race," as the Syrian New Testament gives instead of "generation." Generation is often applied to a race of people; and if we take this view of generation as includingall believers of the gospel in all ages we can see harmony in Christ's saying in Matt. 24:34: "Verily, I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away till all these things be fulfilled." Now if the believers who saw the sun darkened and the stars fall are of the seed who serve him, and are not counted in the long generation, there will be some of this generation living when Christ comes, for Paul says: "We shall not all sleep."

THE REJECTED ARKS

For the Young People

By Auntie Wince

Have you ever read Jean Ingelow's "Story of Doom," or gazed in pitying sadness on the great painting that depicts some of the people of Noah's days, clinging in mortal terror to a rocky elevation in vain endeavor to escape from the rising flood? I have, and over and over again have I let my imagination play, whenever I have reread the sacred record of how "Noah, moved by fear, prepared an ark for the saving of his house." And as the time draws near for a like cataclysm to overwhelm the sinful multitudes of earth I have more frequently than ever tried to picture to myself the closing scenes of the Antideluvian age.

It is well to do this: it helps us to avoid the nets and the snares of these latter-day times.

Over and over again I have imagined how—a little curious—men and women came to the street and forest meetings to listen to the famed orator whose lips had been touched by God and whose message of prophetic warning had been given by him, then, unmoved, went away to drink and feast, and make of themselves "veritable walking death-heads" by practicing the licentious rites taught in the creed and sanctioned and upheld by the priests of their idolatrous worship, thus literally destroying themselves and their offspring through sin.

It seems at times as if I could almost hear the conversations that went on in mart and street and home. And even out in the hills and plains, where the great gopher trees were being felled and where later on the ark went up. For no matter what people think or believe, the propounding of new theories will arouse them to investigate and accept or to scoff at and reject, and there will be curious questions asked and many an exciting debate carried on.

So whenever these idol-worshipers met we can think of them as saying to one another: "Don't you get tired of hearing old Noah forever repeating that 'old wives fable' of a coming flood? I do. I never pass him but what he cries out, 'The flood is coming, the flood is coming! Repent, and escape for your life!' I am tired of it all. Building that great ship, too, so far from the sea! You don't suporse a flood can ever come here deep enough to float such a ship as that, do you?"

"No, it's all nonsense, though he says the flood will cover all the dry land over the whole earth," replies another.

"What a fool!" says the priest. "The waters above the firmament are as stable as they were in Adam's time, and those in the sea can't get out to back up the land. So what have we to fear? Our augurs tell us no such thing. It never has rained, and I don't believe it ever will. The mist that goes up and comes down to water the earth could never produce a flood. And even if water were to fall in showers from above, as Noah says it will, it couldn't possibly cover the whole earth if it showered every day for a year. Only think of the great country lying north of our Great Sea, of the still larger country south of it, of the thickly settled Atlantis stretching to the far west from the latter, and of the mighty lands lying still farther beyond, to say nothing of the extensive tracts to east, southeast and south of our beautiful dwelling place."

"Yes, I know," replies the second speaker, "and Noah has sent warning to the people of all these lands that they will be drowned in the flood as well as we if they do not believe, repent and find refuge in an ark built by each man for 'the saving of his house.' And, besides, he has been to all these lands himself, telling his story of doom in each one of their great central cities. And such news flies like the wind. I doubt whether there is a place on earth where the story has not gone. The high priests who make annual pilgrimage to the temple of our mighty Lord Baal in the land of Nod go home andtell the tale with many a mocking jeer at Noah, and others carry it farther on."

"And has Noah made any converts?"

"Not a single one, so far as I know, though Methusalah, who died a short time ago, has been helping him in the preaching." (Prof. Totten made out that Methuselah died fifty or fifty-one days before the flood. Jewish tradition makes the time seven days. He was the seventh in the line of the high priesthood, counting Adam as the first, then Seth, Enos, Cainan, Mahalaleel and Jared. Cain would have taken the office after Adam but for his sin. It came to Methuselah because of the translation of his father Enoch, and to Noah because of the death of his father Lamech. I can not help thinkig that both Methuselah and Lamech were true followers of God. Jamison, Faussett and Brown so consider them. Standing as they do between two of the more remarkabl'e characters of the Bible, it is hard to think otherwise—Enoch, found worthy of being made a type of the living saints, who when Jesus comes will be "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," and Noah, holding fast to his faith in a world engulfed in sin—one would naturally conclude that they were the same style of men.)

But nearer and nearer drew the end, and wilder still the jesting, the mocking, the revelry, the violence. Again we seem to hear the same persons saying: "Well, old Noah is still preaching, isn't he? And everything going on just the same as when he began. How long has be been at it?"

"I doo't know or care," replies his companion. "But he certainly believes the story himself, or he wouldn't keep on building that ship, and pleading with us as he does; and what if he should happen to be right? What would we do then?"

"Oh, just move up on the mountains; the flood couldn't reach us there."

"It might, and I heard yesterday that Noah had finished the ark, and had a large force of men at work storing the provisions therein that he has been gathering during the past year, enough to last himself and family a twelvemonth or more. And they say he has put all kinds of animals, birds and reptiles on board and has provided food for them. My cousin Eben and my brother Melech are on the force, and they told me this, so you had better be moving. You may not have a chance when it begins to rain."

"I'll risk it. We are to go to the grand wedding of our princess tonight, and must make haste and get the great drove of camels, sheep and oxen home that we bought the other day. It was a good bargain, and mayhap we can buy some more. No need to worry. Our great Pontifex Maximus assures us that we shall be as the immortal gods when this life is over; that we do not 'surely die' when we seem to die, so what do we care? If we are drowned we shall go to 'the happy hunting grounds' and to the 'elysian fields' of better worlds than this; so what does it matter 'whether we sink or swim?' Let us eat, drink and be merry."

THE MAJORITY NOT ALWAYS VICTORIOUS

Napoleon used to say that God was on the side of the strong battalions, but that was a mistake; even on the field of battle it is not always the majority that wins. God is rather on the side of right and truth. A few with the Lord is better than the many without him. Gideon with three hundred soldiers plus God was more than a match for the host of the Midianites.

In Wilna on the western boundary of Russia is a shaft of granite by the roadside. On the western side are these words: "Napoleon passed this way in 1812 with four hundred and ten thousand men." On the eastern side are these words: "Nopoleon Bonapart passed this way in 1812 with nine thousand men." "Man proposes and God disposes," said the Russian ambassador to Napoleon when the latter was boasting what he would do in Russia. The great captain, with a score of great victories to his credit, replied; "I am both he that proposes and he that disposes." So he invaded Russia with his great army of more than four hundred thousand men, but he never reached the interior—he had defied God, and he had to reckon with him. The great Jehovah sent an army of snowflakes, he used frost for ammunition, and all but ten thousand were left on the frozen plains of Russia.

It is so even today; men count their majorities, and plan for the defeat of truth and right; but God intervenes and scatters their forces. We need to often say to ourselves: "Be not afraid of their numbers. The host of sin may be legion, they may overrun the country, they may get control of every bulwark of defense, but they can not win. It is written in the counstitution of the universe that truth shall conquer, that right shall prevail. "The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong." "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."—Selected.

RESTFUL MINDS

The man who is freest from care, who has a compentence and feels that he has, who makes both ends meet at the close of the year, whose ambitions are no greater than his ability to attain them, who is rich through being content with that which he has, may work long and hard, even through the heat of the day and into the cool of the night also, without fear of breaking down from overwork. The restful mind is one of the surest means of all for securing a restful body. But this is not likely to be the property of one who in his work takes such risks in the hope of great and sudden gains as to imperil all that he has—of one who sends his ships upon unknown seas to run the risk of the winds and waves of speculation. The man who looks day by day, if only for a few minutes, at a list of tumbling stocks of which he is the holder is much more likely to get tired and suffer with that malady called overwork than his neighbor who works ever so hard with brain and hand without embarking his capital or wages in uncertain ventures. Overwork is most frequently only another name for self-inflicted worry.

A difference between honorable and dishonorable competition is the conduct of the victor to the vanquished. Some men rise above others only to crush them—others to lift and exalt them. Some boast with noisy triumph and scorn those who are left behind; others have "a way of making people feel comfortable." One artist who has risen in public favor uses his influence to depreciate the works of his brother-artists; another takes them by the hand and gives them courage for fresh endeavors.

INQUISITORIAL HORRORS OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

As Described by an Officer in Napoleon's Army

(Napoleon Bonaparte decreed on December 4, 1808, that the terrible institution of the Inquisition in Spain should be exterminated. The following account of the accomplishment of this work of destruction is made by Colonel Lehmanowsky, one of Napoleon's officers, and gives a good idea of the instruments of torture that were used, and the fiendish cruelty practiced by the Inquisition on its helpless victims in those dark days.)

I was in Spain in 1809, attached to that part of Napoleon's army which was stationed at Madrid. While it had been decreed by the Emperor that the Inquisition and the monasteries should be suppressed, several months passed away and the decree was not executed. I used to express my opinions freely among the people respecting the priests and the Jesuits of the Inquisition, and one night as I was walking along the street two armed men sprang out from an alley and made a furious attack upon me. While struggling with them I saw at a distance the lights of the French patroles, who carried lanterns and rode through the streets of the city at all hours to preserve order. I called to them, and as they hastened to my assistance the assailants took to their heels and escaped—not, however, before I saw by their dress that they belonged to the guards of the Inquisition.

I went at once to Marshal Soult, then Governor at Madrid, told him what had taken place, and reminded him of the decree to suppress the institution. The troops required were granted, and I proceeded to the Inquisition, nearly five miles from the city. It was surrounded by a wall of great strength, and defended by a company of soldiers.

When we arrived at the walls I addressed one of the sentinels and summoned the Jesuit fathers to surrender to the Imperial army, and open the gates of the Inquisition. The sentinel, who was standing on the wall, appeared to enter into conversation for a moment with someone within, at the close of which he presented his musket and shot one of my men. This was the signal for attack, and I ordered my troops to fire upon those who appeared upon the wall.

It was soon obvious that it was an unequal warfare. The walls of the Inquisition were covered with the soldiers of the "Holy office;" there was also a breastwork upon the walls, behind which they partially concealed themselves as they discharged their muskets, while we were in the open plain and exposed to a destructive fire. We had no cannon, nor could we scale the walls, and the gates successfully resisted all attempts at forcing them. We could not retire and send for cannon without giving them time to lay a train for blowing up our troops. I saw, therefore, that it was necessary to change the mode of attack, and directed that trees should be cut down and trimmed, to be used as battering rams. Two of these were taken up by detachments of men, as numerous as could work to advantage, and brought to bear upon the walls with all the power they could exert, while the troops kept up a fire to protect them from the shots that were poured upon them. Presently the walls began to tremble ,a breach was made, and the Imperial troops rushed in.

Here we met with an incident to which nothing but Jesuitical effrontery is equal. The Inquisitor-General, followed by the father-confessors in their priestly robes, all came out of their rooms as we were making our way into the interior of the Inquisition; and with long faces, and their arms crossed over their breasts, their fingers resting upon their shoulders, as though they had been deaf to all the noise of the attack and defense, and had just learned what was going on, they addressed themselves in the language of rebuke to their own soldiers, saying: "Why do you fight our friends, the French?" The intention was no doubt to make us think that the resistance was wholly unauthorized by them; and if they could have succeeded in making a temporary impression in their favor they would have had an opportunity in the confusion of the moment to escape. But their artifice was too shallow, and did not succeed. I caused them to be placed under guard, and all of their soldiers to be secured as prisoners.

We then proceeded to examine the stately edifice. We passed from room to room, and found all perfectly in order. The apartments were richly furnished, with altars, crucifixes and wax candles in abundance, but no evidence could be discovered of iniquity being practiced there—none of the peculiar features which we expected to find in an Inquisition. Splendid paintings adorned the walls; there was a rich and extensive library. Beauty and splendor appeared everywhere, and the most perfect order on which the eye ever rested. The architecture, the proportions were perfect. The ceiling and floors of wood were all scoured and highly polished. The marble floors were arranged with a strict regard to order. There was everything to please the eye and gratify a cultured taste; but where were those horrid instruments of torture which were reported to be there, and where were those dungeons in which human beings were said to be buried alive?

The search seemed to be in vain. The "holy fathers" assured us that they had been belied, and that we had seen all, and I was prepared to abandon the search, convinced that this Inquisition was different from others of which I had heard. But Colonel de Lile was of a different mind, and said to me: "Colonel, you are commander today, and as you say so it must be; but if you will be advised by me let this marble floor be examined. Let water be brought and poured upon it, and we will watch and see if there is any place through which it passes more freely than others." I replied to him, "Do as you please," and ordered water to be brought accordingly. The slabs of marble were large and beautifully polished, and when the water had been poured on the floor, much to the dissatisfaction of the Inquisitors, a careful examination was made of every seam to see if the water ran through. Presently Colonel de Lile exclaimed that he had found it. By the side of one of these marble slabs the water passed through rapidly, as though there was an opening beneath.

All hands were now at work for further discovery: the officers with their swords and the soldiers with their bayonets cleared out the seam, and endeavored to raise the slab; others with the butt ends of their muskets struck the slab with all their might to break it; while the priests remonstrated against desecrating their holy and beautiful house. When thus engaged a soldeir who was striking with the butt of his musket hit a spring and the marble slab flew up. The faces of the Inquisitors instantly grew pale as Belshazzar's when the handwriting appeared on the wall.

Beneath the marble slab, now partly up, there was a staircase. I stepped to the altar and took from the candlestick one of the lighted candles, four feet in length, that I might explore the room below. As I was doing this one of the Inquisitors laid his hand gently upon my arm, and, with a very demure and sanctified look, said: "My son, you must not take those lights with your bloody hands—they are holy." "Well," said I, "I will take a holy thing to shed light on iniquity; I will bear the responsibility." I took the candle and proceeded down the staircase. As we reached the foot of the stairs we entered a large square room which was called the Judgment Hall. In the center of it was a large block, and a chain fastened to it. On this they had been accustomed to place the accused, chained to his seat. On one side of the room was an elevated seat, called the Throne of Judgment, which the Inquisitor-General occupied, and on either side were seats less elevated for the "holy fathers" when engaged in the solemn business of the "holy Inquisition."

From this room we proceeded to the right and obtained access to the small cells, extending the entire length of the edifice, and here such sights were presented as we hope never to see again. These cells were places of solitary confinment, where the wretched objects of inquisitorial hate were confined year after year, till death released them from their sufferings; and there their bodies were suffered ot remain until they were entirely decayed, and the rooms had become fit for others to occupy. To prevent this being offensive to those who occupied the Inquisition there were flues extending to the open air, sufficiently capable to carry off the odor. In these cells we found the remains of a number who had paid the debt of nature; some who had been dead apparently but a short time, while of others nothing remained but their bones still chained to the floors of their dungeons.

In other cells there were living sufferers of both sexes and of every age, all in a state of complete nudity and all in chains. Here were old men and aged women, who had been shut up many years. Here, too, were the middle-aged and the young man and the maiden of fourteen years old. The soldiers immediately went to work to release these captives from their chains, and took from their knapsacks their overcoats and other clothing, which they gave to cover their nakedness.

We then proceeded to explore another room on the left. Here were found instruments of torture of every kind which the ingenuity of men or devils could invent. The first was a machine by which the victim was confined, and then, beginning with the fingers every joint in the hands, arms and body were broken or drawn, one after another, until the sufferer died. The second was a box in which the head and neck of the victim was so closely confined by a screw that he could not move in any way. Over the box was a vessel, from which one drop of water fell upon the head of the victim every second, each succeeding drop falling in exactly the same place, by which in a few moments the circulation was suspended and the sufferer had to endure the most excruciating agony. The third was an infernal machine laid horizontally, to which the victim was bound, the machine being then placed between two beams in which were a score of knives so fixed that by turning the machine with a crank the flesh of the sufferer was torn from his limbs in small pieces. The fourth surpassed all others in fiendish ingenuity. Its exterior was an immense doll, richly dressed and having the appearance of a beautiful woman, with her arms extended ready to embrace her victim. A semicircle was drawn around her, and the person who passed over this fatal mark touched a spring which caused the diabolical engine to open; its arms immediately clasped him, and a multitude of knives cut him in pieces while in the deadly embrace.

The sight of these engines of infernal cruelty kindled the fire of indignation in the bosoms of the soldiers. They declared that every Inquisitor should be put to the torture. They began with the "holy fathers." The first was put to death in the machine for breaking joints. The torture of the inquisitor that suffered death by the dropping of water on his head was most excruciating; the poor wretch cried out in agony to be taken from the fatal machine. Next the Inquisitor-General was brought before the infernal engine called "The Virgin." He was ordered to embrace her, but he begged hard to be excused. "No," said the soldiers, "you have caused others to kiss her, and now you must do it." They interlocked their bayonets so as to form large forks, and with these they pushed him over the deadly circle. The beautiful image, prepared for the embrace, instantly clasped him in its arms and cut him into innumerable pieces. Having witnessed the torture of four of the barbarous Inquisitors I sickened at the awful scene, and left the soldiers to wreak their vengeance on the other guilty inmates of that prison house of hell.

In the meantime the news had spread to Madrid that the prisons of the Inquisition were broken open, and multitudes hastened to the fatal spot. Oh, what a meeting was there! It was like a resurrection. About one hundred and fifty who had been buried for many years were now restored to life. Fathers found their long-lost daughters, wives were restored to their husbands, sisters to their brothers and parents to their children. The scene was such as no tongue can describe.

When the people had retired I caused the library, paintings, furniture and other articles of value to be removed, and, having sent to the city for a wagonload of powder, a large quantity was deposited in the vaults beneath the building, and a slow match placed in connection with it. All having withdrawn to a distance, in a few moments the walls and turrets of the massive structure rose majestically in the air, impelled by a tremendous explosion, and then fell back to the earth an immense heap of ruins. The Roman Catholic Inquisition of Spain was no more.—Selected by Sister Vira McIlrath.

THE DIVINE RIGHTS OF KINGS

William I of Prussia, the grandfather of the present Kaiser, William II, was of the house of Hohenzollern, and at his coronation, like Napoleon I, he took his crown from the communion table and placed it on his head, declaring: "The crown comes only from God, and I have received it at his hands."

William II, like his grandfather, holds firmly to "the divine rights of kings," as the following extracts from his speeches prove:

"We Hohenzollerns take our crown from God alone and to God alone are we responsible for the fulfillment of our duty." Again he declared: "The will of the King is the supreme law. The French revolution was an unmitigated crime against God and man."

The following is an extract from a speech made by Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany in 1891 to a new batch of recruits:

"Recruits! Before the altar and the servant of God you have given me the oath of allegiance. You are too young to know the full meaning of what you have said, but your first care must be to obey implicitly all orders and directions.

"You have sworn fidelity to me, you are the children of my guard, you are my soldiers, you have surrendered yourselves to me, body and soul. Only one enemy can exist for you—my enemy.

"With the present socialist machinations, it may happen that I shall order you to shoot your own relatives, your brothers, or even your parents—which God forbid—and then you are bound in duty implicitly to obey my orders!"

The Kaiser's brother, Henry, said: "My one mission is to preach the gospel to your majesty's hallowed person in all lands."

"I Am Jehovah's Sword," Says Kaiser

"Remember you (my army) are God's elect. God's spirit has descended on me because I am Emperor of Germany. I am Jehovah's sword, his representative, the instrument of the Most High. Woe and death be to those who resist my will! and to all who do not believe my mission, and to cowards in my army! The enemies of the German people shall perish. God demands their destruction. He it is who through me commands you to fulfill His will!"

The Kaiser as Messiah

A report is current in Russia that during a visit of the Kaiser to Lodz he entered a synagogue and lifting up one of the scrolls of the law he addressed the congregation. In the course of his remarks he is stated to have uttered the following: "Jews, you are awaiting the Messiah! I am the Messiah, and I was sent by God to save you!"—(Jewish Chronicle.)

Germans Inform Sultan's Army He Is Descended From Prophet's Sister

Cairo, Feb. 6.—Some curious details of the methods employed by the Germans to impress the Turkish army and win over public opinion in Syria are supplied by a missionary of the Evangelical and Medical Mission to Israel, who has reached this country as a refugee from Haifa. To celebrate an alleged victory over the Russians in Transcaucasia, a Turco-German fete was recently organized at Haifa, one of the principal features being a great procession in honor of Mahomet and the German emperor.

A Lutheran pastor of the German colony at Haifa is said to have taken a prominent part in this singular affair and joined in raising the cry of "Allah, protect the Kaiser Hadji Wilhelm!" For the benefit of the Arabs, some of whom appear to have accepted the story readily enough, it has been discovered that the Kaiser is lineal descendant of the prophet's sister and that he has undertaken to go on a pilgrimage to Mecca when the war is over. That the German nation as a whole has been converted to Islam is generally believed by the less educated members of the native community. Military preparation, so the missionary says, point to the dread of British invasion of Palestine as well as an offensive movement in the direction of the Suez canal.

The hills around Nazareth are said to have been fortified and roads suitable for the transport of heavy guns are being constructed from Acre to Mount Carmel. A majority of the German colony has left Haifa for Bethlehem, and the German consul's family has gone to Tiberias.

From conversations with Syrian refugees it is gathered that the Turks, in preparing or pretending to prepare for an attack upon Egypt, are fully maintaining their reputation for ruthlessness. Under German guidance this brutality has been systematized, but in no degree abated. Many thousands of Jews have already fled from Palestine, and the American cruiser Tennessee and several Italian vessels are still busy shipping from Jaffa to Alexandria hordes of victims who have collected on the sea coast.

All informants agree that civil order is maintained in Jerusalem and the interior generally, German influence being everywhere directed to this end, but the Turks are proving willing tools for the task of reducing the population to beggary in order to supply the army. Commandeering has simply become a euphemism for wholesale robbery. In many villages all the grain, live stock and other food have been seized, together with every horse, camel or donkey, and shops have been ransacked for anything that could be any stretch of the imagination be supposed to be of value as military supplies.

Bait Thrown Out to Jews

London, June 4.—According to Le Matin of Paris, Germany is throwing out a bait to the Jews by promising to re-establish the Kingdom in Palestine after the war. A scheme outlined and signed by 25 German and Austrian rabbis, and also by Herr-Ballin, of the Hamburg-American line, undertakes to re-establish by an agreement with the Sultan, a Jewish kingdom with guarantee of neutrality.

Holy Roman Empire Revived

"When the map of Europe is revised we hope to see the Holy Roman Empire of Germany revived with the Emperor of Austria at its head. We acquit Austria of all blame in bringing on this present war."

Such is the hope of Priest Phelan as expressed in his Western Watchman of Sept. 24th. And it may be taken as the hope and wish of every priest, no matter what his nationality, since the supremacy of popery is to them the most desirable of all things.

With his impossible demands upon Servia, the Emperor of Austria did more than any European ruler to cause the butchery and wholesale murder now devastating seven of the world's greatest nations. But it is very satisfactory to the Phelans, the papers, and the popes; for they "hope" to get out of it a Holy Roman Empire, with the senile Francis Josef at its head and wholly under the control of Rome.

It is perhaps too much to hope for, but what every consistent American would like to see come out of this conflict is, the United States of Europe with every nation intact as a free state, and the rotten remnants of monarchism, militarism and Jesuitism swept into oblivion where they belong.—(The Menace.)

The Chicago Watchman says:

"If this war lasts three years, as some predict it will, then all Europe will be Catholic again. The voice of the Church and the voice of the Angels of Death are always in perfect accord, and a full and sonorous bass is supplied by the falling of the clods on the coffin lid. 'God is the God of the living and the dead.' God's church is alike at home in temples and among tombs. Hark! A voice is heard from Rome; Benedict is preparing an encyclical to the world. Never before was message so portentous delivered to so vast and so attentive an audience. 'Peace; be still' will be the burden of his appeal, and may God put it into the hearts of the battling nations to hearken and obey."

Germans Cut Down the Population of Russia

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Berlin Oct. 21.—The school authorities in Bavaria have published notes on war geography for the children attending the public schools. The following information is given regarding Russia:

The Russian territory already occupied by the Germans is four times as extensive as the kingdom of Bavaria, but is only one-seventy-fifth of the entire Russian empire. But the greater part of Russia is thinly populated, and the most populous districts are already in German possession, so that Russia can now show only six-sevenths of its former population.

At the beginning of the war Russia had 50,000,000 more inhabitants than Germany and Austro-Hungary combined; namely, 170,000,000 against 120,000,000. After a year of warfare this position has been reversed. Russia now has only 115,000,000, whereas the central monarchies rule over 155,000,000.

The new territory occupied in east and west is as extensive as the entire kingdom of Prussia.

"In March, 1890, in a speech of the Kaiser's to the men at Brandenburg, occurred this passage: 'I look upon the people and nation handed on to me as a responsibility conferred upon me by God, and that it is, as written in the Bible, my duty to increase this heritage, for which one day I shall be called upon to give an account; those who try to interfere with my task I shall crush."

Turkish Envoy to Vatican

(Special to The Christian Science Monitor)

Cologne, Germany—The Kolnische Zeitung recently stated that it had learned from an authoritative source that there had been an exchange of letters between the Pope and the Sultan with regard to the Armenian question. The Sultan, it was reported, had declared himself ready to settle the religious question with the assistance of the Vatican at the end of the war. The Cologne paper also stated that it had been decided to accredit a Turkish ambassador to the Vatican immediately upon the conclusion of the war.

W. L. CROWE

Many boys and girls with rare natural gifts and opportunities for development fail to realize the necessity for fundamental work. They neglect study and give way to temptation and evil inclinations until the period of life comes when they must stand forth to take their place and perform their part in the political, social and religious activities. Suddenly they become conscious of their own weakness and inability, and vitality is wasted in mourning over losses in early life which can not be recovered.

"Keep clean" is an admonition carrying with it an inspiration which not only invigorates life, but makes it enjoyable and beautiful. Cleanliness brings not only comfort and health, but adorns living, gives existence a charm, imparts consciousness of life, real enjoyment, thought and feeling of existence, the purpose and sanctity of living.

Cherish your heart's best affections. Indulge in the warm emotions of filial, parental, fraternal love. Think it not a weakness. Love everything and everybody that is lovely. You can not make the cords of love too strong.

"The Kingdom of God," an excellent article in The Restitution of March 6th, should have been credited to Bro. George B. Alldridge.

SIR OLIVER LODGE'S NONSENSE

Editor of The Star:

Some time ago there appeared in your columns an amazing message from Prof. Lodge addressed to the bereaved relatives of our brave soldiers who fell in battle. He told these poor distressed ones not to grieve, beause their loved ones were not dead, but, as he termed it, they had merely "passed over." He assured those to whom he wrote that some of theme would certainly get messages from those who had gone. He also told them that those who had already "passed over" were eagerly awaiting their fellows. This sort of talk is what Sir Oliver Lodge calls consolation. Poor stuff, indeed! Men are dying at the rate of many thousand a week, yet Sir Oliver Lodge attempts to console the bereaved by telling them that out of these thousands someone is sure to communicate! For thousands of years mankind has endeavored to communicate with the dead, and with what success? There is not one single authenticated case on record, for the simple reason that "the dead" are actually dead and can not speak.

Sir Oliver Lodge utterly fails to support his wild statements, and for this has been severely criticised by his fellow-scientists. Ministers in the churches do incalculable harm by recognizing and approving his audacious assertions, their obvious reason being to bolster up their own pet theory of an "immortal immaterial soul," which has no more foundation in fact or in Scripture than has that of Sir Oliver Lodge.

The Bible forbids communication with the dead on pain of death, and distinctly tells us that 'the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything." If communication with the dead were possible, what could be more inconsistent than to punish the offender by death and thus (according to the popular idea) give the very thing forbidden? Worship of idols was similarly forbidden, not because the idols were real, but because of the degrading effects of idol worship.

Sir O. Lodge well knows that man is as much the product of seed as the rest of the animate creation, and is subject to the same laws of suitable conditions for proper development and growth; subject, also, to the same laws of accident, decay and death. That he is God's highest and best creation and made to have dominion on the earth, the Bible plainly affirms, and as plainly asserts that man can only attain a second life by resurrection from the dead.

For years the wisest heads of the Physical Research Society have sought proof that "the dead" live; but, as Addington Bruce says, they have utterly failed. All their efforts have but established the fact that the misunderstood phenomena can be satisfactorily attributed to the living body, which is in full accord with Bible statements.

If ministers would be true to the Bible and not be affected by the vagaries of science, so-called, they would do far more good. The Bible is above them all, and in it God reveals plans for the future of mankind (of which they appear to know little) that far outclass the dreamy, hazy ideas of the pulpit.

EDITORIAL

Bro. and Sister E. F. and M. E. Randolph write: "If you remember, some time ago we requested you to make a statement of how many subscribers you had lost by opposing Josephism. I notice you have lost fifty. Find herewith check for $8.00; $7.50, or one-tenth of the loss you have sustained, and $1.50 for a new subscriber." Praise the Lord for a brother and sister like Bro. and Sister Randolph! May enough like them be found in the midst of Israel to keep the banner of truth unfurled until the "Captain of Our Salvation" appears for the salvation of his people.

At the request of "A Sister" we begin a series of editorials this week on dancing. We propose an exhaustive treatement of this subject, as we do not think a scriptural explanation has ever been given in The Restitution. The young people need light on the subject. Please hear us patiently till we have "Concluded," and then if anyone has any criticisms to offer we shall be glad to consider them.

Sister Cassie L. Hicklin writes: "Does it pay to send out The Restitution? I know of one who learned, believed and obeyed the truth, and who never heard a sermon. There are others who are interested in the gospel through reading The Restitution."

FAITH AND ETHICS

Loyalty in Both Where God Hath Spoken; Toleration Where He Hath Not Spoken—An Editorial Dedicated to "A Sister" and the Church to Which She Belongs

"Faith comes by hearing the word of God" (Rom. 10:17). It is a belief of "what God hath promised" (Rom. 4:21). Believing something which God hath not promised is not faith. Faith is the belief of testimony, consequently where testimony ends faith must end also. In addition to faith all normal people have knowledge and opinions. Our knowledge of history and science is to the extent of our understanding; and we have opinions more or less valuable in matters that are theoretical and presumptive. Now if we clearly understand the difference between faith, knowledge and opinion we are in a mental mood to appreciate why God always represents the sins of additions and subtractions to his word as sins of equal guilt; both are fatal transgressions (Deut. 4:2; 12:32; 13:17, 18; Jos. 1:7; Prov. 30:6; Rev. 22:18, 19). Additions to God's word challenge his wisdom; they insert what God's wisdom has left out. Subtractions impugn his wisdom also, for they take out what his wisdom has put in (Col. 1:19; 2:2, 3, 7-10, 19, 23; 2 Pet. 1:3). Now faith involves a belief in Christ as the only begotten Son of God (John 3:16; Rom. 10:9, 10; 1 John 4:2, 3; 5:1); obedience to Christ (Heb. 5:9; Rom. 6:17); in one sentence faith or belief is co-extensive with the "things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12). These are "the things" which constitutte the "first principles of the gospel of Christ" (Heb. 5:12; 6:3), and these we must preach and defend, let consequences be what they may. God has spoken clearly and unmistakably in his ample revelations of these 'things," and for them we must stand loyally, and uncompromisingly, or we shall deny the faith and bring dishonor upon both ourselves and our God.

In every science there are certain rudiments which must be understood and accepted before there can be any beginning or progress in that science Old artists used four colors—white, yellow, red and black—and their combination resulted in wonderful effects In mathematics the "first principles" are the axioms, and in language the alphabet. They must be learned "by heart"—that is, so thoroughly they need never be taught us again. Now faith takes hold of these fundamental things, and has confidence in them. Paul uses three terms to define them in Heb. 5:12; 6:3, namely: "principles," "first principles," and "foundation." The first of these terms means properly "beginning," or the starting point; the second, a small upright rod or post, and is applied to the gnomon of a sun dial, hence comes the mean "index;" and the third means basis or foundation. Believers should leave behoind them the primary and elementary parts of the gospel, as a starting point is left behind in a race and as a foundation is "left" in the basement of a building. Unless the builders thus leave the foundation no house or building can be erected upon it. Like builders, then, believers of the gospel are to settle "the first principles" firmly and fixedly; they are to be settled beyond all doubt; we are never to raise questions about them any more; and then we are o proceed to build with a diligent hand. To be always "going back" to the foundation is to acknowledge we have made no progress in the Christian life; and to "fall away" from these principles of the faith is to deny the faith and endanger our salvation by apostacy. For these "things" and "principles" we must fight to the last ditch; no compromise is permissible, but when we leave them we must leave our dogmatism behind. A display of dogmatism for ideas and opinions which are extraneous to "things of the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ" is only a display of the egotism and vanity of a deceived heart. Uncompromising devotion to God's truth is superlatively commendable; but to vehemently contend for one's ideas and opinions with the same earnestness as you contend for God's solemn declarations of truth is to inflate oneself with foolish pride; such a procedure exalts our ideas and opinions till they are of equal authority with God's word, which robs God of his glory and exalts man, whereas man should be humbled and God glorified. If the reader cares to read extended remarks on the danger and sin of adding codocils and addenda to Jehovah's word, both as to faith and morals, let him turn to the editorial in last week's Restitution entitled "The Sin of Detraction."

The observations and discriminations we have made concerning "the faith," for which we should "contend" (Jude 3) are equally true when applied to ethics. As contention for "the faith" extends as far as the faith extends, and no farther; so fidelity and loyalty in morals extends to conduct which God has commanded, and no farther. Now "the faith" is defined; we are not left to surmise what it is. Sin is also defined; we are not left to guess what it is. "Sin," avers an apostle, "is the transgression of law" (1 John 3:4). Any act, however absurd it may be adjudged by human wisdom, is not a "sin" unless God's "law" forbids it; on the other hand, any act, however harmless and praiseworthy it may be in man's judgment, is sinful if God's "law" says it is. "Where no law is there is no transgression" (Rom. 4:15). No act can be a transgression of law if no law exists. To say that this, that and the other thing "is a sin" is correct, provided God's "law" says so; but if you are not prepared to produce such a law in the Book of books then you are guilty of saying things are "sins" which contradict your ideas and opinions merely. If doing something which you think is a "sin" is a sin, irrespective of God's verdict in the case, then you are equal to God! Making laws where God has made non; calling conduct "sin" which God has not so called; speaking where God has kept silence—the pope has done this through the centuries, but he has walked where angels dare not tread. The pope has only made his opinions and ideas binding upon the faithful by laws and bulls; that is all the pope has ever done. Brothren and sisters, let us not follow in his wake, and make debatable questions of ethics sins without the least inkling or intimation of the fact being given in the word of God.

Since "sin is the transgression of law," it is obvious that we must turn to "the law" to discover what sin is. The works of the flesh, things that will exclude us from the kingdom of God, we are plainly told what they are—"adultery, fornication," etc. See the entire list of them in Gal. 5:19-24. The same apostle gives another list of things which are forbidden in the law in 1 Tim. 1:8-19, which please read with much attention. He gives a third list of sins in Rom. 1:29-32, and while the other lists are comprehensive this one seems to be exhaustive, as it outlines minutely what men do who are "filled with all unrighteousness." Those who commit "such things," the apostle declares, "are worthy of death." Keeping in mind that "sin is the transgression of law," and that "where no law is" transgression and sin are impossible, what do we discover? Why, that many people are acting just like the pope on many questions of ethics; they are usurping the place of God, "the one lawgiver who is able to save and to destroy" (Jas. 4:12), by becoming lawmakers themselves! With much pretended piety and grimace they talk and preach about "desecrating the Sabbath" and "breaking the Sabbath." When the apostle Paul gave us his prolix and exhaustive lists of sins, and after he has recurred to the subject three times, he never said one word about breaking the Sabbath! But Paul's silence on the subject of the Sabbath does not boggle an orthodox preacher; he goes on and makes breaking the Sabbath a "sin," although Paul does not go on! And, brethren, we are in danger of the same presumption. Mothers are prone to represent indiscretions to their children as "sins," especially things they personally have an aversion for, and which they would not like for their children to do. But, mothers, curb your anxiety; do not call things "sins" to your children that are only indiscretions. Buncombe talk, bugbear stories, will deter your children while they are young and ignorant; but these makeshifts and devices will be powerless to influence them in the day of their enlightenment. It is unnecessary, when there are so many sins, real transgressions of the law, to manufacture more; and when this is done in the guise of superior piety it is mischievous and deadly. It is an infallible way of alienating boys from the truth, and of betraying them into sin. Teach a boy to comprehend things which are indifferent and things which are sinful as the same, mix them up in a wholesale condemnation, and you are sure to confuse his sense of moral distinctions. Make him believe that unnecessary things are the same as "necessary things" (Acts 15:28), and you are guilty of duplicity. After while he will get his eyes opened to the fact that you have deceived him, that there is no harm in unnecessary and indifferent things; then he will rush from slavery to freedom, from severity to laxity, under the delusion that evil and sinful things are as venial as indiscretions. We feel constrained to make these observations to check the severity and extremity of some and the laxity and latitudinarianism of others. With poise and balance, with moderation and reason, we are now ready to discuss such questions as these: Is dancing a sin? Is it an amusement and relaxation which the word of God forbids? These questions we shall answer in another editorial, if the Lord wills.

ANGELS: THEIR CHARACTERISTICS AND DUTIES

The word "angel' 'signifies a messenger or bringer of tidings. In the Hebrew it is used to denote indifferently either a divine or human messenger. It is applied:

1. To those intellectual and immortal beings whom God employs to carry out his will (Rev. 15: 8; 16:1; Ps. 103:20).
2. To Christ, who is the Mediator and Head o fthe church (Rev. 10:1).
3. To ministers of the Gospel who are ambassadors of Christ (Rev. 2:1; 3:1, 7).

In relation to God and in contrast with men they are called "gods" (Ps. 97:7); "Sons of God" (Job 1:6); "Holy Ones" (Dan. 4:17); "Saints" (Job 5:1; Deut. 33:2); "Watchers" (Dan. 4:13, 17 ,23). They form the hosts of heaven (1 Kings 22:19), and the hosts of Jehovah (Ps. 103:21). These terms are descriptive of the superior nature of these beings as far above men. They are the armies of the Most High, the mighty in strength that fulfill his word (Ps. 103:20), the ten thousand of Holy Ones that are about him (Dan. 7:10); Deut. 33:2). They continually adore him in the heavenly sanctuary (Ps. 148:2), and are the great and glorious company that ever surround his holy person. As messengers of God to men they execute his will, whether it be of mercy or judgment. They mediate his purpose in the moral government of the world, and are actual personal agents in the form of men carrying out the divine commissions which might be a deliverance from evil (Gen. 19:15), a warning (Num- 22: 31-35), or a judgment (2 Sam. 24:16), interpreters of dreams and prophecy (Dan. 8:15; 9:21).

According to the scriptures there are three kinds or varieties of angels:

(1) Archangels, (2) Cherubim, (3) Seraphim.

Archangel

"Archangel" means chief angel or an angel of the highest order. Gabriel, which signifies "Man of God," served in this capacity. He also was an interpreter of visions (Dan. 8:16-27; 9:21-27), and bearer of glad tidings (Luke 1:9). With Gabriel is associated the Archangel Michael (Jude 9), who is like unto God. Michael has his field of activity in heaven, while Gabriel executes God's will on earth. Each is guardian of one of the divisions of the twelve tribes of Israel, of which there were four, the other two being assigned to Uriel and Raphael. Michael was looked upon as divine advocate of Jews (Dan. 12:1), and prayers were offered to him.

In religious art he is known as the "Angel of Judgment," and is represented as carrying scales. All these chief angels have exalted duties, each having dominion over some particular sphere.

Cherubim

The word "cherub" (cherubim is Hebrew, mac. plural) is borrowed from the Assyrian Kirubu from Karabu, "to be near;" hence it means near ones, personal servants, bodyguards, courtiers. It was commonly used of those heavenly beings who closely surround the majesty of God and pay him intimate service.

The frequent sentence, "Who sittest upon the cherubim" (1 Sam. 4:4; 2 Sam. 6:2; 2 Kings 19; Isa. 37:16; Ps. 80:1; 99:1), though no doubt referring to Jehovah's actual dwelling in the Holy of Holies, is better understood as referring to the heavenly throne-bearers of God. Cherubim are referred to in four connections in Old Testament history:

1. In expulsion of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden (Gen. 3:24).
2. In judgment of Prince of Tyrus (Ex. 28).
3. In tabernacle, where there were two golden cherubim at each end of mercy seat (Ex. 25:18). They were embroidered on veil of temple, curtains and other hangings. They were depicted to represent guardian spirits or keepers of the ark, and were symbolic of God's presence. They were called "cherubim of glory" (Heb. 9:5), as on them the glory, when visible, rested. They were anointed with the holy oil, like the ark itself, and the other sacred furniture.
4. In Solomon's temple (1 Kings 6:23) two huge cherubic figures of olive wood, overlaid with gold, stood in the Holy of Holies. Cherubim sculptured in bas relief ran in a frieze around the wall of the temple and decorated doors, etc. (1 Kings 6:29, 32, 35).

Seraphim

"Seraphim" comes from the Hebrew verb "saraph" (to burn), and implies, no doubt, the dazzling brightness of their appearance (2 Kings 2:11; 2 Kings 6:17; Ez. 1:13; Matt. 28:3). Each seraphim had six wings (Isa. 6:2), two of which they used to veil their faces when in God's presence, as unworthy to look upon him (Job 4:18; 15:5); two were used for flight, and two covered their feet, or rather the lower portion of their persons (Ez. 1: 11), a practice usual in the presence of eastern monarchs in token of reverence.

The seraphim are only mentioned in Isaiah's description of his calling to the prophetical office (Isa. 6:2). In the vision he sees God sitting on the throne of his glory, on each side of which stands the seraphim. They were his highest servants, and were there to minister to him and proclaim his glory, each calling to the other, "Holy, holy, holy," etc. They are distinct from cherubim, who carry or veil God, while the seraphim stand before him as ministering servants in the heavenly court. These seraphim may be the origin of the four living creatures of Rev. 46-8.

VIRA McILRATH.

ARE WE WITHOUT COMMAND?

My attention has been called to this question through reading "A Sister's" letter in The Restitution of January 25th, and replies in later numbers from brethren. In her letter "A Sister" says: "I have always understood that where there was nothing to go by in the Bible each one should decide such things for oneself." The sister is right if God has given us no commands or instructions, "each one" must of necessity be a law unto himself. And furthermore, whichever way we decide makes no difference, because Paul says: "Where there is no law (command) there is no transgression" (Roman 4:15).

I think no one familiar with God's holy word will admit the above conclusion. Why not? Because the "understanding" that the Bible has left us without definite command for every circumstance in which those walking in the narrow way find themselves is without foundation in fact. Another sister says: "I can not find where the Bible forbids dancing." I do not find a command in these words, "Thou shalt not keep a saloon." Is this business, then, lawful for a saint? No, because we have a command to guide us. See Habakkuk 2:15: "Woe unti him that giveth his neighbor drink." Why? Because no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God (1 Cor. 6:19). Neither do I find in scripture these words: "Thou shalt not steal (take away) thy brother's good name," but I do read this solemn adjuration: "Thou shalt not bear false witness, neither shalt thou go up and down as a tale-bearer among thy brethren" (Lev. 19:16; Psalm 15:3).

I do not find in Christ's law to his household these words: "Thou shalt not go to the dance hall" (either to play or dance, it matters not which you do). Although this combination of words is not used, I do find an express command against doing so. See 2 Cor. 6:14: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." Could anything be more expressive? When you play for a dance you are certainly "yoked" for the time being with unbelievers in that you furnish the music and they the dance. It is a reiteration of the old command to the lineal descendant of Abraham: "Make no covenant with them them" (the evil nations). Israel did not heed this command from God, and what was the result? They lost the kingdom. Paul exhorts us to fear lest we fall after their example.

In Ephesians 5:5 Paul tells us that no unclean person has any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ, and so a command is given in the seventh verse, "Be not ye therefore partakers with them." See the command in I Cor. 5:9 to not be in the company (yoked together with them) of fornicators. It needs no lengthy article to prove that very many of the company found at a public dance are unclean, are fornicators, that many are followers of Belial, that many are infidels and idolators, and we are expressly commanded to not be "yoked" with these.

Do you want further commands? The Bible is full of them. Peter says (1 Peter 2:21) that Christ left us an example that we should follow his steps. Have we any record that he "stepped" into an assembly of unclean idolators and unbelieving men and women and "yoked" himself with them, became one of them? There is positive evidence that he did not do this. "He (our high priest) was separate from sinners" (Hebrews 7: 26). Follow in his footsteps and we can not go wrong.

There is another scripture I want to point you to. It is found in Hebrews 3:14. Where did we find Christ as our personal Sovior? Where was the beginning of our confidence in him? Did we not have this great salvation brought to our notice and understanding by faithful members of the Church of God? Let us hold fast the beginning of our confidence.

So many scriptures crowd upon me I find it hard to bring this article to a close. One I wish you would ponder over, 1 Cor. 1:10. Here we are exhorted to be one mind and of one judgment. We can not therefore each one decide these things according to our own mind and judgment, for then we would not be one but many. The household of God would be divided, and Jesus says a house divided against itself can not stand. God has wisely given us instruction and commands that we may not be left to the darkness of conjecture or "think so." Does this all sound harsh and unsympathetic to you, my dear sister? God forbid that it should, for it is written with a great sense of my own weakness. We should all remember the injunction to consider oneself lest we also be tempted, and fall from our own steadfastness. Temptation does not come to all alike. That God is testing his church and each individual member in these last days to determine if we are "safe" to be entrusted with the "affairs" of the kingdom" is a self-evident fact. It is evidenced by the damnable heresies among us, by the individual falling away from the truth. Oh, let us be careful that we do not exchange our precious birthright for a mess of pottage!

One other thing, my dear sister—do not think I do not know just how you feel about providing for your little ones. I am a mother and am very poor. But even here God has not left us to our own judgment, but commands us not to do evil that good may come. God may make the wrath of man to praise him, but to us is given the exhortation, "Be not weary in well doing." Why these trails and privations are permitted to rest upon some and not others is not for us to question. I often think of a little poem by Sister Charles Thomas, "We'll be bigger by and by." When that which is perfect has come, what we see through a glass darkly now will then be made clear, and undoubtedly we will then praise God that we have been "afflicted." The Son of Man was made perfect through sufferings. Is the servant to be higher than his Lord?

God bless you, my sister, and bring you back to your first love, to the "beginning of your confidence," then all these things will right themselves. Remember the promise of Jesus: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you; for your heavenly father knoweth you have need of them." Brethren, I am amazed as I study God's word; amazed, not that he has left us without witness, but that at every step in the narrow way he has placed a guide post directing us how to go. May God help us all to be faithful a little longer, to not cast away our confidence which hath great recompense of reward; for yet a little while and we will be done forever with doubt, sorrow and suffering.

THE SABBATH

"And he was there with the Lord forty days and forty nights: he did neither eat bread nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tablet the words of the covenant. the ten commandments" (Ex. 34:28).

"And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon tablets of stone. And it came to pass at the end of forty days and forty nights that the Lord gave me the two tablets of stone, even the tablets of the covenant. So I turned and came down from the mount, and the two tablets of the covenant were in my two hands" (Deut. 4:13; 9:11, 15).

These scriptures show that the ten commandments were a covenant that God made with Israel. I can not find the fourth commandment in any other covenant. This covenant, the only one containing a command to keep the seventh day, was not made until 2500 years after the fall, and expired at the cross, continuing about 1500 years. This ten commandment covenant was made only with Israel. The Lord our God made a covenant with us (Israel) in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us who are all of us here alive this day" (Deut. 5:2, 3).

"And this I say, that the covenant(one made with Abraham) that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law (ten commandment covenant), which was 430 years after, can not disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect. For if the inheritance be of the law it is no more of promise: but God gave to Abraham by promise. Wherefore then serveth the law (keep the seventh day)? It was added because of transgressions till the seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was ordained by angels in the hands of a mediator" (Gal. 3:17-20). Now, unless it can be shown that the fourth commandment is found out side of this covenant made with Israel at Mt. Sinai, the references given above will show conclusively that there was no Sabbath given to men before Israel left Egypt, and that it was given to Israel only till the seed should come: therefore no one is required to keep that day in this age.

The question might be asked, Why did God give this fourth commandment to Israel only for a period of about 1500 years? The answer is found in the following words: "And remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out hence through a mighty hand, and by a stretched-out arm, therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day" (Deut. 5:15). They kept that day in memory of their deliverance from Egypt. We are to have a greater deliverance, also a greater Sabbath the thousand years reign of Christ, when the earth will rest from the curse (Rom. 8:21; Heb. 4:1-4, marg.). The old Sabbath was a shadow of this one, and ended at the cross, since then the people of God have entered by faith or anticipation the greater Sabbath (Col. 2:16, 17; Heb. 4:3; 10:1). We are to labor to enter this rest, or Sabbath (Heb. 4:11).

Those who hold to the old law are always speaking of a "moral law" and "a ceremonial law." The words "moral" and "ceremonial" are not found in the Bible. They add these words in face of the warning given in Deut. 4:2. The Bible in speaking of the law given by God through Moses to Israel at Mt. Sinai never speaks of it as two laws, but as "the law," "the law of God," "the law of Moses," etc.

The law embraced the ten commandments written upon stone and the part written in the book, all known as the law (Luke 2:22-24; Neh. 8:5-14). Those who hold to the law place great emphasis on Isa. 56:1-4; 58:12-14. At that age the law was over God's people, Israel, and a Gentile could come under the "yoke of bondage" by being circumcised (Ex. 12:43-49; Acts 15:1-30). Now we are not under the law (Rom. 10:4; Gal. 3:23-25; Rom. 6:14).

In the seventh chapter of Romans Paul shows that those who hold to the law can not be married to Christ, and to show what law he is speaking of he quotes the tenth commandment (Rom. 7:7). Did Christ, who is Lord of the Sabbath day, ever command any one to keep that day?

Paul was sent to the Gentiles to open their eyes. What does he say about keeping a day?

"One man esteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind" (Rom. 14:5).

Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years. I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain" (Gal. 4:10, 11).

Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath day (Col. 2:16).

Paul in speaking of the law calls it "the ministration of death," "the yoke of bondage" (II Cor. 3:7; Gal. 5:1). He says: "The law was not made for a righteous man, but for the ungodly, sinners, etc. 1 Tim. 1:9). In view of this statment can we hold to that law? The law is not of faith (Gal. 3:12). Can not give righteousness, and those who keep it are not justified (Gal. 2:16-20). The law can not give life (Gal. 3:21).

PROPER USE OF TALENT

A dear young sister says: "My music is my life; God gave me my talent to improve and cultivate, not to hide under a bushel." Very true, my sister, and we read that God gave David the same talent, and David gratefully used it to praise the name of God who gave it, and never did he use it to accomplish the shameful acts and debaucheries of a public ball or dance hall. Dear sister, use the talent as the great Giver intended you should use it, and it will prove a blessing to you and a crown of glory. But used as satan prompts it will surely prove a curse to you—a source of death, rather than life.

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58), the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:8), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). THE COMING OF ELIJAH

A Sermon by the Editor of "The Restitution," Delivered at Salem, Ohio, Before the Ohio Conference, August 25, 1912, and Stenographically Reported by Sister Gertrude Nutt

Text: Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the stautes and judgments. Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord; and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse" (Malachi 4.4-6).

Brethren, Sisters and Friends; it is sometimes the case, indeed it is often the case, that a text of Scripture can not be correctly read or expounded without taking into consideration the modifying and amplifying influence of the entire chapter where it occurs. Such a text is the one today about the sending of Elijah the prophet, and the work he is to do after he comes. That we may have the benefit of the context and all that is contained about the subject in the chapter, I will give you first

I. An analysis of the chapter.

First, the coming of Jesus Christ is expressed in the second verse as the "sun of righteousness rising with healing in his wings."

Secondly, a great day that "shall burn as an oven," and which will be introduced into the world by the sun of righteousness. His rays will go forth in resurrection power and bring from the dead not only the just, but also the unjust. In Matt. 13:38 Christ speaks of the wicked as seed: so when the Son of Man arises with healing in his wings the beams of light from his divine presence strikes down into the grave and brings to life the ungodly, or they could not be burned up "root and branch," as the first verse declares. I will say here in passing that the resurrection of the unjust is simultaneous with the resurrection of the just; bad seed come up as quickly under the laws of nature as good seed, weeds as soon as corn. The "sun of righteousness" will not have to shine a thousand years before the wicked come to life.

Thirdly, the resurrection of the saints. When the sun of righteousness shines out and quickens into life the ungodly the beams of light flashing out of his sides (Hab. 3:4) will have a healing effect upon the saints, for they "grow up" out of their graves like seed, and "go forth" like frisking calves of the stall to "tread down the wicked."

Fourthly, the coming of Elijah. The prophet takes the trouble in the latter part of the chapter to give the name of one by way of pre-eminence among the risen ones, namely, "Elijah the prophet," and then dilates upon his work prior to "this great dreadful day of the Lord," stating that it will be Israelitish in its nature: "He will turn the hearts of the fathers to the children," and thus do a great work of righteousness and restoration in the earth during the "times of restitution."

Now we want to study for a while this remarkable prophecy: "I will send you Elijah the prophet before the great day of the Lord comes." Many simple things in the Bible have been made the most difficult. Truth is not difficult, but perversions of the truth have mystified the people, and the result is we have this beclouding theory in regard to the coming of Elijah: Elijah by some process of transmigration comes to be somebody else! It is a popular belief that Elijah somehow managed to turn into John the Baptist! A few years since we had in Chicago a man named John Alexander Dowie, and he claimed to be "Elijah the Third." The text says that "Elijah the prophet" is to come, but somehow or other we have discovered that he cannot come; that a prophecy about Elijah must be a prophecy about some one else! John the Baptist is meant, John Dowie, and so on and so on. But

II. John the Baptist and Elijah are subjects of separate prophecies.

"I will send you Elijah the prophet" (Mal. 4:5). Here is a prophecy that declares Elijah will be sent. Here is one distinct prophecy about Elijah; there are other prophecies about John the Baptist. One is found in Malachi 3:4, which reads, "I will send my messenger." Another is in Isaiah 40:3; "The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, prepare ye the way ofthe Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God." Here are prophecies about John the Baptist, they are the prophecies that the New Testament quotes and applies to John. Nowhere in the New Testament is there a quotation ofthe prophecy of the coming of Elijah applied to John the Baptist. To show you that this affirmation is correct, let me read Matt. 3:3: "For this is he that was spoken of by he prophet Esaias, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight;" this is quoted from Isaiah 40:3: "The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, prepare ye the way ofthe Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God." Mark 1:2: "As it is written in the prophets, Behold I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before three;"

this is quoted from Malachi 3:10, "Behold, I will send my messenger and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant whom ye delight in: Behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts." And in Luke 3:5: "And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins; as it is written in the book of Esaias the prophet, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. Every valley shall be exalted and every mouutain and hill shall be brought low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways shall be made smooth." In John 1:23 John was asked who he was, and his answer is, "I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias." Now, in the Old Testament we have a prophecy about the coming of Elijah; we also have prophecies about the coming of John the Baptist. There are two distinct and separate prophecies concerning these two men; it necessarily follows that they must have distinct, separate and personal fulfillments.

In harmony with this thought we find that the Jews in Christ's day.. expected a literal and personal fulfillment of the prophecy about Elijah's coming. In the 16th chapter of Matthew we have in the 14th verse the statement: "Whom do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?" They replied, "Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some, Elias, and others Jeremias, or one of the prophets. He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Here we find, then, an expectation on the part of Christ's contemporaries that Elias and Jeremias and other prophets would appear again. Matt. 17:10-12: "And his disciples asked him, saying, Why, then, say the scribes that Elias must first come? And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall come, and restore all things. But I say unto you, That Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. Likewise shall also the Son of Man suffer of them." Notice, John the Baptist had already come when Jesus was talking in this interview, and yet after his appearance the Savior says that "Elijah truly shall come."

John's coming did not, then, from the Lord's standpoint, fulfill the prophecy of Elijah's coming. Confirmation of this explanation is found in John 1:19: "And this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou? And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ. And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I AM NOT. Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No." John denied being Christ; he denied being Elijah as emphatically as he did being the Messiah; therefore, it is impossible that John the Baptist could have fulfilled the prophecy about the coming of Elijah.

Before leaving this part of my subject, however, let me observe that there were similarities between Elijah and John; they were not identical as persons, but there were similarities between them; which accounts for the statement in Matt. 17:11-12. The reason the Savior could say that "Elijah is come already," is given in Matt. 11:11-15 where we read: "Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist; notwithstanding, he that is least of the kingdom of heaven is greater than he. And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. For all the prophets and law prophesied unto John. And if ye will receive it, this is Elias, which was for to come. He that hath ears to hear let him hear." In Luke 1:17 we have further explanation given: "And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just; to make ready a people prepared for the Lord."

In 2 Kings we have the statement that when the King of Moab sent messengers to Elijah, he called down fire from heaven and they were burned up. And in 2nd Kings 2:9-16 a whirlwind carried him up into heaven, and as he went up Elisha said, "I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me." The spirit and power of Elijah passed from Elijah to Elias, and on to John the Baptist. I may go farther and say that upon every true Christian there rests "the spirit and power of Elijah" to some extent. For in James 5:16, when he is exhorting the brethren to confess their faults one to another, and to pray one for another that they may be healed, the apostle says that the fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much, and then declares: "Elijah prayed that it might not rain and it rained not on the earth for three years and six months. And he prayed again and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit." Here the power of Elijah's spirit and the efficacy of his prayers, thank God, are possible actualities for all the people of God. No wonder then "the Spirit and power of Elijah" were transmitted to John the Baptist; they are for all followers of Jesus Christ to a greater or lesser extent.

Turning again to our text, it distinctly says that when the great and terrible day of the Lord comes, there shall come out of his sides bright gleams of light (Hab. 3:4; mar.); they penetrate into the darkness of hades. It says distinctly that simultaneously with this great day, or at least in quick succession with it, Elijah the prophet is to appear again. "Elijah the prophet" does not mean John the Baptist, John Alexander Dowie, or anybody else; it means "Elijah the prophet."

A person who squanders away his fortune in rioting and profuseness is neither just to himself nor to others; for by conduct of this kind his superfluities flow in an irregular channel, and those that are the most unworthy are the greatest sharers of them—persons do not fail to censure him when his substance is exhausted.

No gentleman will ever use the power which the knowledge of an offence, a false step, or an unfortunate exposure of weakness gives him merely to enjoy the power of humiliating his neighbor.

THE FOOLISH SHEEP

A Parable by S. H. Thomas

A certain shepherd had charge of a goodly flock of sheep, which were his pride and joy. They had come into the fold under his tender care, and for years they listened for his voice and were guided by his counsel in all things, and he was very happy with them and they with him. But one night wolves from the dark woods came prowling around the fold. They beckoned and whispered to the sheep and told them of the joys of the green forests and distant mountains, where they had never been. They told them they were foolish to spend their lives in that little fold, and on these barren hills, when the world is so big and the distant woods and mountains so beautiful, cool and inviting and filled with everything that is nice and enjoyable and things good to eat.

Their voice was soft and purring, like the song of a kitten, and when they smiled they were careful not to show their cruel fangs, and their sharp claws they kept closely sheathed out of sight. But the old shepherd knew them well as dangerous enemies seeking to destroy his flock. Therefore he earnestly counseled his sheep to avoid them, to draw closer around the fire where peace and safety was, and go not near the outer enclosure where wolves and serpents prowled, nor hold any conversation with them. For they are filthy, evil and dangerous, and surely are come to destroy you. But these foolish sheep, for the first time, refused to listen to and be guided by their aged shepherd, whose greatest earthly care and pleasure was their welfare.

They said: "Our shepherd is growing old and cranky. These wolves are not dangerous. They are kind and gentle to us, and it is quite evident that they love us equally as much as does our timid, fussy old shepherd. We have often admired those beautiful mountains and green woods away off there beyond our pasture, but our old shepherd has ever refused to lead us there. So now come, let us leap over this fence and go with these nice, kind wolves and share with them the joys of freedom! We have lived too long in this stupid old pasture."

Over the fence they went, and the dark woods swallowed them up and they began to live like wolves and very soon a marvelous change began. Their beautiful wool, so silky and white, became coarse and dark like wolves' hair, and they began to grow fangs, and cruel claws, and in all things soon lost that purity and innocence which by nature belongs to sheep, and became evil and ravenous as the wolves around them.

Dear ones, this is my little parable of the foolish sheep. I will now give you the interpretation thereof. The sheep are a company of young people who have taken upon themselves the name of God and have agreed to enter his service. The shepherd is the dear old leader who first showed them the way of life and to whom they have been accustomed to go with confidence, for advice and counsel upon questions of faith and duty and whose greatest earthly pleasure has been to guide and watch them grow strong in the truth from year to year. The bright warm fire, around which he invites them to draw in time of perplexity and danger, is the love of God. The wolves that come prowling around the outer enclosure of the fold are all evil, worldly pleasures and fleshly lusts, such as public balls and dance halls, gambling dens and games of chance, saloons and strong drink, houses of ill fame and disreputable theaters and places of questionable amusement. The green woods and distant mountains are where the wolves live and practice their unholy calling. The change in the coat of the sheep and the growing of fangs and claws is the invariable consequence to a person who associates with them. They soon become like them. The fence over which the foolish sheep leap is the law of God, beyond which a true child of his may not go.

Should this little parable chance to meet the eye of any dear ones who are now making the fatal leap, or who are listening to the seductive whispers and purrings of wolves, I beg of you, dear ones, return ye unto God and your faithful old shepherd.

IS "PREPAREDNESS FOR WAR" SENSIBLE OR CONSISTENT WITH BIBLE TEACHING?

(Reprint from the New York Evening Post)

What wonderful things are happening in these days! And these events seem clearly to point to great errors and misconceptions in the days preceding, for otherwise things that are would not exist. Perhaps the explanation is that men and women of the past have not sought earnestly to find out what truth is, for the reason that they have preferred to secure temporary ends and not best results.

A striking illustration is the different interpretations given to the Bible, which have resulted in the formation of many sects and denominations existing among the prominent nations of the world. One result that should not surprise us is that Woodrow Wilson, the President of the United States, has urged "preparedness for war" that would cost the United States about two billions of dollars, upon which interest must be paid by taxing the people, and an additional large sum raised to support the "preparedness" to be maintained. The excuse or reason which the President alleges as the justification for his stand is that the Bible clearly requires it, and that this teaching is to be found in five verses of the thirty-third chapter of Ezekiel.

I believe the true interpretation of this passage is that in those days and within reach of the small towns or villages of the Israelites there were Bedouin or Nomadic tribes that lived in tents in the desert and made excursions at will to secure support by robbery and who were quite ready to take captives to be held for ransom or other purposes, and even to commit murder. Very naturally, for the protection of those small communities a watchman was engaged to blow a trumpet that would be a warning to the people and arouse them for defense if there should be occasion. Then follows a lesson as to the duty of faithfulness and responsibility which would attach to the watchman if he slept or was not otherwise alert to keep the people from harm.

Our President, who formerly was at the head of a university where religious training is a great factor, says that these six verses previously suggested by Mr. Roosevelt, have influenced his recommendation. It is pitiable indeed that a religious convention, recently held at Atlantic City, should have accepted the President's exposition of Scripture and endorsed his proposed action. In this action other parts of the Old Testament, including Ezekiel 3:17-21, which declares Ezekiel's office to be that of a spiritual watchman and commissioned to warn the people to turn from their wickedness, or they will die in their sins, and the whole of the New Testament, have been entirely disregarded.

There is no reference to God's commands either in the Old Testament or New Testament, and God's and Christ's existence and claims are left out of consideration. Likewise, there is no admission of the truth that every man has a conscience which he is bound to satisfy. Neither is there any recognition of the fact that there is an eternity, a future accountability, and that throughout the Bible there is a constant reminder that God's claims come first and earthly duties are secondary. Neither is the fact considered that we are commanded to look upon things seen as temporal, and those unseen as superior and eternal.

Our progressive President and his followers also make nothing of this New Testament teaching: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride in life, is not of the Father, but of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

And in Revelations, 21:3-8, we have the assurance: "And I heard a great voice out of the throne saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he shall dwell with them, and they shall be his peoples, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God; and he shall wipe away every tear from their eyes; and death shall be no more; neither shall there be mourning, nor crying, nor pain any more; the first things are passed away. And he that sitteth on the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he saith, write; for these words are faithful and true. And he said unto me, They are come to pass. I am the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely. He that overcometh shall inherit these things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son. But, for the fearful, and unbelieving, and abominable, and murderers, and fornicators, and sorcerers, and idolators, and all liars, their part shall be in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death."

In the Sermon on the Mount there are some wonderful teachings, which include these two:

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." and "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled."

Do our would-be leaders who are so much influenced by their translation of Ezekiel believe that men are not acceptable to God and will not inherit eternal life who are not pure in heart and do not hunger and thirst after righteousness, and that it is a right and duty to take these things into account in urging that we must be "prepared" and have a large standing army who will kill and destroy if, through diplomacy or mercantile selfishness, as Mr. Ford claims, we are drawn into conflict?"

Let us now turn to some of the teachings of the Old Testament: In Genesis, ninth chapter, we find: "And God blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them, Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth. Every moving thing that liveth shall be meat for you; even as the green herb have I given you all things. But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof shall ye not eat. And surely your blood of your lives will I require; at the hand of every beast will I require it, and at the hand of man, and at the hand of every man's brother, will I require the life of man. Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed (and the reason is given), for in the image of God made he man."

In Exodus 20, we have a record of Ten Commandments given with great impressiveness by Moses from Mount Sinai (in which we are forbidden to kill or to steal). Most religious people have accepted this command as binding for all time. Throughout the world it has been adopted as a proper basis for determining what is wise and just in human government.

Christ taught the present obligation of the Ten Commandments when there came to him a man with the inquiry: "What shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" His answer was: "Thou knowest the Commandments. Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Do not defraud, Honor thy father and mother."

If the need for "preparedness" is Scriptural, what shall we say of Psalms, and Job, and other books and prophets who so urgently declare that God is almighty and trust in him indispensable. Is it right to teach them and permit them to be regularly read in the churches? What will our progressive leaders say to the charge or to the inference that these teachings are farcical, or that we have no business to take them into account in determining what God's will and methods are.

There is another very impressive teaching in Jeremiah, seventeenth chapter, which the searcher for truth and right living cannot afford to pass over. Jeremiah says: "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it?" As this is the state of the unrenewed human heart among all nations, can there be success or happiness, nationally or individually, if this is not considered as essential to a successful life and to secure the blessing of God, who estimates and rewards us according to what we are, for we are taught that man looks at the outward appearance, but God looks at the heart.

There is another very important point that should be considered in connection with "preparedness" that is very practical, but to which I have not seen allusion. It is that with the wonderful inventiveness of the age and the numerous changes, even in the art of war, we cannot be sure that any preparations we are making today will meet the needs of the years to come. As we have now to provide for the improvements, as they are called, in the artillery, aeroplanes that can attack from a great height in the air, submarines which destroy so many ships, both warlike and used for commercial purposes, poisonous gases which will undoubtedly be made more deadly, does it not seem unwise to incur the immense expense proposed with the belief that we will secure a protection that will be ample.

It has been lately asked by a German official: "How can the United States disapprove of war when they achieved their own independent existence through war?" I reply that thus far it has been a very costly undertaking and we have not yet seen the end. We were obliged to begin our national existence with slavery, and a real unity has been secured only by an immense loss of life and bitterness of feeling between the North and South, which is not yet wholly removed. But this has left us with another serious problem on our hands, of which no man yet knows the solution, and that is the disposal of about 9,000,000 negroes with whom the whites are not willing to associate. On the other hand, who knows how much better an arrangement might have been made had we trusted in God, and with Bible in hand conferred with the English nation as to what settlement would be wisest and best for all parties concerned. The French-Canadians have not yet accepted the nationality which Great Britain sought to force upon them, but are maintaining a feeling of antagonism and more or less hatred.

How can any system of government endure or be conscientiously accepted when it compels its citizens, who have accepted the Ten Commandments, to kill their fellow men and destroy their property, the very things which these commandments forbid them to do.

Why should men like Mr. Wilson wallow in the mire of worldliness and indefiniteness while there is an all-sufficient highway of spiritual truth which Christ declares himself to be.

The devil had the effrontery to ask Christ to bow down to him and worship him. Is not his influence apparent in the attitude of Mr. Wilson and his followers?

Can a reliable ruler or teacher ignore Christ's teaching that he is the light of the world, and who declares: "He that is not with me is against me. And he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad."

Can a trained soldier who is willing to kill and prepares for it, possibly enter the Kingdom of God in which there is "no spot or wrinkle or any such thing?"

It seems incredible that the President, his cabinet and other advisers should urge the people to do just what the nations of Europe have done for a long time and with such lamentable results. Each of the great powers of Europe has been in a condition of "preparedness" and each one has sought to keep a little ahead of the others.

Let us recall a part of the cost which is being paid by each of the parties whose example Mr. Wilson wants us to follow. It is practical bankruptcy of all, practice of and indifference of cruelty, loss of religious faith, defiance of God, a lower standard of morality, an enormous death list of men unprepared for the other world, suspension of manufacture, a multitude of widows and orphans and numerous citizens or subjects who have been crippled for life, the absolute heartlessness developed in the sinking of ships conveying food to starving Belgians, hospital ships which are carrying the sick and wounded, and the destruction of unarmed vessels for conveying freight and passengers which will take a large sum of money and a long time to replace.

In conclusion I will only say that the proposition presented to the American people is one which wholly ignores God, is infidel in its spirit, assumes there is no eternity to be considered, no further accountability, no deceitfulness above all things to be removed, and no prayer and divine leadership required.

NATIONAL BEREAN NOTICE

The Executive Board of the National Berean Society of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith, will meet on April 22d and 24th at the home of the president, 5439 Ohio St., Chicago, Ill. The chairmen of the different committees are cordially invited to attend this meeting. As far as possible will the members come on the afternoon of April 21st, as the meeting will be called at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. Notify the president of the time of arrival and station and you will be met. All officers will please bring or send reports up to date. Arrangements will be made at this meeting for our annual conference. So if any Berean has any topic that he wishes discussed or has any plans for our conference, please send in before April 15.

LEILAE WHITEHEAD, Pres.
ELLA DEMONT, Rec. Sec.
EVELYN K. HARSCH, Cor. Sec.

On the first Sunday of February, Brother L. O. Gilliland, 6437 Yale Ave., Chicago, was buried in the waters of baptism to arise to a new life, an heir of God's blessed promises. Brother Frank Day officated. We extend to our brother the right hand of fellowship and wish him godspeed on his new journey.

LIFE'S BATTLE

The young who have had to plod their way through life alone, and perhaps from years of infancy, without guidance of father or mother, and who have made a successful struggle, are men and women worthy of all praise. They have been exposed to every danger, and, above all, to danger of loss of faith. As orphans they had but few friends; and, if lucky enough to find shelter in some asylum, they were there only long enough to learn what was absolutely necessary to get along with. They, above all others, can tell what a battle life is, and how discouraging is the contest when carried on alone. But from the cradle to the grave every man's experience is valuable, especially when the useful lesson which it teaches is not thrown away or forgotten.

It is no vanity for a man to pride himself on what he has honestly got and prudently uses.

A Chinese proverb says "one good word can warm three winter months."

EDITORIAL

From Sister Amy Weaver word reaches us that Sister Partlow, wife of Brother Marion Partlow, died on March 17th. We are sorry to hear of our brother's loss and pray that God will comfort and bless him in his bereavement.

DANCING

An Editorial Dedicated to "A Sister" and the Church to Which She Belongs

The Shakers and Mormons hold that dancing is a religious exercise, and should be practiced by all sects to the glory of God. Accordingly, dancing is a regular practice in their church services and forms part of their devotions. As they pretend to sustain this practice by the authority of the Bible, it becomes necessary to direct attenion to the passages of Scripture which they depend upon to support dancing as a part of divine worship.

Dancing of the Righteous

The following texts are quoted to prove that dancing is a religious exercise and should be employed in the worship of God: Ex. 15:20-21; Judges, 21:20-21; 1 Sam. 18:6; 2 Sam. 6:12-14; 1 Chron. 15:25-29; Psa. 149:2. The reader is requested to turn in his Bible and read these Scriptures critically and attentively. He will discover that each text justifies the remarks following:

1. The dance was not a regularly established practice of divine worship, like the Mormon jamboree, but an occurrence that only took place on extraordinary occasions.

2. The dance occurred in every instance at times of signal favors, exceptional deliverances, mighty triumphs, specially wrought by the hand of God, as, for instance, the crossing of the Red Sea, etc. The "time to dance" (Eccl. 3:4) was when God had wrought some special and miraculous deliverance, or gave some great victory to the military hosts of Israel. This was a "time to dance"—not for pleasure, amusement, hilarity and "to kill time," but was an expression of devout thanksgiving and heartfelt gratitude to God.

3. The dancing always took place in open daylight; not one occurred in the night. No dancing after the shades of night had fallen, to say nothing of dancing all night.

4. If the men danced, they danced alone; if women danced, they danced alone. In no instance was there mixed dancing. Dancing conducted in this way today would bankrupt the dancing business from pole to pole!

5. The dancing was not for fun, amusement, pleasure or hilarity; it was not for healthful exercise, relaxation or diversion; it was not for entertainment, art, or gracefulness; nor to show how accurately they could step to music; but it was an expression of their most extatic joys, their most devout gratitude to God. It was performed by the sanctified, pious and godly, not by the wild, thoughtless and ungodly herd of sinners, "the lovers of pleasure more than the lovers of God." (2 Tim. 3:4.)

6. And lastly, while dancing was a religious exercise and practiced on occasions of extraordinary interference of the Lord on their behalf, and was practiced before the giving of the law, and also under the law, no such religious exercise can be found under the headship of Jesus Christ. He and his apostles never danced in their devotions; they gave no intimation of any such an exercise forming part of "the new and living way," which it was their privilege to open to mankind. The New Testament never speaks of believers dancing no matter how wonderful the victories, as, for instance, when Jesus rose from the dead; when he ascended; when he gave the spirit on the day of Pentecost with all its wonder-working manifestations, when three thousand were added to the church in one day; when Samaria and the Gentiles received the gospel message, etc. The record says they had "great joy," and the love of God is said to have been "shed abroad in their hearts," they were unspeakably happy; but they never expressed their joy and gratitude in a dance. Mormon and Shaker dancing finds no support in the Jewish Scripture; and certainly there is none for it in the New Testament.

"A Time to Dance"

"Dancing Christians," frequently quote Eccl. 3:4 to justify the dance, "a time to dance." They argue from this statement that there must be a "time" when dancing is a legal act, or else the text means nothing. But as a matter of fact the phrase they quote is only part of the text. If we garble the word of God we shall never understand it. Eccl. 3:4 is antithetical; "a time to dance" is placed in contrast with "a time to mourn." To say there is "a time to dance" is simply to say what is an obvious truism, namely, that human life, amid its numerous perplexities and vicissitudes, has, for most people, a time in which to be merry. "To dance," with Solomon, is a symbolic way of saying "be joyful." "A Sister" and all reflecting readers must see that this is the meaning of Solomon's language here, since "to dance" is opposed "to mourn." Instead of saying "joy" Solomon says "dance," and rightly enough, since lively motion of the body is a natural language to express joyful and mirthful emotions. This sensible and scriptural exegesis of Solomon's words excludes from their purview the idea that regular occasions for dancing are allowable and legitimate. "A time to dance" no more condones and recommends balls at stated times for dancing, than the preceding phrase, "a time to mourn" recommends getting up melancholy occasions for the purpose of engaging in ceremonial outcries of grief. The contrast in Solomon's mind, and which he has faultlessly expressed in Eccl. 3:4, is between joy, on the one hand, expressing itself physically with motion, and grief, on the other hand, expressing itself with gesture. This is the only text we have ever heard quoted by "dancing Christians" to justify dancing, and we submit that it fails utterly to countenance, much less to recommend, the dance when reasonably, contextually and scripturally interpreted.

COMMUNICATIONS

"What Thou Seest, Write * * * * and Send * * * * To the Churches" (Rev. 1:11)

Dear Restitution:

Some time since I read a letter regarding "A Sister," who for the purpose of supporting herself and family used her musical talent in futhering the dance, and for so doing was likely to lose her fellowship in the local brotherhood.

The first thought that arose in my mind was: By what authority would any man, or body of men, ex-communicate any brother or sister for such a cause? "Let him that is without sin first cast a stone at her."

The second thought was: To what extent had the local brotherhood offered assistance to this sister, thus making the selling of her services for the purpose mentioned unnecessary? "Faith, if it hath not works, is dead. " Read James 2:15-17.

Third: Is it a sin to dance, to play music, to be happy and joyful? No. by all means, no. "Let your moderation be known to all men."

As an individual, I neither dance, smoke or use tobacco in any form, drink intoxicating liquors, attend theaters, or do some other things that "some very good people" would call sinful; but because I do not do these things, have I a right to judge my brother or sister—who might do anyone, or all of them, especially when they do not do them to excess? My own answer is no. "Judge not, that we be not judged." Read Matt. 7:1-5.

No one living believes more in righteous living than I. The Scriptures tell me to "let my light shine," and I believe in doing so. The Scriptures also tell me to refrain even from the appearance of evil. My conscience would permit me to do many things that for example's sake I refrain from doing, and I deserve no praise for my self-denial; but in my reading of God's holy word I fail to find any passage that empowers me to be my brother's judge, or because my brother does not live up to my standard of morals—of themselves not essential to salvation—that I can raise myself up and cast him out to the dogs. One passage I have found, and delight to read it often is: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity (love), I have become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal."

Salvation is not of, by, or from, works; it is by faith in Jesus being the Christ, the Son of the living God, and as such our Saviour and Redeemer; and having such a faith, works are sure to follow. But as it took years for us to grow from infancy to manhood, so will it take time for us to "grow in grace and in knowledge." And even though we now are covered with the cloak of Christ's righteousness, we never will reach the perfection of a "full man in Christ Jesus" until our Lord returns and makes all things new. Therefore, in the meantime, let us live a life of love, always remembering that: "Now abideth faith, hope, charity (love), these three; but the greatest of these is CHARITY (love.)"

Your brother awaiting the King,

ALEXANDER D. DONALDSON.

Dear Brethren:

I have just read Brother Thomas' article and your editorial, stating that you had lost a number of subscriptions because of your stand on the Sonship question. The Restitution has been a welcome visitor in my father's family ever since I was a baby, and after his death it has been a weekly visitor in my home, and I would rather miss my dinner than to miss my old friend The Restitution.

Your stand on the Sonship question is the Bible stand. Those who believe the same things are yoked together, and we are commanded not to be yoked up with unbelievers (II Co. (6:14-18.)

Now, on which side of this question does God stand? (Psa. 2:7; Matt. 3:17; 17:5.)

What does Jesus himself say? (Jno. 5:17-26; 10:29-36.)

Where do the angels stand on this subject? (Luke 1:30-35.)

What do the apostles have to say? (Jno. 20:31; Acts 9:20.)

That Christ was the only begotten Son of God, is the foundation upon which He built the church. (Matt. 16:13-20).

Now, Brother Huggins, I pledge myself to send you two subscriptions because of your stand on this subject.

Brother Durham, please take up this matter and as my friends of Guthrie Grove, who love the truth, to rally up to the support of the old Restitution so that its voice may still be heard in defense of the truth. Brother J. Manking Case, I know that you brethren of Gallimore Gap are sound and like the old paper. What can you do? I hope to come down for a meeting the last of July and find the paper in many new homes, because of its stand on this question.

Brother L. R. Rhodes, I have found you a true soldier. Please take up the work at Liberty and let's hear a good report from there.

Brethren of the Church of God, I am one of the poorest ofthe church, but I believe that by a little self-denial upon the part of each one we can place The Restitution on a sound financial basis.

Let's try it.

J. H. ANDERSON.

Dear Brother:

I know you have forgotten me, but I have not forgotten you nor any of the dear brothers and sisters who taught we the truth. I am searching always for more truths and trying to dig deeper and learn more of that dear Savior who suffered and died that we might live. The Restitution is a welcome weekly visitor; I would be at a loss without it

Now, dear Brother Huggins, are we not supposed to help and love each brother and sister as ourselves? If so, let us all help the sister who wants to waste her talent on worldly pleasures. We can't be for and against the truth at the same time. We must die to the world and use our talents for His cause. If I only had more, or just a little talent to use! But I depend on the brothers and sisters who know more than I, but I do not sit down because I am poor. Thank the Lord for the health I have and strength to work I pray the Lord to bless and keep me close to Him, for I can not do without His loving mercies. I need Him all the time.

I want you to ask that dear sister that if she was sure the Lord was coming this evening where would she rather be found? In the berry field or in the dance hall? Don't tell who I am, brother. I am so weak, but I love the Lord, so I hate to see those who have good talents use them on worldly affairs.

A TALK WITH BRETHREN

Dear Brethren:

It has been a long time since I have written a letter to our paper, and a long time since I have read many in it. I am writing to the isolated ones particularly. It seems very difficult to bring the effort for us into working order. Let us do what each one of us CAN do—speak often one to another this year, while the Lord tarries, through our beloved paper. You remember what Brother Huggins said two years ago: "Let us make 'Communications' a bright spot in The Restitution this year."

Brother Thos. Wilson said in one of the "Last Days" words something like this: "One good personal heart-to-heart talk is better than a sermon." I am not quoting his words, but his idea. Let us do this and not leave undone any effort to get the isolated work started. If we wait before helping until we see what the effort amounts to: if we wait until there are no divisions, we will be too late. The harvest of this age will be past. If all waited to see what was done, nothing would be the result. There will be divisions until the Lord takes out the faithful. Why? That those who are approved may be manifest. If we cannot stand the test of our allegiance to the truth and remain loyal to it through all tasks, we will not be "safe to trust with the work in the age to come." I read something so appropriate in my morning paper I want to quote it: "God should have the best—the best of a man's life. God should be given the whole of life. We should not spend the greater portion of our means on ourselves and reserve our mites for God. Men of the church should be resourceful and persistent, knowing they shall attain their object of they faint not. God's honor and God's work should be uppermost in our minds. We should sink self-interest utterly and be untiring in our efforts to promote God's cause and be a blessing to our brethren."

One thing pleased me in "A Sister's" letter in the late Restitution. Her appeal to the church to help her decide a grave question. When one is willing to hear and heed the voice of the church he is on the road to the right decision. When one thus asks the help ofthe church, it is the duty of those who feed Christ's sheep to respond. I hope this question will not be like others I have seen receive little attention. It is a COMMAND that the strong among the elect should "lift up" the "weak."

Brethren, I received a good point from Sister McClelland which I wish to "pass on." It is concerning the very foundation of our faith. She says: "Did you ever notice that when the angel came to announce the birth of Isaac, he told Abraham, 'Sarah, thy wife, shall bear thee a son.' The same expression is made to Zacharias, 'Thy wife Elizabeth shall bear thee a son.' But when the angel came to announce the birth of Jesus he does not go to Joseph and tell him, "Mary, thy wife, shall bear thee a son,' but he went to Mary direct. Joseph is not considered at all." How significant this is!

A dear brother in a late letter says: "I am not nearly so enthusiastic and sure of the coming of our dear Lord and a realization of all our hopes as a year ago." From other things in his letter I think the dimming of his hope has come through the course taken by the war in Europe. There is a Scripture that will help us just now. It is this: "Here is the patience and the faith of the saints." I ask, "Is it true that the war is going the wrong way to fulfill prophecy?" I think not. If Russia is the "latter day" king of the north, then she is the one who is to sit in the seat of the Turk. If England and France had gone into Constantinople they must have given it to Russia. Would they have done so? Russia is moving in the right direction.

I quote again from a paper which undoubtedly knows nothing of Ezekiel's prophecy. A daily newspaper. The editor says (speaking of the Grand Duke Nicholas): "He has already dealt Turkey the most staggering blow (the capture of Erzerum) she has suffered since the war began. He has taken the strongest fortress in Asia. Turkey, at any rate, seems doomed. If the allies win it is likely that Russia will be the deciding factor. For all her expenditures of money and men she will have prestige—new-born nationality—and probably Constantinople." How significant when we remember that God says to Russia: "Be thou prepared and prepare for thyself. * * * Be thou a guard unto them." (The great company with her.)

Will any alliance stand in the way? We know from the sure word of prophecy that the present alliance cannot stand. Look back a short time ago to the allied forces of the Balkans. How soon they separated and came against their former allies. What has happened undoubtedly will happen again in the near future. Just now we need faith and patience when we remember the long preparations the nations made for this struggle, the vast sums of money spent for engines of war, the gigantic armies recruited, when we hear the little nation saying: "I am strong." Can we doubt that this is the struggle referred to in Joel 3:9, 10?

Brethren, before the last battle comes we are with the Lord if so be we cast not away our confidence. If we can say with Paul: "I have fought a good fight (contended earnestly for the truth), I have guarded the faith" (not giving place to evil even for one hour).' Yet a little while and we shall be forever with the Lord, if we are only faithful and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel. There is the patience and the faith of the saints. FLORA A. WOOD.

"SET THY HOUSE IN ORDER"

As we now approach the time of year when good housekeepers set about to put their houses in order—in other words they sweep, dust, clean obscure places not used so often; wash windows, woodwork, sweep down cobwebs, etc., and in so doing make the house and themselves ready for the coming summer.

Let us look at it in a spiritual way. We, who have been washed in baptism, are we being satisfied with that one house-cleaning time? Are we not conscious of the fact that every day dust and cobwebs find a place in our "house," if we do not wipe them away with a daily cleaning by being freshened in using God's "broom," his divine word? If we feel cobwebs have found a lodging place in our minds, a study of our Bible is a sure cleanser; and will cause the dusty, badly ventilated brain to be renewed with zeal and love of the truth.

If our "windows" are so smeared with worldly pleasure marks we can not see the beauties of God's wonderful promises to all those who hold out faithfully. It is time, brothers and sisters, for us to "set our house in order" before the Lord comes and finds us with unclean hands, and the oil in our lamps dried up

"Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle: who shall dwell in thy holy hill? He that walketh uprightly and worketh righteousness (set your house in order), and speaketh the truth in his heart" (Psa. 15:1, 2.) It has been said "one of the sublimest things in the world is plain truth." Can we live in the truth if covered with the dust of neglect? He who shall come, will come and will not tarry ;and as we see that day approaching, let us be, therefore, followers of God, as dear children; and walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and has given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling Savior, and speaking to ourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in our hearts to the Lord, giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, submitting ourselves one to another in the fear of God.

These are perilous times, brothers and sisters, and we must not neglect to "set our house in order," lest the Lord comes and finds us covered with worldly germs, unfit to enter His glorious Kingdom. Abstain from all appearance of evil. And the very God of pain sanctify you wholly. Let us pray that our whole spirit, soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

OBITUARY

H. A. Seeking

Hiram A. Seeking was born on November 27, 1861, at Le Clair, Iowa; died on February 4, 1916, at St. Joseph, Mo., aged 55 years, two months and seven days. He was married to Miss Nancy A. Jackson on April 7, 1891, at Iowa City, Iowa. To this union two children were born. One died in infancy. The bereaved wife and one daughter, Miss Ona Seeking, and three sisters, are left to mourn the loss of a husband, father and brother.

He was a reader of The Restitution and through its columns he learned the truth. As there was no one near him in the faith, a Mr. Raigers of the Christian denomination baptized him. He also officiated at his funeral. Now he sleeps in Jesus to await the coming of him who said: "He that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

THE REJECTED ARKS

For the Young People

(By Auntie Wince)

In some such strain, no doubt, did the antediluvians talk. Unmoved by Noah's solemn warnings of the nearness of the day of doom, the mockings, the jestings, the dancing and the marrying and the giving in marriage went on until the very day that Noah entered into the ark and God shut to the door. The camels, the oxen, the sheep that these mocking men had bought, were shut in their quarters; the great wedding feast lasting for many days was over. The revellers felt a little queer, but still they laughed. Seven days more and the flood was upon the earth. The great ring of waters that revolved around our planet, as Saturn's rings revolve around it—that these poor deluded men had thought so stable—had burst in twain and with an awful roar was pouring its waters through the opened windows of heaven. The axis of the earth, tipped by the mighty hand of God—"All the fountains of the great deep were broken up," "all the high hills that were under the whole heaven were covered," "and the mountains were covered," "all flesh died that moved upon the earth."

There was no time to move up the mountain-sides, even if safety had been there; no hiding place, no refuge from the storm. "The long suffering of God had waited" for one hundred and twenty years, but the ark had been rejected, His loving mercy scorned, and so the old world of men were left to the fate they had deliberately chosen and perished.

God has prepared another ark in these later days and Christ, instead of Noah, is the preacher. Let men jeer at this later ark, and reject it, just as they did the first one, making mock of the very ordinance that serves as a figure of the older ark

You, my dear young friends, do not know how fearfully wicked the world has become. I am glad you do not. God said it would be like Sodom and Gomorrah. It is. The same vile sins are practiced, the same idolatrous worship is carried on. Men defiantly deny the existence of our dear heavenly Father. They deny the efficacy of prayer. They deny the providence of God. They deny the truth of both the Old and New Testament. They do not believe that Christ was divine. They do not believe that he died and rose. And are tempted to believe that He never existed. They deny that any miracle was ever performed and declare that they "will fight Christianity as long as they live;" that law and order must be overthrown, and the rights of property must be abolished--home and family ties be done away with and religion be destroyed.

You can imagine what kind of a world this would be. Could such a state of things be brought about? "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man." How was it in the days of Noah? "Man had corrupted his way upon the earth." "The earth was filled with violence." That is the very state of the earth now as this terrible war and the persistent massacre of the Jews and the Armenians demonstrate.

The ark is rejected. Men will not believe in Jesus, accept the gospel and be baptised that their sins may be washed away. "If the old world did not escape, how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"

Men do not want Jesus in their lives. They want to make money. They want to buy and sell camels and oxen and sheep. They have no time to study about arks, repentance and salvation.

But "God is not mocked, whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

What are you sowing, my dear young friends? The seeds that will bring forth death, or those that will bring forth fruit unto life everlasting?

Fifty years of righteous living—
  Who can count their worth in gold?
Who such treasure in possession
  E'er the priceless treasure sold?

Would you trade off such years? You can have such years. You can fight the good fight. It does not pay to fight any other kind. "Joy does not happen. It is the inevitable result of certain lines followed and of laws obeyed And is, therefore a matter of character."

Live right, believe the truth, follow Christ. Get into the ark and stay in it.

The day of doom is near You cannot wilfully reject Christ and be saved. You cannot dance with the world and be caught away with Christ when he comes. (Concluded)

FACTS ABOUT THE LAW OF GOD.

"His Law is a transcript of his own character." The Bible also teaches that "the character of God is expressed in his law"; thus:

God is "just" (Rom. 3:26).
His law is "just" (Rom. 7:12).
"God is true" (John 3:33).
His law is "true" (Neh. 9:13).
God "is pure" (1 John 3:3).
His law "is pure" (Ps. 19:7, 8).
"God is light" (1 John 1:5).
His "law is light" (Prov. 6:23).
"God is faithful" (1 Cor. 1:9).
His law is "faithful" (Ps. 119:86).
"The Lord is good" (Nahum 1:7).
His law "is good" (Rom. 7:12, 16).
God is "spiritual" (1 Cor. 10: 1-4).
"His law "is spiritual" (Rom. 7:14).
God "is holy" (Isa. 6:3; 1 Peter 1:15).
His "law is holy" (Ex. 20:8; Rom. 7:12).
God is "the truth" (John 14:6; 10:30).
His "law is the truth" (Ps. 119:142, 151).
God is "the life" (John 14:6; 10:30).
His law "is life" (John 12:50; Matt. 19:17).
God "is our righteousness" (Jer. 23:6, R. V.).
His law is "righteousness" (Psa. 119:172).
His law "is perfect" (Ps. 119:172).
God "is perfect" (Matt. 5:48; Heb. 2:10; 5:9).
His law "is perfect" (Ps. 19:7; James 2:12).
God "abideth ever" (John 8:35; Heb. 13:8).
His law stands "for ever" (Ps. 111:8; Matt. 5:17).—Sel.

UNCEASING BENEFICENCE

It is comparatively easy to do one important act of benevolence, but to continue day by day and year after year showing interest in others by what appear insignificant acts demands protracted effort. To consider the troubles of those around us and try to alleviate them, to be neighborly, in the widest sense of the word, to those among whom we dwell, yet not to neglect our homes or our social relations—all these take time and energy; but in the performance lie happiness and a cure for that unrest which preys on the unoccupied.

FACTORS FOR GOOD

No good impulse, no generous emotion, no heartfelt desire to do right is ever lost. We are, we must be, better than if we had not had it. But in proportion as it is deep it will not be transient. The memory of such moments will be with us, to strengthen and renew our courage. They are opportunities for good which we should count among our richest treasures. No one can tell how much he owes to them; nor need he be discouraged if they do not seem to be such powerful factors in his life as he would desire.

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852
A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF
The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). A THANKSGIVING POEM

I thank thee Lord, for light and joyous day;
For quiet night, when cares are laid away;
For springs to quench my thirst; for daily bread;
For kind smiles to me given, and kind words said,
That I can hear, that I can feel--and see—
But most, I thank Thee—for my faith in Thee.

THE COMING OF ELIJAH

A sermon by the Editor of The Restitution, delivered at Salem, O., August 25, 1912, and stenographically reported by Sister Gertrude Nutt.

Text: Mal. 4:4-6.

III. There is nothing incongruous about Elijah's reappearance and the assumption of his prophetic office in the earth: all of God's saints will grow up out of their graves and will go forth with the living saints at the resurrection, immortal governors of the earth and coadjutors of Jesus Christ in the administration of his kingdom.

To show you that this proposition is God's truth, let me invite your attention to Isaiah 32:1: "Behold a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." All agree that the king that is to reign is Jesus Christ; but this text shows that there is associated with Christ "princes" in the administration of the government. There are to be princedoms in the kingdom of God. Who are these princes? In Jeremiah 3:15 we read: "And I will give you pastors according to mine heart, which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding" When is he going to give these pastors? In the 17th verse we read: "At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem; neither shall they walk any more after the imagination of their evil heart." When Christ returns and becomes the king of all the earth; when Jerusalem becomes the throne of the Lord, his saints are princes—they are pastors after his own heart; they feed the people with knowledge and with understanding; and the blessed result is, the people they shepherd shall turn away from the imagination of their evil hearts.

I find in Jer. 23:3-8 an amplyfication of this thought: "And I will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds, and they shall be fruitful and increase. And I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them: and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall they be lacking, saith the Lord. Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous branch, and a king shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that they shall no more say, The Lord liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt, but, The Lord liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land." Jerusalem shall be saved, and the Branch and King associates with himself in this grand work "princes," "pastors," and "rulers." Is it strange, then, that Elijah should reappear at such a time to assist in the work?

We have been reading some Scriptures of prophecy which are general. Let us now become particular and show that God has actually mentioned certain saints by name as participants with him in kingly honor. Give your attention now to Ezekiel 34:23, 24, which reads: "I will set one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd. And I, the Lord, will be their God, and my servant David a prince among them; I, the Lord, have spoken it." Here he specifically states that David is to be one of the princes, shepherds and pastors, while in Ezek. 37:22 he says: "And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel, and one king shall be king to them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms and more at all." "And," continues verse 24, "David, my servant, shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd; they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes and do them." Now David had died a long time before this promise was made. How is it possible then for him to reappear and be a shepherd over the Israelitish people? People say, "I thought David had died and gone to heaven, and was praising God there with a harp; it sounds ridiculous that a time is coming when David is coming back to earth again to be a shepherd and king of Israel."

Well, friends, I find in Jeremiah 30:7-9 inclusive, these words: "Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it; it is even the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it. For it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord of hosts, that I will break his yoke from off thy neck, and will burst thy bonds, and strangers shall no more serve themselves of him; but they shall serve the Lord their God, and David, their king. WHOM I WILL RAISE UP UNTO THEM." Oh I see now: David must be "raised up unto them." The dead saints of God must be raised from the dead and associated with Christ in the official capacity of kings and rulers. In Hos. 3:4, 5 we have a declaration which is very appropriate to the subject: "For the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image; and without an ephod, and without teraphim; afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord, their God, and David, their king; and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days." David was a type of Christ, of course; but here, after "the Lord, their God," is mentioned, "David, their king," comes in for special and additional emphasis. It means Jesus Christ is coming back, David and all the saints of God will be raised up, and as God's princes and pastors in the earth, they will formulate laws from Jerusalem, the capital city, that will rule the world in righteousness, under Jesus Christ, the king of kings, and Lord of lords.

That we make no mistake in regard to our position in this matter, we will turn to the New Testament for corroborative testimony. In Matt. 19:28, 29, the Savior, in addressing his disciples, said: "Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's' sake, shall receive an hundredfold and shall inherit everlasting life." Peter had asked Christ what reward they were to have for the sacrifices they had made. Now was the time to say, "You will go to heaven when you die," if that were true; now is the time for him to say, "You will go to the celestial city," if that is so; now is the time for him to say, "You will go up in the clouds and play harps," if that is so; but instead of saying anything like this he says: "You which have followed me in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, you also shall sit upon twelve thrones ruling the twelve tribes of Israel," and he adds in the concluding verse of the chapter that those who forsake everything for his name's sake shall receive, in the world to come, "eternal life." The reward, then, that the New Testament holds out to us is eternal life and a position described as rulership over the twelve tribes of Israel.

In Matt. 8:11 we read that "many shall come from the north, and from the south, and from the east, and from the west, and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, in the Kingdom of God." Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are dead. Believers are few now; our brethren and sisters, when these scattered few are gathered up from Abel down through the centuries; when they come from the north, south, east and west, and sit down in the Kingdom of God in royal [illegible], we shall be a very respectable company and [illegible] computation (Rev. 7:9). We will not only be numerous, but as kings and priests we are [illegible] to make trouble on the earth for somebody! In Luke 13:28 Abraham, Isaac and Jacob appear in the kingdom of God. These dead men are not only going to reappear and take positions of power; they are going to administrate power in a very effectual way, as appears from Luke 22:29, 30: "And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." It is comforting to think that we shall be somebody there; that we will "eat and drink;" that we will enjoy ourselves; that we will not be ghosts. He says we shall eat and drink in the kingdom, and sit on thrones and judge the twelve tribes of Israel. Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Elijah—these men of pre-eminent piety—are singled out by name and personally mentioned as being in the kingdom of God as administrators of its laws. With such a grand prospect in view we do not need to transmute the soul of Elijah into John the Baptist, John Alexander Dowie, or anybody else, when the prophet himself will be there shining like the sun in the kingdom of the Father.

In Rev. 2:26 Christ makes this promise to us if we overcome: "And he that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him I give power over the nations." Overcomers, he says, are to have "power over the nations," and rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers; even as I received of my Father. When Christ was born it was said (Luke 1:51-54): "He hath showed strength with his arm; he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts. He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree. He hath filled the hungry with good things, and the rich he hath sent empty away. He hath helped his servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy." When Elijah appears on the scene; when Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, and all the saints of God come to hold the reigns of government, and send Rockefeller and Morgan and all the millionaires empty away, and fill the purses of the poor, they will know we are somebody; they will know that these prophecies are not mere dreams and delusions, but wonderful realities. In Rev. 10:11 we have this statement made to John the Seer: "Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations and tongues and kings." John was only permitted to come back from exile for a brief time before his death; but God has promised to him through Jesus Christ that he shall prophesy again before many peoples, and tongues, and nations." He died without realizinig the fulfillment of the promise; therefore, he must be raised from the dead and resume his office of teaching in order to its accomplishment. Then he will prophesy to the nations that were angry; God's wrath will have come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great, and shouldest destroy them which destroy the earth. (Rev. 11:18). When this grand day comes, all the dead from Abel down, will be rewarded—the least to the greatest—are to be rewarded and glorified together.

In conclusion let me to say that in Matthew 16, God in advance of the kingdom defacto, has given us a picture of it. You know when we are talking to children about a subject that is difficult for their feeble minds to grasp, we use pictures; we give them illustrations of the grand reality so they can form at least some conception of its grandeur. So God has promised us the kingdom of God, rulership in the earth, the administration of divine laws. But finite minds cannot take hold of the grandeur of all this promise, so in advance of the reality he gives it to us in minature. Matt. 16:27: "For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works." Then follows the glories of the mount of transfiguration. Peter, James and John represent those who are alive when the Savior comes, and Moses and Elias, one representing the law and the other the prophetic age, represent the dead of past ages. When the Savior comes in his glory, he is resplendent with the brightness of his Father's image; and the first thing he does is to "touch" those who are alive, and change them in a moment into incorruption, the nature in which the sainted dead have been raised. The living and the dead are glorified together.

We have here, then, a picture of the Kingdom of God as it will appear when the Savior comes; and brethren and sisters, we are to come from the north, south, east and west, and with all the prophets, shining out with the majesty and glory of the mount of transfiguration. There will go out from the sun of righteousness "wings" of healing that will go down into the grave and bring all the saints to life; and then he will "touch" the living into the immortal nature. Then, Brother Neill, the simple and humble man, will come to life; and Brother Anderson, the eloquent man, the mighty man of God, whose voice has been stilled for years, will stand up in the might of his strength and resume his work. We will have the grandest fraternal gathering in all the world, and one that will last through endless ages! The Lord bless us and bring us speedily to this glad time, is my prayer.

HOW GOD DEALS WITH "THE PIOUS UNIMMERSED"

In our experience with religious people of several different denominations, embracing a period of 40 years, we find many pious, God-fearing men and women, with some of whom we have had both mutual and business relations, who are strictly upright, just and good; who conscientiously would not do that which they knew to be wrong. Men and women of deep and strong convictions regarding the religion that they have espoused; faithful students and zealous workers for the cause they have so heartily endorsed, sealing their earnestness with their time, their money and prayers. Ardent in spirit, zealous of good works, careful to maintain a good character. These people move along, loved and respected by the masses, known to all as "the pious unimmersed." In such condition they stand in the sight—yea, in the presence of Almighty God. Looking at them as they thus stand before the Lord, the questions are often asked, "What will become of these pious unimmersed?" "Are they Christians?" "Are they safe in the arms of Jesus and thus 'new creatures' in the sight of God?" These and other questions that might be asked about so good a people are worthy of our earnest consideration.

In Heb. 2:3 the Apostle asks the question: "How shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him?" As a matter of course, the apostle was speaking to believers who had been immersed, and by implication points out the great danger ahead that will surely come through "neglect," even to those who had obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered them. (Rom. 6:17, 18).

It is a fact that satan is ever on the alert, seeking whom he may devour. To the man or woman who has heard the "glad tidings" and learned, then comes to Christ as did the multitudes on the day of Pentecost and many days thereafter—being baptized both men and women—he (satan) is ever suggesting something to get such to "neglect" their duty. While to the people who have become enthused by hearing the "glad tidings," and of the glory that should follow the people of God, who have not fully obeyed "that form of doctrine" delivered by the apostles to them, he says, "It is not necessary, nor is it essential to your eternal salvation, to be immersed;" "The birth of water can be left out;" "Thou shalt not die eternally, for see thou art as pious, as God-fearing, as devoted and faithful in worship, in charity—you are not excelled even by those who have been immersed. Why bother yourselves about baptism?" And it is with just such false reasoning that he deceives the hearts of the simple (plain) people and causes them to "neglect" to do what Jesus says "MUST" be done in order to enter the kingdom of God. (John 3:5).

It is a source of gratification to every one to learn and thus know that God is able to provide a way of escape from the wily influence of him who seeks to destroy the prospective child of God. The foreknowledge of God in this respect is manifested to all who discern between that which is good and evil. So the questions: "How do the pious unimmersed stand religiously in the sight of God?" and "Does he hear their prayers?" and "If so, how can we know?"—to all of these we will say that "God has not left himself without witness." That we may know, and not guess or speculate upon so important a subject, the Almighty has caused to be placed on record his mind or his will regarding this special subject, and when his instructions are learned by all whose hearts are inclined unto the Lord, then will the mist (satanic suggesiotns) "clear away," and they (the pious unimmersed) "know as they are known."

With this much before us let us attend to what the Lord hath spoken, that we may see in the clear, full and certain light of his own Word the answers to these much-mooted questions. Listen, friendly readers, ye pious fathers and mothers—noble characters, morally and religiously as far as you have gone—I say listen! Will you hear the Author of eternal salvation in one of his most positive statements? He says you "MUST be born of water," and you must be born of the Spirit. The devil says you must NOT. Both are striving for us; one to save, the other to destroy. Which one do you believe?

But you say this is a grave subject. I say, yes, that is true; grave because there are multiplied thousands of "religious" persons who have never been immersed. So the heavenly Father knew this would be the state of religious affairs with multitudes of both men and women. So I say he has not left himself without witness. He has not only spoken to us "by his Son" (Heb. 1:1, 2), but it has pleased him to make a special revelation upon this subject so every vestige of doubt might be removed and all who, in full purpose of heart desire to know and do his will, may do so.

I have said a "special revelation" has been made, and this was brought about by prayer, so we see it is true that "the prayers of a righteous man availeth much." But God has not only spoken out viva voce—by his living voice—but has even sent an angel to deliver the message to some of the most distinguished of the pious unimmersed the ages have ever seen. And now I trust we are prepared to read this revelation and determine to please God, by doing his will concerning "all things" he has commanded us to do through his Son.

Turn to Acts 10th chapter. Read it reverently and prayerfully, for God has given or made this special revelation as a lessson for all of the pious unimmersed, to be instruction for all such throughout each succeeding generation as long as time may last. Remember, God has not left himself without witness. "You must be born of water and the Spirit." In an actual demonstration, made by another witness—the Holy Spirit—on all the Gentiles gathered on that great and memorable occasion. He says by this self-same witness, "Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized who have received the Holy Spirit as well as we?" And as no objections were urged, Peter "commanded" (as one sent of God) them to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus; so the "pious unimmersed" were batpized.

You may ask: "What for?" Let us note with care the noble characteristics of this man Cornelius, as given by the Holy Spirit. He was a "devout man." This means a worshipful being; one who has reverence for God. It is said "He feared God with all his house." "He gave alms—much alms—to the people, and prayed to God always," that is, morning, noon and night. Thus he worshiped and taught his family so to do. He was a just man and a person of good report, but he was not immersed. He had reached the highest position that was possible for any natural man to reach outside of Christ, and the heights can be attained by any man now who is so religiously disposed, and it is a fact that every being who wears such a character as portrayed by the divine pen should consider well, and they are indeed duty-bound to ask themselves: "Where do I stand compared with this certain Italian captain? Am I, or am I not, better than he?"

It matters not, as we all can see, how "religious" a man may be; "He must be born again!" You may think, just as you have been, that a man so "religious" was, and must be, in a saved state. If so, please turn to the 11th chapter of Acts and read what the Holy Spirit says in 14th verse—thus you can learn that they were to hear words "whereby they might be saved."

In conclusion, permit me to ask the "pious unimmersed," whose piety I have learned to revere, whose sacrifices are worthy of a better name than any religious society wears that is named by men and for men, whose sincere and heartfelt prayers ascend to the throne on High only to stand as a memorial before God; I say, let me ask, in the light of the Divine Work as recorded in the case of Cornelius and his household: Had you not better send at once for a Gospel preacher to hear words whereby you and your household can be saved, thus pass through the bath of regeneration into union with Christ? "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." "The word I speak unto you shall judge you in the last day." My dear friends, in view of all the Father has said; in view of all the Son has done, in full view of all the Holy Spirit has written in our own tongue, do you not think, yea, are you not resolved, to "hear all things and obey all things commanded thee of God?" Can you not say with that noble man, "Now, therefore, are we all here present before God (in the presence of the Great I Am) to hear all things commanded thee of God." Noble spirit! Can you say as much?

I regard this lesson, as we find it in the 10th chapter of Acts of Apostles, as a special act of God, handed down to each succeeding generation, showing by both teaching and example that "Except a man be born of water and Spirit he can not enter into the Kingdom of God." The Father and Son are in perfect harmony concerning the great scheme of final redemption. The devil would stop you at the very threshold of the Kingdom and, if possible, deceive so noble a band of God-fearing, alms-giving, devoted people. Let me exhort you, as we, with an eye of faith can see the tree of life, from which the human family has so long been separated because of sin, located in the New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven prepared as a bride adorned for her husband—"precious promise, God hath spoken"—and Jesus hath shown what must shortly come to pass. Let us, in a united spirit under the name of the Father and Son and Holy Spirit, emerge from the New Birth, putting on the whole armor of God, fight the good fight of faith and lay hold on eternal life. To be with the redeemed of all ages, to sing the song of victory through Jesus Christ, our Lord, and to be found in that happy company which no man can number, is to be, and will be, the gift of God, through Jesus Christ, our Lord, to every man and women who will hear the Gospel, believe and obey all the Lord has spoken. "Be thou faithful until death, and I will give thee a crown of life."—(Jesus).—T. J. Jackson.

THE NATURE OF SYMBOLIC LANGUAGE

The governing part of the political world appears under symbols of different species; and that it is variously represented according to the various kinds of allegories. If the allegory be derived from the sensible world, then the luminaries denote the governing part; if from an animal, the head or horns; if from the earth, a mountain or fortress; and in this case the capital city, or residence of the governor, is taken for the supreme; by which it happens that these mutually illustrate each other. So a capital city is the head of the political body; the head of the animal is the fortress of the animal; mountains are the natural fortresses of the earth; and, therefore, a fortress or capital city, though set in a plain level ground, may be called a mountain. And this, by the rule of analogical metaphors, the terms of which mutually illustrate each other. Thus head, mountain, hill, city, horn and king, are in a manner synonymous terms to signify a kingdom, monarchy, or republic united under one government; only with this difference, that it is to be understood in different respects; for the head represents it in respect of the capital city; mountain or hill, in respect of the strength of the metropolis, which gives law, or is above the adjacent territories; and the like. Thus in Isa 2:2, "And it shall come to pas in the last days that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the tops of the mountains, and shall be exalted above hills; and all nations shaoll flow unto it." This needs not to be proved to signify the kingdom of the Messiah. So a capital city is a head, and taken for the whole territory thereof, as in Isa. 7:8, 9: "For the head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin; and the head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria is Remaliah's son." Isa. 11:9: "They shall not hurt or destroy in all my holy mountain," that is, in all the kingdom of the Messiah, which shall then reach all over the world; for it follows: "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord." Micah. 6:7, 8: "Contend thou before the mountains, and let the hills hear thy voice; hear, ye mountains, the Lord's controversy." The commentators here say: "Montes hic vocat principes et proceres"—"he here calls princes and potentates mountains," citing for it Psa. 62:3; Isa. 2:14; Hab. 3;6. So the whole Assyrian monarchy is called a "mountain" in Zech. 4:7: "Who art thou, O great mountain? before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain;" and in Jer. 51:25: "A destroying mountain." Thus also in Dan. 2:35: "The stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth;" that is, the kingdom of the Messiah having destroyed the four monarchies, became a universal monarchy, as it is plainly made out in verses 44, 45. Again, Isa. 41:15: "Thou shalt thresh the mountains, and make the hills as chaff." Targ. "Occides populos, et consumes regna, quasi stipulam pones eos"—"thou shalt slay the people, and shalt consume the kingdoms; thou shalt make them as stubble."—Daubuz.

DON'T SPARE THE SEED

There is an excellent application which can be made of the following little story, by every one of our readers. It will apply to parents, teachers and Christians in general.

A young farmer had his field nicely ploughed and harrowed, and was about to put in the seed. He first measured the field and found how many rods there were in it. He next measured a rod, and calculated how many plants it would take to fill it. He then calculated the seed in a half-gill, in a pint, a quart, and in a bushel. The result was that he was satisfied that people usually sowed four times the seed necessary. A peck was just as good as a bushel. Now, seed was very dear, and if he could save three-fourths of his seed, it would be worth the while.

So he sowed his peck of seed—"sowing sparingly," and at harvest time the crop was not worth gathering. He was greatly disappointed. Where was the mistake? He felt sure he had calculated and measured right. He then went to old Mr. Experience, a farmer of long standing and great success, and told him his troubles.

"I am sure I calculated right."

"No; you didn't calculate right."

"Why not?"

"Did you calculate for the poor seed that could not germinate at any rate? There is a great deal of such in every bushel we sow."

"Why, I never thought of that."

"Did you calculate for some that would be buried too deep, or get into holes, and not sprout?"

"Certainly not."

"Did you calculate for a great deal that would lie on the top of the ground, and which the birds would pick up before the rains fell, when it could take root?"

"I never thought of that either."

"Did you calculate for what the wind would blow off, or you would throw off from your lot?"

"No, sir."

"Very well. You see how it is that you did not obtain a harvert. 'He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly.' "—Selected.

FAITHFUL OLD PILGRIM AT REST

John P. Bitner died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Hattie Armstrong, near Severance, Kan., on May 24th, at the ripe old age of almost 83 years. In the death of Brother Bitner the Church of God loses, for this age, one of the best men the writer ever knew. Firm and uncompromising on what he believed to be right and truth and justice, but always kind, tolerant, investigative, benevolent, self-sacrificing, patient, reverential and of great self-control, and clean and pure in life and in conversation. He talked for the truth wherever he found a hearing ear, and was always ready to help support the truth, and to help the poor, and to bless all about him wherever it lay in his power. Of five children born only two survive him, Sister Armstrong and George Bitner. I regret that another funeral happened on the same day where I had to speak, so I could not talk at his funeral as he had requested before his death. May his sleep and rest in "the land of forgetfulness" be short, and may the bereaved ones strive to emulate his life that we may all rejoice together in the glad reunion day so near. W. L. CROWE.

Even the very ablest, most laborious and most useful men cannot afford to make enemies right and left of high and low. Virulent enemies are made by sharp words more than by any other means. If you allow yourself what is doubtless to some dispositions the luxury of an unbridled tongue, you will have to pay for it. Some day the enemies you make will have their innings, and may trip you up.

EDITORIAL

A goodly number of faithful brethren and sisters have responded to Bro. S. H. Thomas' appeal for a more liberal support of The Restitution. Many of the poor have responded with the widow's mite, which is very touching to our heart. We wish we had room to publish the letters of all respondents, but have to be content with representative epistles.

Sister Wince writes: "The Restitution is fine of late. I wish I could give it a big financial boost. How foolish those brethren are who drop it because some subject is discussed therein in a way that does not suit their notions. Perhaps, though, the Lord is cleansing our camp in this way. If so he will see to it that your lost subscribers are made up in the near future. Some seem about to fly the track because the dance question has been admitted into its columns for discussion. I am trying to calm them. It is not likely that anyone will write in favor of the dance. Nothing can be said of its saving influence. 'A Sister' who plays for the dance may live to some time play a dirge over children ruined and slain by the direful influence of the ballroom."

It seems impossible to discuss any question in The Restitution without giving offense to some. Umbrage at the discussion of the dance question is absurd, however, since defenders of the amusement are given equal privileges with its denouncers. If they do not elect to defend it we are not to be blamed for their reticence. Personally we had never investigated the subject and had no established convictions for or against it; but a request for editorial expression on the subject led us into a careful study of the amusement, and we are now giving our readers the benefit of our findings in the matter. If our arguments are unsound, if we have erred in Scripture exegesis, we are willing to stand corrected. All we ask is that readers reserve their judgment on what we say until we "conclude" our series of articles on dancing, and then we shall welcome criticism thereon.

"THEIR ANGELS"

Brother Huggins:

Not long since I attended the funeral of a little child that died in our neighborhood. A Presbyterian minister conducted the funeral services, and he took his text from Matt. 18:10-13, to prove that the little one had gone to heaven . Please explain this Scripture. What is meant by "Their Angels?"

Yours in search of truth,

MRS. A. J. MARTIN.

Editor's Reply

With the seventh verse our Master begins a discourse on the subject of "offenses." Then with a "take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones" (verse 10), He begins to list reasons why we should not ignore, lightly esteem, and offend the "little ones" who are types of his own children which "believe" (verse 6). They have "angels" which are interested in them. "Their angels," not that children go to heaven and become angels themselves, but they have each "their (own) angel" as a guardian messenger (Psa. 34:7; Heb. 1:14). In Jewish phraseology angels are styled Malakcy Panim, which means angels of the fall, allusion being made to the privileges granted by eastern monarchs to their favorites. (Esther 1:14; 2 Kings 25:19; Jer. 51:25). The angels of God's Court "behold the face of my Father which is in heaven;" that is, as the angels of His most intimate favor and presence (Isa. 63:9), they "do his commandments, and hearken unto the voice of His Word." (Psa. 103:20). Like the rest of the human family, children are lost, but the "Son of Man is come to save that which was lost" (verse 11); and, therefore, through angelic media they are objects of God's solicitude. For illustrative purpose see Moses (Ex. 2:3) and Jesus (Matt. 2).

DANCING

An Editorial Dedicated to "A Sister" and the Church to Which She Belongs—Dancing of the Wicked

The following passages describe dancing as practiced by the wicked: Ex. 32:10-21; Judges 11:34; 1 Sam. 30:16, 17; Job 21:11-20; Mark 6:18-26. These Scriptures form the basis for the remarks following:

Dancing, in all these passages of Scripture, was performed by the ungodly and had no connection with religion whatever, except in Ex. 32:15-21, where it was indulged in by blind and stupid idolaters to celebrate the advent of the molten calf. The joy and hilarity on the occasion, however, were soon turned into mourning and sadness by divine intervention of a judicial kind. When Jephthah's damsel danced, judgment flew to her on the wings of the wind (Judges 11:34). "Eating, drinking and dancing" all go together in 1 Sam. 30:16, 17. Reveling and carousing ended in a judgment which swept them all away. In Job 21:11-20 is a description of how people live who say to God, "Depart from us; for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways. What is the Almighty that we should serve him?" People who beg God to "depart" from them have no "desire" for the knowledge of God, and are consequently ignorant of the truth and refuse to "serve" God. Men must do something, people who will not work at the truth must work at dancing or something else; if they will not do good, they will do evil. Men who refuse to learn of God's way and who will not "serve him," what fills their life, what do they do? Job tells: "They send forth their little ones like a flock, and their children dance." Refusing the "knowledge of God" themselves, such parents bring up their children in ignorance of the truth; but they send them to dancing schools—they must be taught to dance, cost what it will! Wonderful accomplishment! "They take (lift up their voices to) the timbrel and harp, and rejoice at (trip merrily to) the sound of the organ." Yes, "the harp, and the viol, the tabret and pipe, and wine, are in their feasts; but they regard not the work of the Lord, neither consider they the operation of his hands." (Isa. 5:12) "They chant to the sound of the viol and invent to themselves instruments of music like David * * * but are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph." (Amos 6:5, 6). Feasts, carousals, gluttonies, ungodly hilarities, revellings, dances—the world loves these things; but an inspired oracle says: "That which is highly esteemed among men, is an abomination in the sight of God" (Luke 16:15). Now dancing is "highly esteemed among men;" its patrons are often the worst of men, so we cannot go far wrong if we conclude that it is "an abomination" to God. Job must have had a conviction something like this, for in the very language in which he describes dancers who taught their children to dance he says, with much significance, "The counsel of the wicked is far from me." That is, the dancers of whom he is speaking not only danced themselves, and taught their children to dance, but they solicited him to participate with them in the dance. This counsel he calls "the counsel of the wicked," and he put it "far" from him in obedience to the divine mandate, "If sinners entice thee, consent thou not." (Prov. 1:10). But why stand aloof from these dancers, Job, and why turn a deaf ear to their enticements to dance? Let the perfect man of Uz explain: "How often is the candle of the wicked put out! and how oft destruction cometh upon them! God distributeth sorrow in His anger. They are as stubble before the wind, and as chaff that the storm carrieth away. God layeth up his iniquity for his children; he rewardeth him, and he shall know it." In teaching their children to dance, these dancing parents made them as bad as themselves, and in this way "iniquity" is laid up for the children. "The iniquity of the fathers" is thus "visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate Me." (Ex. 20:5). It has been admitted by competent observers that the mania for dancing as truly runs in families as insanity, tuberculosis, etc. The "iniquity" of the dance, then, is common to parents and children, and God says that "He rewardeth him, and he shall know it." And what is the reward? The answer is, "His eyes shall see his destruction, and he shall drink of the wrath of the Almighty."

In Mark 6:18-26 we learn that John the Baptist had rebuked Herod for living in adultery—he was living with his brother's wife. Herodias, being a bon-ton, a very refined and cultured lady, naturally felt hurt at John for his bigotry and narrowness in morals, and so had a "quarrel against him, and would have killed him!" This fashionable lady, guilty of adultery, and with murder boiling in her heart toward John, cast about to devise some way to carry out her murderous intention. Like the dancers in the days of Job, she had danced and flitted away all her time at something in keeping with her cultivated tastes, and had said to God, "Depart from me; for I do not desire a knowledge of thy ways." Although John was the greatest prophet ever born of woman, and God loved him warmly, still God's thoughts were not her's. (Isa. 55:8). While God loved and honored John in a most extraordinary way, she "would kill him" the first opportunity! Mrs. Herod is also the mother of a little girl; of course such a mother had taught her daughter to dance. A feast is now added to the program. It is usual for people who are immoral sexually to have feasts and dancing, and on the occasion of this revel the little girl, a product of adultery, "came in, and danced, and pleased Herod and them that sat with him." The adultery, the feast, the dancing—all put together, caused John to lose his head. Mrs. Herod, the bon-ton; the illegitimate daughter whom she had taught to dance; the revel and feast; the murder; the dancing—a bad combination!

COMMUNICATIONS

"What Thou Seest Write * * * and Send It to the Churches" (Rev. 1:11).

The Restitution Publishing Co.:

When I sent in my renewal for The Restitution for this year I did not have any change to send at that time, so I will enclose a draft for $2.00. Use it in any way you think best. Now I want to ask some of you if you will please explain in The Restitution, 1 Kings 17:23. It is hard for me to see into that passage. It sounds like Methodism.

From one strong in the one faith,

MARGUERITE GILLFILLAN.

Dear Restitution:

We are very thankful to God for your weekly visits. Two swords were enough for Christ to teach 12 men a lesson. So ought the division in 1911 teach the Church of God a lesson (Acts 20:28; 1 Cor. 10:31-33). Some seem to glory in being increased in goods (Rev. 3:17), but Jesus "increased in wisdom." So let us increase our faith in Him and His knowledge. "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom." (Col. 3:16). If we reject His knowledge. He will reject us. (Isa. 53:11; Dan. 12:4; Hos. 4:6; Hab. 2:14.)

We are no better than Peter. and he was reproved for his faults to his face—not to his back (Matt. 18:15; Gal. 2:12-14).

For "advice" on dancing, see what Job says about the wicked. (Job 21:2 to end of chapter). Let us take the advice of James 4:10, 11; 5:10, 11. Amen.

RICHARD A. HUMPHREYS.

Dear Brother Huggins:

Enclosed you will find $1.50 in money order for my renewal to the good paper for another year, which has been due since March 1st.

When I read what you said in regard to the financial condition of The Restitution it made me feel very bad and I am sorry to have delayed this long; also that I am not able to do more. I want to thank you for the extra copies of The Restitution which you sent me awhile back. I asked for three or four and you sent about a dozen which I appreciated very much. Have been trying to pass the kindness along by giving them away and sending them off to different ones, with the hope that the reader may be led into the straight and narrow way which leads unto life eternal.

"Because straight is the gate and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." (Matt. 7:13, 14). Oh that everybody would read The Restitution and believe its teachings; then they would believe the Scriptures in their purity and simplicity. There would be no such doctrines as the "immortality of the soul," "going to heaven at death," "eternal torment in a burning hell," "the trinity, or three persons in one," "sprinkling for baptism," and many other fables too numerous to mention. Let us who know the truth not get careless and indifferent and compromise with error. Everything around us tends to evil.

It is evident that we are living in "perilous times," which the Apostle said would come. The war between Mexico and United States seems at times to be right in our midst and who can tell what a day may bring forth?

How dreadful it must be for those who are trusting an "arm of flesh." Oh Lord, keep our minds stayed on Thee! "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord. and whose hope the Lord is."

Thank Brother S. H. Thomas and others who have written on the subject of "worldliness for Christians." Dear brothers and sisters, let us be careful that we are not pursuing some worldly pleasure when Jesus comes. I do not believe that the Lord will go to the dance hall or to the picture show for His people. When He was here on earth He said: "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon," and the Apostle says, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man (or woman, either) love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." (Jno. 2:15, 16). And James: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." (1:27). Jesus warns his people to "watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation." These are timely warnings from the Bible itself, and should be sufficient for any one who craves to live right.

Dear ones, let us not weary in well doing for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. With love and best wishes I am as ever in the blessed hope of the Gospel.

MRS. A. J. MARTIN.

Dear Brother Huggins:

What a long time has elapsed since I last wrote to you, yet how short it seems, when life is so filled that you can scarce be free and alone long enough to write a letter. How I have cried out in my heart for a few hours in which to write a paper for The Restitution, just to be alone long enough to sober down and think a little!

You could never draw on your imagination deep enough to picture the continual stream of people coming and going in this home, unless you were here awhile. When I get so tired I MUST rest, I lock the doors, pull down the blinds, turn off every light then go to bed and wonder if it will be the same tomorrow. Usually it is, and the next night I am "worn to a frizzle" again.

But through all this hustle, bustle and commotion, a few bright gleams of sunshine come and it is these I want to tell you about.

You will readily recall the showman, Mr. George Wilson, about whom Auntie Wince wrote you sometime ago. You will see from the enclosed letter that he has left the show business. Will you see that the right kind of literature is sent to him? Sister Wince has already sent him quite a package from her library. Among the rest are Dobney on "Future Punishment," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," by Dr. Cummings; "Time of the End," "Key Words," by Wiley Jones; Brother Joblin's "Paternity of Jesus," and quite a lot of tracts by H. L. Hastings. Dr. Cummings has two lectures on "The Reformation," in which. of course, Luther figures largely, and the reformers are all brought in in the volume entitled "The Time of the End."

Herbert and Laura Glanton came home from the West and soon after Mr. Glanton expressed the wish to be baptized and I was asked to go to Mr. Cole, the Christian minister of our place, and explain matters to him, which I did. I said: "Mr. Cole, will you, knowing our faith and doctrine, baptize Mr. Glanton?" I told him the whole story, showed him the letters and assured him that they all believed in the unconscious sleep of the dead, the personal coming of Christ, a real and living God, a real Jesus, the Son of God in whom the Father was well pleased, a real and literal kingdom, "the works" whereof "were finished the foundation of the world." That we had only the promise of eternal life now; we did not get it until Jesus comes; that he will raise the dead saints to an incorruptible life, change those who are living and are his, set up his seat of government at Jerusalem, restore the tribes of Israel and rule the world from Mt. Zion, and that, the earth, would be our home, was to us, and to these new convents a beautiful thought.

Then I said: "Now, knowing this and that no one here, save the doctor and myself believe these things, and Mr. Glanton, knowing you as a man and preferring you to anyone else, are you willing to baptize him?"

I wish you could have seen the tears roll down his face! He took my hand and said: "Mrs. Fry, to break up a show, to be the instrument of two such people as Mr. Glanton and Melba, being baptized—you are a wonder, but too modest to say one word. Yes, willingly and gladly will I do this;" and lo! on the following Tuesday night Mr. Glanton openingly walked forward, and last Sunday night at the close of the service he was immersed and went on his way rejoicing.

Mr. Wilson asks "if we have any school to go to?" Do you know how to help him? I feel like sending him to you. He would be willing to work at anything to be close to some one with whom he could study the Bible. Please do all you can and publish these few lines in The Restitution, that all may be encouraged to keep on working until Jesus comes.

Vanity of the Present Life

James asks: "What is thy life?" and his own answer to the question is, "It is even a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away." So this present life we now possess is but a shadow, a vapor, or a swift-flying cloud. Such is life! This life we are living away, this life that will soon be over! But we fail to appreciate life's meaning if we spend our time in sighing over its brevity. When we come to recognize the vanity of this earthly life, that it is not all time and all eternity, this is the first step toward the true life. So it is not death, but life that is before us; not earthly life alone, for a man's life does not consist in his material possessions, but in a willing and hopeful spirit. Faith is good. It is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. Without faith it is impossible to please God. When our hope or desire cometh it is a tree of life, but when a man has no faith he remains flesh and blood; his life is merely a vapor that presently vanisheth. "As a cloud is consumed and vanisheth away, so he that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more." God says he has no pleasure in the death of any man; it is in accord with his will that we should seek immortality. It is not impossible to secure it; it is sure under certain conditions. Everything material must pass away, but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap eternal life. Men's things are temporal, but Christ's are eternal.

Eternal life in Christ only. So life is given us with a view to its eternal destiny, to use it so as to promote the highest good; that is, to have a high and true ideal and keep before us the great, great hope.

Life is real, life is earnest, but the grave will claim its own; "Dust thou art, to dust returnest, is spoken of the soul."

KATHRYN TOWNSEND.

"Go Teach All Nations"

Standing but a step from his heavenly throne, Christ gave the commission to his disciples. He said: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore and teach all nations." "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every living creature." Again and again the words were repeated, that the disciples might grasp their meaning. The disciples were to be colaborers with their Redeemer in the work of saving mankind. The Savior's commission to the disciples included all the believers; it includes all believers in Christ to the end of time. All to whom the heavenly inspiration has come are put in trust with the gospel; all who receive the life of Christ are ordained to work for the salvation of their fellow-men. For this work the church was established, and all who take upon themselves its sacred vows are thereby pledged to be co-workers with Christ. "The spirit and the bride say, Come, and let him that heareth say, Come" (Rev. 22: 17).

Everyone who hears is to repeat the invitation. The humblest worker moved by the holy spirit will touch invisible chords whose vibrations will ring to the ends of the earth and make melody through eternal ages. When the Savior said, "Go teach all nations," he said also, "These signs shall follow them that believe. In my name shall they cast out devils, they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them. They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover" (Mark 16:15-20). The promise is as far-reaching as the commission. Not that all the gifts are made known to each believer; the spirit divides to every man severally as he will, but the gifts of the spirit are promised to every believer according to his need for the Lord's work. The promise is just as strong and trustworthy now as in the days of the Apostles. These signs shall follow them that believe. This is the privilege of God's children, and faith should lay hold on all that it is possible to have in order to establish faith. The gospel still possesses the same power, and why should we not today witness the same results? The power of love was in all Christ's healing, and only by partaking of that love through faith can we be instruments for his work. Angels marvel at man's shallow appreciation of the love of God.

In the commission to his disciples Christ not only outlined their work, but gave them their message to teach the people. He said to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you (Matt. 28:18-20). The gospel is to be presented, not as a lifeless theory, but as a living force to change the life. God desires that the receivers of his grace shall be witnesses to its power. The first disciples went forth preaching the word; they revealed Christ in their lives, instead of man's speculations. Let the word of God be preached. Let Christians put away their strifes and give themselves to God for the saving of the lost; let them in faith ask for the blessing, and it will come (Joel 2:28-32). All who consecrate body, soul and spirit will be constantly receiving a new endowment of physical and mental power. All the nations of the earth shall hear the gospel of his grace. Not all will receive his grace, but a seed shall serve him; shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation (Ps. 22:30). The kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High (Dan. 7:27), and the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea (Isa. 11:9; 59:19). How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace, that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation, that saith unto Zion, "Thy God reigneth" (Isa. 52:710).—Selected and Rewritten by Chas. Financial Negligence Rebuked

Dear Bereans:

We are wondering how many of our young people, and older ones as well, lay aside each week a portion of their income for the Lord's work. We think there are a few, for we notice that whenever a call is made for funds, either for Berean, Conference or Evangelistic work, these few always respond promptly and generously, and in no other way could they do so, dependent as they are upon weekly or monthly wages, had they not a portion set aside for such purposes. We know of one young brother who makes a practice of this, who doesn't wait for calls, but each month sends out where he knows there is need, to the various helping funds—paper, tract, evangelistic, etc.—and we find that his contributions to one certain fund, through these small monthly payments, in a year amounted to more than any other individual. This just shows how much one can do for the cause of truth who saves one-tenth of his wages for the Lord's work. If all would do this would we lack funds for any work? And it is not a hard thing to do.

Many of the treasurers of the Berean Societies complain that few pay their dues, consequently they have little to send for state work, and that causes shortage for the state to send the national, so local, state and national work are all hindered. Who is responsible? Is it not those who fail to pay the small monthly payment of ten cents? On inquiry we have found that it is neglect, principally. Then when the months roll by, and fifty cents or a dollar is due, they can't pay, they have not that much to give; it has not been saved for that purpose, and the consequence is that it is never paid. If we had only made it a rule to take out, just as soon as we receive money that is ours, a portion, we would never be behind, and no one would have to suffer on account of our negligence. There are points where interest has been aroused through the Berean classes, a few meetings or Bible classes conducted by one of our able ministers, would do much toward strengthening and establishing those interested, as well as those who have labored so faithfully to sow the seed; but funds are necessary to cover the expense. If our Berean treasury lacks the required amount we can not help, or if the evangelistic fund is too low our hands are tied; we can not do what we wish to do. This should not be the case, neither would it be if we were all following scriptural teaching, laying aside each week as the Lord has prospered us. Don't let it ever be said of us Bereans and professed followers of Christ that we spend more on shows, amusements, luxuries, personal adornment than for the cause of Christ. There never was a greater need for work and workers, and the time, dear ones, is short in which to work. Let us set our mind on the things that are above, and not on the things that are upon the earth. Let us help in every way we can to spread the truth. We need tracts—it takes money to print them; we need workers in the field—they must be supported. Don't wait to be called upon, each of your own states have their needs; send of your means for the Berean work, for the Conference work, for the Evangelistic work, for the Tract Fund; see that your ministers receive the compensation they should, with the portion set aside which rightfully belongs to the Lord, for we are expecting, of course, that just as soon as you read this you will start your box. We can assure you at least of this, that no matter how small your income you will find it a convenience as well as a blessing. Our hearts are made sad as we see the great need, which is hindered on account of funds, and as we ponder over the matter we feel this is the only remedy. We might give examples to prove this, but must not take the space. Please think this over, or, better still, study what God's word has to say on this matter, then act.

ANNA E. DREW.

The influences of outward nature, of circumstances, of our occupations, of our fellow-men, are always pressing upon us; but the results of this pressure upon our welfare, our character, and our life will always depend upon the nature of the inward forces with which we meet it and respond to it.

Just as perfect and well-earned rest and sleep repair the waste of the body and restore the tone and power of the system, so the quiet hour of solitude may to the earnest heart and the loving soul bring renewed powers and reinvigorated faculties with which again to go forth on errands of good to mankind.

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852
A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF
The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit [illegible] (Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 2[illegible]) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the Saints [illegible] rulers with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23-25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Rev. [illegible]:10, 20) and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief of the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation [illegible] and all others of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; [illegible]). PRACTICAL USES OF PROPHECY RELATING TO OUR LORD'S SECOND COMING

Synopsis of Address by Brother Haggins, Sunday Evening, March 26, 1916

Reported by Bro. George B. Alldridge

On every hand preachers are advocating the importance of "civic righteousness," which may be expressed by the teaching of ethics or moral philosophy. Some lay emphasis and the importance of teaching faith only as essential to salvation. Another school of thinkers maintain that only good works can save a man. A man's creed or belief is not important, so long as his deeds are right, they say.

The Church of God, in harmony with the teachings of Christ and his apostles, emphatically insist that our faith and deeds should result from a right understanding of God's mind and purpose, concerning our future and the eternal destiny that awaits every member of the human race. No doctrine taught in the Bible can have a greater influence in moulding our characters than the doctrine of our Lord's second coming. To rightly understand and believe this in the light of prophecy, will act as an incentive to "keep the faith once delivered to the saints" and to maintain good works, which God has enjoined upon all.

I. Christ's Coming Urged Upon Sinners to Secure Their Repentance and Conversion

Peter, in Acts 3:19, 20 points out that the initiatory step that the seeker of the truth must first take, is based upon the doctrine of our Lord's second coming. Hence, the value of the teaching of this important doctrine to those who begin to "feel after God." Peter, upon the Day of Pentecost, being filled with the Holy Spirit, quoted from the Prophet Joel teaching our Lord's second advent and concludes with these memorable words, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins." * * * Then they that gladly received his word were baptized; and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls" (Acts 2:38-41). At the gate of the temple called Beautiful, he reiterated these words, "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the God. And he shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you; whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things: which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.' Hence the belief in the Lord's second coming leads to repentance and the forgiveness, through obedience by baptism, of our sins.

II. Christ's Coming a Doctrine Tending to Holiness

Peter also in his second epistle, verses 11 and 18, points out that a belief in this doctrine leads to goodness or a holy life: "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness.' "But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." To maintain a godly or holy life, Paul exhorts us to increase in love, giving as his reason the coming of our Lord: "And the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one towards another and towards all men, even as we do toward you. To the end he may establish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, with all his saints" (1 Thes. 3:12, 13). If we do not love the Lord Jesus Christ, Paul says, in 1 Cor. 16:22, "Let him be anathema!" (Young).

III. Christ's Coming is a Motive of Obedience

God places a premium upon an obedient life, walk and conversation. These are the works Jesus says he will reward at his second coming: "For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father, and his angels and he shall reward every man according to his works" (Matt. 16:27).

If we are obedient, we shall strive to abide in him, as John declared this will beget in us confidence at his coming. "And now, little children, abide in him: that when he shall appear, we may have confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming" (1 Jno. 2:28).

IV. Christ's Coming a Grounds of Sanctification

A great deal that is taught today as "Sanctification," will not stand the test when Jesus comes. John tells us that it is the knowledge that we are the Sons of God, and the hope of seeing him, that purifies us, that is this hope, leads us to purify ourself. "Beloved, now are we the Sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him, purified himself even as he is pure" (1 Jno. 3:2, 3). Peter expresses the same thought in 2 Pet. 3:13, 14; read it.

V. Christ's Coming Mortifies Fleshly Lusts

The Christian's greatest struggle is to overcome his fleshly appetites or the mortification of the lusts of his flesh. If our mind is filled with the thoughts of the Lord's second coming, and the glory that will then be revealed, they are easily mortified. Paul, in Col. 3:4, 5, after telling us that when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory exhorts us to "mortify therefore your numbers which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil, concupiscence and covetousness, which is idolatry." In Gal. 5:21 he gives us a solemn warning, "That they which do such things shall not inherit the Kingdom of God."

VI. Christ's Coming Begets a Spiritual Mind

To be spiritually minded means life and happiness; this all are struggling for. How may we attain it? Simply by believing in the Lord's second coming, and living in that attitude of heart and mind. Paul reasons in his letter to the Philippians, that they who walk unruly and are the enemies of Christ, whose minds are set upon earthly things, their end is destruction; but if we are looking for Jesus, our conversation or citizenship is in the heavens; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ" (Phil. 3:18-21).

VIII. Christ's Coming Fosters Works of Mercy

It is said of God by one of the prophets "that he delights in mercy." Mercy should characterize every child of God. Jesus, in Matt. 25:31-36, informed us that when he shall gather the nations before him at his second advent, then he will openly reward his saints, because in this life they learned how, like God their Father, to exercise mercy and relieve the oppressed and distressed.

VIII. Christ's Coming is the Support of Patience and Endurance

As the time seems long and we often feel weary, in our efforts to reach forth for the "prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus," we become discouraged and tempted to "drop out of the way." But when we sing:

"The Lord is coming! Let this be
The herald note of jubilee—
And when we meet, and when we part,
The salutation from the heart,"

a flood of light and joy comes into our minds as we think of the patient endurance of God's saints all down the years, that it was the thought of Jesus coming again enabled them to patiently endure, so that they might be counted worthy of the Kingdom of God. How much we need patience! Read 2 Thes. 1:4-10; Heb. 10:36-39; Jas. 5:7, 8; 1 Pet. 1:6, 7, 4:12, 13. After reading these Scriptures, as the writers tell us to hold fast until the coming of the Lord, a feeling of patience, peace and quietness settles down upon us, and the sweet song reverberates through our mind:

"The Lord is coming! saints, rejoice
We soon shall hear his glorious voice.
Majestic uttered from afar,
As on he hastes his conquering car."

IX. Christ's Coming and Watchfulness and Soberness

And then as we feel ourselves lifted up as we anticipate the near return of our Lord we recall how he has warned us to be watchful and sober, for "of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only." So we sing again:

"The Lord is coming, watch and pray!
Watch ye, and haste unto the day.
So shall you then escape the snare,
And Christ's eternal glory share."

Read carefully Matt. 24:42, 24; 25:13; Luke 12:35-37; Rev. 16:15; 1 Thes. 5:1-6.

X. Christ's Coming an Incentive to Charity in Judgment

The thought of the near return of our Lord—how it fills our hearts with charity and sympathy in our judgment of a brother or sister! We read 1 Cor. 4:5-7; it has a new meaning; we refrain from passing judgment or criticisms, willing to wait the time when Jesus shall return: then with his mind and spirit dwelling in us in our immortal bodies we shall be able to render righteous and just judgment; but, brethren, not before this time. Paul says: "Therefore judge nothing before time time, until the Lord come. Who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts; and then shall every man have praise of God."

XI. Christ's Coming Encourages Ministerial Faithfulness

Lastly, this belief in the second coming of Christ leads us to ministerial faithfulness and diligence. We are indeed "fellow-workers with God." Christ warns us to always be "upon active service." "Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh" (Matt. 24:44-51). Paul's admonition to Timothy teaches us this important lesson, that we must be diligent and always abounding in the work of the Lord (1 Tim. 6:13, 14: 2 Tim. 4:1, 2). In 1 Thes. 2:19, Paul tells us that if we are loyal and faithful in holding up the standard of the truth as "the truth is in Jesus," then when he comes he will bestow upon us a "crown of rejoicing." Peter, as the time of his demise drew near when he was ready to be offered up, realized the importance of the elders being loyal and faithful. Peter was humble and lowly of mind. Had he been what the Catholic Church claims, the first pope, then he would have called himself "The Elder;" but not so. Peter claimed only to be "an elder." "The elders which are among you I exhort, which am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed. And when the chief shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away" (1 Pet. 5:1-4).

In conclusion, then, the Scriptures point out and our experience verifies it, that a belief and a looking forward to the return of our Beloved Lord leads us to Repentance, Godliness, Love, Obedience, Sanctification, Mortification of Lusts, Spiritual Mindedness, Mercy, Patience and Endurance, Watchfulness and Soberness, Charity in Judgment and Ministerial Faithfulness and Diligence. "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if we do these things, ye shall never fall; for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" (2 Pet. 1:10, 11).

THE HIDDEN GOSPEL.

"If our Gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost; in whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them"—Paul. (2 Cor. 4:3, 4).

It is a sad fact that Paul's gospel, "the Gospel of the glory of Christ" (R.V.), may be hidden from the minds of men, even from such as have the Word of God in their hands. This hiding has been too often brought about by men's own doings. Many causes have been at work to produce this lamentable result. "God made man upright, but he has sought out many inventions," (Eccl. 7:29). He sent his Gospel by his Son, and when "he came to his own, his own received him not." Whatever is to be understood by "the God of this world," whether a personal Satan, mammon, pride of rank or of intellect, or any other agency, there must be in each case of Gospel-hiding, some particular instrumentality, if we except the natural inertia of humanity through which the blinded unbeliever is influenced in his beliefs, opinions and even his prejudices. He has his "mind blinded" and his "understanding darkened," and the result is, to him, the "Gospel is hid."

It may be remarked, by the way, that the converse is true. To him who believes unto salvation, the Gospel has not been hid. He has escaped, in the good providence of God, the blinding agencies which prove fatal to the "lost;" and he "rejoices in hope of the glory of God." Most persons are led, unfortunately, by a kind of gregarious instinct, to follow "the traditions of the elders" and become virtually slaves to hereditary usages, and even to so-called miracles of their forefathers. The Buddhist simply follows the creed of Buddha, and so on, even down to the ordinary Baptist, not excepting even "baptized believers of the Gospel of the Kingdom of God." Few strike out an independent course for themselves by personal investigation. "Following the multitude even in the doing of evil" becomes a too common practice. Someone has well said on another subject: "Hereditary bondsmen! know ye not, who would be free, himself must strike the blow?" Such freedom, reached in whatever way, is limited by a certain degree of servitude of a voluntary character. Paul was a notable instance of such twofold characteristic. He repeatedly designates himself "the slave of Jesus Anointed." He speaks of this slavery and its corresponding liberty thus: "He that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's freeman: likewise also he that is called, being free, is Christ's servant," (1 Cor. 7:22). Paul strongly felt his great responsibility to his master. He said: "I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians; to the wise and to the unwise: so, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the Gospel. Necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel." Paul truly did much to prevent the Gospel from being "hid." (Rom. 1:14; 1 Cor 9:16).

Freedom and bondage akin to this were experienced even under the Mosaic dispensation. Ample freedom was secured to Israel under the law. This could always be forfeited by voluntary contract. Property and even personal liberty might be thus alienated, but only temporarily, both being restored at the jubilee, once every 50 years. Such an arrangement, being of a secular character, has no place in the Church of Christ. Perfect freedom exists from its first initiation alongside, however, of such servitude to Christ as he himself requires. The hiding of the Gospel has to be eschewed at all hazards, and fully exhibited as under-necessity laid upon them, although of a less binding character than that of the Apostles, while maintaining the liberty of Christ's freemen. Even in the days of our Lord the "Gospel was hid." The Jews, in many cases, "made void the Word of God by their traditions." In an interview with a certain lawyer, our Lord said to him: "Thou art not far from the Kingdom of God." It is a solemn thought that one privileged to have a conversation with Jesus, and that on a sacred subject, should come short of the Kingdom, and to whom the Gospel should be "hid." He belonged to the class of men, however, to whom, on another occasion, our Lord said: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the Kingdom of heaven against men; for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are enter to go in." (Matt. 23:13). Certainly here in the case of many the "Gospel was hid." The Jewish authorities, high priests, scribes, etc., had been permitted to exercise certain powers under the Roman Empire, and true patriotism was, with them and their party, at a low ebb. Comparatively few such as the aged Simeon, the prophetess Anna, and some others, were to be found in the community. Our Lord said even to his disciples, "O fools and slow of heart, to believe all that the prophets have spoken." But it has to be noted that they were not "slow of heart" to believe what had been required of them, namely, what our Lord had publicly proclaimed: "The Kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye and believe the Gospel." The Gospel to them was not hid."

The vast mass of the professing Christian world is Roman Catholic and Greek Catholic. In the early centuries of the Christian era, there grew up an accumulation of error, which had a beginning even in the days of the Apostles. Paul wrote about the "falling away," and said: "The mystery of iniquity doth already work.". Under the Emperor Constantine, error was fully developed and the church was considered to be the Kingdom. To this day the error is embalmed in the Roman Catholic translation of the Bible into English, known as the Douay version. In the notes appended to certain passages in this version, the error is broadly declared. Thus on Dan. 2:44: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed," the comment is, "A kingdom, viz., the Kingdom of Christ in the Catholic Church which cannot be destroyed." The Protestant commentary of Dr. Thomas Scott contains a long note to the same effect. These words may be quoted: "It has subverted and will continue to subvert Pagan and Anti-Christian kingdoms," etc. On Psa 69:35: "For God will save Zion and will build the cities of Judah"—the Douay note is, "Zion, the Catholic Church. The cities of Judah, etc., her places of worship which shall be established throughout the world," etc. Dr. Thomas Scott, in a long note has, "Zion seems to denote the church at large, the cities of Judah the several divisions of the church throughout the world," etc. It surely needs not to be demonstrated beyond these extracts that the theology of both the Roman Catholic and Protestant churches is wide of "the Gospel of the Kingdom of God," preached by our Lord; and that through this the gospel of the glory of the Anointed is truly "hid" from thousands of the human race.

In the Reformation of the sixteenth century the reformers stopped short at a certain stage, leaving "the obedience of faith" of the New Testament entirely out of their creeds and confessions. Those creeds became stereotyped, as if perfection had been reached, and they have so descended to present times. Believer's immersion has been transmuted into, a ceremony over a babe with a few drops of water, and a proxy faith held by so-called godparents. Some reached a stage a little beyond the so-called reformers, by practicing the act of immersion, and called themselves Baptists, still adhering to the doctrinal theories of the orthodox. Do not these make a sort of fetish of the water, seeing that it is "the faith" that constitutes the real element of adoption? Paul puts the matter clearly when he says: "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." (Gal. 3:26, 27). Here again the Gospel is "hid."

An offshoot from the foregoing in the United States, known as the "Reformation," made a further step in advance. This body did much to prune and simplify the orthodox doctrine by reducing the Gospel of the glory of the Anointed to the facts of his death and resurrection and embracing the formula "Jesus is the Christ." This latter important truth they professed as the "Ancient Gospel," but minus its true significance as the Anointed for the throne and kingdom of his Father, David. This meaning was fully corroborated by the promise of the angel to Mary before his birth (Luke 1:32). Alexander Campbell was the principal exponent of the "Reformation," although Walter Scott was the real founder of the system. He claimed to have spent the greater part of his life in the study of the four evangelists; and yet, although the "gospel of the kingdom of God" was preached by our Lord, and although Nathaniel confessed, with his master's approval, "Thou art the Son of God: thou art the King of Israel," and thus the kingship of the Anointed one was plainly declared. Walter Scott seems to have missed the object of his search and to have had his "mind blinded" and the gospel "hid." Here verily also the water became a fetish, and thousands of followers, although, "not far from the Kingdom of God," led by a "blind" leader into the ditch.

In one respect a still nearer approach was made to the "gospel of the kingdom" by those known as Millennarians. In modern times these made certain steps in advance of the Reformers of the sixteenth century. They came to read the Prophets in a plain, natural sense, eschewing the so-called spiritualizing system so much in vogue among the orthodox. They found that the kingdom of God is a theocracy to be restored and set up on the earth under the Messiah. The premillennial advent, the personal reign, the restoration of the twelve tribes of Israel, etc., have been set forth in volumes and periodicals. The Quarterly Journal of Prophecy carried on for twenty-five years; the Rainbow for nearly the same period. And yet who will affirm that "the obedience of faith" was rendered by that large class of millennarians? Is it not perfectly evident that here also the gospel was "hid?" A remarkable movement akin to the last-named was originated in America by a plain but vigorous farmer named William Miller. In the thirties and later the imminent coming of Christ was proclaimed far and wide. Many thousand were awakened to the impending event, and were led to expect the advent of Christ on a certain day fixed by Miller. Great and widespread disappointment was the result. Miller explained away the numerous and explicity declarations of the Prophets, predicting the fixed return of the twelve tribes of Israel to the land of their fathers. The only reason he offered in support of this contention was that it is declared in the New Testament that "in Christ Jesus there is neither Jew nor Greek, but are all one in him." He did not perceive that the promises made to Israel as a nation are perfectly consistent with the abolition of race distinctions in the Church of Christ.

A branch of this body are the Seventh Day Adventists, who are compassing sea and land to make proselytes to the strict observance of the seventh-day Sabbath according to the fourth commandment. Here again in this movement of Wm. Miller it can not be doubted that the gospel is "hid." The leading supporters of the Rainbow Magazine formed a society named the "Conditional Immortality Association," which has existed for twenty-five years. It has to be briefly noted that, true and important as "conditional immortality" is, the work of the association has been chiefly of a negative character. Man not immortal, the non-immortality of the soul, no natural immortality, etc. As to conditions by compliance with which many may attain to immortality, it is taken for granted that what is known as evangelic doctrine, apart from immersion into Christ, is sufficient as a passport to everlasting life. It can not be doubted that here the gospel is "hid." Some baptized believers of the gospel of the kingdom of God are members of this association. It is presumable that such members have not been permitted to bear any testimony in favor of the true conditions laid down by Christ himself. It is doubtless quite possible for an intelligent and vigorous advocacy of the conditional aattainment of everlasting life and of the plain understanding of the prophets, as already referred to, and yet by ignoring those conditions which our Lord has so clearly prescribed be the means of hiding the gospel from those brought under the influence of such teachings. Such advocates just as really hide the gospel as he who puts a lighted candle under a bushel instead of in a candlestick. If this may be done by ordinary Millennarians, and by members of a Conditional Immortality Association, who might possibly be excused as "blind leaders of the blind," how inexcusable must those be who have personally rendered compliance with the obedience of faith, and have been actually engaged in bearing testimony in favor of such obedience?

"COME OUT FROM AMONG THEM, AND BE YE SEPARATE, O MY PEOPLE"

A dear sister says: "I am isolated. There are none of our faith here; I long to raise my voice with others in songs of praise, and the worship of God. My children beg to go to the Sunday School across the way. Is there any serious reason why we should not meet and worship with them? True, their faith and creed are not in harmony with the Word; but they teach good morals and right living, as earnestly as we."

These and similar questions have disturbed the mind of God's people, through all the ages. In seeking for a correct answer, we should ever bear in mind that we are described in the Word as a "sanctified, or set apart, people;" "a royal priesthood," "a peculiar people;" "a sect everywhere spoken against." These things could never be said of us, if we should mingle and worship with, and sanction by our voice and presence, the false doctrines and pagan fables which they teach.

Yes, there are many reason why we should not take part in their worship. The chief of which is, God has said to us: "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, O my people." Surely, we should not hesitate to obey a command, couched in language so tender and pleading.

The doctrines and creeds of the sects around us consist of errors and fables, based upon heathen mythology, and are without any foundation in the Word of God, and I am fully persuaded, equally as false and foolish, in the sight of God, as the idol worship of the Hindo, or heathen Chinee. We, as children of light who know and live the Word of God, and his purpose as revealed therein, can have nothing in common with them. If we meet with them, sing with them, pray with them, kneel down and rise up with them at the command of their blind leader, shake his hand and compliment him upon his sermon of fables, all of which we are expected to do if we meet with them—do we not become one of them?

Is it wrong to meet with and take part in the worship of the alien? Dear ones, if you were isolated and alone in China, would it be wrong for you to bow down with them, before their man-made gods, fashioned out of wood and stone? Would it be wrong for you to send your little ones, where they would be taught idol worship? Most assuredly it would. To worship man-made creeds and pagan fables is likwise idolatry. Shall we bow down with them who do these things? To do so is surely displeasing in the sight of God. Better by far be content to call our little ones around us, in the privacy of our homes, and there worship God in truth and sincerity.

But is is urged: "I don't take any part in the services; I just kneel when they kneel, and rise with them when they rise, and when the collection box comes around, of course it would look mean not to give something, so I just drop in a nickel. It would be a poor sermon that I could not get a nickle's worth from."

Dear sister, that nickel belongs to God. He has only loaned it to you. Do you think he would have you use it to support the preaching in his name of false doctrines, and God-dishonoring fables? Would he have you apply, even one little nickel, on the salary of a man whose business it is to preach error, and lead men and women astray with false doctrines in the name of God? If you can spare the nickel, don't youthink he would very much prefer that you send it to The Restitution, or some destitute brother or sister? If we contribute ever so little towards the support of church or preacher, we become, in God's eyes, just as much a partner in their sin, as if we had contributed thousands. There is no middle ground. We must "come out from among them, and be separate." This is what makes of us a "peculiar people." It is this, which makes of us "a sect everywhere spoken against."

But I hear it said: "Our Lord and his disciples went into the synagogues and places of public worship where error was taught and truth was unknown." Very true; but they always went there to publicly denounce error, and proclaim the truth and for persistently doing so they suffered persecution and death. I am fully persuaded that we also may go today with God's full approval to any orthodox church or heathen temple, if our sole object is to proclaim there the Word of God.

No, dear isolated ones, let us not crave the flesh pots of Egypt, but rather let us meet God alone, at regular intervals in our home, with our loved ones around us. Let us strive to make such occasions pleasant for the little folks, with plenty of music and little prizes for lessons well learned, or questions correctly answered. It is much easier to keep a strong enemy out our house than to put him out after he has entered. So it is easier to keep false doctrines out of our little ones' minds than to root them up and cast them out after being planted there by false teachers at alien Sunday Schools.

FIGHTING SHADOWS

I am told that engineers on the railway dislike moonlight nights, because they are all the time fighting shadows. There is a shadow across the track just ahead; it looks like a man, or a horse, or a tree; but it is not; it is only the shadow of something extending across the rails. We spend a lot of our energy—all of us do—just fighting shadows. We are all prone to mistrust God, and to see great troubles rising up before us. Time after time have we come to the place, and either, like the women at Christ's tomb, found the trouble removed, or have found that God has given us grace to overcome it. One trouble is scarcely passed until we are looking into the future for new ones, forgetting that we have a promise good for all days to come. "My grace is sufficient for thee."—Selected.

It is well to repent of sin, to abandon wrongdoing, to break up bad habits, to correct errors. Whatever is needful for such results is unquestionably right. But beyond this we had better turn them out of the doors of our memory; so will they soonest perish, and we shall have time and energy to welcome better things in their place.

EDITORIAL.

"A brother offended is harder to be won than a strong city; and their contentions are like the bars of a castle" (Prov. 18:19). When brothers fall out it is next to impossible to reconcile them. Fraternal enmities are strong and inveterate. Their "contentions," to show their strength and malignant persistency, are compared to the "bars of a castle." They hate each other, and as murderers, are foretold they shall not inherit the Kingdom of God (Gal. 5:20, 21).

Party men always hate a slightly differing friend more than a downright enemy. I quite calculate on my being one day or other holden in worse repute by many Christians than the Unitarians and open infidels. It must be undergone by every one who loves the truth for its own sake beyond all other things." These words were written by S. T. Coleridge about eighty-six years ago. How strange they are, and yet how true! They are true in politics, social life, in the Church of God. Scathing vituperation is heaped, not upon the avowed enemies of a movement, as you would expect, but upon those who, claiming to be friends, yet differ as to the methods by which it is to be carried out.

DANCING

An Editorial Dedicated to "A Sister" and the Church to Which She Belongs—Dancing is of Ill Repute With the World, the Church and with "A Sister" Herself

Dancing stands in no credit, even with the world. We have attended funerals of worldly men who were noted dancing masters, and we have read biographical sketches of such men, men whom the world aims to honor after they die, and we have yet to hear a besotted groundling say on such occasions that the deceased danced and taught the art of dancing, that he loved the dance and was an accomplished dancer, and that he encouraged all his friends to dance! The dancers themselves would be shocked and astonished to hear such a funeral sermon, or read such a biographical sketch of some deceased friend whom they desired to honor. They expect and would receive with complacency such representations as that the deceased was an industrious and successful farmer, or mechanic, professor, or school teacher; a true and worthy officer of state, doctor, lawyer or preacher; engineer, artist, botanist or anatomist; but they would never say he was an "accomplished dancer," that he "loved dancing," taught it, encouraged it, and wonderfully improved dancing in the community. Why this hiatus, blank, silence? Because worldly people themselves do not consider dancing is any credit to any man, to say nothing of a religious man; therefore, it is omitted from their funerals and biographical sketches as inconsistent with the honor of the deceased.

Christendom is, of course, only nominally Christian. The different denominations of Protestantism are ignorant of the "truth as it is in Jesus;" but they are defenders of Biblical ethics, and are full of refined, cultured gentlemanly men; and almost without exception, they are consistently opposed to dancing. The editor of "The Homiletic Monthly" may be taken as a representative man, and in the New Series, Vol. 6, page 64, he says: "Dancing is a demoralizing amusement, and should be denounced by clergymen in and out of the pulpit. The Chief of Police of New York asserts that three-fourths of the abandoned girls in New York were ruined through the dance." From this high authority we conclude that dancing in the nominal sects of Christendom is in ill repute.

As might be expected, the Church of God stands opposed to dancing. We say this with authority, for several months ago "A Sister" asked for the consensus of opinion among the brethren on this question. In publishing her request we were careful to state that in the discussion of the dance question, those who wrote in its defense were as welcome in our columns as those who wrote against it. Although this matter has been before the readers of The Restitution for several months, and several brethren and sisters have written ably on the subject, not one of them has written in justification of the dance. The brethren are opposed to it almost without exception. And "A Sister" is ashamed of the dance herself when she gets down to dealing with her own heart and conscience. When in health and while the skies are cloudless, she may argue half-heartedly that it is "a healthful exercise," "good for relaxation," "helpful in teaching young people how to be graceful, polite," etc.; and that she "loves it, and delights in it." But suppose she falls dangerously ill; will she not say like the infidel who sneered at religion on dry land and then prayed on the sea in a storm, "Infidelity is all right on dry land, but is a failure on the high seas in a storm?" Suppose "A Sister" dies, and her husband sends for us to preach her funeral, and attend to all other matters of her burial. Would she want us to preach a funeral sermon like this:

Dear Friends: I preach the funeral of "A Sister" in compliance with a wish which she made just before her death. I am glad to say on this sad occasion that our deceased sister lead a most holy and consecrated life, and like Dorcas of old, was full of love, "faith and good works." Among those "good works" I am proud to name dancing. She loved to dance, was a beautiful dancer, played for dancing, encouraged dancing all her life, and without doubt her influence and practice have given dancing a new impetus, and greatly extended its prevalence in the vicinity where she has lived such a devoted, religious and dancing life. I make these statements with full authority from her personally, for I have talked with her face to face, and she has often assured me that she loved the dance; thought it was a graceful, healthful and delightful exercise. She played for the dance, encouraged and improved dancing in the community and greatly increased its prevalence; she was a most accomplished and estimable dancer.

Then after the burial we would cause a tombstone to be erected, engraved as follows:

A Sister,
A Member of the Church of God,
An Accomplished Dancer,
Who Never Wearied in the Encouragement of Dancing, or in the Practice of It.

"Ridiculous!" says "A Sister." "I do not want such a funeral; I will have no such a tombstone!" And why not? Simply because dancing is nothing to the credit of any one. It would not be ridiculous to mention in her funeral that she was an accomplished school teacher, or any other real accomplishment; but dancing is no accomplishment at all, according to her own estimation.

There is no use to snuffle, higgle or wiggle. "A Sister" does not think well of dancing herself. Dancing tends downwards. It is a desire of the flesh, and like all other fleshly desires, needs no advocacy. It is not an article of culture; it needs no culture. It springs up as a spontaneous growth of carnal nature; and springs just as effectively without cultivation. All evil does. To get people to dance, it is not necessary for men to take the lecture platform and implore them to engage in it. It needs no advocate; its merits need not be taught the people; it wants no speeches in its favor. It will come itself, like the obnoxious weeds in the garden, in the absence of cultivation; like the briars and ragweeds where cultivation is neglected. That is the way the dance comes. It is no accomplishment, acquirement or credit in any way, and not a thing to be mentioned after death in funerals and on tombstones. We no more think of mentioning dancing to the credit and honor of any one who has died than we do swearing, drinking and like sins. Those who practice it do not want it mentioned; they are quite willing the matter should be passed in silence. The best part of the world is opposed to dancing; the dancers themselves are ashamed to have it published in funerals and on tombstones; the Church of God, both the nominal and the true, is against it; and "A Sister" herself, is at heart unfriendly toward it. "What need have we of further witnesses?"

COMMUNICATIONS

"What thou seest, write * * * and Send Unto the Churches" (Rev. 1:11).

Restitution Pub. Co.:

I enclose $1.25, which I have gathered from tithing. It is the Lord's money. Sending The Restitution out to the Lord's poor is surely as good work as can be done. So credit this to the Helping Fund. May God bless the ones who read to the saving of themselves and families, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

A brother in Christ,
M. W. PERRINE.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed you will find check amounting to three dollars to pay for The Restitution for both 1915 and 1916. We can't get along without the paper. God bless our editor and all the rest that help to make the paper what it is.

Yours in Christ,
MRS. F. E. THRUSH.

Dear Brother Huggins:

I believe from the teaching of the Bible that Jesus Christ is literally and actually the Son of God, and I am waiting his return to enter the Kingdom of God on earth. I see in The Restitution last number that the support of The Restitution is falling away. I am sorry to see that, although except there come a falling away Jesus will not come. This ought to awaken the brotherhood, if nothing else will. Wife and I are willing to do all we can to keep the good paper going. It is all the preaching we have. We live in the faraway southwest Texas, and don't get to hear any preaching. It seems like it would break our hearts if our communication were cut off from the brotherhood. We know if The Restitution dies this will be the case with us all, or at least with the isolated ones like ourselves. There are a few of the true faith scattered through this part, but we are scattered a long ways apart. They did not know there was a paper printed by the name of The Restitution when I came in this part two years ago. They have nearly all subscribed for The Restitution now, and they like it so well. They say it is the soundest paper we have. I am sure they will do all they can to support it. We meet every fourth Sunday to worship our Creator, and to break bread to show the Lord's death. I go twenty-five miles to meet with them. We would meet every Sunday if we were close enough. We want you and all of the faith to remember us in your prayers.

Brethren, wake up; don't let our paper die! Let us keep up communication with each other. We know that we only have but a short time to work. Look at the signs of the times.

We have three little girls; oldest twelve, youngest eight. They say they do not want the brethren to let our good paper die. They love to meet it at the postoffice and bring it home with them. They say they will do without summer hats and let the money go to help to keep The Restitution coming to meet them. They love to read the good paper, and hear it read.

Brother Huggins, I would write more and oftener, but there are so many who can write better than I. So I have been giving them my space in the paper.

Your brother and sister in Christ, in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes. All remember us in your prayers. "Come, Lord Jesus; come quickly." Amen.

BRO. AND SISTER JAS. DELOZIER.

Dear Restitution:

We will send in three new names for our much-loved paper. We do hope all will help to get new subscribers for our paper. It surely is a lack of duty toward our paper which is of so much value to us all, to fall short of subscribers when God blesses us so much each day. We are in a land of peace and plenty. We should remember where there is no work there is no reward. May we improve our talents. Love to all.

MRS. W. H. EIDEMILLER.

Dear Brother:

I am sending enclosed 75 cents in money order for The Restitution. That is only a starter, for I intend to save a few cents a day so I can continue to have it and also have some to help in a small way otherwise. I think it a good thing to publish the financial difficulties of our dear paper, as it gives us all a chance to make some sacrifice for the truth.

The widow's mite is a great encouragement to us isolated ones as we feel ashamed to offer so small a sum; still, if we all did it there would be considerable money collected, and our paper would benefit wonderfully. There are enough of us to do this if we will. Co-operation is necessary in any and all successful things of life.

Love to your family and to yourself and all the dear ones with you. God bless our paper. May it continue till our Lord comes, is my prayer.

Your sister,
MRS, ADA ASHUTE.

To the Editor The Restitution—Dear Brother:

Enclosed two dollars for Helping Fund. I hope many will rally and help to keep it going. It's a good paper. Some articles are so plain and convincing. It's good always, full of help, encouragement and truth. Bless God for it! I hope it will never fail for want of subscribers.

Yours in love of truth,
EDWIN WOOD.

Dear Brother Nutt:

Enclosed you will find money order for five dollars to be used as the Lord directs. We feel we cannot get along without the dear Restitution and are willing to double our subscription each year rather than do without the great amount of spiritual food it contains. May the brethren having the means, rally to the help of The Restitution, that its testimony may shine far and bright in this darkness.

Yours waiting for the return of the Master,
A. E. SHAW.

INDIANA CONFERENCE REPORT

In response to the call for a Quarterly Conference at Plymouth, Ind., March 31st and April 2d, a goodly number met and enjoyed what we trust will prove to be a very profitable meeting. A majority of the churches were represented.

Brothers Anderson and Van Vactor were on the program to do the speaking, but owing to the illness of his wife, Brother Anderson was unable to be there which was a great disappointment to all and no doubt was so to Brother Anderson himself. The conference expressed its kindly feeling and sympathy for him, also sent an offering. Although the burden of all the preaching fell upon Brother Van Vactor, he proved quite equal to it, interspersing two Bible lessons with the sermons.

On Sunday morning, Mary Catherine Stoller of Bremen, desiring to walk in the new life, presented herself for baptism. This caused rejoicing and she was given a hearty welcome into the household of faith.

A business meeting was held on Saturday afternoon. The reconsideration of the articles of incorporation and the proposed new constitution was the most important business matter brought before the session. The chairman of this committee, David Van Vactor, read his report, after which a lengthy discussion and explanation followed. A motion was then made and carried that this matter be referred to the committee again—this committee to be enlarged by the addition of two elders from each church, and in case there is only one elder in any church, that church to appoint one of its members to serve on the committee with the elder, and this committee to meet at the next yearly conference.

Will the brothern of the several churches please take notice that there is no place appointed for next yearly meeting, and that the conference is now ready to receive an invitation from any church to entertain it early this coming fall.

OBITUARY

Julia G. Partlow

Julia Ann Gross was born on December 5, 1840. She united in marriage with Marion Partlow on April 23, 1903, and died at her home in Casey, Ill., on March 17, 1916, aged 75 years, 3 months and 12 days. She left of her immediate family surviving, her husband, three brothers and two sisters to mourn the loss of a true and faithful wife and sister.

Sister Partlow was an unassuming, industrious, Christian woman; a lover of home and its members and immediate surroundings, and was truly "a keeper at home." She was a member of the body of Christ for many years and fell asleep in full assurance of faith in the soon coming of our Lord to redeem his people from the power of the enemy; destroy death, take away our sorrows and wipe away our tears.

She had suffered patiently for a long time, and every means that money and tender hands could afford for her relief were generously supplied by her husband and family, but the hand of the enemy could not be stayed and she fell asleep.

Funeral services, conducted by the writer, were held in The Restitution Church house in the country near her old home, where most of her life was spend. The church house was filled to its capacity with relatives, friends and neighbors, whose hearts were filled with sadness and tender sympathy. But the clouds will soon be lifted and the "Son of Righteousness will arise with healing in his beams," till which time we wait and watch and pray.

L. E. CONNER.

CUT OFF

After admiring a lovely bunch of chrysanthemums that a friend had given me, I placed them in a vase of water. Every day I refilled the vase with fresh water. During the first day, the room was filled with the fragrance of the flowers; the second day on entering the room I found that they did not, as before, fill the room with their sweetness. On the third day, I could barely detect the odor, and they did not look as fresh as when I put them in the vase. They had begun to look faded. What was the cause of this? They had been cut from the bush where they had been supplied with the nourishment they needed. Although for awhile they lived in the fresh water, yet for a short time only, did they fill the room with sweetness, and soon died.

How true a type this is of some poor souls God has pardoned their sins; but because they do not feed on God's Word and talk with Him often, they lose the sweetness of their experience of salvation For a time they may seem to be living, but they will soon become spiritually dead. In order to retain spiritual life it is absolutely necessary that we feed on heavenly things. To keep shedding spiritual fragrance we must be nourished from above. By reading God's Word and going often in secret prayer, we receive nourishment fresh from the throne of grace. This will keep us filled with spiritual beauty. Let us watch and pray lest we become cut off from God, lose our fragrance, then wither and die.—Selected by Amy Weaver.

THE SEED OF ABRAHAM

The Bible is full of illustrations. They are all very simple and easily understood. God from His exalted position as the Creater and sustainer of the universe condescends to meet man upon a level respecting his powers of reasoning and comprehension. Hence, God always communicates to us information and knowledge respecting His plan, through the channel of simple, natural and familiar illustration.

God, to impress upon the mind of Abraham what he meant by His promise to him that "And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great and thou shalt be a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee; and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." (Gen. 12:2, 3.) "And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them; and he said unto him, So shall thy seed be, and he believed in the Lord; and he counted it to him for righteousness." (Gen. 15:5, 6.)

Beloved brethren, has or does your mind meditate much on the immensity and magnitude of this promise? "As the Star of Heaven." Notice how this thought prevades the minds of the writers of the Bible. Moses understood God's plan and purpose respecting the Seed of Abraham and the significant illustration of "The Stars of Heaven." "Remember Abraham, Isaac and Israel, thy servants, to whom thou sworest by thine own self and said unto them, I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, and all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed and they shall inherit it forever." (Ex. 32:13.)

David know it. (Chron. 27:23). Jeremiah at most quoted Gen. 15:5, 6: "As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured; so will I multiply the seed of David, my servant, and the Levites that minister unto me." (Jer. 32:22.)

Paul in Rom. 4:18 and in Heb. 11:12 proves the same promise was a live issue in his masterful mind. When I read Psa 147:4, "He telleth the number of the stars; he calleth them all by names.' I close my eyes and say to myself, "This is wonderfully true. "God only knows the number of the stars, and he knows each of their names.

The seed of Abraham are likened to the stars. (Dan. 12:3; Cor. 15:41). God bestowed upon each of these stars a name. (Rev. 2:17; Rev. 3:12.)

Each of these stars God knows by name. (Mal. 3:16-18; 2 Tim. 2:19; Jno. 10:14, 27, 28). The number of these stars we are told by those "Bible Students" who claim that they have better promises that the promise made to Abraham limits to one hundred forty and four thousand. (Rev. 14:1.)

The writer believes that this number is a symbolical one and not an exact quantity, for, if it is so, then God's illustration of "The Stars of Heaven" is misleading, and God never seeks to deceive His people Those he considers his jewels.

God says that the stars cannot be counted. When Israel, consisting of seventy persons, went down into Egypt and after sojourning there for four hundred and thirty years, God, by a mighty hand, brought them forth. They numbered some six hundred thousand men, besides women and children. Today, scattered throughout the world, are millions of their descendants. Who can tell us the number of the seed of Abraham that have lived during the period that had elapsed since the promise was made until now?

But the promise that interests us is, "The promise," made concering the seed of Abraham. (Jesus Christ. Gal. 3:16), that has not yet been fulfilled, but which, thank God, will be in due time. God said unto Abraham, "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." This seed (Jesus Christ) is at the present time at the right hand of God, waiting until his enemies shall be made his footstool, when he shall come forth as the "Star out of Jacob" (Nos. 24:17-19) to smite his enemies, restore his people, Israel, to their land and home, subdue all nations and bring them into subjection to God. He will cause them to "beat their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning hooks, making wars to cease to the ends of the earth, blessing the nations of the earth with universal peace and a righteous reign of a thousand years (Mic. 4:2-4).

Beloved brethren, tonight before you retire, read Psa. 19, then step outside your door and look up into the starry vault of heaven, think of the Being we call God. Nay, rather Abba Father. (Dear Papa), for this is really what this means. (Mark 14:36; Rom. 8:15; Gal. 4:6; 1 Jno. 3:1-3). That this glorious Being created them all. God will draw near to you. (Jas. 4:8). You will find yourself lost in wonder and amazement. Now step inside your home again, repeat to yourself Jno. 3:16., steal away into a quiet corner and contemplate the wonders of divine love, as manifested in the person of this one "The Seed," who came as God's lamb to put away the sin of the world.

Paul reasons that when we were enemies we were reconciled to God bythe death of his Son. Much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life(. Rom. 5:10.) Death reigns through sin, but life is offered through the righteous one, provided by a condescending and loving God who willeth not the death of a sinner, but that all would turn unto him and live for evermore. Beloved, mark well this statement: God offers unto the fallen sons of Adam, eternal life through a belief in His gracious promises made unto the Israelitish fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, if they will become the seed of Abraham by putting on Christ in the appointed way. Listen, this is God's way and there is none other whereby we may become part of "This Seed."

"For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.

For, as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according tothe promise." (Gal. 3:26-29.)

It is indeed a glorious and wondrous sight to contemplate the stars above us, to consider the planets, the moon and the life-giving sun. But these will all be eclipsed when "the root and the offspring of David" and the bright and the morning star "shall rise and shine forth as the Sun of Righteousness, with healing in his beams," when all the people shall be blest as the earth becomes filled with the knowledge of the glory of God, even now as the waters fill the sea. May God help me to put forth the greatest effort of my life to win a place among that immortal company that forever will bask in the beams of the sunshine of His everlasting love is the prayer of yours in this glorious and inspiring hope.

GEORGE B. ALLDRIDGE.

REPORT FROM THE CLEVELAND YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY

A number of weeks ago an interesting meeting was lead by Brother Fred Blyth, who conducted an historical study of the Religion of South America. While the "foreign fields" are being pleaded for, and the money of the Americas has been called, here in our own Pan-America we find the worst form of Catholicism.

As the Portugese were the first to find a money-making country in South America, they naturally forced the territory to adopt their religion. Portugal inherited the laws, the literature and the religion of Rome, and as a consequence the countries have been overrun by a perverted form of religion.

The Jesuit priests, who brought Pagan Rome into South America, forced their ideas on the natives only because of the pomp, the paraphernalia, the heathenish rites of the processions. Christianity is a by-word among the savages. There is no spirituality, only violence in this land where, because of the climate and soil, vegetation is overabundant.

In a report, given a short time ago, it was stated that no Bibles were allowed to be circulated and raffles and gamblings are held in the church service. There is a decided lack of interest on the part of the men, who boldly proclaim their indifference. In all that great country there is an average of one missionary with his Bible to every 200,000 people.

In a word, religion rules the politics, and is one of superstition and taxation that renders the people subject to the priests who are powerful in the demands and terror they arouse in their diocese.

In contrast, think of the favor, the loving solicitude, the blessings, that are granted to us to be able to be called the Sons of God. "For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father."

ONE OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE

The household is woman's kingdom, and all that pertain to it is under her jurisdiction and direction. By this it is meant to say that the administrative regulation of details is hers, and that she should be left in the complete enjoyment of it as well as to the responsibility and care.

Riches, public favor, leisure, comfort, ease, and luxury, all good in themselves, are not good for life-purposes. They may afford opportunities for higher things; but in the efforts to attain them the true ends are often lost sight of, and they become the only aims of life.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF
The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-55); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). A CATHOLIC DOGMA REFUTED

"The church is built on Peter" (St. Jerome).

"Where Peter is there is the church" (St. Ambrose).

"For, regarding the primacy of the principal head of the church, there is no other church in the world besides the Roman Catholic, which, by the succession of its supreme rulers, the Roman Pontiffs, dates from the days of Peter, whom Christ appointed in his own stead as head of all, and upon whom he so solemnly founded his church which was to endure till the end of time" (Weininger's Manual of Instruction).

For the refutation of this dogma, we will first consider the three following passages: Read Matt. 28:16-20 and notice the text, "and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Also read Matt. 23:8 and notice the text, "for one is your Master, even Christ; and all we are brethren." Also read 1 Cor. 3:11, which is, "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." From the first text, observe that a withdrawal was not contemplated; and, therefore, inasmuch as no withdrawal was contemplated, observe that no successor was contemplated to take the place made vacant by a withdrawal. Considering next the second passage, observe that the one who is not contemplating a withdrawal is the Master in contradistinction to whom all the others addressed are brethren. Considering next the third passage, observe that the one who alone is the Master and who does not contemplate withdrawal is the foundation referred to in the text 1 Cor. 3.11: "For other foundation can no man lay than this is laid,which is Jesus Christ." In this connection, it may be remarked that with propriety various persons may be referred to as together constituting a foundation as in Eph. 2:20 and this agrees with the text, "for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren," there not being a monopoly of being the foundation held by one of them but they as brethren sharing in being the foundation.

Now, keeping distinctly in mind what has already been stated, read the entire passage, Matt. 16:13-20, and observe that to the question of Jesus, the answer of Peter was: "Thou are the Christ, the Son of the living God;" and that having stated that the answer of Peter was by revelation, Jesus continued as recorded in verses 18 and 19. In verse 19 occurs the authorization passage in regard to binding and loosing on earth and in heaven. Now it is to be observed that whatever is involved in this authorization it does not amount to a monopoly of the binding and loosing on earth and in heaven; for in Matt. 18:18 we find the binding and loosing proposition given in the plural, as also John 20:19-23, and this lack of monopoly in this regard agrees with the passage already quoted, "for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren," there not being a monopoly of binding and loosing—and even if anything beyond this proposition be thought to have been implied by the statement as to the bestowal of the keys of the kingdom of heaven, it is to be particularly observed that it does not appear that any such implication can be allowed to interfere with the text already quoted to the effect that Christ is the one Master and the others are brethren; and it is to be noticed that this text is subsequent to the text wherein the authorization proposition is given; that is to say, the passages concerning the authorization of Peter and the general authorization occur before the passage wherein it is stated that Christ is the one Master and the others are brethren.

Now read again the entire passage, Matt. 16:13-20, and observe that to the question of Jesus, the answer of Peter was: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God;" and that having stated that the answer of Peter was by revelation Jesus continued as recorded in verses 18 and 19. In verse 18 occurs the passage, "And I say also unto thee That thou are Peter and upon this rock I will build my church:" and it is now to be particularly observed that to call Peter's reply "Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God" the foundation agrees perfectly with 1 Cor. 3:11, which reads: "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." To the insistent demand that by reference the meaning is that Peter is the rock, the reply is that it is not so stated, for it does not say "upon thee, Peter," but it does say "upon this rock," and this leaves the word "rock" free to refer to the answer Peter gave in the sixteenth verse. To any who may have heard that Peter means rock and who are placing some reliance on that point, the advice is kindly extended to look up the passage in the original and find the word for Peter and find the word for rock and discover for themselves that the words are different.

Now read the 23rd verse of the same chapter and there with absolute directness Jesus addresses Peter as Satan. Observe that the declaration of Jesus in the preceding incident (Matt. 16:17-19) did not so affect Peter that he could not subsequently be called Satan; but also observe that the answer Peter gave in the 16th verse was not affected in the least by the error into which Peter fell (Matt. 16:21-23) nor affected by his denial (Matt. 26:69-75) and thus the answer of Peter (Matt. 16:16) given him by revelation has that quality of permanence suitable for a foundation. The arguments and scripture herein brought forward must not be understood as an attack upon Peter who participated with the others in the work of establishing Christianity, but simply as an attack upon a Romish dogma which as far as known was entirely unknown to Peter or to any of his contemporaries nor does the slightest suggestion of it appear in either of the books of Peter.

Upon the point that a withdrawal was not contemplated and that therefore a successor was not contemplated read Matt. 28-20 and observe that the passage referred to is a final clause with nothing thereafter to modify it.

If the reader desires, he may read the entire chapter, John 21, and observe the passages that may be conisdered as pertaining to the restoration of Peter after his denial.

The argument having to do withthe founding of the church do not fail to notice that in the passage, Matt. 16:18 the word "church" appears. The reader is asked to remember the authorization of binding and loosing is general andthat therefore there is no monopoly of binding and loosing.

Read again the three quotations with which this article begins and observe the emphasis put upon Peter and the neglect of the others and in the third quotation observe the words "supreme rulers" which is certainly equivalent to being masters. In Weininger's Manual of Instruction, occurs the question—"Who is the successor of Peter and vicegerent of Christ?" and the answer given is "The Pope of Rome." It also says "The Pope of Rome, as successor of St. Peter and the vicegerent of Christ, governs the entire church with apostolic and plenipotentiary power." The next question is, "How is this authority of the Pope usually styled?" and the answer is, "The Apostolic plenipotentiary power because it passes from St. Peter, the prince of the Apostles, to all his successors orderly and without division, on which account the Roman Episcopal See received also the epithet 'the Apostolic chair.'"

The next question is, "How does the Pope of Rome exercise this apostolic authority in ruling the holy church?" and the answer goes on to tell about it.

Now, in contradistinction to all this, turn to Matt. 20:20-29, read the entire passage; and keeping in mind what has just been said about "supreme rulers," "vicegerent," "governs," "plenipotentiary power," "prince," and "authority," observe particularly the words of Jesus—part verse 25 and part verse 26. "Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be so among you:" and this passage is subsequent to the authorization passages and agrees with the text "for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren."

Now by the Romish dogma, the popes exercise authority as being successors of Peter alleged to have been the prince of the apostles; but, by the word of Jesus the exercise of authority as is done by those who are great is a gentile method and is forbidden among the disciples; and inasmuch as the entire matter with which the dogma is concerned depends upon the words of Jesus; and inasmuch as the dogma is found to contradict the words of Jesus; therefore the dogma is refuted; and inasmuch as the words of Jesus upon which the dogma is alleged to depend have not been found to maintain the dogma therefore the dogma remains refuted.—J. B. H. in "Good News."

"COMMUNICATE TO HIM THAT TEACHETH"
Gal. 6:6

My Dear Mr. Huggins:

I am a stranger to you, but a reader of your good little paper, The Restitution, and in reading its columns under the head of "Editorial" I find that you have suffered losses by opposing "Josephism." (I am not a brother, not having obeyed by being immersed for the remission of sins; but I trust that in the near future I may be able to visit Cleveland and have the baptism of our Lord conferred upon me.)

It seems too bad that you should lose subscribers over this question to the extent of putting The Restitution in jeopardy, and I am enclosing my check to the amount of $30 to help you out.

If you think it is wise and that it may be the means of bringing more help to you, you may publish this letter, although I am a man not given to letting my right hand know what the left hand doeth.

I have been much interested in the articles entitled "Dancing," and "A Sister's" letter to you on the same subject. The comments so far printed, with the exception of your own, seem to me to be very narrow and would have a tendency to drive one away from the truth. If the brothers and sisters who found fault with her, instead of refusing her fellowship, had gone out and tried to secure more suitable work, that she might be able to support her little ones—had they done this, I say, they would have been living nearer to Christ's teaching.

It is surprising how very narrow and bigoted the brethren and sisters sometimes become (especially those old in the truth, who ought to know better) over these non-essential questions. If they but realized the vast amount of harm they do I think they would discontinue, always bearing in mind the injunction laid upon us by Christ, "Judge not, that ye be not judged."

Very respectfully yours,

H. W. RUSSELL.

P. S.—I am also enclosing $1.50 for a new subscriber.—H. W. R.

Editorial Comments

Above letter is so unusual and extraordinary in different ways that we can not forbear making one or two remarks about it.

1. The substantial financial assistance sent by quasi-Bro. Russell may make some of our readers gasp for breath, and lead others to remark: "Bro. Russell must be rich." We do not know as to his wealth, but we hazard the guess that he is poor or in moderate circumstances, like the rest of us. We are personally acquainted with rich brethren who would be put to shame were their driblets for the support of the gospel compared with our friend's liberality—and he is an alien, remember! And we know "poor brethren" (?) who have spent as much and more than quasi-Bro. Russell has sent to hold up the hands for the truth for something else! We publish quasi-Bro. Russell's letter, not only to show his heartfelt interest in the truth, but also to rebuke brethren who are spending more on drivel than they are on the gospel of the Son of God. They deserve to be rebuked for their iniquity.

2. At the annual meeting of the Directors of The Restitution Publishing Company, this year, they decided that since hiring The Restitution published was more expensive than our income from subscriptions (our only source of income), the only way to publish the paper at a cost within our means was to buy a linotype machine. Sister Wince has kindly consented to take charge of this matter. She will explain the details and particulars fully within the next few months. In the meantime send any pledges or money for The Restitution Linotype Fund to Sister S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind., or to The Restitution Publishing Company, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. Bro. Russell has kindly consented for us to use his liberal donation as a nest egg to start this fund. Acknowledgment of money received for the Linotype Fund up to this date is given below:

BEREAN COLUMN NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

Edited by Leota B. Hanson 3101 Magnolia Ave.. St. Louis, Mo.

"What shall we do?" (Acts 2:38; 3:18-22). "Repent and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out. A time of refreshing is coming from the presence of the Lord. He shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution." God has told us in his word what is to be prepared for them that love him. Will you not believe what he has said?

If you believe the gospel, "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of the Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Thus we are told in unmistakable language the steps to be taken in order to be cleansed from sin, sanctified, set apart, and that we may wear his name. O how much it means to be true to this sacred contract of espousal to Christ! Be wise. The oil (his spirit) must be in your vessels. "Let everyone that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." Be vessels unto honor, sanctified and meet for the Master's use, and prepared unto every good work.

In the baptismal waters you are set apart for this purpose. Be true to the fidelity you owe to Christ. Remember he said, "Occupy till I come." Soon the glad cry will be heard, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." Be ready, for "they that were ready went in with him to the marriage." Watch to keep clean and pure and true. "Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." Be ready now, for soon it will be too late. Now is the day of salvation. The preparation of the bride-to-be is one in which all God's holy angels have a part, for "are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?"

The privileges of members of the body of Christ are beyond compare. Accept Christ; be made clean in that "bath of a new birth," and become an heir of salvation.—Selected by Florence Laning.

Loving Our Enemies

Once upon a time, as the story goes, I heard a lady talking about loving our enemies. She said: "It is not enough to let them alone; we must love them." I answered: "There are degrees of love, and it is not possible for us to care for our enemies as we do for our friends." She thought we should. I said: "Even Jesus had his favorites; John is called 'the beloved disciple;' and I do not think Jesus would have been willing to have his mother in Judas' care." She answered: "Judas was dead, but if he had been living Jesus would have been just as willing to leave her with him as with John."

Well, opinions differ, and mine is emphatically No! Although God bestows temporal favors on good and bad alike, and gave his Son to suffer and die for all, yet his secret is with them that fear him, and his rewards are for the righteous. You remember when Jacob fled from Laban, and Laban overtook him, that they took stones and made a heap, and they agreed not to cross that line to each other for harm, saying, "The Lord watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another." Years ago, when Charles Gardner wrote for The Restitution, he said this verse was a mistranslation, and should read: "The Lord watch between me and thee, that we keep away from each other, lest we get together and fight." I think he was right, as it seems more in harmony with the rest of the chapter.

My view of loving our enemies is this: If it is possible we are to live peaceably with all; but if it isn't—and there are people who take a sort of fiendish delight in doing us an injury—we are to keep away from them—remaining, however, in a forgiving attitude, and, like David toward Saul's descendants, to watch to do them a kindness, if not direct, then through others. But not for one moment do I think God requires us to make associates and friends of those who only mingle with us to do us harm. LILLIE H. WILLIS.

Face to Face With God

Dear Bereans:

Not long since I read the following statement, which appealed to me as truth: "The reason men do not read the Bible is that they are afraid to come face to face with God." Are we afraid to use God's word as the measuring rod of our lives, and do we search the scriptures to become better acquainted with our dear Lord and his ways, or do we ever search them to find a cloak for some pet sin? Christ has given us a standard which will admit of no warning or twisting to conform to the world with its glitter and whirl, drawing everything unstable iinto its maelstrom. Some like to stand where they can gaze upon these seeming pleasures, thinking they have strength to withstand their power.

Once there was a king who wanted a driver for his carriage. He was to choose the most skillful of three. The road was wide, and on one side was a steep precipice. The first took the safest side of the road; the next, the middle, and the third showed his skill by driving as near as possible to the dangerous edge. The first driver was chosen as the most skillful driver, as he knew enough to avoid danger. That is the kind of a driver our King wants. He has warned us to shun the appearance of evil. He has given us the true bread of life which is satisfying. We need not seek in doubtful or dangerous places for pleasures of the world which provide only husks.

Let us strive daily to conform our lives to that of the Son of God, so that when we open our Bible each day and meet God face to face we may not be ashamed, but as dutiful sons and daughters we may commune freely with him as our Father.

Although his presence is not visible, as a constant reminder may we be so imbued with his spirit (word) that we shall not need the injunction, "Thou, God, seest me," to guard us from evil. Let us not serve him in the "Thou shalt not" spirit"—not negatively, but positively and in a willing manner. We are assured the time is short, the field great and the laborers few indeed, so we have no time for idling. Let us not be discouraged at the outlook, but use the talent entrusted to us, and ever bear in mind our blessed Lord's injunction, "Occupy till I come."

AMY V. WEAVER.

BRUSH CREEK BIBLE CLASS

We are having a Bible Class which teaches us about the Bible. Our first lesson was about Christ. Whose Son is he? Matt. 3:17 says: "And lo, a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." John 3:16: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Our second lesson was Christ the lifegiver. 1 John 5:11: "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son."

The third lesson was the promises made to Abraham and his seed. Gen. 12:7: "And the Lord appeared unto Abraham, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there builded he an altar unto the Lord, who appeared unto him." Acts 26:16: "And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers."

Our last lesson was, "What must I do to be saved?" The memory verse was Mark 16:15, 16: "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned." John 3:5: "Jesus said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a man be born of the water and of the spirit he can not enter into the kingdom of God."

CHARLES PEARSON.

We decided to continue our Bible School on Wednesday night, March 29, 1916. The first lesson we had is found in John 20:31. We proved in this chapter that Jesus was the Son of God.

The second lesson was founded on John 10:27, 28. Jesus said that he would give unto the sheep eternal life, and that they should never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand.

The third lesson was found in Gal. 3:8-16. In the eighth verse God preached the gospel to Abraham, saying: "In thee shall all nations be blessed." The 16th verse says: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many, but as one, And to thy seed, which is Christ. The promises were made to Abraham and his seed. Seed means children. Gal. 3:18 says: "For if the inheritance be of the law, it is more of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise."

Our last lesson is found in Mark 16:15, 16. Christ told his disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. The apostles did so, and the Lord worked with them. "Creature" means people. Belief and baptism of the Bible is the right way to get into Christ. You believe first, and then you are baptized. But you must believe the Bible first, or baptism is the act of an unbeliever. FAY PEARSON.

Remarks

In our last report we were at Avery, and promised to report the result this month. The work is not completed yet, and we can not report in full. Several who took a stand for the truth are to be baptized next Sunday. Bro. Hammond, who lives at Avery (which is a suburb of South Omaha), once lived in the western part of the state and was baptized when a boy by the writer. He went away to school and taught school when circumstances landed him in Avery. In his long absence from those of like faith, and being young in years, he partly forgot the truth. But finally it dawned upon him that he was not doing his duty, and the truth began to come back to him in little bits. It was then he lifted up his voice to God for help, and it seemed I arrived home just in time to be chosen to answer the call. The result is all we could ask, and our brother is rejoicing.

Bro. Hammond is a very earnest worker, and is going to be a valuable help to those who have decided to stand with him in the truth. A minister by the name of Cleveland preached at this point for some time, and was well liked by the people, and had an inkling of the truth. Bro. Hammond recognized this, although he was preaching under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church. It was the dropping of these bits of truth that began to call back the old days when he first heard those things. This man came to our meetings several times, and found, he said, that he had compromised the truth with error, which he would not do any more. He had a large Men's Class at the Y. M. C. A., where they meet every Monday evening. Circumstances were such he thought he would have to give up the class, and he recommended me to them. Then they voted to have me for their teacher. We have lawyers and business men of all kinds in the class. I decided to take it for a time, and they were so well pleased they decided to meet twice a week and include the ladies. We have been having two lessons each evening, the first one on some phase of the gospel, and after that a lesson on prophecy. I never saw people more interested. We are giving them the truth straight, but seasoned with love. Pray for the success of these lessons.

This gives me an idea: Why not our people in every place where there is a Y. M. C. A. ask for a date to hold Bible readings? They are open to all denominations. I asked my class to lay aside all prejudice and thought of former teaching. That we were not there to read ideas into the scriptures, nor to support former teaching, but to study the Bible and let it form our ideas, and if it formed new ones for us all right. This seemed to please them, and I fully believe the truth is taking form in their minds. I have so much work before me I hardly see how I can accomplish it all, but God will direct. Let us all labor to the end we may be established.

Yours in his service,

ALMUS ADAMS.

REMINDS US OF SOME PREACHERS

In a lawsuit in which Abraham Lincoln represented one party the lawyer on the other side was an extremely glib talker, but not reckoned as deeply profound or much of a thinker. He would say anything to a jury which happened to enter his head. Lincoln, in his address to the jury, referring to this, said: "My friend on the other side is all right, or would be all right were it not for the peculiarity I am about to chronicle. He can't help it. For reasons which, gentlemen of the jury, you and I have not time to study here, as deplorable as they are surprising, the oratory of the gentleman completely suspends all action of his mind. The moment he begins to talk his mental operations cease. I never knew of but one thing which compared with my friend in this particular. That was a small steamboat. Back in the days when I performed my part as a boatman I made the acquaintance of a little steamboat which used to bustle and puff and wheeze about in the Sangamon River. It had a five-foot boiler and a seven-foot whistle, and every time it whistled it stopped."

A lot of preaching nowadays is in word only. Words! Words! Words!—Selected.

OBITUARY

Margaret A. Brooks

In Sholes, Oregon, March 18, 1916, Mrs. Margaret A. Brooks, aged 78 years, 11 months and 2 days.

Sister Brooks in early childhood united with the M. E. Church, but after hearing the word preached in a more perfect way she accepted the truth and united with the Church of God at Sholes, Oregon, of which church she was a member at the time of her death. Sister Brooks was an accomplished woman and wrote many valuable articles for her church paper and the daily papers of Portland, Oregon. She sleeps in Jesus with a resurrection hope of immortality. Five sons and one daughter and several grandchildren survive her. Services were held at the church in Sholes by the writer. J. S. LUCAS.

HONORING GOD WITH OUR SUBSTANCE

Does it glorify the Ruler of the Universe to raise money for carrying on His work by means of bazaars and rummage sales?

Let us bring the question home to ourselves. Your daughter is about to be married and you have set your heart on giving her a silver tea set as a token of your love. But you cannot manage such a costly gift in addition to the other expenses of the wedding. Then the brilliant idea of raising the money by a rummage sale comes to you. You ransack your attic and telephone your friends. They come nobly to the rescue with articles they don't want because they love you and they love the girl. You engage a stand in a vacant store, hold a most successful sale and buy the present.

Do you not think that every time she pours tea from the pot, your daughter will love to flect on the number of her friends' old clothes that were sacrificed to buy it?

You would not do such a thing? Then are you willing to put God and His work on a lower plane than your own loved ones?—Herald of Life.

Some time ago we read about a conversation that once took place in a Boston home, in which a few friends were discussing certain curious things about the mind. One said that it was an odd fact that no man could do one thing and think of another.

A little girl of ten years, the daughter of the host, was listening attentively. Perhaps you think that she could not understand all that psychology, but listen: "I can do one thing and think of another," she said.

"What is it?" asked her father.

"Well, it is easy for me to say the Lord's Prayer and think of anything else I want to. I do it every night."

"AND THY NEIGHBOR AS THYSELF"

Willie—Ma, may I have Tommy Wilson over to our house to play Saturday?

Mother—No, you make altogether too much noise. You'd better go over to his house and play.

"BETTER RESURRECTION"

"Women received their dead raised to life again; and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection" (Heb. 11:35).

The word "better" in this text is an adjective in the comparative degree, and belongs to the noun "resurrection," and, therefore, expresses its quality. An old grammarian maxim requires that the word "than" should be added to all comparisons, for the reason that this word is always either expressed or understood. The word "better" in Heb. 11:35 expresses the quality of the resurrection which Abraham and others "of whom the world was not worthy," strove at great sacrifices to obtain; and implies a comparison of its goodness with another resurrection not so good; and yet the passage says that this inferior resurrection restored its subjects "to life again." Mediocre minds instantly perceive that the Pauline comparison here is between the resurrection of those dead ones whom the "women received to life again" and that which Abraham, the martyrs and prophets strove to attain. The resurrection of the women's dead was a restoration of them "to life," and was a good resurrection; but the saints who died in "the faith, not having received the promises" (vs. 13), hoped for "a better resurrection" (than this). Bro. Brown has slept long enough: wake up, brother, and give us a little help on this passage. Bro. Brown, the reader will recall, is the brother who "preached the truth" and debated with the minister in Drearyville He is the brother who challenged the editor of The Restitution to debate "immortal resurrection." We accepted his challenge, then the brother immediately fell into a deep slumber, and we have not heard from him since. Will some of his friends please wake him up? He need not be idle while he is getting his consent to debate the question of "immortal resurrection;" he can answer these queries in the meantime: Did not the women's dead who were "raised to life again," emerge mortal? If they emerged mortal, theirs was a mortal resurrection, was it not? Then what mortal resurrection can be better (than) their mortal resurrection? Can one thing no better than another, be "better" than it? "A better resurrection" than the mortal cannot be less than immortal.

DANCING

An Editorial Dedicated to "A Sister" and the Church to Which She Belongs—Is Dancing a Sin?

To this oft-asked question we now reply in the fear of God, and with a profound conviction that his word is all-sufficient for "all things that pertain to life and godliness" (2 Pet. 1:3). We are not ignorant of the fact that "sin is the transgression of the law." We are fully cognizant of the fact that there are many ascetic, grouchy and popish men who denounce a thousand things as "sins" against which they cannot quote one syllable of "law" to condemn. The sibilations of these fanatics we have no more respect for than the quacking of geese. We are addressing primarily young brethren and sisters in these editorials on dancing, and we want them to understand that we are young ourselves, amative and moderate, and that if we oppose dancing and call it a "sin," our opposition is not to be traced to dotage, asceticism, personal aversion to the dance, or any cause in the universe other than this, namely, that dancing is a "sin" because it is "the transgression of law," displeasing to our heavenly Father, and is absurd conduct in men and women who are "followers of God, as dear children" (Eph. 5:1).

Is dancing a sin? This is the question, always stated in just these words. Those who seek to justify the dance put their argument in this form: Since sin is "the transgression of law," and since dancing is not forbidden in the law, therefore, the dance is lawful But not too fast, dear reader. Let us understand the terms we use as we go along. Just what do you mean by the word "dance?" What does it include? These questions are worthy serious meditation; for, while the dance itself may not be a sin, it may include things that are sinful. Webster says the word means "the movements of one or more persons with measured steps to music." From this definition it appears that dancing includes many things, such as time, place, associates, music, etc. There can be no sin in movements and steps that are measured; if so, marching would be sinful; there is no sin in the music which forms a part of dancing, if it is decent music. But the music may not be decent, and therefore, sinful. Open doors are now becoming visible by which sin may enter the dance. Then the participants in the dance may be sinful companions, people whom God forbids you to associate with. A man of God must not walk in the counsel of the ungodly, stand in the way of sinners, nor sit in the seat of the scornful (Psa. 1:1). Sin may also creep into the dance either in the time or place of the ball, or in gluttony, feasting or drinking, which may and often does, form part of it. "Is dancing a sin?" is not a fair question. A dance may not itself be a transgression of law; but it may include things which God's law forbids; if it does, then dancing is a sin. Let us then be frank and fair in this matter.; let us change the terms of the interrogation, and ask the question properly and fairly. Does dancing include anything that is sinful? In this form the question is homologously propounded, it is not unduly cramped in plenary expression, nor absurdly expanded by de trop. With the question thus fairly stated and properly understood, we are frank to say that dancing is a sin. We will now place before our readers the evidence which leads us to say that dancing is a breach of divine "law." We appeal the law and testimony of God (Psa. 8:20).

Principles include their accessories. Let us cite illustrations of this inclusiveness. In Ex. 20:13; Deut. 5:17, we have this divine law, "Thou shalt not kill." Cursorily read this commandment seems only to taboo murder; but under the magical teaching of Jesus Christ we learn that it embraces much more; it extends farther and reaches deeper than this. Its astounding inclusiveness is revealed in the word: "Whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause * * * whosoever shall say to his brother, Racca (margin, vain fellow) * * * whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire" (Matt. 5:22). Christ argues that since the law forbids murder, causeless "anger" and everything else which causes one to commit murder, is included in the command. All accessories are condemned by the principle. Another law enunciated in Ex. 20:14; Deut. 5:18, illustrates the same thing., The law reads "Thou shalt not commit adultery." Verbally and apparently only the one act of adultery is forbidden by this law; but again Christ enlarges its meaning and says: "Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart" (Matt. 5:28). That is, the prohibition of adultery really prohibits every thing else which leads to its committal. Everything which causes or leads a man to break this command, "Thou shalt not commit adultery," is forbidden by the commandment itself.

Were it not for this inherent broadness in commandments, they would lose all their deterrent powers, and fall into desuetude. In Matt. 22:37-40 Christ shows this by quoting two commandments, one inculcating love to God, the other love to man. He then makes this pregnant comment concerning them: "On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." "The law and the prophets" embrace all the books of the Old Testament; and, according to the conception and representation of Jesus Christ, they "hang," in all their entirety, upon only "two commandments." Taught by direct revelation from Christ (Gal. 1:12) Paul condenses the law with all its divers commandments into one mandate in Rom. 13:8-10. The apostle first asserts, "He that loveth another hath fulfilled the law." To make this extraordinary declaration obvious he enters into specifications and quotations of various commandments: "Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not covet; and i fthere be any other commandment, it is comprehended in this saying. Thou shalt love they neighbor as thyself." Now here is one "commandment" which "comprehends" all "other commandments;" here is one "saying" which, in the marvelous width of its sweep, includes all other sayings. Since love of another makes it impossible for you to seduce his wife, kill, steal or bear false witness against him, the apostle is justified in saying that obedience of this one commandment "comprehends" all others. Since this one commandment embraces all others, its obedience is tantamount to complete obedience. Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore, love is the fulfilling of the law." Thus in the concentrating mind of Paul complete obedience of the entire law is reduced to "one word": "All the law is fulfilled (filled full) in one word, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" (Gal. 5:14). Commandments, then, extend beyond themselves; they embrace everything in their prohibition which causes men to transgress them; that is, principles include their accessories. Therefore, it comes to pass as a matter of logic that specific taboos of statutory law are amplified in the comprehensiveness of such sweeping statements as these: "Avoid all appearance of evil" (1 Thess. 5:22); "Hating even the garment spotted by the flesh" (Jude 23); "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness (Eph. 5:11); "If any of you err from the truth" (Jas. 5:19), etc., etc. From the evidence thus before us, we conclude that when God makes a law, whatever approaches or comes near to it, or causes men to violate it—all accessories are included in the principle; and conversely, when God enjoins any duty, all means and facilities which enable either ourselves or others to do it, according to our capacities and opportunities, are also enjoined.

Having now a proper and scriptural understanding of the extent of God's ethical commandments, the reader is asked to ponder the following passages of holy scriptures, which are quoted from the Emphatic Diaglott. He is also specialy asked to study those parts ofthe texts which are printed in black face type:

"As they did not choose to possess the knowledge of God, God delivered them over to a worthless mind, to do improper things—abounding in iniquity—in wickedness, in coveteousness, in malignity, full of envy, murder, strife, deceit, bad habits, secret slanderers, revilers, God-haters, insolent, proud, boasters, devisers of evil things disobedient to parents, obstinate, covenant-breakers, destitute of natural affection, without pity; who, though they know the ordinance of God, (that those who practice such things are deserving of death), not only are doing them, but even are approving those who practice them" (Rom. 1:28-32).

"A law is not enacted for a righteous man, but for the lawless and unruly, for the ungodly and sinners, for the impious and profane, for smiters of fathers and smiters of mothers, for assassins, for fornicators, for sodomites, for man-stealers, for liars, for perjurers and if there be any other thing that is opposed to the wholesome doctrine" (1 Tim. 1:9, 10).

"The works of the flesh are manifestly these: Fornication, impurity, debauchery, idolatry, sorcery, enmities, quarrels, jealousies, resentments, altercations, factions, sects, envyings, inebrities, revellings, and things similar to these; respecting which I tell you before, even as I previously told you, That those who practice such things shall not inherit God's kingdom" (Gal. 5:19, 20, 21).

From these passages we deduce the following truths:

1. If we commit any of the sins here enumerated we forfeit salvation, as is solemnly affirmed in various statements, "Those who practice such things are deserving of death;" "Those who practice such things shall not inherit God's kingdom." These sins are grave and serious, and we cannot risk trifling with them.

2. The list of sins given specifically are only representative, not exhaustive, as is clearly intimated by such expressions as "such things" (instead of "these things" merely); "any other thing;" and "things similar to these."

3. Being representative sins, they include every thng that approximates to them, or that causes them to be committed, and therefore justify our previous position, that "principles include their accessories." All sins "similar" to the ones names in the list are included. None found in the list can be omitted, and all others of the same kind are included in the catalogue.

4. Dancing is forbidden by the words, "Revellings and things similar." Komos, the Greek word here translated "revellings," includes feasting drinking, loud talking, music and dancing. "Revellings and things similar" is so comprehensive a form of words they leave no loophole of escape for dancing. If there is visible to any one an aperature small as a jigger's eye for dancing to evade Paul's arraignment here, the nimble fingers of Peter closes and seals even that hermetically in these words: "The time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in laciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abnominable idolatries; wherein they think is strange that you run not with them tothe same excess of riot, speaking evil of you" (1 Pet. 4:3,4). In this text komos, "revellings," is joined with potos, "banquetings;" and these two words are identified with "excess of wine" and "excess of riot." The word "riot" in this instance comes fromthe Greek word asotia, and means "spendthriftness, extravagance" (Young). Potos, "banquetings," is the Greek equivalent of mishteh and shathah, two Hebrew words which mean to drink, and like them, potos means to drink also, a feast, to regale one's self with good eating and drinking. At the risk of wounding the feelings of good men and women who dance, truth requires us to observe that "excess of wine, revellings, banquetings and abominable idolatries" are close and inseparable chums: where you find one, you generally find the others. Where one is the others feel they have a right to be. That dancing forms part of the "revellings and banquetings" of which Peter speaks is obvious from the fact that he speaks of them in the sense they are practiced by the Gentiles. He is writing to converts who formerly practiced them; and he charges them that they must not lapse back to doing and living as they had in "time past of their life." When they were converted they quit "excess of wine, excess of riot, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries;" and since dancing it always included in these things by unconverted Gentiles, in quitting them they necessarily quit dancing; and this, of course, made their former partners in sin "think it strange" that they should abandon both them and their ways.

"Now of the things which we have spoken this is the sum" (Heb. 8:1) reduced to syllogistic form:

1. Principles include their accessories;
2. Dancing is included in "revellings and things similar;"
3. Therefore, dancing is a sin.

COMMUNICATIONS

From Sister Albert Burton

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I send two dollars to help with The Restitution. We want the paper to continue to send out the gospel message till the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.

Your sister looking for the King.

From Sister Georgia Phelps

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I see that my subscription to The Restitution has expired, so I am sending $4.50 for my renewal and two new subscribers. I enjoy the paper so much. It seems as if I couldn't get along without it, and I do hope and pray that it will never go down, and I don't believe it ever will. Surely there are enough who love the truth to uphold you and keep it going. I would like if you or some one would give an explanation of the twelfth chapter of Daniel the 11th and 12th verses. I love to read the articles on prophecy. I feel that the time is drawing near for Christ to come, and hope we will all be ready to meet our Lord when he returns.

Your sister in Christ.

Restitution Publishing Co.:

Enclosed find five dollars to be used to sustain the paper that dares to defend God's truth, even at a financial loss. Wish I could multiply it ten times. To the loved ones everywhere, we cannot afford to let the "grand old Restitution" die. For fifty years it has been a weekly visitor, coming laden with precious messages of God's truth. No! don't give it up now! Jesus is coming soon. Let us rally to its support. Yes, let us even sacrifice to help our beloved paper.

From Bro Eugene C. Miller

My father, Brother A. J. Miller, fell asleep in Jesus on October 10, 1915, and is waiting for him to come who said unto Martha, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." He was born near McMinnville, Warren County, Tennessee, on May 17, 1850, and moved from there with his parents to Warren County, Virginia, in 1867, where he was baptized a year later by his uncle, Elder N. J. Morgan, in the all-saving name of Jesus Christ. He moved to Winchester, Va., in 1875, and was married in 1880 to Miss Emma C. Berklite, of Frederick County, Md., who also was of the same faith, to whom seven children were born, one girl and six boys, who are all living. He then moved to Hagestown, Md., in 1901.

He had been a reader of The Restitution for about 35 years. It certainly would be hard to do without The Restitution as there isn't any members of the Church of God around here. My brother, Ernest J. Miller, and I are the only ones at home now to enjoy the Restitution, and we would like to see more pieces in the paper on the belief of the Christadelphians, and also some pieces on "What we should believe before we are baptized."

Our Christian love to you all. From your brother in Christ.

From Brother S. Cronkhite

Dear Brother:

Enclosed please find money orer for $4.00 to renew my subscription and also for one new subscriber.

Myrtle, to whom The Restitution is to be sent, is some 20 years of age. She takes much interest in reading Bible literature that I send to her from time to time. She likes to read the tracts to other people, and in this simple way she may do some one some good. Young girls at her age nowadays are too busy engaged with the attractions of this life, dancing and other things, to think of Bible subjects. In all my life I never saw a time when the church people were so crazed for dancing and card parties as they are today; they just seem to have cut loose for one last big time.

In conversation with a well read man today he remarked that when this world's war is over that the whole world would enter upon a long term of peace, such as we have not known for many centuries. I told him that we would have just the same sort of peace that we enjoyed before the war. A wicked world cannot keep out of war.

From your brother in the hope of eternal life.

From Bro. John O Branson

Dear Bro. Huggins:

Brother, there are three creations of the Most High:

1. The first man of the dust of the ground;
2. The womb-man of the rib of Adam; and
3. The Christ of the womb of Virgin Mary.

I was baptized in this faith in February, 1874, by Bro. J. S. Hatch. I have read the Bible ever since. Don't let any man change you as to that. The creation of Adam and Eve they don't talk about, for they have nothing to offer instead. There could have been another way to create the Christ. It only gives the skeptic something to talk about. God, Mary, Joseph and the prophets say a virgin conceived; that's enough. Don't allow anything different to go in The Restitution. The paper is good. Just stay by the truth. Please remember me in your prayers.

Your brother in Christ.

From Bro. Martin Pavella

My Dear Brother in the Faith:

I am glad to hear from my wife the comforting report that you are all well. Especially do I thank the Lord that my beloved "Parent-Brother" Tomlinson is out of danger and the King permitted him to stay with us both, for our benefit and the benefit of his cause.

You know how dearly I love The Restitution. I estimate its worth next to that of the Bible. No heir of the promises could get along without the Bible, and to get along without The Restitution—well, we must not try to figure out the results of its loss. We must make it "go"—that's all! Please use the enclosed $1.00 for a "peg" to support the dear old Restitution with.

Do you have some of Bro. Adams' New Hymn Books? Could you afford to send me a copy? I would send you the money for it, but I do not know what the price is. I'll send you the money as soon as you notify me how much it is going to cost.

I read some time ago in The Restitution about going to theaters, and so forth. The more I think about it the nearer I get to the conclusion that Christians may go to theaters—why, didn't you read about the old Roman ampitheaters? Nero can tell you that he say Christians many a time in the amphitheaters, but he'll tell you also that none of them left it alive. They all died for their faith. Now, who can enjoy the performances in the theaters, keeping these facts in his mind? Let him who can do so; but let him also understand that the Christians of Nero's time confessed a different faith. How can a believer of the gospel find enjoyment at places where the believers of those days were forced to meet lions and others beasts?

Your loving brother.

From Bro. Albert Siple

Dear Bro. Huggins:

Once more has the body of believers at Hammond, La., been made to rejoice. Bro. and Sister D. C. Robison came here the first week in February and held a three-weeks meeting. They continued to stay with us and conduct the Bible Class on Friday nights and preach on Sunday until near the end of March. We regretted to have them leave, and wish that it may be our privilege to meet them again should the Lord delay his coming.

Four became obedient to the faith: Mr. and Mrs. A. R. L. Gainey, father and stepmother, Sister J. C. Lindsey, and Bro. D. A. Gainey; Willie Anthon, a young son of Bro. and Sister L. C. Anthin, and a young lady friend of Sister Foster and an inmate of her home.

The attendance was good and held up to the very last, and the best attention was given all through. Quite a number of young people from another neighborhood attended a good part of the meetings. The truth was presented very ably and clearly in a kind but forceful way.

Many years ago Bro. W. H. Wilson had his "Pine Woods Bible Class here," and visited us several times afterward and held meetings, while in 1913 Bro. O. J. Allard put in some hard work here with slight visible results, as only two in this neighborhood and two near Springfield became obedient: but the seed was sown and brought forth fruit the following year when he held another meeting. Since then the truth has spread and our Sunday School and Bible Class have been well attended, with good interest shown, and our number has been increased.

Yours in the faith.

From Bro. R. H. Judd

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I should much like to have comments from yourself and some of your readers regarding my article on "The Holy Spirit," which appeared in the issue of March 6th. I am aware the line of reasoning is probably new to many, but is the result of considerable thought and study on my part.

While the generally accepted idea that the Lord Jesus is one Comforter and the Holy Spirit "another" has a certain measure of truth, it does not to my mind fill the requirements as fully as the view advocated by me, and indeed presents two or three almost insurmountable difficulties.

First—If the Lord Jesus was the first Comforter, and the other comforter could not "come" until he went away, then the promised comforter must also be a personality, and must come and occupy on earth the place of the first. There is, however, no record in the Book or in the church of any such personality having come, and the promise in that sense has never been fulfilled.

Secondly—If the aforesaid view is correct, how can the adjective "another" rightly be applied, seeing that those who advocate it believe the same personality was already working in the lives of men at the time promise was given by Christ?

Thirdly—And to my mind a crucial point in the argument is the fact that only in the New Testament (which is a fresh manifestation of the spirit) have the promised results been literally fulfilled. Surely such a fact may fitly be regarded as the key to the difficulty. Christ said the "spirit of truth" "proceedeth from the Father," a fact in itself subversive of individual personality. The Savior also said his "words" were "spirit" and "life." Christ said the spirit of truth "shall be in you." Paul said: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly" (Col. 3:16), "that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith" (Eph. 3:17).

Is it not true that all promised gifts of God are of a definite nature; something that finite human beings can at least in a measure comprehend, and that love, joy and peace are the resulting blessing realized from the knowledge of promises actually fulfilled? It is quite possible I may be somewhat misunderstood in this last paragraph, but I think those who grasp the thought will agree with it.

Yours fraternally,

QUESTION

By S. Roxana Wince

Will someone versed in such matters please tell us in what sign the sometime ago conjunction of Jupiter and Venus occurred, and whether or no said conjunction is ominous of coming ill to our already tortured earth?

The perihelion, or nearest approach of Jupiter to the sun, whether alone or in connection with other planets, has been proven by observations carried on for hundreds of years to be always disastrous to our world—fire, floods, cyclones, earthquakes, tidal waves, and in two instances the Black Death, following such perihelia.

The period between Jupiter's perihelions is twelve years. There was one in 1901, and must have been another in 1913. But as the influence of these near approaches of Jupiter to the sun begins some two or more years before it reaches the nearest point, and continues as long thereafter, we have scarcely as yet escaped from its thraldom. We have a vivid recollection of the eruption of Mt. Pelee and the South American earthquakes that occurred near the same time. Connect these with the perihelion of Jupiter for 1901.

If therefore the near approach of the great planets toward the sun forebode trouble to this mundane sphere, why not their conjunction with each other? I have been asked whether there has been anything said in the press about the late conjunction of Jupiter and Venus, and this is my reason for asking for an answer to my query. Everything in heavein above and on the earth beneath is crying out, "Watch."

HOW GOD TOLD

"Mamma," remarked four-year-old Mary, resignedly, as she took her place at the breakfast table, "I know God thinks I'm dead this morning."

"Why, Mary!" exclaimed her startled mother. "How can you say such a thing?"

"Well, I just know he does," persisted the small Mary, "because I forgot to say my prayers last night."

It is not what happens to you in life that matters—it's the way you face it.—Lloyd George.

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13: 3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12, 28:23, 31). VOLUME 68 AKRON, O., MAY 2, 1916 NUMBER 22

IDOLATRY

Whether a person is worshiping the true God or not depends upon the mental conception which he has formed of the Creator and the supreme power of the universe. All people, even the most ignorant of heathen, must admit that there is a supreme being of some kind which has created and controls the universe. Such a conclusion is inevitable even from a casual observation of nature. But whether or not man sees and worships the true God or a false one in the recognized supreme power depends upon the mental picture he has formed of the source of this power.

This mental conception or picture of the source of the supreme power is formed by what man may see revealed concerning its nature and character. If he has known only false revelations or insufficient revelations, as in nature, his conception of the source of supreme power will of course be false, and he will worship a heathen or false god. There are and always have been two systems of worship among mankind; one based on false or insufficient revelations of the supreme power, the other based on true revelations.

Those who bow to images of stone, wood, etc., have based their conception of the supreme power on the meager revelations of nature. The great mass of the so-called Christian world has based its conception of the supreme power on false revelations, and since they have a false conception of God they are in reality worshiping a false God, as are the heathen.

But there have always been a few in each age who have based their conception of the supreme power on true revelations, and therefore have always been a few who have worshiped the true God. God's word is a record of the times and manner in which he has revealed himself through the prophets formerly, and in latter times a clearer and more detailed revelation of himself has been given through his Son Jeuss. If it is man's desire to worship the true God his conception of him must be based on these revelations. Supposed revelation, or even what man honestly thinks are true revelations, lead to a false conception of God and consequently to the worship o fa false God—a God of man's own creation.

Christ, the perfect revelation, which God has given of himself to man, says God is spirit, and must be worshiped in spirit and in truth. Why not in error if error is believed in sincerity? Because error very evidently can not form a true conception of God, and therefore such worship could not be worshiping the true God. Error must necessarily formulate in the mind a very wrong idea of the true God; each individual sees and worships God according to the manner which he has conceived of him. If the conception is wrong he of course does not worship the true God.

The doctrine which says the Creator is without body and without parts, an immaterial spirit, forms in the mind an idea of the Creator that is exactly opposite to the idea that he is a material, physical spirit being. Both can not be true, and whichever is error must result in the believer of it worshiping a false God—results in literal idolatry.

The doctrine that presents the Creator to the human mind as a Savior of immaterial spirits or souls (about which we can know nothing tangibly) results in an idea of God exactly opposite to the idea which results from the doctrine that he is the Savior of material, bodily people. One of the two doctrines must be error, and whichever is error must result in idolatry.

The doctrine that God rules and has a kingdom on earth only in the sense that he rules in the hearts of men forms a very different idea of the Creator from the idea formed by the doctrine that he is to be the literal ruler of the earth through his Son Jesus. One must be in error, and therefore the basis for idolatry.

The one set of doctrines presents a vague, indistinct, immaterial god, which would be neither greatly feared nor greatly loved. The other set presents a real, tangible God, one to be much desired and loved and much feared because of the tangible effect which we feel such a God could have on our destinies, either for good or evil. Two Gods so entirely apposite can not be true, therefore one must be false. The Bible and common sense plainly show to the honest searcher which is false.

Every truth has its opposing error. Every error helps to build up a false conception of God and results in idolatry. Every truth helps to reveal more clearly the true God and results in true worship of the true God. It does not take a very keen mind—only an honest, fearless one—to see that the great so-called orthodox organizations are the system based on error, is idolatry in sheep clothing, furnished by the name "Christianity." The other system was the organization of which Christ and the apostles were the founders. This system, as an organization, can not at present be located definitely, and in its purity as it then was, all organizations being guilty of errors in details or worship if not in basic truths. But there is no doubt that there have always been a certain few who have desired to know truth concerning God and thus be able to worship him in spirit and in truth. Such might well consider this question:

Can anyone who is absolutely sure he knows certain truths which form a basis for true worship of the true God in any way whatsoever support and encourage an organization or system of worship based on doctrines directly opposed to those truths? Can a true worshiper of the true God, one who belongs to God's true church or called-out body of people, partake in the formal worship of so-called orthodoxy? The answer can, perhaps, be best forced home by asking and answering the same question in connection with heathen worshipers of idols, stone, wood ,etc. The answer would be an emphatic NO. Reason demands the same answer as regards orthodoxy. Through their erroneous doctrines (even though they are believed in sincerity and in ignorance that they are error and adverse to truth), the people of the orthodox system have built up a false conception of the persoanlity of the supreme power, and therefore worship a false God. Their underlying doctrines are nothing more nor less than old pagan theories.

Christ's own living example also should direct aright God's true children in answering this question. The ruling system of worship had gone far from right and truth when Christ was here. However, they had not gone so far as present-day religious systems. They had not gone so far as to say God is three persons in one and yet immaterial, that his kingdom was merely an affair of the heart, and that he is the Creator of immaterial spirit beings which can not suffer the penalty for sin which he himself pronounced. They still believed in one material God, in his promise to restore their kingdom with the promised Messiah as King. Their greatest error was their pride and self-righteousness, which prevented them from seeing this Messiah in the poor, humble man who went among them known as Jesus.

But even with this departure from truth Christ refused to give support in any way to their organization and system of worship. He was often found among them, but never with them, never as one of them. They understood both by his talks outside their meetings and by what he said in their meetings that he was opposed to what they taught. He even said and did things in their meetings that caused "scenes" when they would attempt to put him out. Can true followers in his steps be less distinct from error than he was?

The two simple ceremonies, baptism and the sacrament, which Christ commanded his followers to include in their system of worship, are a part of the orthodox system of worship. But the worshipers are ignorant of the great foundation truths which these ceremonies illustrate, and the ceremonies are mere empty forms to them and on a level with the ceremonies of heathen worship. Such compliance to these commands is obedience in the letter, but not according to the spirit and understanding. Such obedience was strongly condemned in the Jews by Christ and the apostles. Can, then, Christ's followers join in observing these ceremonies with those who render such obedience? These ceremonies are sacred and are means to a purer, better life only as the truths back of them are understood. Can, then, those who hold them in sacredness join in observing them with those who deny these truths as orthodoxy most assuredly does when they teach man and (therefore Jesus before his resurrection) had an immortal soul? Such observance is mockery to God, although those committing it may not know it. When Christ instituted the supper, did he call in all that professed belief in the true God? Only those who were nearest him partook of that first supper.

It seems we must admit, perhaps unwillingly through sympathy for friends, that orthodoxy is idolatry under the name of Christianity. Can, then, one who honestly desires to worship the true God be a part of it? With the understanding that error, which is based either on ignorance of the true God or on open rebellion against him, leads to and builds up idolatry, those scriptures which teach that God's church—called-out people—must be separate and distinct, take on a deeper meaning than is usually gleaned from them.

Israel, as God's chosen people, was a type of the church. All through God's dealings with them the fact that they were separate, distinct, sanctified (set aside) people was pressed home upon them. The laws separating them from all people were rigid and strictly enforced. In Ex. 19:5, 6 Moses says, in speaking to the Israelites for God: "Now therefore if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenants, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all peoples. * * For all the earth is mine and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and an holy nation." In 1 Pet. 2:9 almost identically the same language is applied by another inspired man to Christ's followers. "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people, that ye should show forth the praises of him who has called you out of darkness into his marvolous light." If Israel as an holy nation, a kingdom of priests and a peculiar people were kept entirely separate and distinct from the rest of the world, would not be reasonable to say that Christ's followers can be any less separate and distinct when they are regarded by God in the same light as were the Israelites?

Paul says in 1 Cor. 10:15, "Flee idolatry." We flee from only those things which are dangerous. Idolatry is dangerous because it leads away from the true God. Orthodoxy hides the true nature of God and is as dangerous as what is universally admitted to be idolatry.

James 1:27 says: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." Man in his fleshly state comprises the world from a Bible standpoint. To keep ourselves unspotted from the world, then we must not only refrain from the lusts of the fleshly man, but we must also leave untouched anything that is founded on fleshly man's theory. All organizations, which hold man as their founder and source of power are of the world, and Christ's followers must leave them alone, for Christ is the head over ALL things to the church (Eph. 1:22).

Paul says in Titus 2:14: "Who (Christ) gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. A peculiarity is any mark which distinguishes persons or things into a distinct, separate class. "A peculiar people would be a people easily distinguishable from all people. But we may think it is not necessary that this peculiarity should be emphasized before the world, that it is not necessary to draw the world's attention to it. However, if we really possess the peculiarity of God's people we can not help its being emphasized. If it does not show to the world we are not God's peculiar people, and this is necessary. The system of worship based on the true God must be kept in sharp contrast to the system of worship based on false gods, else how can those seeking God be led to him? This sharp contrast can not be maintained except the two classes of people representing the systems are kept in sharp contrast.

Christ's followers of the last days should often think of the numberless times he impressed on the minds of his earlier followers the fact that they were not of this world. Not being a part of this world or age, they can not be a part or supporter of any of its institutions or organizations, all of which look to and recognize man as their founders and originators.

In Rev. 18:3 Christ sends out a last call to his people, to those who have a true desire to worship and serve the true God: "Come out of her (that is, Babylon), my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." Babylon means confusion, and nothing can present greater confusion than present worldly organizations, whether political or so-called church organizations. The confusion is not among their members only, but they present a contorted, confused aspect of God. Let all who are fond of calling themselves the Church of God heed well the many admonitions of Christ and the apostles that such must be separate from the world. We must realize that separate means separate, that peculiar means peculiar, that God's standard of purity is purity itself in morals, belief in formal worship, in everything. Answer honestly Paul's question in 2 Cor. 6:15, 16: "What concord hath Christ with Belial, or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel, and what agreementh hath the temple of God with idols?" Then heed his warning in verses 14, 16, 17: "Be not unequally yorked together with unbelievers, for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion hath light with darkness, * * * for ye are the temple of the living God (how are they the temple?), as God hath said, I will dwell in the mand walk in them, and I will be their God and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye SEPARATE, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord God Almighty."

In 2 Jno. 7, 10, 11, we read: "For many deceivers are entered into the world who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh; this is a deceiver and an anti-Christ. * * * If there come any unto you and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him Godspeed, for he that biddeth him Godspeed is a partaker of his evil deeds."

The great and only opposition Christ received while on earth was from the Jews. Their opposition consisted wholly in denyig that he was the Christ, the anointed King of Israel and the world. They did not deny that the Christ would come, they did deny, and do yet, that the Christ has been born, that he has come in the flesh in reality. They refuse to acknowledge the man known as Jesus to be King and supreme ruler of the world. Orthodoxy and all worldly organizations are today denying him the same right. They are in open political rebellion to God and his proffered King. The safety and very existence of worldly governments rests on Jesus not taking unto himself this right of ruling, hence the people are taught that he is not such a king, just as the Jews taught when Jessu was here on earth. But God knows that the welfare and salvation of the world rests on Jesus ruling as King on David's throne; hence those who know and believe that Christ is the King of kings and Lord of lords are strictly forbidden to fellowship, or bid Godspeed to the doctrine which is opposed to Jesus as Christ and King. We do not need to give a verbal Godspeed to such a doctrine. We can go time after time to the meetings where this anti-Christ doctrine is promulgated, dron in an offering now and then, never letting our light shine for fear of being peculiar, and our "Godspeed" will contain more of encouragement and cast a greater influence against Jesus as Christ and King than we would care to admit before Christ personally. Every knee must bow eventually to Christ as King. His followers must do it now, with the realization that he is as literal a King as though he were sitting on David's throne at present. If this confession is made openly and fearlessly they will be hopelessly separated from the world. The world will think they are impractical and visionary. If they are not so regarded and separated it is pretty good evidence that they have been covering up this peculiarity.

ALTA KING.

BY WHOM ARE WE EMPLOYED?

"The wages of sin is death" is an imperative, universal, everlasting law and will last as long as sin reigns in the universe. "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for all have sinned."

"For until the law sin was in the world. But sin is not imputed when there is no law. Nevertheless, death reigned from Adam to Moses" (Rom. 5:13, 14).

"There is no respect of persons with God. For as many as have sinned without law, shall also perish without law; and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law."

Sin was sinful and reigned unto death, just the same before the law was given as after. "What shall we say, then? Is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, I had not known sin but by the law. Was then that which is good made death unto me? God forbid. But sin that it might appear sin, working death in me by that which is good, that sin by the commandment might become exceeding sinful. For we know that the law is spiritual, but I am carnal Sold under sin."

Is sin any less sin today than under Moses' law when the transgressor died without mercy, under two or three witnesses? Or does sin work death any less in our members today than before the law was given? So with the law or without the law, the wages of sin is the same—death.

The law, which was a schoolmaster to bring us to Christ, was given to show us the awfulness or exceeding sinfulness of sin. And now when we are no longer under the schoolmaster, but being justified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remissions of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God. And now does he who paid the redemption price for sin (which was his own precious blood. "That he might redeem us from all iniquity;" "Sins that are past"), teach or imply that has grace and mercy sets us free to continue in sin without restraint or fear of judgment? In the sermon on the mount Christ gives no liberty for indulgence in sin. Neither does Paul teach continued indulgence in sin. "Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ? Shall I then take the members of Christ and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid. Flee fornication. Every sin that a man doeth is without the body, but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body. What, know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit, which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price; therefore, glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's" (Cor. 6:15-18).

"Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal bodies that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness, unto sin, but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God. For sin shall not have dominion over you, for ye are not under the law but under grace. What then? Shall we sin because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid. Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are, to whom ye obey, whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?"

If we continue to serve sin after the price has been paid for our redemption, the result is death, the same wages sin collected from Adam, to Moses. "For if we sin wilfully, after that we have received the knowledge ofthe truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin. But a certain fearful-looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. He that despised Moses' law, died without mercy under two or three witnesses. Of how much sorer punishment suppose ye shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood ofthe covenant wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the spirit of grace? For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again. "The Lord shall judge his people. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

In Romans, first chapter, Paul gives a list of abominable sins, then closes by saying, "Who knowing the judgments of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death." Then he affirms. "But we are sure that the judgment of God is according to truth, against them which commit such things. And thinkest thou, O man, that judgest them which do such things, and doest the same, that thou shalt escape the judgment of God? Or despisest thou the riches of his goodness, and forbearance and long suffering. (No doubt Paul was thinking of times when they which did such things were stoned to death without mercy or opportunity for repentance). Knowing that the goodness of God leadeth to repentance. But he who scorns or despises this opportunity, which mercy extends for repentance, and continues in sin, "Treasures up unto himself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, who will render to every man according to his deeds. For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness."

"Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind, for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin.

"That he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God. For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the gentiles" (1 Pet. 4 ch). "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God, for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man. But every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lusts and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin, and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death" (James 1:13-15). "For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning. For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them. But it is happened unto them, according to the true proverb. The dog is turned to his own vomit again, and, The sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire."

God's mercy and grace give opportunity for repentance and forgiveness. But "except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish." Blessed privilege! "Repent and be converted that your sins may be blotted out." Therefore, let us watch and keep ourselves unspotted from the world.

SADIE SKEELS.

DO YOU WANT TO GO TO HEAVEN?

Why should anybody want to go to heaven when there is not a promise in the Bible that we can go? There are many places which say that we cannot go. Read Jno. 13:33. Christ says, "Whether I go ye cannot come." And to whom was He talking? Were we not included? Yes. Also, please read Jno 7:33, 34. These are Christ's own words. We cannot go to heaven.

But some people insist that if we live righteously we shall go to heaven. We find in Psa. 37:29 that the righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever. If we read Prov. 2:21 we see that the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it. Look at Prov. 10:30: "The righteous shall never be removed (where from?). The earth. But the wicked shall not inhabit the earth."

Why do people want to go to heaven? In Prov. 11:31 the righteous shall be recompensed (rewarded) in the earth. I think if such people would read Jas. 1:17 and see that "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above and cometh down from the Father of light," they would see that we do not have to go to heaven to get our reward, for it will come down to us.

Please study closely Jno. 14:1-3. You will see that if he goes to prepare a place for you he will come again and receive you, and that where he (then) is, you shall be also. Why should anyone want to go to heaven when the righteous shall be rewarded in the earth, and his kingdom shall be set upon the earth? (Dan. 7:27.)

Please take time for a few more thoughts on this subject. We should not repeat the Lord's prayer if we are going to heaven at death, for it says, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." (Matt. 6:10.)

You see, if we go to heaven, we will not be in Christ's kingdom, nor receive his reward. We should all live so that we may receive His reward on earth where he has promised to bring it to us. (Psa. 37:9.)

"Evildoers shall be cut off, but those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth." As some think, they shall be angels in heaven and have wings, as we have all seen pictured by great artists, why should men live righteous? We have never seen a man-angel picture. They must have all been wicked, and went to hell at death!

Christ says. "My soul was not left in hell" (hades) (Acts 2:27.)

Will you believe that all mean are there?

And how shall we have a great family meeting if there are not any men in heaven, but only women and children angels there? David certainly will be there, for he was a man after God's own heart. But we find David spoken of in Acts 2:34 as not being in heaven. W. B.

OUR NEW LINOGRAPH MACHINE

By Auntie Wince

Going to buy a linograph machine? Of course we are, and it is going to be our machine, because we, the readers of The Restitution, are going to pay for it. Every man, woman and child able to earn anything is going to take part in this work. We will pick berries, raise garden truck, plant an extra row of potatoes, set a hen, sell old papers—do any honest work we can think of to earn the money.

Come, little tots, get to work, and see if you can not beat papa and mama. Somebody wants a yard cleaned or a flower bed made, and you can do that I know. And the older young people can study up many a plan for making a dollar or for saving one by "cutting out" the boxes of chocolate candy and other needless expenses.

What do you suppose I thought when Bro. Huggins wrote me about getting the machine? "Dear me," I said, "eighteen hundred dollars? We never can raise such a sum as that!"

And what next? Then I thought of the Psalm I have just been committing to memory: "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy and for thy truth's sake; wherefore should the heathen say, Where is now their God? But our God is in the heavens. He has done whatsoever he pleased."

Then the Psalmist recounts the utter uselessness of the idols made with men's hands and appealing to the chosen people of the Lord, jubilantly bursts forth: "O house of Israel, trust thou in the Lord; he hath been mindful of us, he will bless us. Ye are blessed of the Lord."

So we'll "trust in the Lord" and get to work, and when the machine is paid for we will dedicate it to him.

I will tell you more next week, and the week after, and every week until we have the machine installed in The Restitution office. Send on your money and pledges at once to me, or to The Restitution Publishing Company, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

THE HOPE OF CHRIST'S COMING

Look for Christ's coming day by day. Live in the hope of his coming this year. I don't mean look for death's coming. Death is not Christ. But look for Christ's coming from heaven (Phil 3: 20, 21). The time of your redemption, which Christ says "draweth nigh." Live looking for the fulfillment of those blessed words spoken by the Master in John 14:1-3. Or the fulfillment of the angel's words spoken when he ascended (Acts 1: 11). Or the words of the Spirit spoken through Paul in 1 Thess. 4:13-18. When you gather around the Lord's table, remember you are to no more remember his death than you are to hope for his coming. Should he come this year, what glorious things it would mean to his own. Caught up with the Lord! The putting on of our immortal bodies. Reunion with our loved ones who sleep in Jesus.

THE FATHERHOOD OF GOD

Matt. 6:9

The conception of God at the beginning of the nineteenth century in Protestant churches was that of a creator of matter and force, ruling the world by secondary causes; a moral and physical governor of the universe. His relation to humanity, that of a king to his subjects, sovereign in his edicts. The twentieth century idea of God is that of a father who pities his children, knoweth our frame, who is our comforter, who carries our griefs and sorrows. All through the Bible this idea of fatherhood grows, until in the New Testament it reaches a sublime beauty in Christ's teaching. God is spoken of as King in the New Testament only five times, as Father 218 times. Thirteen times in the Sermon on the Mount we have heard the word Father. Baptism is in the name of the Father. The lesson about prayer and providence begins with the word Father. The announcement of Christ's Messiahship is in the name of the Father; the Advocate is with the Father. The comforter is to come from the Father. The most wonderful of the parables pictures a Father watching from the windows of life for the returning of the prodigal.

Nothing is more significant of men's characters than what they find laughable.—Goethe.

EDITORIAL

We are pleased to announce two additions to our number this week by the return to the city of Bro. and Sister Moore, from Salem, Ohio.

The Restitution Publishing Company stockholders' meeting held their annual election Tuesday, April 4th, at which the old Board of Directors was re-elected, and afterward the Directors met in executive session. Robert G. Huggins was re-elected Editor, and Burton H. Lang President. Other officers elected were: Buell W. Nutt, Vice-President; Harry Pott, Secretary; Chas..A. Goss, Treasurer and Manager.

Sister Fry writes: "There are so many things to tell you, but I do not know how to put them in words. There is a family here, lovely people too, who are so interested I gave them all my Restitutions. The wife reads them and sends them on, and we have met many times for Bible readings. She came to me through hearing of my faith, not knowing anyone believed the truth she had learned by studying for herself, and Oh! the real pleasure we have in our quiet study together. She, too, wants to meet some of our faith. Does it pay, Bro. Huggins, to scatter The Restitution abroad? I feel it does, and I want to see it just grow and grow; to have earnest, willing workers, willing to write earnest and sincere articles for the paper. We feel that there are enough of our little flock to hold the banner high."

"I think a man should have charity for others. Let everyone be free to believe as he pleases; the time has come when preachers must be men of broader views." Certainly we should possess charity, love for all men; but there is much false charity on the market now, and much of it is deception. See that dear man who is traveling; his team is jaded, and he has a sick wife in his carriage, and it is important that he end his journey tonight. At the parting of the road there was no guideboard, and the took the wrong road, and you know the whole circumstances, and here you get off your "charity:" "Well, yes, I know he is on the wrong road! but he's a good and kind man, and he may find his mistake. He thinks he is right. I believe in extending charity to all, I think he will be all right anyway." True charity in this case would be for you to halt him and tell him his mistake, and set him right. Brotherly love demands this, and the Lord will hold us responsible. There are many false religions, and you are aware of it, and we will be held for this wilful neglect. A man is not to blame for thinking he is right, but with the information at hand he is to blame for not knowing he is wrong.—A. Elmore, in "Firm Foundation."

BIBLE NOT USED IN CATHOLIC SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Question: Why do not Catholic children read the Bible in their Sunday Schools?

Answer: Because more harm than good would come from the practice. The Bible is a holy book, but it is not fit for the perusal of children. They can not read the histories of the Jews, with the accounts of murders and adulteries, without danger to their innocence.—The Catholic Universe.

Editorial Comments

Let Catholic sympathizers read above question and answer attentively and critically. And Catholics who pretend that they are not opposed to reading the word of God, please consider well what The Catholic Universe says.

Children must not read the Bible; "more harm than good would come from the practice!" "The Bible is a holy book, but it is not fit for the perusal of children!" A "holy book," yet not fit for use! A "holy book," and yet not as good as "innocent" children! A "holy book" is the Bible, but children are holier!

A BUSINESS DETAIL

The Manager requests the attention of our subscribers to the "Important Notice" on page 6, a notice which has stood for many months, and yet it is almost daily disregarded. Checks, money orders, etc., continue to come to the name of the Editor instead of to "The Restitution Publishing Company." This little business detail is sometimes a cause of annoyance and delay in the transaction of our business, and we know it is merely a lack of thoughtfulness on your part, hence we make this reminder.

Another thing which is an evidence of lack of thoughtfulness, not to say ignorance, of business principles, is the sending of personal checks on your local bank. We get them from Texas, Oklahoma, Washington or Missouri, and other States, and the senders must know that they are not current here and must be sent back to their bank for collection or credit. In sums as small as those sent us a postal order or express order should be used.

The Restitution headquarters is at Cleveland, where all mail should be addressed; it only bears the Akron date because it is printed and mailed from there.

THE RESTITUTION LINOTYPE FUND

A Few Hints as to Its Practicability

Many of our subscribers know the history and foundation of The Restitution. They are our friends because we stand for certain principles which are dear to them. They know us. Those who have known us the longest and those of a younger generation are also our brethren as well as our friends, being bound together by the bonds of a common faith and hope. The "Dear Old Restitution" has become a welcome evangel of truth and light to hundreds of homes that are isolated from all church privileges, and where its coming brings a ray of cheer and spiritual food for the hungry hearts. We know this because the brethren say so. In comparison with such pioneers as Newman, Marsh, Chaplin, L. C. Thomas, Joblin, Wince, and many others who now sleep, resting in hope for the Life-giver now soon to appear, we do not mention ourselves. These have set a standard and established traditions for The Restitution managers from which they will not depart, even to ensure the financial success of the paper. But to our brethren we are moved to speak freely and frankly concerning the affairs of the paper.

We feel sure that you will support us in the assertion that this paper has never been conducted with a view to making money, therefore it would create considerable surprise, no doubt, if we were to suggest that many brethren did not seem to believe that it required any money to conduct it. Yet it is a fact that many will receive the weekly visit of The Restitution for one year two years, and sometimes three years, and apparently never give a single thought to the question of who pays the bills. Now, brethren, if you do not understand how to read the mark on the yellow address label, and can not remember when you last paid your subscription, it must be a long time—at least a year—so send us a dollar and a half for renewal, and ask us how you stand.

The printing and mailing of The Restitution has been done at Akron, which is forty miles from Cleveland, for two years or more. The reason for this arrangement was purely one of economy, in that the work could be done there cheaper than in Cleveland, though adding greatly to the difficulties of our work in editing, proof-reading and in the general supervision of the work. Our efforts to produce a first-class paper from a printer's standpoint have been reasonably successful, as all who recall the old form of the paper as it was printed in Plymouth for many years will recall. But in this arrangement we are not only handicapped by having the office, the Editor and Manager, etc., so far from the printing, but we are likened unto a man who is renting a house or farm for a long term of years, only to discover afterward that the rent increases from year to year, but at the end he has nothing to show for it, although he has paid enough to have bought the place. Think this over, brethren, and next week we will endeavor to show you the application and unfold our plans for putting The Restitution on a better business basis, and we shall need your cooperation to make it a success.

DANCING

An Editorial Dedicated to "A Sister" and the Church to Which She Belongs

"Let Us Lay Aside Every Weight"

We showed in our last chapterf that dancing is a sin, judged by a most conservative exegesis of the law of God. To deepen that conviction in the reader's mind we now bring some more changes against dancing to show its unchristian character.

1. Dancing is fathered by men and women of keen sexual passions, to gratify to some extent these passions. The husband looks at other men assume attitudes and liberties with his wife in the dance, with consent, which, were he to find them doing in the parlor of his home or on the street, he would kill them instantly!

2. Dancing squanders time instead of redeeming it (Eph. 5:16). It is exciting and bewitching, and leads people often beyond all reason. Men who never cared for a sick friend all night have danced all night, times without number. Who can be safe under such a frenzy and hallucination as this?

3. Dancing is an expensive amusement—expensive beyond all reason. The young man who attends the dance in proper form, and pays his part of the expenses for the night and that of his girl friend, pays out the earnings of a week's hard toil. And what does he get in return? Improvement of mind? Refinement of heart? A healthier body? Well, he does get an empty pocketbook, the loss of a night's rest, a "relaxation" that is exhausting, fatiguing, and injurious to health; he gets demoralization of the whole man; the physical man often takes a week to recover from one night's dance; the moral and spiritual man, in many instances, never recovers at all! If the dancer would give as much money for the support of the gospel or the support of the church in a year as he gives for a dance for one night he would soon acquire the reputation of being a liberal and cheerful giver in the cause of truth and righteousness.

4. Were dancing not a sin, still it can be and is condemned on other grounds. It is a weight from which every Christian should divorce himself. "Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking (away) to Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith" (Heb. 12:1, 2). The inspired penman here differentiates between "weight" and "sin;" and exhorts Christian runners to "lay aside" both as inimical to the example set for us by Jesus Christ. Were we to concede that dancing is not a sin, we still maintain it is a "weight" impeding fleetness of foot, and endangering the racer's chance for the goal of eternal life. Christians who are Christians indeed do not madly rush into things simply because they are not sins; they live under a higher standard of right, and lead a better life than just avoiding things that are sinful. The swimmer, the athlete, the Christian, must abandon weights as well as sins if he expects to win the race. He must count "all things but loss—refuse" (Phil 3: 8); dancing and "every weight" must be flung away by the Christian who is "reaching forth unto the things which are before, pressing toward the mark of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" (vs. 13, 14). Only by doing this can he "so run that he may attain" (1 Cor. 9:24).

REPORT OF THE CLEVELAND YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY

Near the beginning of the new year we met at the home of Sister Jennie Irish, where Bro. Griffiths used as his text the Pauline warning in Col. 2:8. We are to beware of philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men. From his heart of hearts Paul warns the brotherhood against scoffers and men puffed up with knowledge. Especially does he beg Timothy to keep that which is committed to his trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called.

Ever since sin entered the world man has been trying to overthrow the word of God, and the weapon he has forged for the purpose is sometimes called "science," but more often "philosophy."

Philosophy is knowledge of the cause of phenomena; science is systematized knowledge.

Read 2 Tim. 4:3, 4; Matt. 24:24; 2 Peter 2: 20-22, and finnd out what God has said should come to pass. Is it not so?

"Truth is a plant that will never flourish in the shadow of a philosopher." Thus goes an old true saying. Among the philosophers who have led the world astray has been Plato, born 424 B. C. He claimed nothing could be made out of nothing, thereby denying God. He also is chiefly responsible for the creation of the "immortal soul," deduced by the ancient because of the consciousness of dreams. Sir Isaac Newton (1642-1729) gave the world his nebular hypothesis. Charles Darwin (1809-1882) denies God with his theory of the ancestors of man. Herbert Spencer (1820-1903) annuls God's word by tracing human creatures back to 20,000 years, in the valley of the Nile. He also claims parallels of truth between Moses receiving the Commandments on Mt. Sinai and Radamanthus receiving decrees from Zeus on Mt. Ida; thunders on Mt. Sinai to thunders on Olympus, and many other instances. His theory is evolution from protoplasm.

But the Bible teaches different wisdom. The wisdom of their wise men shall perish (Isa. 29: 14,. Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth (2 Tim. 3:7). In 1 Cor. 1:19, 21 we find that through wisdom the world knew not God, but in verses 26-28 God has chosen the seemingly foolish and weak things which are mighty. But, listen, for out of the treasuries of God John speaks to us: "Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them; because greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world. They are of the world; therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

EVANGELISTIC REPORT FROM BRO. AND SISTER ROBISON

Bro. Huggins: We have just closed a very interesting and profitable meeing with the brothers and sisters of the church near Hammond, La. We began our meeting there the 6th of February, and continued over the fourth Sunday. During this time our attendance and attention were very good. We remained another month, speaking Sunday mornings and evenings. The spirit in this church is of the spirit of Christ. This is the section where Bro. W. H. Wilson held his Pine Woods Bible Class. We found the church in first-class working order. They have an interesting Sunday School. The attendance is regular and is made up of young and old. Unless prevented all are in attendance when the morning hour arrives. They have a midweek Bible Class, which all attend, with a good number of aliens. They have a teacher for the children as well as for the older ones. This is a very commendable feature of the work. Two sisters, Anthon and Siple, go three miles in the afternoon to hold Sunday School for the benefit of a few isolated families.

It was our pleasure to baptize four worthy ones into the name of the Lord Jesus. Two were aged, the husband 78 and the wife 60. Both rejoiced in the hope of a place in the kingdom. These two persons, Bro. and Sister Gainey, were very much opposed to the gospel until they began reading The Restitution. They both are thankful to the editor and contributors of our old and reliable paper. Their son-in-law and wife, Bro. and Sister John Lindsey, sent them The Restitution.

There are many very commendable features in this body of believers that we have not found practiced in other churches that we have visited. The old members of the Pine Woods Bible Class have been faithful to the truth and have remained a separate body of called-out ones. There had been but little growth in the church until Bro. O. J. Allard came and held two meetings a year apart and baptized a number each time. His help to the church is very much appreciated. We were delighted to find that many young people were baptized and are much interested in church work.

This report would not be complete if I did not state that Sister Ella Siple took a class of young girls in the Bible School, and through her efforts all were brought into covenant relation to Jesus the Christ. Sister Siple, the mother of the Siple family, has much to her credit in standing firm for the truth, having brought her whole family into the body of Christ. Bro. Frank Siple of Adrian, Mich., is the youngest of this very remarkable family. This church, according to the apostolic method, remembers the Lord's death until he comes each week. Our prayers are that this "little flock" may ever remain as they are now in perfect unity of the spirit of Christ. Mrs. Robison shared the work with me; besides, she went with Sisters Anthon and Siple and spoke at the close of their Sunday School. In closing our report we wish to say that all contributed very liberally to us in a financial way. If the Lord will, and our health permits, we hope to spend another winter among them and help them in spirtiual things.

OBITUARY

W. VanDerweele

William VanDerweele was born in Cleveland, Ohio, December 7, 1853, and died at his home in Burr Oak, Ind., April 16, 1916, at the age of 62 years, 4 months and 9 days.

At the age of seven years he moved with his parents to a farm near Knox, Ind., where he grew to manhood, his parents being among the pioneer settlers of Starke County.

He was married to Milley Edna Rodgers October 18, 1878. To this union were born four children—Jacob D., of Burr Oak; Mrs. Charles A. Hall, of Glasgow, Mont.; Mrs. Charles H. Chapman, of Chicago, and Gerald W., at home, all of whom, with his companion, four grandchildren, and one brother, Peter VanDerweele, of Knox, survive him.

The last twenty-two years of his life had been spent in Burr Oak. Here his family grew to manhoon and womanhood. He made a large circle of acquaintances, who appreciated his many good qualities as a friend and neighbor. His great ambition was to give his family ample support, that they might have the necessities and comforts of life. This ambition was fully accomplished, and he lived to see three of his children etsablished in homes of their own, and the youngest, Gerald coming into manhood's estate.

His last sickness was of short duration and full of intense suffering, both in mental anguish and physical pain. Medical skill, friendship's helpful hand and the family's loving care were all alike without avail to stay the ravages of diseases, and the only inevitable end, the heritage of the flesh, could bring peace—the peaceful sleep of death.

Funeral services were held from the Church of God in Burr Oak at 1 o'clock p. m., April 18, 1916. The house was filled with the friends and neighbors to express their sympathy for Sister Van Derweele and the bereaved family. We spoke words of comfort to them from Jno. 21:18 and Rev. 21:3-5.

THE LOVE OF GOD

We read in the word very much, and quite often, of the love of God towards man, and many there be who presume to take advantage of this supposed weakness of God. They say in their heart, "God is good and kind, and loves me so much, that he gave his only Son to die for me. Therefore I will enjoy myself while I am young, for when I get old I can't. Away with self-denial, temperance, godliness and sobriety. I hate and despise them Pleasure, laughter, fun and frolic are the heritage of the young. Let us drink deep and long of the sweet cup that youth holds to our lips, and when age and infirmities puts the cup forever from us, and we find we may no longer drink thereof, then we will reluctantly turn to God, and at the eleventh hour implore his mercy. And he is so good, and loves us so much, that he will accept our belated professions of love, and say to us, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

I wonder if he will. Sometimes I have my doubts about it. True, in our Lord's parable of the vineyard the laborer who began work at the eleventh hour received the same wage as he who began at the first hour. But he was not invited to work; and did not know of the job, until the eleventh hour, and went to work at once as soon as he heard of it. If he had been invited at the first hour, and refused, wasting the day in pleasure and rioting, and then applied for work at the eleventh hour, do you think he would have got the job? I don't.

What is it, then, that God loves? Is it that great multitude in all ages who "as natural brute beasts made to be taken and destroyed, and who shall utterly perish in their own corruption?" Is it they? Hardly! Did God love the wicked, and utterly corrupt nations who perished at the flood? Why did he love and save Noah and his family only of the whole world? God says: "Jacob have I loved, but Esaw have I hated." Why should God love and preserve some of his creatures, and hate and destroy others? They are all made of the seme dust and ashes. All the work of his hand. Dear reader, I will tell you why. Because the one has developed an obedient spirit and a godly character. It is that which God greatly loves. It is that which is the most precious in his sight. A godly character, not created by him, but developed by his creatures, through love for the Creator. All flesh, both of man and beast, without character, is in the sight of God but dust and ashes, and as the grass which withers." But the individual who voluntarily loves God and keeps his commandments, thus developing a godly character, receives in return the love of God, without measure.

Therefore we must conclude that it is character which God loves, and the man who has not by faith and obedience developed a godly character has no part whatever in the love and ultimate purpose of God. Out of the multitudes who have lived enough will be found when the Lord comes who have developed character to serve his glorious purpose in the ages to come. While those who have failed will ultimately go back to the land of forgetfulness from whence they came, and become as though they had not been, having no part in the joys and glories of endless life in the kingdom of God.

There is a vast difference between the expression of a due and delicate appreciation of merit and that false and exaggerated praise which is dictated by adulation. The former is always received with pleasure; but the latter wounds the susceptibility of those on whom it is lavished, to a mind rightly constituted there being nothing more painful than undeserved or even excessive commendation.

The first object in all effort must be excellence. If that be absent the attempt to rise above others is mean and dishonorable.

BRUSH CREEK YOUNG PEOPLE'S BIBLE CLASS

Our main subject on which our lessons were based was "The things concerning the name of Jesus Christ." Our first lesson on this was: "Christ: Whose Son is He?" The question is, Was he the Son of God? Was he the son of Joseph, or did he pre-exist? Luke 3:22: "There was a voice came from heaven saying, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased." God said this. Do you supopse that God would have said that Christ was his Son if he was Joseph's? Matt. 3:11 says that Mary was his mother. Luke 3:22 says Christ is his Son. Then if Christ be God's Son, God is Christ's Father. The first chapter of Matthew tells us that Mary shall bring forth her first born son, and he was called Jesus. The angel of the Lord appeared unto Joseph in a dream and told Joseph to take unto himself Mary. Joseph rose up from his sleep and did as the angel of the Lord commanded him, and he knew her not till she had brought forth her first-born child. Matt. 2:14 says that God told Joseph to take the young child (not his young child) and his mother to the land of Egypt, so that Herod the king would not kill Christ. Therefore he did not pre-exist, or Joseph would have known him before this. It also proves that he was not the son of Joseph, but that he was the Son of God.

Our second lesson was Jesus Christ the Life-Giver. John 11:25: "Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." Col. 3:4: "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." He also says: "He that keepth my works and doeth them until I come to him will I give eternal life."

The third lesson was the promise made to Abraham and to his seed (Gen. 13:14, 15). God commands Abraham to look northward, southward, eastward and westward. He said all the land which you see will I give to you and to your seed after you forever (Gen. 15:1:15-17). The Lord appeared to Abraham in a vision and said: "Fear not, Abraham; I am thy shield and thy exceeding great reward." God told Abraham that he must die, and when the morning of the resarrection comes he shall receive this exceeding great and precious promise. Abraham must die before he receives the gift of God. In Acts 26:6 Paul is tried before King Aggrippa for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers. 2 Peter 1:4 says that these promises were made that we might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. Divine nature is the nature which belongs to God. Then this nature comes from God through Christ. This is the nature the righteous will receive when Christ comes.

Matt. 3:10 records this: "Every tree which bringeth not forth good fruits is hewn down, and cast into the fire." God said to Abraham: "In thee shall all nations be blessed." He said it was not the seed of many, but as of one, "and to thy seed, which is Christ."

Fourth Lesson. Memory verse, Mark 16:15, 16: "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned." Gal. 3:27: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ; and if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise" (Acts 2:38: "Peter said unto them, Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ. Jesus preached Jesus to the eunuch. They went on their way until they came to a certain water, and the eunuch said: "See, here is water. What doth hinder me to be baptized?" And Philip said, If thou believeth with all thine heart thou mayest. And he answered and said: I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." They went into the water. Philip commanded the chariot to stand still, and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch, and he baptized him. The eunuch went on his way rejoicing.

DWARFED TREES

It may be said that there is really very little true strength and greatness in many Christian lives. But it is our falt if this is the case. A peculiar feature of Japanese horticulture is the production of dwarf trees. In flower pots they grow veritable simulacra of the giants of the forest. They are no mere plants, but true trees, some of them a century old, yet attaining a height of only two or three feet. All the features of the full-grown tree are there, and they appear just as a forest tree would if looked at through the wrong end of an opera glass. The gardener takes infinite pains to grow these miniature trees. They are raised from seed, and when only a few inches high the repressive training begins. Not a day passes but the gardener has something to do with his charge by way of starving and crippling them. In order to hinder their growth the trees are transplanted to pots which do not contain enough soil to nourish their branches. If any buds appear they are nipped. As the result of this starvation and spoliation the tree puts forth no new buds and remains a dwarf the whole of its life. What a picture of the way in which we treat our nobler life. We are ever starving and limiting it. As it puts forth its buds and blossoms we pluck them. If we only did half as much to foster our best life as we do to restrict it we should not be lacking as we are in grand experiences and features, but share the massive grandeur of Lebanon.—W. L. Watkinson.

How shall I be able to rule over others, that have not the full power and command of myself? —Rabbelais.

He believed that all things were one big miracle, and when a man knows that much he knows something to go upon.—Kipling.

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3 16, 17) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets [illegible] Acts 3 21. As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2 44; 7.14, 14, 27) at the return of Christ [illegible], who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19.16), and the Saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek 37), the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11.25, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58), the final destruction of the wicked (Ps. 37 10, 20), and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3 16; Rom. 6 23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10.11 17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13; 3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2.28), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1. 3:18), and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12, 28 [illegible] 31) ROBERT H. WORDS AT THE BREAKING OF BREAD

Galatians 5:6

Dear Brethren and Sisters: The Epistle to the Galations naturally divides itself into three parts—the last two chapters forming a practical hortatory sequel to the preceding didactic or doctrinal teaching. The Galatian Church was peculiarly situated. It had been seriously troubled by Judaisers. The minds of the brethren had been much upset, and they had began to doubt their standing in the truth because of the false teaching of those who had come among them saying that they should be circumsized or otherwise observe the legal ceremonial. This aroused the righteous indignation of the apostle so much that he was led to say—and we can imagine in what frame of mind the words were written—"I wouldthey were even cut off that trouble you." Their trouble was trouble to him also. The work that had occasioned him so much labor and greater anxiety was in danger of being undone. He was afraid that he had bestowed labor upon them in vain. His influence was being undermined, and the results of his missionary zeal neutralized. Elements were introduced into his teaching that rendered the position serious, for the believers were losing hope and confidence and steadfastness in the truth into which they had been called. They were becoming "removed from him who had called them into the grace of Christ." The practical exhortation, therefore, seems to solely concern the church in Galatia; yet, like all else that the apostle says, there are points in it that are just as applicable to all churches, and they have an equally important bearing upon us in this the twentieth century after their utterance.

"Be Not Entagled Again"

I wish to specially draw attention to the first verse of the fifth chapter; "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." It is not a question of being entangled. We have all been so once—we have got rid of the encumbrance, and the great desire of the apostle is that we should not become involved again. "Be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." That is surely an exhortation that applies to us, and that closely affects our ecclesial life. Not that we are tempted by those 'who come in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus;" not that circumcision or uncircumcision, the works of the law or its observance, concern us; but there are other things equally momentous that do affect our standing and calling in the truth. So Paul reverts to the matter again, and says: "For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another."

If we read these two chapters closely we shall find that it is these practical observations that make them so important. We have been called to liberty. The boast of liberty is our country's pride. But here is something greater far. That liberty, however, is not to be made an occasion for license; we are not to add to our liberty even greater freedom—that is to say, we are not to use our liberty in the truth to do things that are inconsistent with it. It may perhaps be deemed unnecessary to speak like this to an assembly of brethren and sisters, yet the apostle speaks so. The liberty that we have in Christ is compared with former bondage, and it is not to be used as though we were still in submission to the world, its influences and allurements. The "children of the free," standing as they do in special association with Christ Jesus, can only do the things that Christ's freemen may do—bring forth the fruits of the spirit!

That is the essential difference between the bondman and the free which the apostle insists upon, and in doing it he enumerates the works of the flesh, and puts them side by side with the fruit of the spirit. Now, it is scarcely possible for any one person to indulge in all the acts of the flesh, whether of conduct, religion or relation, unless he be a fiend, but it is possible for everyone to manifest the graces of the heavenly calling. We are freed from the bondage of sin and the yoke of evil habits. Our minds are no longer fettered by formulas, and we have in Jesus a good conscience void of offense, and Paul is exceedingly solicitous that we should not get back again into the world with its affections and lusts, its ways and antagonisms, and he is passionately desirous that we should be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in every good word and work.

The Natural and Spiritual Man Contrasted

Now, brethren and sisters, the apostle does not content himself with the bare statement; he founds on it yet further exhortation that is both necessary and important—the relation of brethren to brethren. But first as to the fruits of the spirit, which in Ephesians (v.9) he says "is in all goodness and righteousness and truth." But in the chapter upon which we are meditating he elaborates this concise statement: "The fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." That all means a disposition of heart—a character. Those that live and "walk in the spirit" are saints indeed, for "they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." That is liberty, and "against such there is no law." And just as by Christ, that dwelleth in us, we have been able to contend victoriously with the one, so also by his help we can show forth the other quite as triumphantly.

We know perfectly well—it is a matter of painful experience—that some of the professed brethren and sisters of the Lord have fallen away. We know those who were once of our company who have become "entangled again with the yoke of bondage." We even know those who, while making a profession of discipleship, unfortunately give themselves over to fleshly works and worldly pursuits. We do not judge them. We may reprove and "restore" them in the name of the Lord. But we do well to take warning by them and profit by their mistakes. Notice how forcible the further apostolic warning is: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap." We can not serve God and Mammon at one and the same time. The choice must be clear and definite. It is freedom or bondage; the flesh or the spirit, not a bit of both. "He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting." It must be one or the other. No more fatal mistake can be made than to suppose that by sowing wild oats we shall gather up blessings; or by giving full rein to evil desires and habits we shall reap virtues. It is consistent with the law of nature that if a man sows wheat he will in due time reap harvest wheat, not something else; so also in the spiritual realm. Therefore, brethren, "be not weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Meanwhile, let us rejoice in the glorious liberty of the gospel, and serve him the more earnestly who has made us free, and love him more and more.

Called of God—A Peculiar People

Let us look still further at this matter. Are we differently circumstanced to other people? Are there things that are ours that are not theirs? In our ordinary walk and contact with the world of men is there any trait of character that makes us different from our fellows? Is there any distinguishing mark upon us? Yes! There is, as I have said, much about the true saint that singles him or her out anywhere! There is a graciousness and purity of soul, a tender regard for others, a self-forgetfulness of love, a glad hand and trustful acceptance of the divine will, a sense of intimate communion with God, and a felt relationship with Christ. There is a wonderful depth of pity, a constant display of that love which the apostle says is the fulfilling of all law. These gifts and graces come from direct contact, and from no other source, with the Lord our Righteousness. That is what distinguishes Christ's freemen. We have been called out from among the Gentiles to be a people for his Name—those of whom the apostle speaks, using the singular to denote the plural, as "a new creature." And we have to maintain this exalted and heavenly calling, not by outward observance, but by standing free and clear from the allurements of the world, and living completely and constantly in the atmosphere of the spirit. This can be the only meaning of the apostolic exhortation.

But have we any helps? Are we expected to work in this sphere of ourselves? Are we wholly dependent upon our own exertions, or forced back upon our own strength to fulfill the law of Christ? No. If we were many of us would lamentably fail. Just think in how many ways the grace of God has been displayed toward us. Count your blessings. It is he that hath tuned our hearts to show forth his praise, and caused us to come together to break bread and drink wine in remembrance of him who purchased our liberty at great price.

What a wealth of comfort there is in the words: "As often as ye eat this bread and drink of this cup ye do show forth the Lord's death until he come." The Lord's death. Upon that fact is predicated all else—our calling, our heirship, our redemption, our salvation. The Lord was given freely; he gave himself readily and willingly for all who come to God by him. We are to remember that great event; yet the possibilities of forgetting are such that the Lord Jesus, in effect, said: "You shall not forget—here are the symbols!" These reveal the love of God, and the mercy of God, toward those whom he has exalted, by calling them to the priveleged position of being his children. That is one objective; here is another—we show forth the Lord's death "until he come."

Until He Come!

What does that mean? Obviously, that when the Lord has come the need for showing forth his death will have ceased. The obligation remains so long as he tarries. Here again is danger. Circumstances not outside our control are sometimes allowed to interfere with the performance of this pleasant duty. The shortcomings of others are often made an excuse for forsaking the assembling of ourselves together; a course of action not only inconsistent in itself, but clearly opposed to the apostolic instruction in chapter 6, verse 1, and one that makes our liberty an occasion to the flesh.

Until he come! Then, that which is at present a matter of faith will become one of sight; that which is now the clearest and most glorious thing to be hoped for will then be completely realized—even life everasting, and the joyous entrance into the honors at present the attributes of the Lord.

Meanwhile, brethren and sisters, let us patiently wait and work and walk in righteousness until the time of harvest, when that which has been sown will be reaped—the full and plentiful crop of spiritual joys. We have much cause of rejoicing in the call to liberty in the gospel. In the discharge of the duties that belong to that calling do not let us lose confidence in the fact, greater than any other, that the promises of God will be realized sooner or later. Our lot is cast in pleasant places, despite our trials, difficulties and despairs; but beyond is God, and Christ, and the houe of glory. Stand fast, therefore, never faltering or complaining, and ours will be a rich harvest of blessings, an eternity of unalloyed pleasure and peace—"an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, that fadeth not away."

Can we, in view of all that has been done for us, and will yet be done, be entangled again? God, through Christ, has broken the fetters of sin; he has sundered the chains with which we were once bound; he is drawing us to himself with the golden cords of love. They are slender and very tender, and it behooves us not to break them. If they separate the fault is ours, and not God's, for only we can break them. Therefore, let him work his perfect work in us, so that when the Lord comes we shall see the result of our faith. Great though our privileges are now, they will be greater and more blessed then. Glorious as our liberty is, it will be transcended then. To hear the Lord say: "Because thou hast been faithful in very little, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord," will amply repay all the rebuffs, trials, disappointments and doubts that crowd our life. Note the antithesis: "little," "much." The sacrifices we have made, the services we have rendered, are not only reasonable: they are little compared with the greatness of the gift; little compared with the infinitude of God's love and the magnitude of Christ's sacrifice on our behalf. Yet the outcome of all is many things, and the joy of our Lord!—F. S. H.

THE LAW GIVEN AT SINAI

"For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ" (Jno. 1:17). "For sin shall not have dominion over you, for ye are not under the law, but under grace (favor). What then? Shall we sin because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid" (Rom. 14, 15). "For I testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to the whole law. Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace" (Gal.5:3, 4). "But we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they" (Acts 15:11). "And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified" (Acts 20:32). "And ye shall know the truth (which came by Jesus Christ), and the truth shall make you free" (Jno. 8:32).

Freed by truth and saved by grace: why then go back to the law? "I do not frustrate the grace of God: for if righteousness came by the law, then Christ is dead in vain" (Gal. 2:21). "For Christ is the end of law for righteousness to every one that believeth" (Rom. 10:14). "Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified" (Gal. 2:16).

"But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident: for, the just shall live by faith. And the law is not of faith: but the man doeth them shall live in them" (Gal. 3:11, 12). "And this I say, that the covenant (no Sabbath binding him in that covenant) that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of more effect. For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise: but God gave it to Abraham by promise. Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added (to covenant made with Abraham) because of transgression, till the seed should come, to whom the promise was made" (Gal. 3:16). "And it was ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator. Now a mediator is not a mediator of one, but God is on. Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given (the 10 commandment law was given but could not give a life) which could have given a life, verily righteousness should have been by the law. But the Scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe. But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith, which should afterwards be revealed. Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come. We are no longer under a schoolmaster" (Gal. 3:17-25).

But when the fullness of time was come, God senth forth his son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of son" (Gal. 4:4, 5). But if ye are led by the spirit (Word Jno. 6:63). "Ye are not under the law" (Gal. 5:18).

Those who hold to the law given at Sinai say that if we are not under that law then we have no law for Christ did not give a law. When the law was given Moses said: "The Lord, thy God, will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me: unto him shall ye hearken * * * And the Lord said unto me, they have well spoken that which they have spoken. I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth: and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him" (Deut. 18:15, 17, 18; Acts 7:37). "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ" (Gal. 6:2).

Webster defines law as "a rule established by the supreme power; a law which prescribes to men their religious and social duties; the word of God, the doctrines and precepts of God, or his revealed will." God put his words or the law of the spirit of life in Christ, our lawgiver and the new law is given to us in the words of Christ and his apostles (John 12:48-50; 1 Cor. 11:37; 2 Pet. 3:2). This new law is called by James "the royal law" (Jas. 2:8). This law, which contains the golden rule (Matt. 7:12), is founded on love and established by faith.

In Romans 3:27-31 Paul contrasts the two laws—one given as Mt. Sinai, the law of works, and the one given through Christ and the apostles, the law of faith, and says we establish the law by faith. In Isaiah 42:21 we find these words: "He will magnify the law and make it honorable." Turning to Heb. 7:12 we find these words: "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law." This changed law, magnified and made honorable, is the law that the church is under.

We have nine of the ten commandments brought over into the new law. The fourth commandment is not found in the new law. However, we learn that the Sabbath day was a shadow of the world's great Sabbath, one thousand years' reign of Christ and his bride.

We find the first commandment brought over (Matt. 4:10; Eph. 4:6).

Second brought over (1 Cor. 10:14; Rom. 1:25).

Third brought over (Jas. 5:12; Matt. 5:34, 35).

Fourth not brought over (Rom. 14:5; Gal. 4:9-11).

Fifth found in Christ's law (Eph. 6:1; Col. 3:20).

Sixth (1 Jno. 3:16; Matt. 5:21, 22) changed so that we can not want to kill.

Seventh (Heb. 13:4; Matt. 5:27, 28) changed: the old commandment dealt with the act, the changed with the thought that precedes the act.

Eighth (Rom. 2:21; Eph. 4:28).

Ninth (Col. 3:9; 2 Tim. 3:3).

Tenth (Eph. 5:3; Col. 3:5).

Rom. 7:1-7 shows that we must leave off the old law and take Christ as our lawgiver to reach the high calling (1 Cor. 9:21). Gal. 4:21-31 shows that those who hold to the old law can not be heirs with the children of promise. No wonder Paul was afraid of those who wanted to go back to the old law.

WAS CHRIST RAISED FROM THE DEAD?

Have you any doubt that Christ was raised from the dead? If you have, is it not possible that you may not have sufficiently examined the evidence? Has it occurred to you how the belief first arose? Admittedly it is a most astounding belief—one which nobody should accept without the most unquestionable evidence. If Christ was not raised, it is most pitiable to be the subject of such a delusion. But what if he was raised? If you became convinced of it, would it not create new thoughts within you?

Here is a brief outline of evidence, which may help you to pursue the inquiry for yourself.

I. When Christ lived his personality attracted a numberof followers. His teaching raised hopes within them but when he was crucified these hopes were blighted.

II. Shortly after his crucifixion his followers, before an assembled multitude, boldly declared that "this Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses." This first public address convinced about three thousand people. See Acts 2. Read the evidence carefully.

III. Afterwards his followers established communities which were founded upon the belief that God had raised Christ from the dead.

IV. They wrote letters to various communities in which the resurrection of Christ was set forth as an established fact.

V. Were these advocates of the resurrection of Christ deceivers? Very few will say that they were. Why should they advocate it if it was not really true? Wherein lay the advantage to themselves or to others? Can you suggest any, if it was not true? Their endurance of persecution and death for their belief and their advocacy of it as an incentive to holiness of life are entirely against the supposition that they were wilful deceivers.

VI. You may give them credit for honesty of conviction and yet may believe that they were themselves deceived. Why should they? They did not expect him to die, and at first did not believe that he rose again. They only believed it when they received undoubted evidence. What was it? Thy saw their Lord after he rose from the dead (Acts 1:1-3).

VII. Saul of Tarsus was an enemy of the followers of Christ. Then he became a follower himself. He had too much to lose to change lightly. Why did he become a Christian? Because he saw the risen Christ. You will find the evidence in Acts 9 and 1 Cor. 15:1-23. Renan, Strauss and others admit that Paul wrote this letter, and that he honestly believed what he wrote. Do you think that his beautifully written letters, his powerful arguments, and the life he lived bear out the contention of some that he was self-deceived?

VIII. The resurrection of Christ was foretold in the Old Testament (compare Ps. 16:8-11 with Acts 2:29-32), and by Christ himself, and is part of a divine purpose in the deliverance of man from the power of death (Luke 24:36-48; Acts 17:2, 3-31; 1 Cor. 15:20-23).

IX. Is it not significant that the best one of the race has been raised? Does this not show the Creator's approval of righteousness? Does it not give hope to us that he will in his own good time also give life to those who are like Christ?

"Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that are asleep."

"Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?" (Acts 26:8).—Selected.

PERSONAL TESTIMONY

S. Roxana Wince

It is well to keep the thought always in mind that "we have been converted to convert somebody else;" that Jesus came "to seek and to save them that are lost," and that when he left the earth he left to every man among his followers some portion of this work. Mind the words, "to every man;" not one is left out, not one may shirk the responsibility laid upon him. Time, money, voice, hands, feet—all that we have and are must be consecrated to this blessed work. Just as the disciples of Jesus went on and on, telling what Jesus had done for them, what he was to them, and what they expected him to be to them in a coming day, so we must go, telling everyone of that great daysman who stands between us and God, and whom we must accept as our Savior if we want to have a part in the future Paradise promised to all the redeemed.

Men want the testimony of those of their fellows who have tested the truth of God's word for themselves. They want us "to tell them true," if the promised peace is indeed ours, if we do indeed confidently expect to live beyond the grave, in a land where sorrow and death can never come.

They want no sham words, no make-believes, no hypocrisy. Personal testimony reaches and touches the heart in a way that nothing else does. Go to a man and say, "I have found Jesus; he is my friend, I love him and he loves me, and is going to save me. Do you not want him for your friend? Do you not want to know what to believe and do to be saved?" It may be the very message he has been longing to have you bring him. Anyway, that is how the gospel has come down through the ages to us; men have told the story of the power of the gospel to change lives, and have proved the story true by living changed and Christ-like lives, and others have learned and have lived as Christ lived; and to us of these closing days is it committed to finish the blessed work of love.

CLEVELAND'S YOUNG PEOPLE'S REPORT

In seeking for a subject that would be of benefit to the members, our Sister Helen Pate chose "Pride." Pride, that attitude so far-reaching and hard to control; that which is greatly to be desired, if properly used, and yet one of the worst of human characteristics.

The class was asked to give a definition of pride, and we found how unable we were to express our thought of what it should be. So listen to Webster:

Carnal Pride: "Inordinate self-esteem: an unreasonable conceit of one's own superiority, which manifests itself in lofty airs, distance, reserve, and often in contempt of others."

Christian Pride: "Sense of one's own worth and abhorrence of what is beneath or unworthy of one: lofty self-respect; noble self-esteem; elevation of character in a good sense."

The following is written as our leader gave it to us: "We shall consider the carnal pride, the perverted pride, the excess of pride. I think daily environment has a great deal to do with this side of the question. We are not very likely to find the commendable pride in our daily walks of life, but the sinful pride is very prevalent there. We must be careful in our contact with our fellow-workers, lest their attitude of egotism work on our mentality and we unconsciously slip into inordinate self-esteem. This is what is commonly known as pride.

Now we will see what God thinks of this perverted pride which he abhors (Prov. 16:5); proud of heart (Prov. 6:16, 17); a proud look (Prov. 8:13); pride and arrogancy (1 Peter 5:5); unsubmissive ones, whom God shall resist.

Here follow some results of pride: Prov. 28:25; "Proud heart stirreth up strife;" Prov. 21:4: "Pride that is sin;" Dan. 5:20: Nebuchadnezzar had a mind hardened in pride, and they took his glory from him; Luke 18:12-14: In this showing of the Pharisee and the Publican those who humble themselves shall be exalted. "Thy terribleness hath deceived thee, and the pride of thine heart, O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, that holdest the height of the hill; though thou shouldest make thy nest as hight as the eagle, I will bring thee down from thence, saith the Lord."

According to our definition there is not only the sinful phase, but the virtuous side of pride also. The Christian pride is just as essential as any other Christian attribute, which if we lack we lose individuality and fail utterly in the attaining to that ideal character which we are all trying to emulate. Imagine what a man or woman would be if they lacked that desire to do their work well and to be approved. The result would be an unprofitable existence and nothing in life to build to. Granting that this sort of pride is necessary to a well balanced mind, the difficult problem is to know where virtue ends and sin begins. Let us then go to the word, as God in his wisdom has not left us without instruction.

Pride in seeking to do good work (1 Tim. 3:1).

Titus 2:9 and 7. Paul tells Titus to be a pattern of good works. By self-assurance servants are pleasing to their masters. One must have self-assurance and self-esteem to do these things.

Matt. 5:16. Our good works abound to God's glory. You can not let your light shine or be a leader unless you possess knowledge.

Prov. 18:9. Demonstration of how lack of pride works harm. Without pride we can not fulfill the law of Christ.

Prov. 13:10. To be well advised is to have knowledge. Unless knowledge be obtained we are sure to be unbalanced in actions and judgment. Here at knowledge is the turning point of pride as a virtue and pride as a sin. If this is so then study the word, that you may obtain that knowledge.

"I went by the field of the slothful, and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding; and lo, it was all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof, and the stone wall thereof was broken down. I looked upon it and received instruction. Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep. So shall thy poverty come as one that traveleth; and thy want as an armed man" (Prov. 24:30-34). Therefore "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

OBITUARY

M. J. Jones

Minnie Jane Jones was born at Comstock, Kalamazoo County, Mich., January 14, 1859, and died at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., January 23, 1916, at the age of 57 years and 9 days.

She was united with Romain A. Daniels in matrimony at Hickory Corners, Barry County, Mich., January 5, 1881.

To this union two sons, Harry R. and Karl M., were born, who, with the husband, two sisters and three brothers and many friends, remain to mourn her loss.

Her parents were Methodists, and she was an early worker in both church and Sunday School; but at last it was thought that she was almost if not wholly persuaded to embrace the truth; but owing to heart affection, which caused smothering spells and faintness, she was unable to put on Christ through baptism, which was sadly regretted.

R. A. DANIELS.

THE NAME OF GOD

It is not singular that the name of God should be spelled with four letters in so many different languages? In Latin it is Deus; French, Dieu; Old Greek, Zeus; German, Gott; Old German, Odin; Swedish, Gode; Hebrew, Aden; Dutch, Herr; Syrian, Adan; Persian, Syra; Tartarian, Fdga; Scalvonian, Belg or Boog; Spanish, Dias; Hindoo, Dsgi or Zeni; Turkish, Abdi; Egyptian, Aumn or Zent; Javanese, Zain; Peruvian, Liau; Irish, Dieh; Croatian, Doha; Margarian, Oese; Arabian, Alla; Duialtuam, Bogt. There are several other languages in which the word is marked with the same peculiarity.

To think we are able is almost to be so; to determine upon attainment is frequently attainment itself.—Samuel Smiles.

Gamption is a might handy thing to have around.

To discover what is true and then to mould one's practice to entire conformity to it, are the two most important objects of life.

All brethren who are at all spiritually minded will hear and profit by advice and reproof, if only they are given in the right spirit. Hearts are like flowers; they will open to the softly falling dew, but shut up in the down pour of rain.

The church goes down head first. Faithful leaders will not let the church lapse far into apostacy. But only let leaders get tainted with what some are pleased to call "broadmindedness" and "liberality," and the ruin of the church is assured. Liberal mathematics will bankrupt a bank, and liberal theology will wreck a soul.

"A man is known by the company he keeps." True maxim. "Live with wolves and you will learn to howl," says a Spanish proverb. Yes. Live with nightingales and you will find yourself growing toward the best; affiliate with bad companions, and you will gravitate toward the worst. Such is the influence of association.

April the 23rd, after a good confession of faith in the gospel of the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, Mrs. Maude Tavernier, formerly Baptist, was inducted into the "only name given under heaven whereby we must be saved." Sister Taverneir's case is one of unusual interest. Her father, Brother Dewey, now dead, was a strong believer in the truth, but Sister Taverneir was too young to recall only the merest fragments of it, as it fell from the lips of her devoted father. She had, nevertheless, a smattering of the truth, enough to make her a wanderer among the churches. She sought truth among the sects, and found none. She recalled one day last February the name of Morse, in Rochester, N. Y., as being a believer who was contemporary with her father. Of course he might be dead. Anyway she mailed a letter to Brother Morse, and he received it. In this letter Sister Tavernier enquired if he knew of any believers of the gospel in Cleveland. He mailed us the letter and asked us to call on her. We did so, and found Sister Taverneir hungry for truth and righteousness. She learned the gospel with amazing rapidity, and now rejoices in the most precious find of her life.

DR. JOHN THOMAS BELIEVED IN IMMORTAL RESURRECTION

David, in his last words, styles the covenant made to him "all his salvation, and all his desire, though he make it not to grow;" that is, although the Lord has made no move towards its accomplishment. The covenant has relation to David individually; to David's house; to David's throne and kingdom; and to David's son, who should sit upon his throne forever. As to David, he was to "sleep with his fathers," and secondly, "his house and his kingdom are to be established forever before him." Now, seeing that "David is both dead and buried," and is "not ascended into heaven," it is certain that his house and kingdom are not now "established before him," that is, in his presence. Again, they are to be established where he is, and as he is not in heaven, his house, kingdom and throne are, therefore, not there; but as they are to be "established forever before him," David must be raised from the dead immortal, that he may be co-existent with his son's everlasting throne and kingdom.—"Herald of the Kingdom and Age to Come," 1851, Vol. 1, No. 1, page 14, John Thomas, Editor.

ENOCH AND ELIJAH NOT THE TWO WITNESSES

A brother writes that he wishes to see an exposition of Rev. 11 chapter, particularly the part of it concerning the two witnesses. It has been suggested by several writers recently that the two prophets of Rev. 11 are Enoch and Elijah. When we pointed to the fact that they are to be "killed" (verse 7), and remarked that killing immortal beings did not comport very well with the idea of immortality, their answer was, "Could not God keep these prophets alive all these years without giving them immortality?" Undoubtedly, yes. But brethren, that supposition does not rest upon terra firma. Were we to grant that God has kept these two prophets "alive all these years" in a mortal state, the concession would only serve as a dynamite to destroy the idea that Enoch and Elijah are the two prophets of Rev. 11. We repeat, granting the absurdity that Enoch and Elijah as mortal beings have survived the ravages of time and disease, and will survive them until the Lord comes, then what? Simply this: They will be among the living believers of whom our Lord says they "shall never die" (John 11:26). They will be among them that "are alive and remain" (alive). Instead of being "killed," as the two prophets are in Rev. 11, they will be "caught up together with them (the resurrected ones) in clouds, to meet the Lord in the air" (1 Thess. 4:17). Whoever the two prophets are in Rev. 11, they are not Enoch and Elijah. For if they are immortal, they cannot die; if they are mortal and alive when Christ comes, they "shall never die." On either supposition they cannot die, whereas the two apocalyptic witnesses are killed, and afterwards raised from the dead.

"LEAD US NOT INTO TEMPTATION"

Is it asking too much of your valuable time if I write once in a while and ask you to solve some "riddle"? I had a good friend in one Dr. J. H. Thomas (who was also a contributor to "The Restitution"), who unraveled the many "knotty" questions that I propounded to him; but since he has passed to his long rest, I am at a loss to have some of these questions solved clearly.

What is the explanation of the following: In the Lord's prayer we have this reading, "Lead us not into temptation." The appeal is direct to God, but God would not lead his saints into temptation. Please answer.

H. W. RUSSELL.

Editorial Comments

It does not sound good to the average ear, we admit, to pray directly to God and say, "Lead us not into temptation." Lack of euphony in the prayer has lead the fastidious and many pretenders to learning to seek by scholastic quibbling a more pleasing translation of the text, but the result of "doctoring" the passage has not been satisfactory. After they have tried their best to make it sound sweet and melodious, they have only been able to give us this new translation. "Abandon us not in temptation." We confess our inability to see any improvement in this new translation over our old version; for thus rendered it implies that God might "abandon us in temptation"—just at the time when we need him the most. We had rather a thousand times God would "lead us into temptation," than to "abandon" us in it once. We can conceive of God leading us into temptation, but that he should "abandon us in temptation" is such an ugly and unscriptural thought that we cannot think it for one moment. "He shall deliver thee in six troubles: yea, in seven there shall be no evil touch thee (Job 5:19). The word "lead" in Matt. 6:13 is eisphero in the Greek, and means "to bear or carry into" (Young); and the word "temptation" is translated from peirasmos, and this is the usual Greek word for temptation. Whether it sounds good to us or not, the fact remains in spite of efforts at revision that the original text implies that God may and does sometimes "lead us into temptation." Let us not hastily exchange this Biblical thought for the unscriptural and unthinkable idea that he "abandons" us in temptations. Trials are hard enough to bear with God; how could we endure them without him? He has promised to be with us "alway" (Matt. 28:20); to never "leave nor forsake us" (Heb. 13:5); and he has lovingly linked himself with us in our afflictions and trials in the immortal words of an inspired prophet: "In all their affliction he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them" (Isa. 63:9).

"Lead us not into temptation" is a beautiful prayer and is expressive of a grand scriptural thought when we learn that "temptation" is a word which is used in both a good and evil sense. In a bad sense, that of seduction to sin, "God cannot be tempted to evil (himself), neither tempteth he any man" (to sin). In this sinful sense man himself, not God, is chargeable with temptation: "Every man is tempted when he is drawn away with his own lusts and enticed" (Jas. 1:13, 14). But temptation often means only trial. That the words "temptation" and "trial" are often used in an interchangeable way appears from these sample texts: "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried" (Jas. 1:12); "Ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations: that the trial of your faith," etc. (1 Pet. 1:6). God, all will admit, does "lead us into temptation" in the sense of subjecting us to trial like he did Israel and Job; but to "abandon" us in such a predicament would be a contradiction of his assuring promise: "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able to bear; but will with the temptation also make a way of escape, that ye may be able to bear it" (1 Cor. 10:13). "God did tempt Abraham," asserts a divine writer in Gen. 22:1. In Heb. 11:17 Paul explains that God's temptation in the case of Abraham consisted in the trial of Abraham: "Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac." In the same sense "the spirit led up" Jesus to be "tempted in the wilderness" (Matt. 4:1). "For a season," then, God does encompass his people about "with manifold temptations," when necessary (1 Pet. 1:6), and then subsequently delivers them (2 Pet. 2:9). "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation" is a reasonable and scriptural prayer (Matt. 26:41). He does keep some "from the hour of temptation" (Rev. 3:10), while he "leads others into temptation;" but in both cases he "delivers them (both) from evil: for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever" (Matt. 6:13).

DANCING

An Editorial Dedicated to "A Sister" and the Church to Which She Belongs—The Sovereign Cure for Dancing and All Other Bad Habits

A realization that dancing and Christian ethics are mutually exclusive serves to convince us that a Christian cannot load himself down with "weights" and run with success to the "mark" he aims at; he cannot "press toward the high calling," or as the Greek reads, "press along the line" (race track), and at the same time dance along the way! The demonstration that dancing is sinful is good as far as it goes; but mere demonstration comes short of our desideratum. Conviction of sin only helps one if it leads him on to forgiveness of sin and amendment of life. Correct diagnosis of a malignant disease is only useful in giving proper restorative medicines. Not the discovery of a disease, but its cure is the physician's aim; not the exposure of dancing as a sin, but its elimination, is the climax of the present endeavor. At this juncture is where we need clear heads and right hearts. It often happens that just here boys and girls who seriously contemplate identifying themselves with the church, raise the misleading question: "Must I quit dancing? I shall have to give up so much!" Now there is pleasure in sin; but Moses was wise enough to see that it was only "for a season," and that "affliction with the people of God" had more real and lasting joy in it (Heb. 11:25), and, therefore, he chose the latter. If your physician requires you to go to bed and "give up" your work and liberty in order to a restoration of lost health; if for business reasons you were to "give up" $1,000 to make $2,000, would you call it a sacrafice or a bargain? Now, if "the pleasures of sin for a season" are sacrificed for "pleasurse for evermore" (Heb. 11:25; Psa. 16.11), is not the exchange easily made? My dear young people, Christ has pledged his word that you shall have "manifold more" of such things as you sacrifice for him and his gospel, "in the present time," and "in the world to come, eternal life" (Luke 18:29, 30). Christ gives you more than you give him; and he always gives you more than you "give up." Giving up trifles for untold wealth; denying ourselves ephemeral things for things permanent; losing something fleeting for something eternal; sacrificing a little to gain much—this is the God-idea in every sacrifice which he requires us to make. It is not a question of "giving up," but a question of receiving. Such are the plain, unkinked facts in the case, and, simple as they are, they hold in their arms the arcane panacea for dancing and all other bad habits among men. This sovereign remedy for all the moral delinquencies in the world, for perspicuity's sake, is embodied and unfolded in the propositions following:

1. "One Love Conquers Another." Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful." The "blessed man" does not have to "give up" anything to obey this injunction, because he is fully occupied in doing something else: "But his delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law doeth he meditate day and night" (Psa. 1:1, 2). "'Instant prayer' we must all learn to offer, in the midst of our necessary work constantly sending up ejaculatory petitions that we may be delivered from the present evil world, so that, when our Lord appears in the clouds of heaven, we may bound towards him by a resistless attraction, and be forever with him. Nothing can compensate for their loss who have eliminated this advent-hope from their creed. One love conquers another; and only by tasting 'the powers of the world to come' can there be wrought in us a radical and enduring distaste for the vanities of the world that now is" (Ecce Venit, page 42).

2. "Salvation by Displacement." The spirit is called the Holy Spirit, observes Jas. M. Campbell in "After Pentecost, What?" whose words and ideas we adapt in part with abridgement, not only because it is essentially holy, but because it is the author of holiness. The heart-temple in which it dwells is a holy place. When the spirit enters, sin departs. Before the fiery darts of his countenance the python of unrighteousness, with her evil brood, crawls away discomfited to find a hiding place in the dark corners of the universe. On the principle that two bodies cannot occupy the same space at the same time, but that one will displace the other as a ship will displace a volume of water equal to its own weight, the Holy Spirit crowds sin out of the soul. One love expels another," says Jerome. "The expulsive power of a new affection" is a thought with which Dr. Chalmers has familiarized us. As the light expels darkness; as dead leaves are pushed off by the swelling of the new leaf-buds; or as snow slides off the cottage roof when the fire is kindled on the hearth, so evil disappears when the Holy Spirit, the Conquerer of sin, takes possession of the heart.

Sin cannot be overcome by direct resistance, but by the operation of an opposing principle. As every poison has its antidote, every sin has its opposite and overcoming grace. "This I say then," solemnly declares Paul, "walk in the spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lusts of the flesh" (Gal. 5:16). Walk in the power of the spirit and the desires of the flesh will be unheeded. "Fill the bushel with wheat," says John Newman, "and you may defy the devil to fill it with tares." After the weeds of sin have been pulled up, let them be supplanted by occupying the life with new aims and pursuits.

The principle of salvation by displacement may be illustrated by a reference to Greek mythology. As the Greeks returned from Troy their course led them past the island of the sirens. They had been warned on no account to listen to the seductive melodies of these treacherous nymphs, for all who gave ear to their enticing strains felt an unconquerable desire to leap overboard and join them, when they either perished at their hands or were engulfed by the waves. Odysseus, in order that the crew might not hear the song of the sirens, filled their ears with melted wax. But when the Argonauts were wafted by gentle zephyrs towards the abode of the sirens, and the enticing strains fell upon their ears, and they became powerfully affected, Orpheus, perceiving their danger, took up his lyre, and commenced one of his enchanting songs; and so powerfully did he absorb the attention of his listeners that they passed the island in safety. Thus it is that when the spirit wins the ear, the spell of the tempter is broken; when he dwells and reigns within the heart, proclivity to sin is taken away; where he pre-empts and preoccupies the life, solicitations to evil find no response; when he sanctifies the nature "wholly"—or as Luther translates the word, "through and through," the prince of this world finds nothing to which he can appeal; when he saturates the soul he renders it noncombustible so that the sparks of temptation fall harmlessly upon it.

Sometimes it is said that before the Holy Spirit can come in as the sanctifier of the soul, sin must be thrust out. Would it not be more correct to say that when the Holy Spirit comes in he thrusts sin out? He does not flow into a self-emptied soul like air into a vacuum. Hard ,indeed, woul,d be our lot if the task were imposed upon us of clearing out from our hearts the rubbish of worldiness and sin, to prepare for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. Those who occupy themselves emptying their hearts of evil things are like sailors working the pumps in a leaky ship into which the water comes faster than it can be pumped out. The task before them is one to which the twelve labers of Hercules were as nothing. It is not self-emptying, but divine infilling that is needed. The command is not, "Empty your hearts and I will fill them," but "Open your hearts and I will fill them." The way to put off the old man is by putting on the new; the way to get the heart cleansed is by allowing the Destroyer of sin to enter it. Wherever God gains a footing everything alien to his will must go. His presence in the soul assures the complete expulsion of sin. Enter, Holy God; Exit, Sin!

"Love then is the fulfilling of the law. And do this, knowing the season, that it is already the hour for use to wake up from sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far advanced, and the day has approached; we should, therefore, lay aside the works of darkness and should put on the armor of life. As in the day, we should walk becomingly: not in revelries (Greek Komos) and carousing; not in whoredoms and debaucheries; not in strifes and envyings; but put you on the Anointed Jesus, and make no provision for the lusts of the flesh" (Rom. 13:10-14, Emphatic Diaglott).

COMMUNICATIONS

From Sister F. L. Matin

Brother Nutt: My subscription for The Restitution is expired. I am sorry not to have sent money before. Have taken the paper for twenty-three years. Don't feel that I can do without it. Enclosed is money for another year, and to send to some one for a year.

From Sister E. Crundwell

Dear Brother: My mother, Mrs. A. J. Martin, wishes the household of faith to know she has been very sick with appendicitis, but is improving at this writing. We feel very thankful to our heavenly Father for his mercy toward us.

Yours in hope.

From H. M. Barber

Dear Brother Huggins: I see in the paper where Brother and Sister Randolph have helped the paper financially on account of the loss of Josephite subscribers. Surely the Lord is sifting out his people. The Lord will have his number, and as some lose their crown there will be others to take it. The Bible says, "Let no man take thy crown." Let us watch then, if we would win the crown.

Dear brethren, I wish that there were more as loyal as Brother and Sister Randolph. These noble brethren give a tenth of their income for the spreading of the gospel, I have heard, and I think that they will be wonderfully blest both in the future and also in the present time. Now, dear brethren, there is a certain amount of work to be done before the bride is complete, and if each member of the body of Christ would lay aside a portion of their income for the Lord's work, might we not hasten the glorious hour when the bride of Christ will be complete, and the Kingdom of God established in the earth with Christ as king.

Let us so live that we may be found worthy to become associated with Christ in blessing the nations, is my prayer.

Yours, waiting for the king.

From Brother T. A. Drinkard

Dear Brother Huggins: I have just concluded reading your sermon in The Restitution on "The Coming of Elijah," and think it grand. But I notice that you do not understand that there will be two resurrections—one when Christ returns, and the other at the end of the one thousand years. Will you please explain Rev. 20:5?

Brother, give me a description of your book, "The Bible: Its Principles and Texts." With Christian regards to you, I am, yours in Christ.

(We have mailed circulars to Brother Drinkard which describe the book he inquires about. We do not here give an explanation of Rev. 20:5, because we understand, like our brother, that there is a resurrection at the end of the thousand years reign of Christ, the same as at the beginning of that reign. Perhaps a re-reading of our sermon on "The Coming of Elijah" will reveal the fact that we have there said nothing inconsistent with the thought of a resurrection at the end of the millenium.—Editor.)

From Brother Alex. D. Donaldson

Dear Restitution: Just finished reading the "Editorial on Dancing, Dedicated to a Sister," and am shocked at its crudeness, its harshness. That part that is a "supposed funeral sermon" is at once weak and cruel. The whole simply is shocking, shameful, horrid. No helping hand is held out, no strong arm, on which "A Sister" may lean, is extended; but there is a strong savor of condemnation and abuse. As an article it is unworthy the pages of our church paper, for it is founded on narrow-mindedness, is hard-hearted and void of love.

As children of the most high God we are not saved by our standard of morals, nor yet by our works; but salvation cometh by the grace of God, through our faith in his Son being the Lord Christ, and our acceptance of him as our Salvation and our Redeemer. The moment we meet our God in his appointed way, we enter into a freedom and liberty that no man can interfere with nor abridge; for we are subject to God alone, who shall award every man according to his works.

I take strong exception to the idea that dancing leads only to sin and wickedness, and claim that—next to walking—if practiced in moderation, dancing is one of the most healthy exercises known. The Bible no where prohibits such things as eating, drinking, dress, exercise, or amusement; but the exhortation to moderation or temperance is seen on every hand, as eating and drinking are essential in sustaining life, and dress necessary for health and comfort, so also are exercise and amusement necessary for the proper development of body and mind. Without exercise and amusement we would grow to be weak, puny, lop-sided, narrow-minded men, of no use to ourselves, our fellows or our God. Paul does not condemn bodily exercise for he says "it profiteth little" (marginal reading, "It profiteth for a little while"). Of course no member of the Church of God claims it takes the place of godliness.

By making an idol of anything we sin. This refers to church attendance just as much as it does to anything else. If through over indulgence in church attendance our family duties are habitually neglected, in the sight of God we stand condemned just the same as if our over-indulgence was in dancing. The drinking of intoxicating liquors or anything else, as the old proverb has it, "The sin is not in the use, but the abuse."

Does "The Restitution" aspire to be a leader in the Church of God? If so, my advice is, teach leading things and let the 'isms take care of themselves. We are not called to teach morals in which there is no salvation. Paul preached "Christ and him crucified." He also said, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth;" and the Master said, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness." And while we await the coming of the king, let us remember that "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor, therefore love is the fulfilling of the law."

INFIDEL ARGUMENTS REPEATED

The credibility of God's word, its authenticity and inspiration, are being attacked today; the miracles which are a divine attestation of the divinity, sonship and Messiahship of the Christ are being questioned and even died. Open infidelity is not increasing to any great extent, if at all; no Paines, Voltaires or Ingersolls are apparently being developed; but the faith of many in the fundamental truths of Christianity is being undermined and destroyed by destructive critics in so-called Christian pulpits, and by professors in colleges and universities! The Bible and Christianity has nothing to fear from honest, careful criticism. They welcome it, but the child of God may well fear the inquisition influence of so-called "Higher Criticism," the criticism of those wise above what is written.

Says P. Brett Morgan in "Outlines of Eschatology:" "In an able editorial in The Advance, of Chicago the writer says: 'Call it the times, the trend of scholarship, or what you will, this movement is headed by men who are directing it toward the overthrow of the Bible, and the sooner the church and the ministry understand it the better. They are urging the infallibility of scholarship. We are to believe nothing about the Bible except what scholarship permits us to believe. In a word the common people are to be put where the Hebrew was under the Rabbis and the Christian was under the pope and priests.'"

He also says: "The Truth, of New York, recently described a scene witnessed at a Congress at Detroit; President Harper, of Chicago University; President Andrews, of Brown University, and others had been advocating the methods of modern criticism, and saying that the last seven chapters of Isaiah were written by some other man, when Prof. Howard Osgood, of Rochester, arose to reply. He spoke briefly, completely answered the critics, and then said: "I have here an article written almost exactly one hundred years ago. I will read it, and then tell you the name of its author." He then read a criticism on the Bible, and especially on Isaiah, advocating a double authorship of the latter, in almost the exact language of Harper and his friends. He made a few comments upon the clearness of the ideas of the author, and showed his teachings to be identical with modern higher criticism. He then exclaimed, after a long pause: "The author of this paper was Tom Paine, the infidel."

Thus it is, old infidel assumptions and ideas which have been exploded time and time again have been revamped and possibly clothed in a more pleasing garb; so now they are being disseminated broadcast throughout the entire Christian world.

THE SONG OF MY HEART AT EASTERTIDE

By Auntie Wince

All day long in simple rhyme
My heart has sung, "'Tis Easter time!"
And though with clouds the day was drear,
And not a bud or flower appear,
The birds float by on blissful wing,
And like the happy cherubs sing,
As if they knew 'twere time for spring.

"'Tis Easter time! 'Tis Easter time!"
My heart peals out like bells achime:
From death my Savior dear hath risen,
And death can him no more imprison;
For law holds not the sinless prey,
And so death's keys he's borne away,
To keep them evermore and aye.

"'Tis Easter time! 'Tis Easter time!"
My heart sings on in hope sublime;
My Savior rose, and I shall rise
When He comes down in parting skies.
For O he died and rose for me,
That I, like him, might deathless be,
And glories of new Eden see!

Be this my verse, an offering meet
To lay adown at Jesus' feet:
And all I think, or do, or say,
Be incense sweet for Easter day
I do not fear, though I must die,
If Christ my Lord but standeth by:
For yonder grave is but the room
That stands outside the Father's home;
Is but a little waiting room,
So close, so close, to heavenly home!

Three things produce wisdom: truth, consideration and suffering.—Welsh Tried.

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26): the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). UNDER ORDERS FROM THE KING

The Restitution Linotype Machine

By S. Roxana Wince.

How under orders? And what about?

Did we not promise when we entered the army of Christ that we would obey him in all things? And did he not say, "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature?" And again, through the Apostle Paul, to him and to us, as well, "I have set thee to be for a light to the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth?"—the latter text beginning, "For so hath the Lord commanded us." We were not to hide our candles under bushels, but were to let our light shine; were to be as cities set on a hill that could not be hid. These are the king's orders.

Few of us can leave our homes to go into far away mission fields, but we can send the printed page, where we cannot go. We see our brother's need, shall we shut up our bowels of compassion, and show him no mercy when so much mercy has been bestowed upon us? How then dwelleth the love of God in us?

"Do you know that men are dying
For a little bit of love?
Everywhere we hear the crying
For a little bit o flove,
For the love that rights the wrong
Fills the heart with joy and song
They have waited, O so long!"

They are ignorant, blind, lost. No one to teach them, no one to take pity on their blindness, no one to lead them to the Father's house. And so—we let them die!

We are pledged to God to uphold The Restitution. Our word has been given to him that we would not let its light go out. Under orders from the king! We dare not back down To show you just what I mean I will give you the experience of a boy of eighteen who went to the city to engage in business. He united with the church, and was asked to take charge of a class of boys in a mission Sunday school in the worst part of the city. They were little fellows about eight years of age, and he soon won their hearts. "What teacher said was law and gospel to them."

But, there were many boys in the office where he worked, fine, clever fellows, and of these of course, he made friends, and soon the pleasant affairs of social life, were filling nearly all his evenings and making him so tired when Sunday came that he felt he must give up his class and rest, instead of teaching.

"He would go once more," he thought, "and quit. He reached the church early. Two of the boys came soon after. Being secretary for the school, he had gone into the little office to get his records in shape, and while there, heard a sermon, that has helped him hold fast to duty's hand for twenty years or more. Saving children, aiding the widow, blessing the poor. For the boys not knowing he was there began to talk.

"I ain't coming any more after today," said one of them. "He's going to quit."

"No he ain't, neither," said little Tony indignantly.

"Yes he is, too; the boss of the Sunday school said so."

"No he ain't neither, he dasn't quit."

"Yes he dast, too. He's grown up and got a job, and lots of money. He don't have to mind nobody."

"Yes, he does too have to mind. Don't matter how big you are, or what kind of a job you've got, there's the boss, and you've got to mind. I guess you weren't here when he first came, but I was the first boy in his class. And us kids asked him one day what made him come 'stead of going out riding and to picnics and things. And he said, 'God sent him to teach us. And he had to do as he said.' And he said God was the boss of all of us, only some folks didn't get in and work when they ought to, and of course they wouldn't be on hand when pay day comes round. He's God's man. I tell you, and he dasn't quit."

"Betcher he does," said the other boy. "God ain't always paying attention, and lots of folks does what they want to."

But little Tony still stuck to it that "teacher was God's man and couldn't quit."

And he was right. Behind that partition the teacher was taking a look at his life, was seeing how he was "crowding out the high, eternal things, for the things that perish with the using. He was God's man, but he had been about to shirk his job. He dared not do that. He was under orders, and would stay and do his best."

"Those boys were reading God in him. They would judge of God by what he did. If he didn't care much, they would think God was too far away to care about poor little chaps in a street alley. He had to show them that God knew."

So, we are God's men and women. We dare not give up our job.

The time has come when to keep the expenses of The Restitution within its income, we must have a linotype machine. That is how we are under orders from the king, and that is what the orders are about.

" 'He is counting on you,'
On life, money and prayer;
And 'the day shall declare'
If you let him have all
In response to his call;
Or if he in that day,
To your sorrow must say;
'I had counted on you
But you failed me'—What then?"

FEELINGS, FAITH, AND COMMUNION

Dear Brother Huggins:

Sitting at my desk thinking what I should write for the dear old paper, I picked up a Restitution of June 28, 1911. I found some things in it so good and so applicable to the condition of the church today, that I am sending them to you. Many may never have read them, and others forgotten if they have done so. One article is entitled:

Not Feeling But Faith

There are many who think—or at least this is indicated by many expressions—that Christianity is largely a religion of feeling, emotion, or sentiment; that its chief evidence to its devotees is the feeling which it arouses. It is freely granted that this misconception of Christianity exists among many professed Christians. They are only Christians when they are wrought into an extasy of feeling at revivals, under powerful exhortations, or at some warm social meeting. Unless such excitement, incitement, or association continues, the religion wanes. Such religion must necessarily be ephemeral and shallow. Christianity is based on life union with Christ Jesus; and the channel of that life, the bond of that union, is faith, faith in God's eternal omnipotent word. Genuine, lasting faith is absolute submission to God persistently maintained. The soul yields to God's commandments, yields the sin God's law condemns, yields himself that God's promises may work out in him the will of God, and grasps joyfully the forgiveness, the righteousness, the life, the joy there is in Christ Jesus. Faith to the Christian is just what the trolley is to the electric car; it connects with the life of God, the source of power. The Christian confidence, therefore, is not based on feeling, but on God's word. And that word does not change. Feeling may be absent, emotion may die away, but God's word abides. We are sinners; but Christ purchased us as sinners; and we therefore, confess our sins and yield all to him. He forgives the sins, for so he has promised. It matters not whether we feel like it or not, the sin is forgiven, because we have submitted to the conditions, we have made connection with the power which takes the sin away. In that promise we may rejoice. Satan may recall those sins by taunting us with them; we may be grieved by seeing their results before us; dark clouds may at times shut out the light of heaven; but God's word changes not, and our faith rests on the word. The sins are forgiven, for God has spoken.

This faith will be more manifest in the time of trial. The worldling and Christian may walk together in sunlight and prosperity with little to distinguish between them; but let sorrow come, business reverses take place, friends forsake us, our good name be reviled, death remove loved ones from our presence—then it is that faith is tested. He whose hope is based on the seeming, the feeling, the immediate surroundings, will fail, while he whose hope is in the sure promises of God, will stand secure in Christ Jesus. His house cannot fall; it is founded on the rock. This is genuine Christianity and its basis. Would there were more

Here is another article from same number of The Restitution. It was written by Brother Daniels, who is now resting in sleep until the Lord calls him to come forth unto that life which will never cease. It is entitled,

Who Shall Take Communion?

It is the question of whom are the church composed from which I quote. He says: It is not our purpose to tell when the church was set in order, or instituted. The term "Church" means "Called out." When Christ started out upon his mission, he began to call out his apostles. Now the question is, Who constitutes the "Called out of God?" or in other words, Who constitutes the church of God or Christ? Surely it will be admitted that only those who hear the gospel, believe the gospel, and obey the gospel are "called out of God." The church of God is the body of the Christ, and there is only one way to become a member of that body, and that is by hearing the gospel, believing it, and obeying it. Christ said, just before his ascension, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." Can you see how any one could claim the promise unless he complied with these terms? Suppose one hears the gospel and claims to believe it, but refuses to be baptized: could he claim to be saved? No, for he has not complied with the terms. On the other hand, supposing one hears something that is said to be the gospel and believes it, but it is not the gospel; could he claim to be saved? No, for he has not believed the gospel. He has believed a perverted gospel, therefore his faith is a perverted faith, and not the faith o fthe Bible. Hence such a one would not be a member of the body of Christ.

Paul says, "By one spirit are we all baptized into one body." Therefore we are baptized into the body, or church of Christ, and we cannot become a member any other way. Now we think this is a correct conclusion and do not see how any one can evade it. We sometimes let our sympathy get away with our better judgment. You may call this "close communion." Call it that if you will; it is the truth. But it is not in fact close, for it is free to all who will hear, believe and obey.

These are the words of Bro. Daniels. We endorse every word, and think none believing the word of God can gainsay it. We wish to add just one thing. In 2nd Tim. 1:10 we find this statement: "Jesus Christ who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." How then do we get immortality? Through belief and obedience of the gospel and though our Lord Jesus Christ. When do we receive it? See Col. 3:4. When Christ shall appear. See also 1st Cor. 15:51-52. Now we ask in all sincerity, Can anyone who denies this and claim inherited, inherent immortality, be obedient believer of the gospel which brings immortality when Christ shall be revealed to one believing and obeying it? There can be but one answer from the honest student of God's holy word. One who holds this doctrine of natural immortality dishonors Christ who is the Life Giver, and cannot be a member of his body which, is the church of God, because he has failed to receive, believe and obey that gospel which has for its foundation immortality through Christ alone.

SONS OF GOD AND DAUGHTERS OF MEN

Mr. Charles T. Russell, in his endeavor to prove the personality of the devil (rather, devils), cites, among others, the passage which states that "the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair ;and they took them wives of all which they chose" (Gen. 6:1, 2). These sons of God, according to Mr. Russell, were angels, spirit beings, who had the power to "materialize," that is, assume and exist in human bodies, and even marry and beget children. We would infer from this line of reasoning, that the said angels were either all males, or they had power to become such in order to marry the daughters of men. We wish to say at the outset that we have neither patience, time nor use for Mr. Russell's theory, and hold that the "sons of God" in the foregoing passage of Scripture were human beings quite as much as the "daughters of men." Careful attention to the facts referred to in the first six chapters of Genesis will carry us clear of the vagaries of the theory we are opposing.

Let us notice the time when the sons of God took wives of the daughters of men. It was "when men began to multiply on the face of the earth" (Gen. 6:1). When was this? Not long, that is, not many centuries, after Adam. The parents of the human race had been blessed and made fruitful, and were commanded to "multiply and replenish the earth, and subdue it" (Gen. 1:28). Hence this multiplying of men on the face of the earth began in the early centuries of the antediluvian period.

Who were these sons of God, and who the daughters of men? We read in Gen. 4:25, 26, "And Adam knew his wife again, and she bare a son, and called his name Seth: for God, said she, hath appointed me another seed instead of Abel, whom Cain slew. And to Seth, to him also was born a son; and he called his name Enos; then began men to call upon the name of the Lord." Here Seth was made to take the place of Abel whom Cain had slain. It will be observed that Cain was not counted as the "seed" Why not? Because he was "o fthe wicked one" (1 John 3:12). The history of the descendants of Cain is traced for about five centuries in Gen. 4:16-24, after which it is dropped, and the history of the race from Adam is traced through Seth and his descendants. They were counted as the seed, while the Cainites were the offspring of men who were o fthat wicked one. Which line called upon the name of the Lord? It was the line of Seth. Abraham called upon the name of the Lord near Bethel and at Beersheba (Gen. 12:8; 13:4; 21:33), and it is recorded that Isaac also called on the name of the Lord (Gen. 26:25). As to the object of calling on the name of the Lord, the Scriptures teach that "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be delivered, or saved" (Joel 2:32, Rom. 10:13). From which we may reasonably infer that those persons in the days of Seth and Enos were conscious of their need of deliverance or salvation, and having been instructed that there is deliverance i nthe Lord, called upon the name of the Lord with becoming actions, and thus they became and were reckoned as the sons of God. This was not true of the Cainites. Cain himself, being of that wicked one, and not recognizing in his only offering on record the necessity for atonement and reconciliation, did not instruct his children in the things that enter into the right relation between God and man. We have Cain himself as the builder of a city (Gen. 4:18); and among his posterity were herdsmen (vs. 20), musicians (vs. 21), and artificers in brass and iron (vs. 22). But of none o fthese is it said that they called upon the name of the Lord. They were men whose daughters were "fair" of face and form.

It was necessary that the "sons of God" and such who were merely "sons of Adam" (Deut. 32:8) should remain separate. It is said of Cain that he "went out from the presence of the Lord and dwelt in the land of Nod, on the east of Eden" (Gen. 4:16). The fact that this is affirmed of Cain, and not of Seth, is of itself circumstantial proof that the two were separated, and when children were born to them, these, too, occupied different localities. Cain knew that he was rejected of God, a fugitive and a vagabond (vs. 14), and hence his departure "from the presence of the Lord." Neither have we any record that he called on the name of the Lord, or that he instructed his children to do so. In the course of time when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, the distance which had separated between the sons of God and the sons of men became less and less, until they came in contact with each other. Soon the fair faces and comely forms of the Cainite "daughters of men" attracted the sons of God, the Sethites, and instead of maintaining the separation which had hitherto existed, they began to intermarry, in disregard of the fact that such union was contrary to the divine requirement. The fact of such intermarriage is mentioned with disapprobation and condemnation, and the resulting corruption was one of the reasons why God brought "the flood upon the world of the ungodly" (2 Peter 2:5).

A further fact to which we direct attention is this, that it was the "wickedness of man" that evoked the divine displeasure. The evil of this period immediately preceding the flood was charged to men, not to angels, as must have been the case had the latter been the active parties in taking wives of the daughters of men. It was man who had corrupted his way upon the earth, not angels (Gen. 6:11, 12). If angels had been the aggressors in taking wives of the daughters of men, and the latter the passive subjects in being taken, and in consequence thereof the race living upon the earth became a race of "giants," as Mr.

Russell teaches, the offspring of this mixture was an improvement rather than a corruption of the race.

Let us also briefly notice the "giants" (Heb. nephilim; Gr. gigantes) who were "i nthe earth in those days" (Gen. 6:4). The term "those days" we understand to relate to the days when men began to multiply on the earth. As the matter appears to us, these giants belonged to the class represented by the "daughters of men." Of these the sons of God, contrary to the divine intention, took wives, and the result was that the children born to them became "men of renown," which were mighty men, the same as the giants "of old." As examples of these "mighty men of old" we have Jabal, the great cattle raiser, Jubal, the renowned instructor in music, and Tubal-cain, the distinguished instructor of every artificer in brass and iron (Gen. 4:20-22). These were in the line of Cain. As to how the giants referred to were produced, we know that there were giants after the flood. We read in the majority report o fthe spies who were sent into Canaan to spy out the land, "And there we saw the giants (nephilim), the sons of Anak, which come of the giants; and we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight" (Numb. 13:33). This was about eight centuries after the flood. Hence these giants were either descendants of the antediluvian giants through the daughters-in-law of Noah, or they were developed in the course of time the same as those before the flood. We are inclined to the latter view, for this reason that the same cause which produced giants before the flood, could produce such afterward. There are even now giants, as we know from personal observation.

Mr. Russell argues that when it is said that Noah was "perfect in his generations" (Gen. 6:9), this means that he was the only person living at that time who was of purely human stock, while all others were a mixture of angels and men. The marginal reading, "upright in his generations," is thought to strengthen this view. Let us see. The R. V. says, "blameless in his generations." Who was blameless? It was Noah. What was blameworthy? Forbidden acts. If Noah's actions were above reproach, and intermarriage with the angels was a blameworthy act, then Noah was at best the offspring of purely human parents, which was a matter in which he was perfectly passive, deserving neither praise nor blame. The Hebrew word rendered "perfect" is tanim, and has reference to actions, as when God said to Abraham, "Walk before me, and be thou perfect" (Gen. 17:1). Here the marginal reading is "upright, or sincere." This is what Noah was "in his generations." When the ark was finished, and the flood was about to be sent upon the earth, God said to Noah, "Come thou and all thy house into the ark; for thee have I seen righteous before me in this generation" (Gen. 7:1). Generation has reference to Noah's contemporaries. In Ezek. 14:14, 20, Noah is associated with Job and Daniel as an example of righteousness, and it can not be denied that this was righteousness of character manifesting itself in righteous actions. Hence the perfectness, uprightness or blamelessness of Noah is not to be sought in the fact that he alone was of purely human stock, while all others were a mixture of human and angelic ancestry, but in his integrity of character. In considering the extravagant notions of Mr. Russell upon this subject one is reminded of the ancient heathen myths and legends of the gods marrying wives from among men, and begetting heroes and mighty men of renown. One would think that a man who poses as the head of a Bible Students' movement claiming to be "International" would long ago have outgrown such childish notions. Several years ago we heard Mr. Russell laboring for an hour to prove the personality o fthe devil, and he cited the sons of God marrying the daughters of men as one of the proofs.

However, we have reserved unto the last the testimony of Jesus with reference to the angels and their relation to death and marriage. Jesus was asked by the Sadducees, who believed in neither the resurrection, nor angel, nor spirit (Acts 23:8), concerning the woman who during her lifetime had been married to seven different men. "In the resurrection whose wife of them is she? For seven had had her to wife" (Luke 20:27-33). Jesus was neither nonplused nor irritated at this question, but calmly said: "The children of this world marry and are given in marriage; but they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection" (vss. 34-36). Two things appear from this testimony, viz.:

1. That those who obtain that world do not marry; and
2. Neither can they die any more.

The reason given for these propositions is because those persons are "equal unto the angels." Hence we have here a statement which is tantamount to the declaration that angels do not marry, and are deathless. That this is not a farfetched inference is evident from the language in Matthew, which reads: "For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven" (chapt. 22:30). Thus in Luke those counted worthy do not die because they are equal to the angels, and in Matthew they do not marry because they are as the angels of God.

Such then being the case, a number of questions suggest themselves: How can it be said with any show of reason that angels married wives of men? In such a case, the wives as well as the men whose daughters they were, died in the flood, and it is reasonable to suprose that some of these died before the flood. What became of their angel husbands? Mr. Russell informs us that in order to marry these wives of the sons of men these angels "materialized." This suggests the possibility of the dematerialization: and thus, while the imagination is active, we imagine the human wives of those wicked angel husbands perishing in the waters of the flood, together with their mongrel offspring, while the angel husbands simply dematerialized, even though their "assumed" bodies perished in the flood. We are reminded of a popular doctrine against which Mr. Russell declaims—the immortality of the soul—and at the same time he and almost all his followers, who unquestionably accept his conclusions, hold a doctrine which is no improvement upon the dogma of the soul's immortality. This is the inconsistency of the school of "Students" headed by Mr. Russell.

We can not close this article without emphasizing the fact that in the instance before us the Most High in the most unmistakable manner expressed his reprobation of the intermarriage of his sons with the daughters of men. No matter how fair the faces of such, how perfect their forms, how affable their manners, or how desirable they may otherwise be as companions, they are still the "daughters of Adam," with no claims upon the blessings which God would dispense to his children. They are 'aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise," and while in this position they are Scripturally classed among those "having no hope, and without God in the world" (Eph. 2:11, 12). Let all, and especially our young readers, take warning. Will our young brethren and sisters bind themselves to such who are in this hopeless condition, and jeopardize their own salvation by uniting themselves to strangers?—Editorial in "The Advocate."

THE BRUSH CREEK YOUNG PEOPLE'S BIBLE CLASS

The main subject of these lessons I am going to take up are the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ. The first subject based upon this was Jesus Christ, whose son is he (St. Matt. 2:15) and was there until the death of Herod That it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Out of Egypt have I called my son. There are three ideas in the world today—the first that Christ was the son of Joseph that he pre-existed and that he was the son of God, we believed that he was the son of God (St. Matt. 3:17), and lo a voice came from heaven, saying, This is my Son in whom I am well pleased. In this verse this voice that came from above was God's, saying, This is my Son in whom I am well pleased. This says that Christ was the Son of God, not the son of Joseph (St. Matt. 1:18). Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise, when as his mother Mary was espoused of Joseph before they came together she was found with child of the Holy Ghost. The second subject was Jesus Christ the Lifegiver (Gen. 2:7). This says the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul (St. John 6:27). Labor not for the meat that perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of Man shall give unto you, for him hath God the Father sealed. St. John 5:24 says he that hearth my voice (this is Christ speaking for himself) and believeth on him that sent me hath everlasting life and shall not come unto condemnation, but is passed from death unto life. The next subject was the Promises made to Abraham and his seed. This subject was found in the third chapter of Gal. 9 and 10. So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham. Verse 16 says now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds as of many, but as one and to thy seed which is Christ. The verses above we also memorized (Gal. 3:28-29). There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female, for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise (Gen. 17:8), and I will give unto thee and thy seed after thee the land wherein thou art a stranger. All the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession and I will be their God (Heb. 11:9-11). By faith he sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. Through faith also Sara herself received strength to conceive seed and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised. The 39th verse of this same chapter says, And these all having obtained a good report through faith received not the promise. The last subject of these lessons, What must we do to be saved? Our memory verses were St. Mark 16:15-16. They read as follows: And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every living creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned (St. John 12:48). He that rejecteth me and receiveth not my words hath one that judgeth him The word that I have spoken shall judge him in the last day. St. John 15:16 says: Ye have not chosen me (or Christ), but I have chosen you (or the church), and ordained you that ye should bring forth fruit and that your fruit should remain, that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father (God) in my name (Christ) he may give it to you (Col. 2:23). If ye continue in faith grounded and settled and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven, where I (Paul) am made a minister. St. John 3:19-36 says: He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. The 36th verse says: He that believeth on the Son (or Christ) hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him.

THE LUNAR CYCLE

Selected by S. Roxana Wince

Professor Totten said, "In 1909 we enter in upon the 100th Lunar Cycle of nineteen years each, since the First Advent, and I am forced to expect this future period of nineteen years, 1909 to 1928, A. D., to be more pregnant with inevitable disaster of every description, than the world has ever known or ever seen—since the Flood. This is the last of these 100 Lunar Cycles, and coincides throughout with the assigned duration of the seventh and final vial of wrath, that closes the seventh Trumpet, or 3rd Woe of the book of Revelation, astronomically measured on its maximum unit.—News-Leaflet, March, 1907, p. 10.

Some object to the word Easter for a Christian day of worship, because derived from the name of a heathen goddess, Eastre. It is well to notice that the Hebrew name Esther is derived from that of the heathen goddess Ishtar, but this does not prevent a whole book of the sacred canon from bearing that name. All our week days are named from heathen gods and godesses, formerly worshipped on those days, which fact signifies nothing whatever to us. It it not time to drop such superstitious fears? When we give a word Christian usage it ceases to have its former heathen usage and is redeemed and Christianized. Why not?—Our Hope.

"Inclosed find check to cover subscription for one year to The Restitution," writes Fannie Cross, of Philadelphia, Pa. "I had given to me a copy ,and I enjoyed it very much. I hope we will not have long to wait for the coming of our Lord." This is the kind of a letter we like to receive. By the way, does it pay to distribute sample copies of The Restitution? Let the brother or sister in Philadelphia who gave a copy to Fannie Cross answer.

"Flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God" (1 Cor. 15:50). Christ has exemplified in his own body the meaning o fthis text. "Once in the end of the world he appeared and put away sin by the sacrifice of himself * * * * Christ was offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear a second time without sin unto salvation" (Heb. 9:26, 28). Instead of hamartias, "sin," as in our version, some Greek manuscripts have haimatos, "blood." "The blood maketh atonement for the soul," says God's law. And of his Son Jehovah declares: "Thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin," and "he poured out his soul unto death." The blood, that is, the life of the sacrifice in the case of Jesus, was the "sin" or sin-offering. But when he comes again he comes "without blood," either literally or sacrificially.

THE BLESSED MAN

Psalms 1:1

In this beautiful Psalm of David, the "sweet Psalmist of Israel" (2 Sam. 23:1), as a "ready writer" (Psa. 14:1), draws definite lines between the righteous and the wicked. In language divinely inspired he contrasts the godly and ungodly, the just and unjust, the good and the bad. In superb and exquisite words of heavenly wisdom he describes the blessings of the righteous, their privileges, prosperity, freedom and felicity; and he as glowingly and strikingly depicts the unfortunate predicament of the wicked, their poverty, bondage, and unhappiness. "The Lord knoweth the way o fthe righteous; but the ungodly shall perish" (Psa. 1:6).

The chapter begins with the word "blessed." The Hebrew word ashre, here translated blessed, means to be "happy, very happy" (Young's Concordance). Literally rendered, the text would read, "Most happy is the man;" or "Oh, the happiness of the man!" The idea expressed is that the righteous are not only happy, but "very happy." Hence David utters an exclamation of emotion which was created by reflection on the subject. The Greek word which corresponds to the Hebrew ashre is makarics. This word is translated "blessed" in Matt. 5:3, and applied to Christ's followers nine times in the Beatitudes. They belonged to the "congregation o fthe righteous" (Psa. 1:5); and as such they were "the poor in spirit," "the meek," etc.

Nine times Christ called them "blessed" (happy, very happy), and then supplemented the blessing with an opulent promise: "They shall be comforted;" "They shall inherit the earth;" "They shall be filled," etc. (Matt. 5:3-11). How blessed, how "very happy" is the man even now who can claim the "great and precious promises" (2 Peter 1:4) of the Lord! But how unspeakable and glorious and past understanding, "the blessed of my Father," when they "inherit the kingdom" (Matt. 25:34)!

DESTRUCTION OF JERUSALEM BY ABOMINABLE POWERS

I. Do all the verses in Matt. 24th chapter from the 3rd to the 21st refer to the destruction of Jerusalem?

II. What is the Abomination spoken of in the 15th verse?

Editor's Reply

All the verses from the 4th to the 28th inclusive refer to the destruction of the Holy City. The prophecy intimates this repeatedly by terms of local and circumscribed import. In Mark's report of the same prophesy the 9th verse of Matthew is given a Jewish tinge, for he mentions the "councils" which were peculiarly Jewish, and also "synagogues." Matthew mentions specially the "holy place" (vs. 15), which means Jerusalem and its environs; the "Sabbath day" (vs. 20), which was a Jewish day of rest; and finally and conclusively, he names "Judea" (vs. 16) as the country and Jerusalem as the city in which the prophecy was to be filled (vs. 1, 2).

The prophecy was fulfilled in A. D. 70. In spite of the troublous times predicted in the foregoing verses of the chapter, in verse 14 it is stated that the gospel would be preacshed in "all the world for a witness, and then shall the end (of the world-Jewish) come." This work was accomplished before A. D. 70 (Mk. 16:20; Acts 1:18; Rom. 10:18; Col. 1:6, 23). "When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet stand in the holy place" (vs. 15). The abomination of desolation" points to the Roman ensigns—the symbols of an idolatrous, Pagan power. To the Jews their ensigns and images were decidedly "abominable." Josephus says the Romans brought their ensigns into the temple and placed them over the eastern gate, and offered sacrifice to them (War. b. 6 c 6). Appropriately enough then, the Roman army is called "the abomination," and the abomination that "maketh desolate," as it desolated, wasted and destroyed Jerusalem. When this pagan and unclean power stood in Jerusalem it stood "where it ought not" (Mark 13:14), for the city was the "holy place," including immediate and considerable compass of territory surrounding it. Daniel's prophecy, from which our Lord quotes, reads: "For the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate, even until the consummation, and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate" (9:27)). If the pleonasm of this translation is confusing, you may simplify and read it in literal harmony with the original text: "Because of an overspreading of abominatiosn there shall be a desolating even to destruction, and that decreed shall be poured out upon the desolator." "Abominations," notice, in the plural. The things to be destoryed when the desolation should be consummated were the people and the "holy place" or city; and the desolator was then in turn to be destroyed. More than Romans are meant, for various "abominations" have, since the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans in A. D. 70, occupied it; it has been "trodden down" by all kinds of Gentiles since (Lk. 21:24). The Romans, Greek, Persian, Saracen and Ottoman "abominations" have alike desolated the city and its sacred places. Hence there has been "an overspreading of abominations" in the work of desolating. The "city of the great King" is still "overspread by enemies." Upon the expiration of the 1290 days (Dan. 12:11), the greater part of which time has been under the Moslem "abomination," "that decreed" will be "poured out upon the desolator," as foretold in Daniel.

COMMUNICATIONS

From Sister Esther Richardson

Will you please state through The Restitution that on March 26, brethren from Los Angeles and surrounding smaller places, met at Pomona and effected an organization for the purpose of looking after the work in Southern California, and getting an evangalist to visit the different places. This field has long been neglected. Brother Allard has been with us the past three months and has helped us much and brought us in touch with many isolated brethren; and we feel that with some one in the field all the time a great deal could be accomplished. Knowing that "the night is far spent, the day is at hand," we realize that there is need of employing the time well till our Lord shall come.

Yours in Christian service.

From Sister G. W. Merwin

Dear Restitution:

Your weekly visits are a joy and comfort, as I need the glad truths and words of cheer from the household of faithful ones. The beautiful sermons, all encouraging and uplifting, and truths plainly told so there need be no mistakes —only to hold fast to the precious promises and look beyond for the glorious appearing of him who is to come and redeem the world from sin. It is surely enough—the promised blessings to the believers of the glorious gospel of Christ.

I am almost 80 years old in this Western town, and alone with the faith once deliver to the saints.

Yours in hope.

From Bro. Russell E. Zeller

Dear Brother Huggins:

I have noticed in The Restitution that you have sustained considerable loss in the circulation of The Restitution through your stand on the question of our Lord's parentage. I wish to congratulate you on the stand you have taken in defense o fthe truth.

I not only wish to give you my support and approval, but feel it a duty and a pleasure to help you to regain the lost circulation and increase it if possible. So you will please find enclosed a U. S. Postal Money Order for One dollar and fifty cents for one year's subscription to The Restitution. Please send it to the address given herewith.

The Restitution is a great help to me, and I enjoy reading the splendid articles written by you and other brethren and sisters. I wish to thank you and them for the many pleasant moments I have had in their company through their pens. Hoping this finds the lost well regained, and wishing you and The Restitution all the success which your labor deserves, I am, your brother in Christ Jesus.

From Sister Belle Keith.

Editor Restitution:

A brother in The Restitution came down rather hard against women preaching. Paul says, 1st Cor. 14:24: "Let your women keep silence in church. If they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home." Was this not to prevent confusion in church (ver. 33)? God is not the author of confusion. 1 Tim. 2:12 says: "I suffer not a woman to teach or ursurp authority over the man." Paul knew if the woman should undertake to ursurp authority over the man there would be trouble. We think Paul was imbued with the heathen customs of his day. (Luke 8:1-2) Jesus went throughout every city and village preaching and showing the glad tidings of the Kingdom of God, and certain women were with him: Mary Magdaline, Joanna, Susanna are mentioned, and many others. Now if those women were not helping in his ministry, what were they doing? Martha was cumbered with much serving, and would the Master have rebuked Mary who sat at his feet to learn, but he says, "Mary has chosen the better part." Would it not be the better part of the sisters not only to learn at the Master's feet, but to teach? In Gen. 3:16-4 we find that part of the curse pronounced was, that she should be subject to her husband and he should rule over her. Can any woman wedded to a civilized Christian man, conceive of what that has meant throughout the ages? The uncivilized tribes from then until now, women have been ruled over by brute force. It has been the influence of Christianity on the Anglo-Saxon race that has in a measure mitigated the curse. If gospel is good news or glad tidings, then Mary carried the first gospel message. After the resurrection of Christ, Christ says: "Go tell my disciples, I am risen." Oh glorious news! The King has triumphed over death and became the immortal heir to David's throne! If the brother had stood by and said, "Mary, you have no business to carry that message; you are a woman," would she have heeded him? We think not. Her heart and feet were light, and she ran for joy to tell the glad tidings. Sisters, shall we not accept and hold fast the liberty that has been given us in Christ?

From Bro. and Sister Westfall

We are sending another new name, making three now altogether. Brothers and Sisters, just send one new name at least so we can keep the dear Restitution, as we do love to have its weekly visits. We do not get to meet with the Brethren and Sisters very often. We are sixteen miles from Brush Creek and thirty miles from Springfield. Pray for us that we may be strengthened by his love. The Lord is coming. Christian love to you and all.

BELLE KEITH.

OBITUARY

M. A. Smith

Margaret Almira Smith was born in Palmyra, Mich. (Lenawee County), April 16, 1837; died March 18, 1916.

When a small child she moved with her parents to Addison, township of Woodstock, Lenawee county, Mich., where she grew to womanhood. In 1870, she was married to Emory E. Brooks. They came to Oregon over the Union Pacific railroad in 1874, and settled in Washington county, about eighteen miles from Portland.

She was brought up a Methodist. After coming to Oregon, she heard the word preached in a more perfect way. She was baptized in the all-saving Name, by W. A. Prosser, and united with the church of God at Scholls, Ore.

She was the mother of three children, Edward M. and Rollin H. Brooks, of Scholls, Ore., and Ora Brooks Lawrence, now deceased. She was the stepmother of four children, Nelson B. and Delevan E., of Goldendale, Ore.; Charles H. Brooks, of Hillsboro, Ore., and Jennie L. Griffin, of California.

E. M. BROOKS.

E. H. Benge

Elizabeth Huffer Benge was born in Michigan township, Clinton county, Ind., March 8, 1838, and died in Michigantown, April 21, 1916, at the age of 78 years, 1 month, and 13 days.

She married John Floyd in 1855, and became the mother of four children. Two of these, Mrs. Augusta Heaton, of Elwood, Ind., and Mrs. Elnora Armstrong, of Tipton, Ind., survive her. John Floyd died in 1860 and she was married to Robert Benge May 24, 1863. To this union were born eight children of whom George Benge, of Frankfort, Ind.; William Benge of Alexandria, Ind.; Mrs. Martha Parker, of Kokomo, Ind., and Mrs. Pearl Jenkins are still living.

In her home she was a kind and affectionate mother, and a devoted wife. She had wrought out her life work in the fullness of her years with integrity and uprightness of purpose in keeping with her profession as a Christian. She had been a member of the Church of God at Hillisburg for more than forty years, and was a firm believer in the teachings of the Holy Scriptures, and founded her hope of a future life upon the life-giving power of her Savior and Redeemer, Jesus Christ.

She suffered a stroke of paralysis in February, 1916, which with other complications caused her death.

She leaves her husband, Robert Benge, six children, forty grand-children and twenty-seven great-grand-children of her own family. Besides these five brothers, Jacob Huffer, Andrew Huffer, and a half-brother, Frederick Huffer, all of Michigantown, Ind.; Eli Huffer, of Middleton, Ind.; Daniel Huffer, of Frankfort, Ind.; William F. Huffer, of Frankfort, Ind.; and a half-sister, Sarah Clark, of Kokomo, Ind. Also many other relatives to feel their loss in her death.

Funeral services were held from the Hillisburg church, Monday at 2 o'clock, April 24, 1916, conducted by the writer, and burial was made in the Michigantown cemetery. The services were largely attended by the brethren, friends and neighbors, and we spoke words of comfort and hope from 1 Thess. 4:13.

D. E. VANVACTOR.

Clemie Corine Lemon

Clemie Corine, daughter of Cyrus and Louisa Ball, was born in Burnettsville, Ind., January 21, 1860. She grew to womanhood here and was united in marriage to Milton Lemon, October 7, 1879, and went to housekeeping in the home town. To them have been born ten children, six sons and four daughters. Five of her boys, preceded her in death, while young. The other son, Charles, the daughters, Mrs. Minnie Osman, of Argos, Ind.; Miss Ida, at home, and her beloved husband, survive her. She also leaves nine grand-children, a sister, Mrs. Georgia Stotts, of Indianapolis; two half-sisters, Mrs. Edith Demham, of the state of Oregon, and Mrs. D. H. Robertson, of Indianapolis, and one half-brother, Fairfield Vickery, of California.

She had been in poor health for nearly a year, having suffered a severe attack of blood poisoning, but had recovered so as to be about her usual duties. Her last illness was of short duration, covering less than a week. It was a revival of the old malady, and in the weakened condition of her life forces the end came suddenly, but peacefully, Thursday morning at 3 o'clock, April 27, 1916. She had reached the age of 56 years, 3 months, and 6 days.

In early life she had united with the United Brethren church in Lafayette, Ind. After her marriage, she with her husband were baptized by Brother R. L. Austin, at Rensselaer, and united with the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith in 1898. She has lived a life consistent with the faith she had in the gospel," looking for the blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior, Jesus Christ." Her domestic life has been one of faithful devotion to her family in the arduous duties that fall to the lot of the patient wife and mother. She fell asleep in Jesus to await his coming and his resurrection.

Funeral services were held from the Christian church in Burnettsville at 2 o'clock, Sunday, April 30, 1916, conducted by the writer. The house was filled to overflowing with the friends, neighbors and relatives of the family in testimony of the high esteem in which sister Lemon was held. Love and sympathy was also shown by many floral offerings. We spoke words of comfort from 1 Cor. 15, and 1 Thess. 4:13. D. E. VANVACTOR.

REPORT OF THE NATIONAL BEREAN EXECUTIVE BOARD MEETING

The Executive Board of the National Berean Society met at the home of the President, Sr. Leila E. Whitehead, in Chicago, April 22.

Plans for the annual Berean conference to be held on the Church of God camp ground at Waterloo, Iowa, August 24, were discussed. The program for this conference will appear in detail later from the program committee.

The book committee was represented at the meeting, and reported that books will be ready for distribution by conference time.

The literary committee sent an encouraging report, showing growth in that line of work.

The tract committee reported 470 tracts sent to Ill., 217 to Ind., 50 to Ark., 63 to Neb., 9 to N. Y., 75 to So. Car., 35 to Ky., 30 to Cal., 40 to Mo., 15 to Texas, and 37 to England, a total of 1041. This number of tracts has gone out from the national tract committee in addition to those sent out by individual states. This report is far in advance of any tract work ever done before, a noted result of organized effort. In fact, all reports showed greater activities in every line of Berean work.

Three new points of interest were reported, one having came through the tract committee. The tract work has been supported mostly by free will offering. Any one wishing to help in this work can send donations to the national tract committee, Mrs. Lydia Railsback, 621 South Fellows street, South Bend, Ind.

Bereans, plan your vacation to attend the annual conference which will be held in connection with the Iowa state conference. You can first attend the Illinois Bible School conference at Oregon (August 8 to 20), if you wish, and then go on to Waterloo (August 19-27) all for one fare. The railroad fare from Chicago to Waterloo is approximately $6.00, and it costs no more to go by way of Oregon.

A SOBER EXHORTATION

Dear Restitution: As time draws near for us to renew our subscription to "The Dear Old Restitution" we wonder how so many can do without it. It has spiritual food that is true and timely; often one article is worth more than many times the price of the paper. As we see the angry waves of dissatisfaction with perplexity and unrest prevalent everywhere, even our own United States talking preparedness, helping to fulfill Joel 3:9, 10: "Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles: Prepare war; wake up the mighty men; let all the men of war draw near; let them come up. Beat your plowshares into swords and your pruning hooks itno spears."

Then surely it is time to awake out of sleep, lest we be found without oil in our vessels. Time to examine ourselves, whether we be in the faith. Then by the mercies of God consecrate ourselves a living sacrifice, wholly acceptable to God, which is our reasonable service, and be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God.

We might ask, What is that perfect and acceptable will of God? "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. This is the first commandment. The second, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, or do unto others as you would wish them to do untot you. There are none other commandments greater than these."

Then there are the Christian graces which we should cultivate daily, for if we do these things we shall never fall, but an entrance shall be ministered unto us abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Have we love that suffereth long and is kind, envieth not, vaunteth not itself, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, thinketh no evil? Love is the fulfilling of the law. Have we joy and peace that passeth understanding, because we trust in God? Are we meek, gentle, long-suffering, forbearing to one another, as our Savior who, when he was reviled, reviled not again, but rather prayed: "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do?"

When we are passing through diversities of trials let us remember it was through sufferings Christ was made perfect; and it will be through sufferings we are made perfect." That the trial of your faith being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ. For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen. For the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal." Therefore let us strive for the time when the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads. They shall obtain joy and gladness and sorrow and sighing shall flee away. The rapture of that blissful moment! We can almost feel when we clasp glad hands with loved ones arisen from their dusty tombs and come with the ransomed of all ages to meet our Lord at his appearing and kingdom.

Brothers and sisters, let us press on; that blessed day is worth striving for through many a stormy time. MAY MOORE.

JUDGE NOT, THAT YE BE NOT JUDGED

In all ages man has been disposed to judge his neighbor and to mistake a great anxiety regarding the sins of others as an evidence of his own right. Man invariably uses his own ideas as a standard by which to judge others. Much of this evil which crops up is accounted for by want of thought, lack of that rare ability to put ourselves in another's place, and an absence of all capacity to sympathize with a totally different temperament, or to imagine circumstances which may put a different complexion on the half observed action. It is quite natural that such an evil should exist, when we stop to think that we are a community taken out from among the nations with the tendency bred in us.

There are many scriptural injunctions which simply enunciate great principles, leaving the specific application to the individual, with God as judge. A knowledge of the truth brings man to realize that God's ways are not man's ways, but he fails to perceive that his neighbor's thoughts are not his thoughts either. When men attempt to be judges of others, in all details of life, almost invariably their standard is just this narrow comparison with self. It will be found that many matters come within the scope of the spirit of the law, but are not touched by the letter of the law. Again the letter of the law deals mostly in negatives, thou shalt not, and is transgerssed by sins committed, in which we are sometimes required, by the laws of Christ, to judge our fellows. The spirit o fthe law deals mostly in positives in which none but ourselves and Christ can judge. Yet, sometimes the sins of omissions may be far more serious than the sins of commission. Our wicked act may be only the expression of a moment's weakness, while loveless inactivity may express the tendency of a lifetime.

"In everything give thanks." This is the grandest principle of all by which to judge ourselves. If in the attempt to apply the details of the commandment we probe the head and analyze motives, let it be in judgment of ourselves and not of others. Remember the scathing words of the prophet, "All that watch for iniquity are cut off," "that make a man an offender for a word." We shall all stand much in need for forgiveness, and Chrits said: "Judge not that ye be not judged."

We are commanded sometimes to turn the light inwards and examine ourselves. We can not find a more penetrating light than that which is yielded by the precept, "In everything give thanks." No man could give God thanks for that which is unlawful, or for the immoderate indulgence of that which if lawfully used is good. No man could give God thanks for the pleasure derived from uncharitable conversation or scandal-bearing communications. We may call to mind a final warning of judging, springing as we do from a people prone to this offense, and living in an age when freedom of criticism is encouraged; there is an ever-present danger that we may tread in the footsteps of the unholy Pharisees, who condemned to death the Prince of Life, and set up a standard of our own, and with unholy judgment condemn a man for that in which he gives God thanks."—Bible Truth.

HOW JESUS WEPT

Only twice in the New Testament are we told that Jesus wept, Luke 19:41 and John 11:35. In the Greek a different word is used in each instance to express the emotion our Lord felt. In Luke 19:41 the word is klaio, and means to break forth, to wail. This is exactly what Jesus did as he stood above Jerusalem and contemplated the fate from which he was powerless to save them, for the reason as he said, "I would have gathered you * * * * but ye would not."

In John 11:35 the word translated wept is dakruo and means simply to shed tears, without outcry or tormenting anguish. Here, as Jesus stood before the tomb of Lazarus, he reveals his tender human heart, as he mingles his tears with those of the weeping sisters. He wept in sympathy with them.

This is the quality of the sorrow a Christian feels. His tears are gentle tears. Tears of love. Tears of resignation. Tears such as Jesus wept. Thank God, all tears shall be wiped away from our eyes forever in the Paradise of God.

The above considerations have proven to me rifts in the cloud of my sorrow through which the sunlight of God's face has fallen into my heart.—The Evangelical.

Faith is not asking God for bushels and setting out a pint measure to catch them in.—Old Saying.

I don't think much of a man who is not wiser today than he was yesterday.—Abraham Lincoln.

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:25, 26); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:13-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13: 3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). "FILLED WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT"

Synopsis of Sermon Delivered by Bro. Robt. G. Huggins, Sunday Morning, May 7th, 1916, and Reported by Bro. George B. Alldridge.

Text: "And They Were All Filled With the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2:4).

Probably no subject from the scriptural point of view, is so universally misunderstood as the subject we have selected for consideration this morning, viz., "Being Filled With the Holy Spirit." Baptism of the Holy Spirit and being filled with the Holy Spirit to many minds are synonymous. The baptism of the Holy Spirit usually produced miraculous effects. For instance, we read in Acts 2:4, "And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and began to speak with other tongues, as the spirit gave them utterance." Sometimes these words are used to describe an inspiration antecedent to a miraculous manifestation, and sometimes one antecedent to purely spiritual and moral manifestations. We read in John 10:41 that John the Baptist did no miracle. Our Lord paid this high tribute to John: "Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist" (Matt. 11:11). Nevertheless the record in Luke 1:15 is that from his mother's womb, he was "filled with the Holy Spirit."

Peter, we find in Acts 4:8, 31, being filled with the Holy Spirit was enabled to preach the word of God with boldness; no miraculous manifestation necessarily following. In Acts 6:3 we note the early church selected brethren to serve the church as its deacons, men who were "filled with the Holy Spirit," and also Barnabas, of whom there is no record of having ever performed a miracle, "was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith" (Acts 11:23, 24).

Our Lord promised that he would send the Holy Spirit, but no where does he state that it would be a miracleworking power merely. In John 14:17, 26, he distinctly declares that the Holy Spirit that he would send would be "the Spirit of truth," and that this spirit of truth would teach us all things, and bring to our remembrance, whatsoever he has left on record for us to know and understand. Paul's reasoning in Rom. 8:9, 11, is as clear as the noon-day upon this proposition, that if we have not the spirit of Christ, we do not possess the Holy Spirit, and hence since the mind of Christ does not dwell or possess our mind, we are none of his. This makes our Lord's statement in John 14:23 clear: "If a man love me, he will keep my words and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him." "He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings; and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me."

There are degrees in possessing the Holy Spirit. Our Lord upon one occasion breathed upon his disciples and said, "Receive ye the Holy Spirit" (John 20:22); but in Acts 2:4 these same disciples became "filled with the Holy Spirit." When we first embraced and obeyed the truth, as the truth is in Jesus, we received the Holy Spirit or the Spirit of the truth. Paul exhorts us in Eph. 5:17-20 to be filled with the spirit. If we are, then, when we meet we shall be found speaking to ourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in our heart to the Lord. Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ." We can be full of the Holy Spirit at all times, like John the Baptist, and yet not possess miraculous power. We all have eyes; how many has the eye of the poet to read and express in beautiful thoughts the revelations of nature? We hear, but who among us possesses the delicate and exquisite ear of the musician that enables him to interpret the soul ravishing symphonies of a Beethoven, Handel on Mozart? We all have a tongue, but how many of us can declaim like Demosthenes or Cicero or W. J. Bryan? Yet possessing none of these marvellous gifts, we all possess the faculty that is necessary, to be "filled with the Holy Spirit," which really means to be "filled with all the fulness of God."

Paul in Eph. 3:16-21 tells us how this may be attained: "And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God." In 2 Cor. 9:8 we find this to be "abounding in every good work;" and our Lord shows in John 4:14 and John 7:37, 39 that this is a condition of overflowing. Being full ourselves and then overflowing and blessing others, as we read in Col. 1:9, 10: "Being filled with the knowledge of his will * * * * and being faithful in every good work."

We can be full of God, and yet not have all of God in us. The sunbeam enters noiselessly and impalpably into a gloomy chamber, the darkness and gloom vanish away. The room becomes full of sunlight, but not all of the sun. We can be full of the spirit of God; God is Light, Life, Truth and Joy, but all of these glorious elements in the degree that God possesses them cannot be ours. We are surrounded by electricity and magnetic forces; these have always existed. It is only in recent years these forces have been manifested. The street car, the electric light, the telephone, the automobile, the telegraph are some of its wonder ful manifestations. God's Spirit, the Holy Spirit, is everywhere. The sweet Psalmist says: "Thou sendest forth thy spirit. they are created: and thou renewest the face of the earth." (Psa. 104:30.) Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed in the grave, behold, thou are there." (Psa. 139:7-17). Electricity is universal so far as we know, God's spirit David declares is so. but neither electricity nor God's spirit is universally manifested. Jesus tells us in John 14:16-23, that the Holy Spirit in this age can only be manifested in the lives of God's children, as their lives are in harmony and obedience with his just and loving commands. Paul had this thought in mind when he wrote: "Ye are our epistle, written in our hearts, known and read of all men." (2 Cor. 3:2, 3). Nothing can be manifested without a suitable faculty. Objects can only be seen by the aid of the eye; sound, the mind can only comprehend through the aid of the ear; flavor exists only to the palate not only to the palate, but by the touch of the hand. Hence God's appeal "My son. give me thine heart." God's spirit is manifested, is dwelling in our hearts, by the operation of our mind as expressed by our thoughts, words and acts.

Filling with the Holy Spirit may be illustrated variously. Under normal conditions a piece of iron is dark and cold. Imbued with a certain amount of heat, it becomes hot without changing its appearance, yet the heat has permeated the whole mass, it is full of heat; touch it at any part you become convinced; increase the degree of heat, it changes its color; by submitting it to an intense heat, it becomes of the same element—a fire, and will readily ignite any inflammable substance it may come in contact wi th, or even touches. So if we are "filled with the Spirit," we shall be fervent in spirit. (Acts 18:25; Rom 12:11), fervent in our minds, one toward another, (2 Cor. 7:7), fervent in prayer (Col. 4:12), and beloved, above all which is Godlike, Fervent in love (1 Pet. 9:8).

Water when frozen is cold, solid, brittle. If gently warmed, it begins to flow. but if heated to 212 degrees it boils, then it ascends and mounts to the sky as vapor. If we are full of God's thoughts suggested to us by the study of his precious word, then our hearts will boil with the fervent heat of God's love, and our affections will be set on things above, and not on the things of the earth (Cor. 3:1-3).

Another infallible manifestation that we are filled with the Holy Spirit: "We are all fond of music; it is the language of joy and gladness. Air is all around us; in it we live, move and have our being; without it we could not live. It fills us, it also fills the organ, normally. Everything feels its existence. Increase the air pressure in the pipes of the organ above normal pressure, a slight clicking or grating sound is heard; pull out some of the stops, increase the air pressure; the current then rushes through the pipes, sound swells forth holding us entranced with the sweet harmony and melody they produce. Now open the swells, pull out every stop: sounds burst forth like a mighty and well balanced orchestra, that fascinates and captivates every ear that is within range of its sounds.

No wonder Paul says: "And be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit." As wine affects the mind and brings on that condition known as intoxication, so being filled with the spirit, the mind of God, as revealed in his word, creates in our mind that condition of joy, hope and gladness, that makes us as those who have been in the company of Jesus and learned of him. Peter before he became filled with the Holy Spirit was a coward and denied the Lord that bought him; a little maid became his master; but after being filled with God's Spirit, the Holy Spirit, being emptied of his own spirit of self-will, pride and self-confidence, and becoming filled with the spirit of faith, love and obedience, he could speak the word of God with boldness, as manifested in that wonderful exhortation as recorded in Acts 3 and 4 chapters. Beloved, it makes a great difference in whose company we are found. If we fraternize with the world, we partake of the spirit of the world, and as John says: "If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth. But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." The parliament of Oliver Cromwell beheaded Charles I. Who among his followers would have dared to criticize their action before any of Cromwells' soldiers? Yet we find over and over again men filled with The Holy Spirit possessed such remarkable courage that they did condemn our Lord's enemies who took his life (Acts 4:13). As we associate with God's children, they of like precious faith, study and remember the word of God, we become filled with the spirit of its promises, hope and teachings, the mind or spirit of God. According to the degree we are in earnest about this matter, we shall become "Filled with the Holy Spirit," and become what God desires us to be—a copy of his dear Son. "Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." (Rom. 8:9).

THE CHURCH

The Name of the Church

Ekklesia, "That which is caled out" (Dr. Young). "Simeon hoth declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name" (Acts 15:14). "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Spirit hath made you overseers, to feed the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood" (Acts 20:28). "For I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the churrh of God." (1 Cor 15:9).

"Salute one another with an holy kiss. The Churches of Christ salute you" (Rom. 16:16). In apostolic days this is the way the church was known. Brethren, we still have the name, "The church of God" (1 Cor. 15:9).

How One May Get That Name

"For this cause I bow my knee unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family (church) in heaven and earth is named" (Eph. 3:14, 15). We must hear the one name. "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name (one name) of the Father, (a title), and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." (Matt. 28:19). "Then Peter said unto them: Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name (The only name, Acts 4:12) of Jesus Christ." (Acts 2:38). See Acts 19:5; Rom. 6:3, 7; Gal. 3:26. 29. This is the only way given in the Bible by which one may take upon himself the one name borne by the Father, Son and the whole family of God.

Her Foundation.

"And I say unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock (that I am the Son of God) I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it" (Matt. 16:18, 20). Brethren, how many of the so-called churches stand upon that one foundation, Jesus the Son of God? I am glad to say that we do, and that The Restitution has nobly defended that doctrine. "And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ (Son of God) himself being the chief Corner Stone. In whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord." (Eph. 2:20, 21). "For other foundations can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." (Let's hold to the church that bears the one name and rests upon the one foundation, the church of God. See 1 Cor. 3:10.15). "Therefore thus saith the Lord God. Behold. I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone (Jesus the Son of God), a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation, he that believeth shall not make haste" (Isa. 28:16).

Her Relationship to Christ

"For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church. And he is Saviour of the body. Therefore the church is subject unto Christ." (Eph. 5:23, 24). "And he is the head of the body, the church." (Col. 1:18). "Now ye are the body of Christ. and members in particular." (1 Cor. 12:27). "I am the vine, ye are the branches." Jer. 15.1, 12).

Her Mission

(1) To keep the truth in the world. "But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim. 3:15). "But as we were allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel, even so we speak, not as pleasing men, but God which trieth our hearts." (1 Thes. 2:4).

(2) To bear fruit to the glory of God. Herein is my Father glorified that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." (Jno. 15:8).

Her Reward

"He that hath an ear, let him hear what the spirit saith unto the churches: To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." "He shall not be hurt of the second death." "He shall eat of the hidden manna and receive a new name; sit with Christ on his throne and judge the nations" (Rev 2:7, 11, 17; 3:21). "He that spared not his own Son, but delieverd him up for us all, how shall he not freely give us all things?" (Rom. 8:32). "I give unto them eternal life." (Jno. 10:27, 28) "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." (Luke 12:32.)

THE RESTITUTION LINOTYPE MACHINE

By S. Roxana Wince

The Lord knows our need. He knows that we can not run The Restitution any longer successfully without that linograph machine. But he wants us to present our case to him. "Ask of me," he says. Then "To your knees, O his people!" Acknowledge his power and willingness to give, show him that you do believe and trust in him, and that you feel your own utter helplessness without him. He is a God that heareth prayer, a God who is in the heavens and to whom the heavens belong. Let not the heathen say, "Where is now their God?" but "O house of Israel! Trust thou in the Lord. He is their help and their shield." He is not a God made by the hands of men, with mouth that can not speak, with eyes that can not see, with ears that can not hear, nose that can not smell, hands that can not handle, and feet that can not walk, in whom there is no help; but a God who can see and hear and pity and deliver. "who has been mindful of us and will bless us. We come to him for this linograph, not "with foolish, rash, vainglorious words, and sorry self-sufficiency," but with an humble sense of our own weakness and of his power. We come to him to show the heathen that we do have a God who does hear and answer prayer, but saying while we come: "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory; for thy mercy and for thy truth's sake."

It is for thy glory and for thy truth's sake that we ask this thing of thee. Give it us, we pray, for Jesus' sake. Amen!

THE RESTITUTION REFRESHINGS

Dear Restitution:

I just want to tell my brothers and sisters of like precious faith how much is implied in the word "restitution." It is a theme I love to dwell on, my daily food in meditation: my one longing desire that my Lord and Master will come and restore all things: "All things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began."

How much there is looking back over it all. It is like a well plotted drama. God's plan of salvation is. Then the prophetic "Prince of Peace" (Isa. 9:6) came in the fullness of time, the "sent Son," who is now stationed at the Father's right hand until—yes, an appointed time of the Father (not man), then Jesus will come.

And when in the phase of his coming with all his saints "to be glorified in them." "The desire of all nations." Then, O then, will begin the restitution age, with justice and equity to all. How much it impresses me. This restitution longing will be more fully understood from the following article, written by the grace of God through his word. On a seeming impelling bugle call I went into a moving picture show on the 24th ult to see "The Battle Cry of Peace—Preparedness for War in the Time of Peace" (I seldom go to one, only when I think I can draw a lesson therefrom.) I went in with full knowledge of our Civil War from the press only But to see the horrors of war, the bombarding of New York City, buildings burning and falling, the fleeing for safety, and then the invasion of peaceful homes, the cruelties to women and children, bringing out vividly the awfulness of real occurrence and war-stricken Belgium, tears would come. I said: "O Lord, how long; come, and come quickly; make short work in subduing the powers that be" (and he will with the awful death-dealing implements of war of these latter days), and usher in the restoration age. I thought how few heard the warning cry, "Be ye also ready, prepared to meet the Lord," and not be ashamed or afraid at his appearing.

When I returned home I reflected. Now is the time to let my light shine, scatter wide something to warn the people, at the same time tell joyful news of the restitution age. So I thought, as I worked, jotting down on a slate (an old habit of mine), favorite restitution scriptural sayings, writing them up in shape of evenings, and sent to our daily Morning Sun. It appeared Monday, May 1st. I said, as in the mail box it went: "Go, little messenger; do God's warning now as in the beginning." So I'm sending it now to The Restitution. If it pleases and is deemed worthy of perusal in same. May it help someone to understand and believe, and to love not only prophetic restitution, but "the Dear Old Reliable Restitution" paper as well.

"LET THE WORD OF CHRIST DWELL IN YOU RICHLY"

By S. Roxana Wince.

How can we "let the word of Christ dwell in us richly?" Only by memorizing it, remembering that the word of Christ, is the gospel word whereby we have been called.

Jamison, Fanssett, and Brown tell us that "at the agape or love-feasts and in their family circles, they were to be so full of the word of Christ in the heart, that the mouth should give it utterance in hymns of instruction, admonition and praise," and Tertulian records that at the love-feasts, "after the water had been furnished for the hands and the lights had been lit, according as any had the power, whether by his remembrance of scripture, or by his power of composition, he used to be invited to sing praises to God for the common good." It was the in-dwelling of the word, that gave the Colossians this power, "in all wisdom to teach, and admonish one another." They had the word at their tongue's end, and could quote it whenever and wherever needed, or turn it into a melodious song on occasions of unusual joy. The christian of those days, was not handicapped, for lack of weapons, he was never helpless when facing his adversaries for his armor was always on, for the Bible was, to him a helmet, a buckler, a shield, a sword and shoes for his feet. He was never lacking for words, wherewith to answer the gainsayer. He could quickly take the fire out of the adversaries darts, and was never at a loss, when asked to give a reason for the hope that was in him. Like Jesus, he could say "It is written." Like Peter—"Moses and all the prophets have said so and so," or like Stephen, rehearse the whole gospel story from the calling of Abraham out of Mesopotamia, to the time when he himself saw the heavens opened and Jesus standing on the right hand of God, and was stoned to death for his testimony. Paul was perfectly familiar with the scriptures, Timothy knew them from a child.

Godly men of old knew the word of the Lord so well, that they made it their meditation by day and by night. David hid the word in his heart that he might not sin and said, "Unless thy law had been my delights I had perished in my affliction. I will never forget thy precepts: for with them thou hast quickened me."

And if all these holy ones of old found it necessary to equip themselves for the warfare against sin, and for instructing others in the way of life, is it not our bounden duty to do so in the same way that they did—by committing God's word to memory? It is not a hard thing to do. A half chapter can be learned while warming one's feet. The Bible can be laid open on the table and a verse caught now and then, while we are busy with broom or needle, and what a comfort, what company, what a source of strength, what a bulwark against sin, these "hidden treasures" are!

I have read somewhere that the Vandois, ("who were descended from those refugees from Italy who, after Paul had preached the gospel there, abandoned their beautiful home, and fled * * * * to the fastnesses of the Alps, knew the scriptures so well that if every copy in their possession had been destroyed, they could have reproduced it from memory. "Their pastors was sent by turns into every part of Europe to preach the gospel, and thus the seed was sown which at length burst forth in The Reformation." Even their children, had portions of the Bible, sacredly committed to their memories, that it might not be lost.

If our people knew the Bible as well, what a "power unto salvation," would the gospel be in their hands! "Ponder it well, fathers and scribes and youth and ye men of ancient age." If you want to know the Lord, and have him walk with you as an intimate companion, hide his word in your heart. If you want to conquor sin, do as David did, hide the word of the Lord in your heart. If you want to baffle satan as Jesus did, hide the word in your hearts. If you want to be a savior of men, hide the word in your heart.

BUSH CREEK YOUNG PEOPLE'S BIBLE CLASS

Mellie Anderson

"What must I do to be saved?" We learn we must first believe. Paul said, "Without faith it is impossible to please him (God), for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Jesus says, "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me." What must we believe? In acts 8:12 we find we must believe the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ. We also learn in the 37th verse of the same chapter that we must believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. After we have believed, if we are wicked or sinful, we must repent. In Peter's sermon at Pentecost he says: "Repent and be baptized, every one of you for the remission of your sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the holy spirit."

Now Peter did not say be sprinkled, but he said, "Repent and be baptized." What leads us to repentence? Paul says the goodness of God. How shall we get into Christ? Christ said, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. We must get remission of sins, for we learn in Romans, that the wages of sin is death; by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned. Annarias said to Paul, "Your sins are washed away by being baptized and calling on the name of the Lord." We read that after getting into Christ we must walk in the spirit, and not the flesh. He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption. But he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. If we live in the Spirit let us also walk in the Spirit. For the flesh lusteth against the spirit and the spirit against the flesh, and these are contrary, the one to the other, so that ye cannot do the things that ye would.

The Things Concerning the Name of Jesus Christ

When Jesus came to his disciples saying, "Whom do the men say that the Son of Man is." Some say he was a prophet, some said "Thou art John the Baptist, some Elias or Jeremiah." He then asked his disciples, "Whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered, Thou art the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered, Blessed art thou Simon Barjona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee. And Jesus said, Upon this rock will I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." If you want to be saved you must believe Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God, and be baptized into his name. Then we are his sheep. "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me, and I will give them eternal life, and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand."

DOROTHY BREWER,
Age 9 Years.

We believe that Christ is the Son of God. Christ died for us, so we could live. If we want to be saved we must believe the scripture and be baptized. Jesus said, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me, and I give unto them eternal life and they shall never perish. Neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand" (Jno. 10:27, 28). He also says in Mark. 15:16, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned."

VADIE B. ANDERSON,
Age 8 Years.

Because of sin the present life ends in death (Rom. 5:12). In death we shall not know anything (Psa. 146:4; Eccl. 9:4-10). Christ came and died that he might give his people eternal life. He says, "I give my sheep eternal life, and they shall never perish" (Jno. 10:27, 28).

To receive this life we must believe and obey the truth. PARAN WILBURN AMBERSON.

GREETINGS FROM CLEVELAND'S YOUNG PEOPLE

Robert H. McCaslin has said: "Youth is not a time of life; it is a state of mind. It is not a matter of ripe cheeks, red lips and supple knees; it is a temper of the will, a quality of the imagination, a vigor of the emotions. It is the freshness of the deep springs of life."

Youth means a temperamental predominance of courage over timidity, of the appetite for adventure over the love of ease. This often exists in a man of fifty more than a boy of twenty.

Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years. People grow old only by deserting their ideals. Years wrinkle the skin, but to give up enthusiasm wrinkles the soul. Worry, doubt, self-distrust, fear and despair—these are the long, long years that bow the heart and turn the greening spirit back to dust.

Whether sixty or sixteen, there is in every human being's heart the lure of wonder, the sweet amazement at the stars and at starlike things and thoughts, the undaunted challenge of events, the unfailing, childlike appetite for what next, and joy of the game of living.

You are as young as your faith, as old as your doubt; as young as your self-confidence, as old as your fear; as young as your hope, as old as your despair. In the central place of your heart is an evergreen tree; its name is love. So long as it flourishes you are young; when it dies you are old.

In the central place of your heart is a wireless station. So long as it receives messages of beauty, hope, cheer, grandeur, courage and power from the earth, fro men and from the Infinite, so long are you young.

Therefore, as Max Ehrmann says: "Let me do my work each day; and if the darkened hours of despair overcome me may I not forget the strength that comforted me in the desolation of other times. Spare me from bitterness and from the sharp passions of unguarded moments. Give me friends that will love me for what I am, and keep ever burning before my vagrant steps the kindly light of hope. And though I come not within sight of the castle of my dreams, teach me still to be thankful for life and the memories that are good and sweet; and may the evening's twilight find me gentle still."

BE YE READY?

"Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh" (Matt. 24:44, 25-13).

"Behold, the bridegroom cometh: go ye out to meet him" (Matt. 29:5).

"Therefore let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober" (1 Thess 5:6). "Behold I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth" (Rev. 16:15). "And they that were ready went in and the door was shut" (Matt. 25:10).

EDITORIAL

Brother J. H. Anderson writes: "I am expecting, the Lord willing, to hold a meeting at Galimone Gap, N. C., July 27-31, and at Guthrie Grove, N. C., Aug. 1-8." God's blessings be upon our faithful brother in all his efforts to scatter the seed-word of the kingdom. Brother Anderson is a fully accredited agent for the Restitution, so friends can take advantage of his travels, and hand him their subscriptions and renewals.

"That ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises."—(Heb. vi. 12.)

Some read this passage as if it affirmed that the departed saints as disembodied spirits, were in the enjoyment of their heavenly rewards. But this cannot be its meaning, for such as exposition is plainly forbidden by a comparison with a subsequent place in this epistle. What this text asserts is, that there are those whose faith and patience have placed them in the company of them who inherit the promises—not the fulfillment of the promises, but the promises to be at a future time fulfilled. And hence this same epistle informs us, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises," that is the fulfillment of them. (Heb. xi. 13). And again: "These all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promises; God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." (Heb. xi. 39, 40.)

A MODIFIED COMMANDMENT

Brother Huggins:

I have been reading your book, "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts." You have given me much light on what you call "knotty texts." Now I will ask you to please reconcile these seemingly contradictory statements: Paul to the Corinthians, chapter xiv:34 and 35 says, "It is a shame for a woman to speak inthe church." This same brother Paul says in Acts xxi:9 that Philip had four daughters "which did prophesy." He says in his letter to the Philipians, chapter iv. verse 3, "Help those women which labored with me in the gospel."

Yours with best wishes.
SARAH F. MORGAN.

Editor's Reply

The seemingly conflicting testimonies quoted by Sister Morgan result from taking Paul's language in I Cor. xiv:34, 35 as absolute, when it is only comparative. It is true he enjoins "silence" upon the women and forbids them to "speak" in the church, but these prohibitory words must be interpreted, harmonized and modified by the context. The Corinthian church was full of spirit gifts. "Every one" (verse 26) had a gift of some kind; anl "unknown tongues" (verse 27) abounded. As they had no "order" (verse 40) in their meetings: many speaking at the same time (verse 23), some singing a "psalm," another expounding a "doctrine," while a third would have "a revelation" (verse 26), and instantly told what it was (verses 30, 32), resulted in producing utter "confusion" (verse 33) in the assembly. As the men were to blame for this disorder as well as the women, the apostle tells them for not more than two or three to speak at a meeting, "and that by course" (verse 27), i. e., one at a time. Turning then to the others he enjoins upon them to "keep silence in the church" (verse 28). Not that he forbids the other men to speak absolutely, but while the others are speaking they must "hold their peace" (verse 30), "that all may learn, and that all may be comforted." (verse 31). Turning then to the women, who were probably the chief disturbers, he enjoins upon them the same "silence" and obedience," while the leader of the meeting was addressing the audience, that he had just made binding upon the men. In all this Paul has not absolutely forbidden any one to "speak with tongues" (verse 39); his only requirement is that talking, whether by man or woman, must be done decently and orderly (verse 40).

Do not relinquish your desire, though it be not fulfilled immediately.

GROWTH

"Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." (2 Pet. iii:18). A creed, we were told by some, is dangerous because it is opposed to growth. Christ has explained what growth is to the satisfaction of all who have "ears to hear" (Matthew xiii:9). Growth with some means "change." They formerly believed that Jesus was the Son of God; that the law of Moses ended in Christ; that the Bible was wholly inspired. Now they have "changed;" they now believe that Joseph was the father of Jesus; that the law of Moses is still binding; and that the Bible, at least such parts of it as clash with their theories, is erroneous. Because they have changed, therefore they have grown! If "changing" your belief is growing "in knowledge," then the oftener you change your views, the more you grow! No change, no growth; the oftener you change, the more rapid your growth!

Now for years and years our growing, "changing" friends have been teaching the mortality of man. They have been preaching this old stale truth over and over—they have not, for the last fifty years, "changed" on this point an iota—that is, they have not grown a bit! They must feel somewhat ashamed of this. Perhaps that is why they voted "against" the adoption of a statement of faith at the General Conference. In that statement one article says that man is mortal. This they have believed for years, and still believe, unless they have grown out of it recently. Yet they voted against what they have for years believed and preached to be true! Were they to adopt a statement of faith setting forth the mortality of man, they would have a creed on that one point; and as a creed stops growth, and as growth means "change," they would be left without the "liberty" to "change:" therefore to save themselves the "freedom" to grow or to "change" from man's mortality to the immortality of the soul, they voted contrary to their convictions!

The apostle Paul has showed clearly by appealing to "nature itself" (1 Corinthians xi:14), what growth is. Plant a grain of corn; watch it grow; let "nature itself" teach you what growth is. "For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear" (Mark iv:28). The seed of corn planted grows, and this growth has progress or stages; the blade, ear, and finally "full corn." But from the time the seed was planted until it had grown to "full corn," it was corn all the time. Corn all the time, but in different stages. The seed was corn, the blades corn, the ears corn. Its growth did not "change" the blades to blades of oats; or the ear into ears of barley!

Suppose one of our growing brethren were a farmer and tried to grow corn as he is trying to grow in the truth. He plants a grain of corn. It comes up and grows, "first the blade." He would say: "Strange this corn does not grow; I am getting tired of these 'blades.'" Later "the ear" appears; and pointing to it we say, "Your corn is growing nicely." "Growing," he says gruffly, "not at all; I am tired of blades and ears—I want a 'change.'". Then we point to the "full corn" in the ear; but he only says: "It's nothing but corn, it began in corn and has ended in corn—corn first, middle, last and always corn! I want corn to grow—'change'"—and to make the change he would have to pull out the corn by the roots and plant grapes; for corn never by "nature" changes to grapes! Such a man would make as good a farmer as a theologian. According to the analogy of nature we may grow in knowledge, not by "change" but by increase. We can grow in doctrine only by "abiding" in it (2 John 9); never by growing out of it.

BROTHERHOOD

A "brother in Christ" is constituted such as the result of his belief of the gospel, and his baptismal adoption into the family of God, and the fraternity of the truth, of which Christ is the head. As to the question of the propriety of continuing the fraternal designation to those from whose fellowship we may have found it necessary to withdraw on the ground of wrong doctrine, or non-submission to the commandments of Christ (in one or more particulars), it may be said that the proprietoy or otherwise in the case depends upon the case itself; for in one kind of case the law, while commanding us to have no company with the offender (that he may be ashamed), yet exhorts us to count him not as an enemy, but "admonish him as a brother" (2 Thess. 3:12-15); while in another description of the case the injunction is to the effect that "if he neglect (R. V., refuse) to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican" (Matt. 18:15-17). These are the only express illustrations of the point. These being cases, however, of pure disobedience to the commandments of Christ and the apostles, they do not afford, perhaps, a precise parallel to cases partaking more of the character of errors of judgment, such as may be described by the terms "partial inspiration," "pre-existence," "no-willism," etc. The situation in relation to the question of the continuance or otherwise of the terms "brother" and "sister" is no doubt embarrassing. If a brother goes clean over to the apostate churches again, or to spiritualism or infidelity, we know what to do—we discontinue the fraternal terms almost involuntarily as terms not only to which the new departure has no further claim, but as descriptions now no longer either expected or desired by the subject of the change. But in an instance where a brother (or brethren) becoming detached from us continues to maintain all the institutions of the gospel, save in the matter of the mistaken interpretation of the particular fact or aspect of the truth that led to his separation, we probably do better to "admonish him as a brother" than to "count him as an enemy;" for James expressly recognizes the possibility of brethren erring from the truth, and equally the possibility of their conversion again to right ways (James 5:19, 20); and what is possible with regard to matters of walk and conduct (to which probably James refers) may not be less possible in the domain of faith and doctrine. When we exhort such an one, or speak to him with a view to his "correction or instruction in righteousness," do we do it as if we were speaking to an alien, or as if we were addressing a brother, who in some matter had come to wrong conclusions? Or if one such return to use, acknowledging that he was mistaken in the thing that led to his separation, do we receive back as a stranger (by baptism) or as a brother forsaking the error of his ways? Undoubtedly the latter in both cases. The matter no doubt will continue to be a difficulty. It is possible, we conceive, to employ the terms "brother" and "sister" in such a connection, without a compromise; and it is possible to do the same thing in a compromising way; much depends on what is intended, and what is understood; and in what connection, and under what circumstances the terms are employed, as to whether they are used in a permissible way. Whilst seeking, however, to act out a faithful and uncompromising part, we need not seek to usurp the functions of the judgment of God, nor yet to altogether exclude the "mercy which rejoiceth against judgment." As Jude says with regard to such as are separated, "On some have mercy, who are in doubt; and some save, snatching them out of the fire, and on some have mercy with fear" (Revised Version), "making a difference," as the common version has it.—R. R.

COMMUNICATIONS

From Bro. J. J. Heckman

Dear Brother Huggins:

I notice in our good paper that some are inquiring as to my whereabouts. I am down here in western Oklahoma, and have been real busy since I came here. In looking over the calendar, I find it has been quite a long time since I have written any thing for The Restitution, but I have not missed my articles: the paper has been exceptionally good all the while, and I might have spoiled some of it had I been admitted to its columns during the time of my absence.

I have thought some time that I was taking up too much of your valuable space, for several reasons, namely: (1) I am a stranger to most of your readers, and it is quite natural for people to like to see articles from those with whom they are personally acquainted. (2) I have had to work very hard for the last few years, and have to write my articles too hurriedly. Could do better if I had more time in which to write. (3) You have so many good writers that can do better than I, that I feel that they should write more, and me less.

But I don't wish to be a shirk, and am always willing to do my best, and I feel more and more that we owe God our best efforts, yet we are commanded, and are expected to provide for those of our household, and when misfortune hits us it seems that we are crowded to make the necessary provisions. But I can say so far we have had plenty, but by the hardest of efforts.

I have been much interested in the articles on the dance, and believe that you are right when you say it is sinful; I would not feel right in a dance hall.

I have also noticed your skirmishing on the line of mortal resurrection. It seems to me that if one is raised mortal, he is raised to die again; for the meaning of the word "mortal" is, "Subject to death, destined to die." Will the saints come out of their graves subject to death? Who will contend for such an idea? Then will not those who believe in mortal emergence have to change the meaning of the word "mortal," as well as the words "sown," "raised," etc? They will need a new Bible to prove mortal resurrection, or "mortal emergence," as they term it, for the saints. We have all kinds of isms in our day. Mr. Russell contends that some mortals shall live to all eternity, and yet be mortal; which is a contradiction of terms; one who is not destined to die is not mortal. Sin caused mortality, and righteousness will deliver from it. Then it is very essential that we partake of the righteousness provided for us, that of Christ. Of ourselves we are nothing, and cannot gain the crown of life. It is in the Christ, and we must go through him to get it.

I see some very excellent articles from the young people; that is right, dear young Christians; don't be afraid to write for the paper; it will build you up in the most holy faith. The Bible says, "Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of the truth," and a good way is to use the grace and knowledge we now have to get more. Improve your talent by using it. Don't lay any talents up in a napkin, but put them to use. Work while it is day; for if Jesus tarries a little while the night of death will soon come, and drag us down to the land of forgetfulness.

We know of but one family near us who are of the one faith, and hope, and so we are again in isolation. Brother Knapp, shall we keep our children from a union Sunday school, and keep them at home each Lord's day, or take them to it, and also teach them at home? It never seemed good to me to tie children down at home, and not let them get acquainted with the ways of the people; and the Orthodox church is better to take them to than shows, and frolics of every description.

We are attending such schools each Sunday, and I am preaching from once to twice at those places each Sunday. Paul visited the Jewish synagogues on the sabbath days not because he indorsed their religion, but that he might get an opportunity to teach the Jews. It would have been a great pleasure to us to have made this last move to near one of the churches of God, but we did not know where we would be desired, and so came here. May our coming be to the glory of God, and may we be instrumental in establishing a congregation here. My old companion, and fellow worker, Bro. H. Capers, of Dallas, Texas, recently paid us a visit, and did some good preaching while here. We do not exactly see eye to eye wich that Brother on some points, but yet he is right on many of the fundamentals, and does much good in his teaching. He calls his congregations "Churches of Christ," and makes much of the name Christian, and baptizes in the name of Jesus only. He is with us on the kingdom question, and is a strong conditionalist, teaches resurrection for the righteous only. He promised to give some attention to The Restitution soon. He edits a small paper called "The Christian," making the "I" long. Now beloved brethren, remember us in your prayers; don't forget us in a single one of them. Pray that we may glorify God here.

Yours In Jesus.

From Bro. Adam J. Fisk

Dear Brother Huggins:

Please send me "The Death of Christ," and "Paradise Lost, Paradise Regained." I am carrying on new work for the Saviour in my locality, and want as much light on the true word as I can receive. I was baptized in Arizona by Bro. Skeels of Shoies, Oregon.

Will send for "The Bible: Its Principles and Texts," at a later date.

Yours in the faith and promise of the coming Kingdom.

Bro. W. S. Tomlinson pledges money to equip an office for the linotype machine.

In our editorial columns of recent issues reference has been made to the need of reducing our expenses of publication, and the fact was mentioned that the directors of The Restitution were convinced that the best way to accomplish this would be to get a linotype machine.

Perhaps it may be well to explain to our readers that a linotype is a machine for setting type by which the work of four or five man can be done by one in the same time, with the advantage that the types cast new each time in the operation of the machine, and after being used in the printing of the forms for an edition of one week the types are again melted up and used in the next issue as before. This is all accomplished by a machine that only occupies about four square feet of space, and five feet high. It contains a melting pot for melting the metal by gas burner, also an electric motor which operates the mechanical parts. The operator sets the type by the operation of a keyboard, and the hot metal is cast, each line at a time, by the keyboard operation. We hope later to be able to produce a picture of this wonderful machine, so that our readers may have a better idea of its appearance and the simplicity of its operation.

The Linograph, the particular machine best suited to our requirements, will cost about $1850, all set up and in running order. Other incidental items will require $150 more, making a total of two thousand dollars to be raised.

Last week we spoke of the paper as a weekly visitor to hundreds of isolated homes where the brethren and sisters need its messages of hope and exhortations to steadfastness, where soul-hungry for spiritual food they write: "We could not live without the Dear Old Restitution."

Say, brother, do you hear what James wrote the brethren of his day? He says: "What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? Can faith save him?" This man's faith is shown to be "dead" if he speak comfortingly to the poor and hungry ones, but does not open his heart or his pocketbook to surely "the things needful to the body." Think you a brother who denies the needful spiritual food to the poor, isolated ones of the household of faith is any better than he who withholds food for the body?

Those who are friends of The Restitution have now an opportunity to show their colors. If the high standard we have maintained is your idea of gospel truth, here is the time to show your faith by your works. Will you do it? I know you will brethren. Read Auntie Wince's article again on page 5 of May 2nd issue if you think we are going to fail, and remember that "faith can move mountains of debt as well as mountains of doubt," as someone has aptly said. How it cheers the hearts of those who do the work to get a letter like the one from the aged Bro. J. F. Wagoner the week previous. It's worth quoting right here: "Enclosed find five dollars, to be used to sustain the paper that dares to defend God's truth, even at a financial loss." Thanks, brother, and may God bless you for the good wish you sent.

Remarks

As reported last month, we have been chosen to teach a class at the Y. M. C. A. I am able to report a splendid interest. They seem to be ready to take the truth, no difference what it is. I give them two lessons each evening. We meet Monday and Thursday evenings. Some have expressed a desire to be baptized already. Our baptisms at Avery have been postponed from time to time on account of sickness, but we hope to do that work next Sunday. We are now hoping our efforts will add enough to give us a good sized congregation. Pray for the people who are seeking for the truth, or rather pray that we may be able to present the truth in such a way that they can not help seeing it. Paul asked his brethren to pray that an effectual way might be opened up for him to preach the gospel. Why not we pray the same way? Maybe we try to make our own plans too much.

Yours in the work, ALMUS ADAMS.

"PASTOR" RUSSELL CAUGHT IN A TRICK

"As the great majority of the race is in the tomb, it will be necessary to bring them forth from the grave in order to testify to them the good tidings of a Savior; also that the special salvation which believers now enjoy in hope (Rom. 8:21), and the reality of which will, in the Millennial age, be revealed, also, to those who 'believe in that day', is a full release from the thraldom of sin, and the corruption of death, into the glorious liberty of children of God." This is another of Pastor (?) Russell's assertions, without proof. But the point I wish here to note is, the effort at proof, by quoting just a few words of scripture, and so placing it as to make it say what he wants to prove, when indeed the apostle had no such thought in mind. And more, he perverts the very statement which he quotes, to try to make it appear that the apostle taught that some would "believe in that day." Note please how he uses it, "And the reality of which will, in the Millennial age, be revealed, also, to those who 'believe in that day'" Note he puts "believe in that day" in quotations, and ties it onto the part, "to those who," making it appear that the quotation was on this point, that is that some would become believers in the Millennial age. But now let us look at the statement of the apostle and see what he was considering; and what he really said: "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, (what for Paul, to give the world a chance at life? Let him speak on) in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power, when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day." (2 Thess. 1:7-10). Do you say this indicates that some "believe in that day?" I answer true, but when did they become believers? Mr. Russell would have us think that they became believers in that day. But Paul forever settles this in a parenthesis, thrown in between "believe" and "in that day," showing when they were made believers. Now note it: "And to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day." So to forever cut Mr. Russell off, Paul told when they became believers. Now it always seemed to me to have been a nice place here for Paul to have told of that Millennial reign, and men to have a chance in it if they did not accept the truth in this day. Let's take one more look at this passage. I transpose the statement so as to give you the idea perfectly: "When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired, in that day, in all them that believe. (For our testimony was believed among you.)" This shows Paul's point clearly. But to cut off the four words that Russell does and put them to other words as he did, is to as plainly pervert God's truth as satan ever at any time dared to do.—J. W. CHISM, in "Firm Foundation."

HOW TO WIN OTHERS TO JESUS

By S. Roxann Wince

The matter is well worth studying. A little girl, whose story is told in The Young Pilgrim of March 4, 1916, wrought a complete change in naughty children by having them look through a magic glass and see themselves as they were in her clear cut pictures, and then as they might be. We too look through a magic glass, and beholding "the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the spirit of the Lord." Men seeing their change brought in us, if not blinded by the god of this world, must in their secret heart desire to meet with the same blessed change. They see that we "have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully," and our course commands itself to their conscience," if they would only let the light of the glorious gospel of Christ shine into their hearts. But seeing the change wrought in others, in most cases, is not enough. Men and women need to look through the magic-glass themselves—and see their soiled, miserable, burdened, helpless selves, as they now are, and those same selves, made all clean and white in the blood of Jesus. Cannot we make them see? Cannot we testify of the joy we feel in having our sins all washed away? Cannot we get hold of them, through sympathy, kindness and love? It is no use to go out with the gospel message if we do not take love with us. Sinners are quick-witted They know, without our telling them, whether we love them or not. Jesus, loved men into being good. He loved them so well, that they lived for him and died for his sake. The secret of winning souls to Jesus, does not all lie in the teaching of truth. Jesus went about doing good. He healed the sick, relieved the suffering, fed the hungry, comforted the mourning and then, taught them. Let us take the same road. It is always safe to walk in the steps of The Master.

FIX THE BLAME

It is stated that the toll of the saloons in Chicago is equivalent to an Eastland disaster every six months, with an aftermath of poverty, suffering, sorrow and crime which rests as heavily on the city as the death toll itself. The city—the whole nation—stands aghast at the Eastland horror and demands searching investigation. "Fix the blame," is the insistent cry. "Make it impossible for greed and inefficiency to cause such wholesale slaughter of human life!" Yet the death-dealing rum traffic with its devastating train of evils continues to dominate the cities of thirty of our states—protected by law. It is conservatively estimated that the legalized liquor traffic is responsible for more than 50 per cent of the taxes; 70 per cent of the pauperism; 60 per cent of insanity; 75 per cent of the divorces; 85 per cent of the crime; 50 per cent of the industrial accidents, and for 100,000 deaths per year during the last twenty-five years—a number equal to the victims of one hundred Eastland disasters every twelve months! Thanks to an awakened public conscience, the days of the great destroyer are numbered!—Sel. By Bro. Knapp.

WRONG DESIRES

The responsibility of any wrong action begins long before the action itself is committed; it deals with the source and the growth of motives. It is not enough to say we should resist the motive which urges us to do wrong. This is of course true; but it is also true that we should not have permitted the motive to attain such strength. We know not what particular temptation may assail us next month or next year; but we can so order our present life as to weaken wrong desires and withdraw the force of evil influences.

If your mind is not upon your work you cannot expect to accomplish it with any degree of satisfaction to others or credit to ourself.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF
The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:28), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). THE COMING OF CHRIST IN RELATION TO THE STABILITY OF TERRESTIAL AND CELESTIAL BODIES

A sermon by Robt. G. Huggins, delivered May 14, 1916, in Cleveland, Ohio, and reported by George B. Alldridge.

It is wonderful how faithfully God fulfills all his promises recorded for the benefit of his "Little Flock." David says: "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters. * * * * Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever" (Psa. 23).

Wesley said, "that the world was his parish." The writer wishes with all his heart that the world was our dear pastor's (Brother Huggins') parish, or at least an opportunity was given that thousands, instead of hundreds, might hear the words of life and wisdom, which fall from his lips, as each Sunday evening he preaches a masterful discourse in a series on the Lord's second coming.

This evening he gave the fourth in this series, "Second Coming of Christ in Relation to Things Celestial and Things Terrestrial." As a basis for his remarks, he selected as his text Acts 3:20, 21: "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heaven must receive, until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Paul exhorted Timothy "To preach the Word," "for the word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." The writer thought of our Lord and his two disciples on their way to Emmaus, as he opened up the scriptures to them: "And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scripture?" We can only give a few of the inspiring thoughts suggested to us upon this occasion.

God has endowed man with the faculty of reason. He has invited man in his word to exercise this faculty, "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord" (Isa 1:18). "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8:20). We can only reason then, or understand the mind of God by the study and understanding of his word. God often uses illustrations, from the material things our minds are familiar with, to impress upon our mind the lesson he is seeking to convey. Upon one occasion our Lord used as an illustration a piece of money, a coin (Matt. 20:17-21). We will do likewise.

Suppose I present to an intelligent man an old gold coin, its superscription, etc., somewhat defaced through age and use. Would he suggest that owing to its defaced and impaired condition that it had lost its commercial value? No, because he knows that behind that coin stands a responsible government, pledged to redeem it, and honor it, according to its original face value. Man is able to comprehend and understand the meaning of redemption from a commercial point of view, but is not able by analogy to understand redemption from a theological view point respecting this old earth. Paul reasons in Romans the eighth chapter that this old earth during the past six thousand years of sin and death has become defaced and marred. "Because the creature itself shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together untol now." Peter in the third chapter of Acts declares emphatically that this earth will be redeemed "when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord."

The government of Germany, France, England or the United States stands pledged to redeem the defaced coins of its realm. God the creator of the universe stands pledged, which he hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began, to redeem this earth, and fill it with the knowledge of his glory, as the waters cover the sea.

As we study the Bible we find therein recorded solemn and reiterated affimations concerning the stability of all bodies celestial and terrestrial. Poets, probably more than any other school of thinkers, have moulded our minds and opinions in things pertaining to religion. One has spoken of "The wreck of nature, and the crash of worlds;" another says:

> "The great globe itself
> Yea, all that it inherits, shall dissolve,
> And, like the baseless fabric of a vision,
> Leave not a rack behind."

This may be poetical, but it is not scriptural. If we turn to Psa. 148;6 David declares that "He hath also stablished them for ever and ever; he hath made a decree which shall not pass." In this same Psalm David, speaikng of these things that are celestial, says: "Praise ye him, all his angels, praise ye him all his hosts, praise ye him, sun and moon; praise him, all ye stars of light."

In Psalm 149 we find that the Lord taketh pleasure in his people; he will beautify the meek with salvation. Already to David he had made a covenant. In Psa. 89:34-37 God says that covenant shall be established "for ever as the moon and as a faith ful witness in heaven." So as long as the sun, the stars, and the moon endureth that covenant to David will stand. The earth itself is the home of the righteous. Solemn in Eccl. 1:4, tells us though generation after generation passes away "The earth abideth for ever." The same thought is expressed in Psa. 104:5: "Who laid the foundation of the earth that it should not be removed for ever." Isaiah to this agrees: "For thus saith the Lord that created the heaven; God himself that formed the earth, and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited" (Isa. 45:18). Read all of Psa. 37; it is the same story. Daniel believed and wrote that the kingdom God would set up upon this earth would stand for ever. (Dan. 2:44. 7:27).

The New Testament chimes in beautifully in teaching the stability of the earth. Matt. 5:5, "The meek shall inherit the earth." Paul declares that God promised Abraham that he should be the heir of the world. (Rom. 4:13). If the earth is destroyed, where is Abraham's inheritance? John says the saints are to be made 'unto our God kings and priests, and we are to reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:10). This thought he amplifies in the last three chapters of this remarkable book.

We find also that there is a settled law of the divine operations; God always works out what is to be, from what already exists.

In John 2:6-9 we find recorded our Lord's first miracle. Notice our Master utilized those elements which already existed. He commanded them to fill the waterpots with water. It was the water he turned into wine. No where in the New Testament do we read of a miracle being performed by creating something from nothing. In John 6:5-13 we find him preparing a repast out of five barley loaves, and two small fishes. Paul reasons in Col. 3:6-11, that the new man is an evolution out of the old, that we put off the old man with his deeds, and have put on the new man, which is renewed is knowledge after the image of him that created him. He tells us that this new man is a new creature (2 Cor. 5:17). In that wonderful treatise on the resurrection, Paul points out that we must first become natural before we can become spiritual; the spiritual man is evolved out of the natural (1 Cor. 15:46). In Rev. 21:1 we find that the new heaven and the new earth spring forth out of the old heaven and the old earth. The one proceeds the other, exists because of the former. Paul in Heb. 1:11, 12, points out this will be like the laying aside of an old garment, to put on a new; the old must be cast off, to make way for the new.

But some one will say, "The Bible teaches that there is to be an end of the world." Our attention is invited to Matt. 13:40; 24:3; 28:20, where no less authority than Jesus himself declares that the world will end. By consulting a good concordance we find that the word "world" as used in scripture has four meanings, a different word in the Greek language being used.

Kosmos, translated "world" means arrangement or order of things. It also means to embellish, to adorn. Hence Peter exhorts the sisters of his day, not to adorn or arrange their hair in a way to bring the truth into disrepute (1 Peter 3:3). Our Lord, using this same word, refers to the Jewish or religious world hating him. (John 7:7; 15:18, 19; 18:20). Paul in writing to the Corinthians uses the same word: "And they that use this world, as not abusing it; for the fashion of this world passeth away" (1 Cor. 7:31). This world (Cosmos) like the fashions will change or pass away. The same thought John conveyed to our mind: "And the world (Kosmos) passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever" (1 John 2:17).

The Greek word "Aion" is also translated "world;" this word means age, space, time or dispensation.

Ge, which means earth or land, and the word Oihoumene, means the habitable "Aion" is used 38 times, "oikumene" 14 times, "ge" but once, "kosmos" is used 185 times. Peter, speaking of this world or Kosmos that will end, says: "But the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men" (2 Peter 3:7). Peter refers us back to the account of the flood, and reasons by analogy, that as God back there, used the elements of water that were reserved in the heavens above and in the earth beneath to destroy theKosmos, or arrangement of society then existing, so he has reserved the elements of fire, in the earth and above the earth, the atmosphere, to destroy the Kosmos—the world and the heavens—present forms of governments that are now existing. It cannot be the earth as some people would have us believe, for God promised Noah that never again "would he smite any more every thing living, as I have done" (Gen. 8:21, 22).

Paul tells us the nature of this judgment, and upon whom it will fall: "In flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power" (2 Thes. 1:8, 9). In Rev. 19:20 we also get the same thought; read also Dan. 7:10-14.

The teaching of modern science seems to anticipate what Peter centuries ago proclaimed as the word of God. Men of science tell us respecting earthquake phenomena, that the deeper we penetrate towards the center of the earth, the warmer do we find the temperature; and that, if we could carry our investigations deep enough, we would find the interior of the earth "one rolling, restless flood, like the burning lava that pours from Vesuvius, finding its occasional safety valve in the volcano." It is evidently to this fact that the apostle speaks, when he says, (as some translate his word), "The present atmosphere and earth are stored with fire, reserved unto the day of judgment, even the perdition of eminently wicked men." Another man of science—Kinney—says: "The intense heat of the fountain and stream of lava caused an influx of cool air from every quarter. This created terrific whirlwinds, which constantly stalked about, like so many sentinels, bidding defiance to the daring visitor. These were the most dangerous of anything about the volcano. Clouds approaching were driven back, and set moving in wild confusion."

Beloved, God uses the things that are to bring forth the things that are to be. Seeing then that in our day the elements of destruction are being held back by the mighty hand of God, as the elements of destruction were held back in Noah's day, while the Ark was being constructed, "what manner of persons ought ye to be in holy deportment and piety, looking for and earnestly awaiting the coming of the day of God, in which the aerial regions shall be let loose (to rush in fiery whirlwinds), and the elements being fired shall melt."

Beloved brethren, let us not seek to discount the Bible prophecies concerning the awful effects and realities of the coming time of trouble (Dan. 12:1). But let us read and read again, until they burn themselves into our very being the words of Peter (2 Peter 3:11-13), urging us to holy living, to be diligent, always abounding in the work of the Lord, so that when he comes, we may be found of him in peace without spot, and blameless in love, is my prayer.

"THE END IS NOT YET"

Matt. 24:6

The caution by the Master to his disciples, that his coming and the end of the world or age "is not yet," was necessary. And later when the Church of Thessalonica became exercised on the same question, Paul takes the occasion to instruct the church in the following language: 'Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition")2 Thess. 2:3). Paul informs the Thessalonians that certain prophecies concerning "the man of sin," must be fulfilled before his return. And to the mind of the writer, conditions are very similar now. Some say, "Christ may come any day, and that all the prophetic utterances to be fulfilled before he comes, are already fulfilled."

It is the purpose of this article to examine some of the prophecies, to see if there are not some events yet to transpire before we can truthfully say Christ's coming is the next event to transpire, according to the prophecies. In Ezek. 38 there is the account of an invasion of the holy land by Gog. In Gen. 10:2 Magog appears as the second son of Japheth, "Ma" being regarded as a prefix significant of a country. In which case, Gog contains the original element of the name. History represents Gog's posterity as having settled in the territory adjacent to the Caspian and Black Seas. Ezekiel says of Gog: "In the latter years thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel." With Gog is "Persia, Ethiopia and Libya * * * Gomer and all his bands." Opposed to them is "Sheba and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish, with all the young lions thereof" (Eze. 38:8-13). In Dan. 11:40-45 Gog appears as the King of the North with a mighty army, many ships and having power over the treasures of gold and silver.

In the present titanic war England and Russia are fighting together; but in the last war just before the standing up of Michael, they will be opposed to each other; the lion power opposed to Gog. In the common course of events it will take Russia about two decades to recunerate from the effects of the present war; to build a great navy, "many ships," and to have "power over the treasures of gold and silver" (Dan. 11:40-45).

When the question is asked, "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders (Dan. 12:7)? the answer came, "It shall be for a time, times and an half." That is the time of the rule of the Papacy: A. D. 610 to 1870. Another period is given 1290, and starting at 610, the same point as the 1260, we get 1900. Now you ask what marks the ending of that period? The answer is, the starting of the Zionist movement, and the organizing of the Socialist party—two very important movements. The last figure is given 1335, in which a blessing is pronounced on him arriving at that point. Now 1335, commencing at 610, brings us to 1945. If 610 is not the starting of the periods, then none is given. But as said before, about two decades will give Russia time to measure up to the picture of her given in Ezekiel and in Daniel.

Now is there anything in current events that indicates that Russia will in 20 years or so fill the prophetic mold assigned her by the prophets? It was said by a British statesman, when Germany was pressing the Russians so hard last fall, that Germany is forging a sword for her own destruction. Certain it is that this war will cause Russia to prepare for the future. Russia has vast mineral and agricultural resources. Only about one month ago the press gave the account of a Russian agent in this country buying hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of gold mining machinery to be used in Siberia, where she has vast gold mining territory, the richest in the world. The "end is not yet," until Russia has filled her destiny according to the prophetic picture.

Again, before the Lamb stands on the Mount Zion (Rev. 14:1) the image of the leopard beast has to be made by the order of the two-horned symbol of Rev 13:11. Let not those claiming to be saints of God think that they will be translated and enter the kingdom without being tested to prove their loyalty to the King.

GEO. FRANCIS.

The man who lives an easy life, who never nerves himself to endure toil, to overcome difficulty, to strive persistently for any object, may be constantly surrounded by external beauty, yet its impressions will necessarily grow fainter and fainter. Fancying that his leisure will afford him ample opportunities for cultivating his sense of beauty, he will find to his disappointment that instead of growing more acute, it becomes more dull, and that beauty itself palls upon the nature which refuses to climb the hill of difficulty.

Habits of neatness are partly natural and partly acquired. It should be the aim of every father and mother to teach neatness to their children and insist upon it.

COMMANDMENTS OF GOD

"Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus" (Rev. 14:12).

What does the Bible set forth as the "Commandments of God?" "And the Lord spake unto you out of the midst of the fire; * * * and he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commendments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone" (Deut. 4:12, 13). Were these ten commandments the complete law of God? "These words the Lord spake unto all your assembly in the Mount out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice; and he added no more. And he wrote them in two tables of stone" (Deut. 5:22). ("Bible Readings," pages 108, 109).

It seems from these statements that the Seventh Day people hold that the ten commandments were all the commandments that God ever gave. Not one of the ten commandments commands us to love God, or any one else; yet Jesus says: "And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment. And the second is like it, namely this, thou shalt love thy neighbor as they self. There is none other commandment greater than these" (Mark 12:30, 31).

Neither one of these commandments is found among the ten. If the ten commandments make God's complete law, why were these added?

But let us see whether God gave other commandments besides the ten. "He that rejecteth me and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the words that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day. For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting. Whatsoever I speak, therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak" (Jno. 12:48-50).

Here Jesus says, "The Father gave me a commandment, so I speak." Lord, if the ten commandments are God's complete law, and he never added another, which one of the ten did he give you? 'This is my commandment (given by God to Christ, but not one of the ten), that ye love one another, as I have loved you" (Jno. 15:12). Did Jesus ever command any one to keep the seventh day?

"If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of God" (1 Cor. 37). Paul gave the following commandment about keeping days: "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days (Col. 2:16). If we keep God's commandments given to us through his son and the apostles, and the faith of Christ, we shall have right to enter the city. In Psalms 19:7 we find these words: "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple.' The Seventh Day advocates say the word "law" as found in this passage, means the ten commandments. Where is the proof? Which is it that saves us, law or gospel? "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:15, 16). "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth to the Jew first, and also to the Greek" (Rom. 1:16). Turning back to Psa. 9:7 we find the margin uses the word "doctrine" instead of "law." This agrees with 1 Tim. 4:16: "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee."

THE DESTINY OF THE EARTH

No. 1.

Of late I have discovered that there are many conditionalists who teach that our earth will be burned into ashes, and out of the ashes a new one created; and there seems to be some support for the theory in the Bible, but I think that the whole of the Word taken together is opposed to that idea. We learn from Isaiah that "God himself formed the earth and made it: he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited" (Chap. 45:18). David tells us that it was the Lord "Who laid the foundation of the earth, that it should not be removed for ever" (Psa. 104:5). Solomon says: "One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth abideth for ever" (Eccl. 1:4). David again declares: "Thy faithfulness is unto all generations; thou hast established the earth, and it abideth" (Psa. 119:90).

The foregoing texts of God's eternal word seem to teach that this very earth was created to be inhabited, and abide for ever; then it was not created to be depopulated and destroyed.

God told Abraham, to "look from the place where thou are (in Canaan) northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward: for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever" (Gen. 13:14, 15). Again: "And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God" (Gen. 17:8).

According to Paul, the seed here spoken of is Christ. Then Abraham, and Christ are to possess the land of Canaan eternally: but the land of Canaan is a part of the earth; and if the earth is to be burned up, it also would be burned, and hence the promise would be untrue (Gal. 3:16).

Then we must conclude that the earth is not to be burned, but abide to all eternity as a home for Abraham and his seed. Abraham would not know where to find the land of Canaan, or the material of which it was formed, if it was burned to ashes and re-created; and some go so far as to assert that there will be no ocean on the new created earth, which would make it impossible to locate places that were before the destruction. Then we must conclude that for Abraham to have the land God promised him this very earth must exist as long as he is to possess it, for ever.

Solomon says: "The righteous shall be recompensed in the earth, much more the wicked and the sinner" (Prov. 2:31). Recompense, "reward or pay." Then the reward of the righteous is to be given them in the earth; the reward is to be eternal life in an eternal abiding place. But it is in the earth, hence the earth is not to be destroyed.

'The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever" (Psa. 37:29). What land? may be asked. What land existed at the time the promise was given? The land we now live on. Then was it not the land promised? It certainly must have been, for the good people of David's day knew of no other, and if there was another promised it should have been stated here. If the righteous are to dwell in the eath for ever, as David declares, it can never be destroyed.

God's promises to Israel prove that the earth is not to be burned up, for he says: "And I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God." What land did God give Israel? The land of Canaan. If Israel is never to be pulled up out of that land after they are returned to it, will they not remain in it eternally? And that would make it their eternal abiding place (Amos 9:14).

Again: "And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, they and their children, and their children's children for ever" (Ezek. 37:25). "In that day, saith the Lord, will I assemble her that halted, and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted; and I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation; and the Lord shall reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever" (Mic. 4:6, 7). Where is Mt. Zion, but upon old mother earth? Then the earth is not to be destroyed.

"The moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mt. Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." This shows that the Lord will reign in Jerusalem when he reigns before his ancients: which are no doubt the holy ones of past ages, and the reign is the kingdom in which Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are to be seen by the wicked Jews who rejected Jesus (Isa. 24:23). His reign then is on earth, as Jerusalem is on the earth, hence the earth is not to be destroyed.

"And the Lord smell a sweet savior; and the Lord said in his heart, I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake; for the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth; neither will I again smite any more everything living, as I have done. While the earth remaineth, seed time and harvest (time), and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and night and day shall not cease." When God smote everything living in the flood, he smote only what was on earth, not the living things of heaven, or other planets, but the living things of the earth. Now he says I will no more do that, hence he will never make a bonfire of the earth; for if he did everything on it would be smitten off it.

The kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdoms of our Lord, and his Christ (Rev. 11:15). Christ's kingdom will have no end (Lu. 1:33). Could the kingdoms of this world exist if the earth was destroyed? Not by any means; then the earth is not to be destroyed, and Jesus is to reign on the very earth we see now. But some one will ask, What about some texts which speak of the earth being destroyed? We will try to answer that question in our next article. The word is one harmonious whole, and will explain itself.

"DUE TIME"

"Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time whereunto I am ordained a minister and an apostle * * * a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and verity." This shows that Paul was ordained to do this teaching because this "due time" had already come. But why were you ordained a preacher, Paul? "Whereof I was made a minister * * * to the intent that now unto the principalities and powers * * might be known through the church the manifold wisdom of God" (Eph. 3:7-10). Paul says it was to be made known now. But again: "Paul, a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the faith of God's elect and the acknowledging o fthe truth which is after godliness; in hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began; but hath in due times manifested his word through preaching, which is committed unto me according to the commandment of God our Savior" (Titus 1:1-3). This settles it. The ransom was for all, and was to be testified to all "in due time," for which Paul was made a minister, and did testify it "in due time." So then Mr. Russell's "key" is broken, for the "due time" was even back as far as Paul's day; and Paul said he testified it "in due time." But this "due time," Mr. Russell calls the "key." But it will serve him not at all, for the "due time" is now, says Paul; and that agrees with all of God's warnings. "Now is the accepted time, today is the day of salvation. Today if ye hear his voice, harden not your hearts," is the solemn warning given by Jehovah himself.—Selected.

"TRIFLES"

Friendship and society are precious boons to mankind. It is impossibe to over-estimate the benefit and happiness which are drawn from this source. Character and congeniality, respect and sympathy should be their foundation-stones. Yet how often are these treated like trifles in comparison with the dress, the manners, the house, the equipage, the wealth, or the social standing of those who are chosen or rejected! What depths of affection, what fountains of joy are thus wasted in mistaking trifles for realities!

It is better to be laughed at than ruined—better to have a wife who cheapens and examines everything and buys nothing than to be impoverished by one whose vanity and thoughtlessness will purchase everything, but whose pride will cheapen nothing.

EDITORIAL

"Behold! I stand at door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me" (Rev. 3:20). "The door" in this text has no handle outside. It is so hinged that it opens from within outwards. Translate this metaphor into fact and you have the thought that you only can open the door and accord to Christ a hearty welcome. The whole responsibility, dear reader, of accepting or rejecting Christ and his Word, lies with yourself.

If we live in God we live in quiet and peace. Some workmen in London in a dense fog happened to be engaged in repairing the weathercock upon a tall steeple, and when they got to the top they found themselves in the sunshine, with blue sky above them, and all the noise of the city below their feet. If you set your affections on things above, and climb high enough, you will get above the agitations and distractions of this mortal life. "He is on my right hand, I shall not be moved."

We have received a 95 page booklet entitled "Theosophy: Its Theories vs. Bible Truths." Its subject matter consists of six lectures given by Bro. George Aldridge, of Aucland, N. Z. Price, one shilling. The booklet should be placed in the hands of all who are influenced by Theosophy. The six lecture subjects are on the following themes:

1. Is Man an Immortal Soul?: Testing Theosophic Proofs.
2. Reincarnation: A Pagan and Antichristian Doctrine.
3. The Theosophical Dogma of Karma.
4. The Mahatmas: The Great Souls of Theosophy.
5. Theosophy's Coming World-Teacher.
6. Can a Christian be a Theosophist?

"CHRIST SENT ME NOT TO BAPTIZE"

An Elliptical Statement

Brother Huggins: Who did Paul's baptizing? He says, "Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel." (1 Cor. 1:17). He admits he baptized Crispus and Gaius, and the household of Stephanas. When Paul preached at Antioch and the Gentiles believed, all that were ordained to eternal life believed. Perhaps Barnabus did the baptizing at that time, and Silas perhaps baptized while with him. Paul must have made many converts in his long service in the ministry; even when he was bound with a chain. It has puzzled me to find who baptized his many converts, while in bonds and the two years in his own hired house. This I know is not essential to salvation, and I am almost ashamed to bother you with such a question, but if the Bible reveals it I have not found it.

Yours in hope,
E. W. KNAPP.

Editor's Comments

Because Paul said to the Corinthians, "Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel," the "natural man who receiveth not the things of the spirit of God" (1 Cor. 2:14), has rashly concluded that the great apostle who wrote more than half of the New Testament, depreciates the ordinance of baptism. Those who interpret the apostle's words in this sense overlook and ignore the facts and circumstances in Corinth which called forth his words. The brethren in that city had unscripturally broken up into several factions. each adhering to a different leader—Paul, Apollos, Cephas and Christ. Fitting his language to this unscriptural situation, he asks in indignation: "Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized into the name of Paul" (vs. 13) ? The last question in this series of interrogations rests upon the assumption that baptism had been administered, not indifferently as to a part of the Corinthian only, but to all of them. "Were ye baptized into the name of Paul?" would be a rointless question unless they had been baptized. Let those who claim Paul is disparging baptism here, note this fact with careful attention. The apostle now goes on to thank God that he had administered baptism in but few cases in Corinth, and he also states why: "I thank God that I baptized none of you but Crispus and Gaius, lest any one should say I had baptized in mine own name." Seeing that some of the brethren had let go their grasp on Christ to the insane extent of blind attachment to men, and were "not holding the Head" (Col. 2:19), and were boasting that they were "of Paul," they might, had they been baptized by him, have set up the claim that they were baptized into his name. The possible abuse of his baptizing them, had he been the administrator of it, is what makes him thankful to God that he had baptized so few of them. It was the abuse of baptism, not its right use, that Paul condemns. Of course Brother Knapp does not need these words of exposition, but other readers may profit by them.

Now for a few words about matters that do trouble our brother. He makes a mistake we think, and a very common one even among brethren, of supposing that the words, "Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preah the gospel," are an absolute and full statement. Viewed in this light it practically prohibits Paul from being the administor of baptism in any instance; at least he was "not sent to baptize." Then his imprisonments seem incompatible with his officiating as the administrator of the ordinance. Assuming these things as true, sends us off hunting for some one else to baptize his converts, and also sends us on many other profitless and vain errands. Now all these suppositions and perplexities are self-imposed, and we can shake ourselves free from their embarrassment by taking the statement as it was intended by the writer, namely, as an elliptical text. It is not absolute and full, but relative and elliptical. An elliptical text is one which has a part understood, but not expressed. Here is a sample of hundreds that might be quoted: "He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that sent me" (John 12:44). Here is an obvious ellipsis. "He that believeth on me" makes the one of whom it is said a believer, certainly; yet the words which immediately follow deny this: "Believeth not on me!" The latter clause of the verse denies absolutely the first clause. Is this "a contradiction" of skepticism? By no means. It is simply an elliptical statement, and when we supply the ellipsis in parenthesis the passage is luminous in meaning: "He that believeth on me, believeth not on me (only), but (also) on him that sent me." Paul's elliptical statement about baptism is rounded out by filling in the ellipsis as follows: "Christ sent me not to baptize (only), but to preach the gospel (also)." That this is the correct reading we aver for the reasons which follow.

1. Paul was Sent to Preach the Gospel. That he was sent to proclaim the gospel is understood by all to be asserted in the text; but his imprisonments would seem as effectually to hinder this laudable part of his work as they would prevent him from baptizing. His repeated imprisonments, so numerous and recurrent, instead of being an insuperable hinderence to his work of preaching the gospel, powerfully accelerated it (Phil. 1:12-14). Sometimes he was placed in "the inner prison" and his feet made fast in the stocks, but singing, praising God, preaching the gospel, and baptisms marched on without interruption (Acts 16:24-34). At other times a centurion kept him, as when Felix said to Paul's guard, "Let him have liberty, and forbid none of his acquaintances to minister or come unto him" (Acts 24:23). Under such adverse conditions preaching the gospel was under difficulties, of course; but rising over the mounts of human improbabilities, and mountains of impossibilities, Paul preached the gospel "before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel" (Acts 9:15).

2. Paul was Sent to Baptize as Well as Preach the Gospel. Of course you want the proof to sustain this position, and here it is: Preaching the gospel and baptism are united in the closest bond in Mark 16:15, 16: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized, shall be save." Matthew's version of the commission more clearly still requires the ones who preached the gospel to baptize also: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit" (Matt. 28:19). Now Paul was "sent to preach the gospel" under the terms of this same commission. These are his own words: "Be not moved away from the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature under heaven (quoting the very words of the commission recorded in Mark 16:15, 16, as the reader will please observe); whereof I Paul am made a minister" (Col. 1:23). The original commission under which Paul here says he was "sent to preach the gospel," required him to baptize as well as preach. And when this original commission was reiterated to Paul in Acts 26:16-18, "the forgiveness of sins," a blessing contingent upon baptism, forms a distinct item in its application to Paul. The very commission which gave Paul authority to preach the gospel, also gave him authority to baptize those whom he converted.

3. And Finally, Paul Did Baptize. The proof of this statement is found in the very text which is quoted to prove he did not: "I baptized Crispus and Gaius * * * * I baptized also the household of Stephanas" (1 Cor. 1:14, 16).

30,000 ERRORS

A few years since Higher Critics made much of the claim that there were 30,000 errors in the Bible. Now, we hear nothing of them or about them. Why? Because men of piety and learning have shown to their confusion of face that the "various readings" of the different MSS. and versions, while numerous, are very unimportant; and that the Hebrew Bible of today is substantially the same as the recension made by Ezra and others from the Synagogue Rolls. These were the "Textus Receptus" of our Lord's day. These Rolls, consisting of the Pentateuch, Megilloth, and Haphtaroh. together with the Greek translation, are the groundwork from which our versions of the Scriptures have been derived. Our different versions have "various readings," we grant; they contain many alterations in language, we concede; but in all instances of discrepancy the meaning of the text remains the same. To illustrate and enforce the truth of our affirmation, we now give the "various readings" of Heb. 11:1, from Wycliffe's translation in 1830 A. D., to the Twentieth Century New Testament, in 1904 A. D. Put on your glasses now, reader, and try your best to see if in all the "various readings" of Heb. 11:1 you can discover an "error" of Higher Criticism, a "discrepancy' 'of Josephiteism, a "lie" of Infidelity. If you fail then you will see that our representation is correct, viz., that while the different versions vary the language, the thought expressed is precisely the same.

1. "But feith is the substance of things that ben to be hopid, and an argument of thingis no apperynge" (Wycliffe and Purvey's Trans., 1830-1388, A. D.)

2. "Faith is a sure confidence off thynges which are hoped for, and a certayntie of thynges which are not sene" (Tyndale's Trans., 1526, A. D.)

3. "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen" (Authorized Version, 1611, A. D.).

STEALING A HUSBAND

Dorthy Dix

In a scandal in high life that is now before the public, the aggrieved wife charges in her suit against the Other Woman that the said Other Woman alienated her husband's affections from her "by the use of blandishments and flatteries."

Precisely so. That's practically always the way it is done. The recipe for being a siren is as simple as the rule for making cake. A woman has only to take a cupful of the sugar of flattery, a few spoons of the butter of softwords, a little of the milk of human comradeship, a couple of egg shells full of sympathy, throw in a little flavor of pleasantness, and stir all well together, and bake in the warm oven of affection, and she's got a confection that will make any man come and eat out of her hand.

Instead of asking for our sympathy, a wife should be ashamed to admit that some other woman has alienated her husband's affections from her by the use of blandishments and flatteries. What was she doing that she didn't beat the other woman to it? She had the best chance, the inside track, and it's her own fault if she didn't make use of her opportunities.

Good women always profess to believe that bad women have some magic formula by which they lure men away from their own firesides. The only conjure that any woman, good or bad, knows how to work on a man is simply to be pleasant, and sympathetic and admiring, and rub his fur the right way instead of roughing it the wrong way, as is the common custom of wives.

There is nothing mysterious or occult about the charm of the charmer. It is a simple illustration of the law of supply and demand. A man wants some cheerful female companionship. If his wife is a chronic grouch, who is always complaining and whining at home, he goes away from home and hunts up some woman who laughs and is jolly.

The man craves flattery. His wife is the leader of the anvil chorus and never misses a chance to give him a knock that leaves his vanity bruised and bleeding. He finds some woman who jollies him to the limit and he makes a fool of himself over her in consequence thereof.

Perhaps the man is heart-hungry for sympathy and understanding. If his wife can't abide anything that he likes, and yawns in his face when he tries to talk to her about his business or profession, why, sooner or later, he meets up with a woman who does comprehend his aspirations and who fans the flame of his ambition, and there's another case of affinities.—Lousiville Herald.

COMMUNICATIONS

From M. W. Perrine

Dear Brethren:

I enclose $1.00 more of the Lord's money. Use it as your judgment may direct and to the glory of God. I am behind in my subscription to The Restitution. If you see fit credit it on that account. It surprises one how money accumulates when we turn in the tithes to the Lord. We want to make haste, for the Lord is coming right soon.

Yours for Christ.

From A. E. Renner

Dear Bro. Huggins:

Enclose find money order to the amount of three dollars to be applied on my subscription to "the dear old Restitution." I love the dear old paper more and more as it stands firm for the truth, not changing with every wind of doctrine that comes along.

From Susan A. Howard

Dear Restitution:

I am as anxious as anyone to keep the dear paper going, so I am sending in payment for this year and a little besides to help the paper. I think anyone who would stop their paper because you upheld the word of God, doesn't love God's word as they should; and to think that anyone could deny the Sonship of Christ! God's word is full of it, the Old Testament as well as the New. The paper is all the preaching I get. I love it, and I am willing to do all I can to help it. I have been very sick this spring. Once before I lost all consciousness. I said to myself, "If I were only good enough, I should have but a little while to lay in the grave before Jesus would call me from it." Oh, dear brothers and sisters, do pray for me that I may prove faithful, for no one knows how hard it is for me to live alone in the faith. Not even my husband is in the faith, but I am going to keep on trying to interest him. Even my little daughter does not want to read the Bible or The Restitution. I have tryed my best to get her interested in both. She is old enough to realize what they are. I was in hopes she would try to live right and be baptized, because we know we must live up to God's word or be lost. In the paper of April 25 I saw under "Editorial Comments" where you had a Restitution Linotype Fund. You can use the money I am sending for that, or to help send the paper to others.

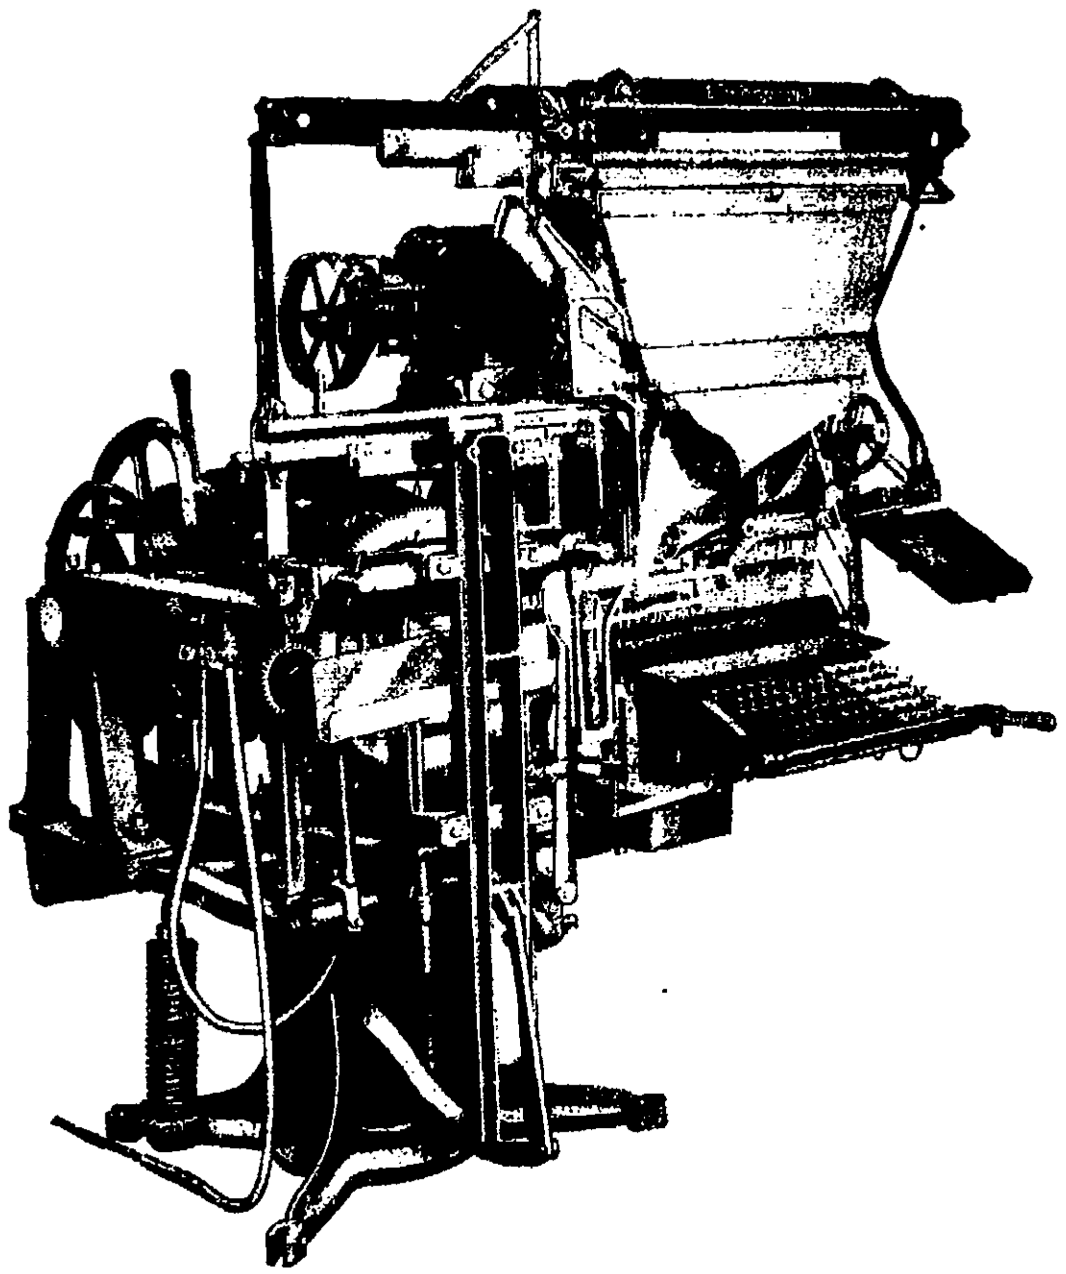
THE RESTITUTION LINOTYPE MACHINE

By S. Roxana Wince



He who is in the Lord's army and under orders from the King, is not only going to pray that the cause of the King may prosper, but he is going to work with all the might that is in him that the thing for which he prays, may be accomplished. God does not answer the prayers of those who sit on the fence with folded hands.

It takes money to buy things, and money can only be earned by work. We must earn this machine by the labor of our hands, for we do not care to beg. Begin planning now. Your hands may seem already full, but your time is the Lord's, and surely some portion of it ought to be set aside to be used for him. The farmer can plant an extra patch of corn, the housewife, raise a few more chickens, or put up some lovely jelly from the otherwise wasted crabapples. Our city brethren and sisters can try the talent plan—take a dollar and see how much they can gain by trading. A little Southern girl was the recipient of five cents. She bought a yard of calico and made a sun-bonnet, and sold it for twenty-five cents, and so, she kept on until she had enough saved to buy seed-potatoes to plant a large patch. When her crop was harvested and sold, she was the proud possessor of forty dollars.

If I remember correctly, this little trader was only ten years old.

We can work, and plan, and trade to get things for ourselves, for this brief earthly life; why not toil still more earnestly for the things that will never pass away?

If I am not very much mistaken "the night when no man can work" is about to settle down on our country, and there is great need of haste. "Let us walk quickly, friend,

Work with our might while lasts life's little day,
Help some fallen brother on the way
And God go with us, friend."

OBITUARY

A. Stillson

Asher Stillson was the second of a family of nine children, born to Seymour and CynthiaPalmer Stillson, who came from New York State in 1832, settling near South Bend, Indiana. It was at this place that Asher was born October 16, 1835, on what was then called Palmer's Prairie, (now Sumption Prairie). Asher grew to manhood and united with the Church of God when a young man, being baptized by Mead Catlin. Inmay, 1859, he was united in marriage to Helen Burch, who died in March, 1872. To them were born five children. Eva and Cynthia died in childhood. Elmer of Nappanee, Indiana, Dennis and Charles of Bremen, Indiana, now mourn the death of their father. On December 28, 1874, he was united in marriage to Mariah Dipert who died February 13, 1914. To this union were born five children. Andrew, who died in childhood, Martha Jackson of Walkerton, Indiana, Elsie Von Deik of Chicago, James Stillson of Plymouth, Indiana, and Ethel Hintz of Marshall, Texas. Besides these he has two sisters Mrs. Charles Kanaar, and Mrs. J. D. Field, both of Plymouth, twenty grandchildren and four great-grand-children.

Mr. Stillson was a member of the 73rd Ind. Regiment and served three years in the Civil War. He escaped unharmed except a slight wound in the hand at the battle of Stone River. He was promoted to First Sargent of his company, and was honorably discharged in 1865.

Last November, Mr. Stillson went to Texas to spend the winter there with his daughter, and enjoyed his usual good health until about two weeks ago. He died there May 3, 1916, aged 80 years 7 months and 17 days.

He was of an amiable disposition and made many friends during his life. He lived out his allotted time, and although we mourn his death, we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for we have that blessed assurance that the Lord will come and raise the dead and change the living that they may be fashioned like unto his most glorious body, and live the life eternal. It is with this expectation that we lay him away to await the coming of the Master. Lord, come quickly.

FLOYD STILLSON.

Funeral services were held from the residence in Plymouth by song and prayer and a short Goodbye Service by the G. A. R. Post. Then the funeral party went to Grovertown, his old home, where the regular services were held from the church. A large audience of his old friends and neighbors filled the house in witness of their esteem and sympathy. After recounting the deeds of our brother in eulogy of his life, we spoke to the living from Gen. 3: 4. The church choir rendered appropriate and touching music for the occasion. Much love for the departed was expressed in the many beautiful floral tributes offered.

MICHIGAN CONFERENCE ANNOUNCEMENT

To the brethren scattered throughout Michigan and else where, greetings.

The annual conference and Bible school of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith in Michigan will convene on Thursday of the third full week in June, and will be held at Blanchard, Isabella Co., Thursday evening; June 22, 1916, and continue over the following Sunday.

The Bible School will be held immediately following the annual conference. It is expected that Bro. S. J. Lindsay of Oregon, Illinois, will be at the conference and Bible school to teach the word of truth, assisted in the good work by the president of the conference, Bro. F. V. Blakely, of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Bro. B. W. Woodward and Sr. M. A. Woodward of Dutton, Mich. It is the desire of all who have been in the habit of attending these gatherings that all churches send delegates with reports of their conditions, to this meeting. All interested in the Lord's work are earnestly entreated to come to the feast of good things from the word of God.

F. V. BLAKELY, President.
EMMA JACKMAN, Secretary.

REPORT OF MEETING

The Church of God near Moriah, Illinois, was accorded the privilege and pleasure of an over-Sunday meeting April 29-30, conducted by Bro. L. F. Conner.

Hebrews 1 and 2 chapters were used as a basis for the discourses and truths. Both new and old truth were divulged, which tend to strengthen us along the way.

Brother Conner has arranged to be with us on the second Saturday and Sunday of each month throughout the summer, and any who are isolated, living near, would do well to attend these services; and we extend a welcome to any who may come.

AMY V. WEAVER, Sec'y.

We should never be content. There is always something to alter, to abandon, or to pursue; and in that honest earnest work which our consciences approve we shall find neither room, time, nor inclination for the idle and selfish spirit of dissatisfaction which paralyses our powers, destroys our happiness, and renders us unable to bless or to help our fellow-men.

NOTICE

Your subscription to "Words of Life," a monthly magazine advocating eternal life only through Jesus the Christ, at his coming and kingdom, is earnestly solicited. One copy, 37 cents per year. Twelve copies to one address, 25 cents a copy per year. Will be greatly pleased to see your name on my list. Sample copies gladly supplied on application.

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852
A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF
The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21, Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the Saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18), and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). THE TIME OF THE END

Said the Rev. Alfred Bryant, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Niles, Mich., A. D., 1856: "The chronological data which the prophecies give, furnish intimations that the time is short when all that is predicted shall come to pass.

"One of the most prominent periods fixed for the termination of the 1260 years so repeatedly brought to view in the prophecies of Daniel and John is 1866. This clearly does not mark the time of the coming of the Son of Man for that time, none can know; but according to prophecy, within the limits of four years from that time, preceding, or succeeding, may be expected a great crisis in the political affairs of nations, and great revolutions, which may dissolve the relation between Church and State in Europe, and have a most important bearing upon the Jewish people in preparing the way for their ultimate restoration in part to their own land."

Mr. Bryant was right as to the year 1866, being a pivotal year, for with that year, the Pope's power over "the States of the Church," ceased and two years after, his power over his own capital. And the years 1867 and 1868, being alsopivotal years, were marked by awful earthquakes, tidal waves, cyclonic storms, volcanic eruptions, falling bolides (one a mile in diameter), areclites, destructive floods, and sinking islands. Countless ships were wrecked, towns entirely overthrown, hundreds of thousands of lives destroyed, and property to the value of millions engulfed.

But Mr. Bryant, father said: "Precisely what course these political events are to take would be hazardous to state, for it is not revealed, but there is some intimation in prophecy that Russia is yet to gain an entire ascendency over continental Europe and have all the powers thereof under its control in accomplishing its vast schemes of ambition and war."

And in its fully developed form Russia will probably constitute the Gog of Scripture—Gog the prince of Rosh, Meshech and Tubal, who is described by Ezekiel, and who will be destroyed in the great battle of Armageddon, as predicted.

"The present aspect in Europe looks suspiciously in this direction, but whatever may be true in respect to these things, there can be no doubt that according to prophecy, we are on the eve of political revolutions in which probably blood will flow as described in Apocalyptic vision. But these things as they come to pass will only hasten on the day of deliverance and salvation.

The very general expectation upon the minds of most persons that we are approaching some great crisis is an indication of a coming Savior" ("time of the End," page 67).

I chanced upon this selection while looking up other data and thinking it worthy of a place in The Restitution, have copied it. Mr. Bryant's view as to Russia's becoming the dominant power in Europe is unique. I do not know what to think of it. Time will tell. It does not look so now. But if Russia and Germany unite, as they may, when the advance is made on Palestine, what then?

We are not to worry. God has said, "O Israel, thou shalt not be forgotten by me," and Israel will triumph in the end. But Brother J. P. Weethee, of Athens, Ohio, who wrote "The Eastern Question," was confident that Gomer is not Germany, and if not, we cannot find any place for her in the Ezekiel prophecy.

S. ROXANNA WINCE.

REPLY TO A SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS

In reply to your questions, we consider that God has made several covenants with man. The first was a covenant of works, made with the first Adam. To him he promised life upon condition of perfect obedience, while death was threatened as the penalty for transgression. He transgressed and died. Another covenant with Noah. He obeyed as God commanded, and was saved from destruction in the flood.

But the covenant you refer to in Ex. 34:27, 28 was the ten commandments given to Moses and other laws that they were obliged to follow. The Prophet Jeremiah speaking for God, says, "I will make a new covenant with Israel." Why? Because they broke the covenant that was made (Jer. 31:31, 32). Paul in writing to the Hebrews, says there now obtains a "superior service, even by so much as he is the Mediator of a better covenant, which has been instituted on better promises. For if that first one was faultless, a place would not be sought for a second. By saying new he has rendered the first one old" (Heb. 8:6, 7, 13), (Diaglott translation).

The rites and sacrifices of the law are inferior to the perfection of the sacrifice of Christ, "And for this cause he is the meditator of the New Testament, or covenant, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance" (Heb. 9:15-18). "But ye are come unto Mount Zion . . . . . and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant" (Heb. 12:22, 24). "For verily he took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham" (Heb.

1:4, 2:16). "That ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints" (Eph. 1:19).

Christ inherits a blessing. Inherit: to possess blessing, gift, benefit or advantage, divine favor. How does he inherit? "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds, as of many: but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ" (Gal. 3:16).

Through the God of peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do his will (Heb. 13:20). He shall speak peace unto the heathen, and his dominion shall be from sea even unto sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth (Zech. 9:9, 11). This is Christ's inheritance, and is a blessing. God's gift is eternal life through Christ (Rom. 6:23). There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved (Acts 4:12). Whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins (Acts 10:43). For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth (Rom. 1:16). Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth (Rom. 10:4).

We were under the law till Christ came. But Christ freed us from the law. When the fullness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law; for a purpose; which was to redeem them that were under the law. What for? "That we might receive the adoption of sons" (Gal. 4:4, 5). The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many (Matt. 20: 28). Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us (Heb. 9:12).

No man is justified by the works of the law. If righteousness came by the law then Christ died in vain. Then how is a man justified? The just shall live by faith, and the law is not of faith. There is no promise of life in the law. "The covenant that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was 430 years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect. If the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise, but God gave it to Abraham by promise. Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions." For how long? "Till the seed should come, to whom the promise was made." If there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law. The law does not give eternal life, but it was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ that we might be justified by faith. But after faith is come we are no longer under the law. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise (Gal. 3).

We cannot be heirs to the promise through the law, so it was necessary to establish a new covenant to fulfill the promise God made to Abraham; and as Christ is the seed, he is the rightful heir, and the inheritance and the blessing both belong to him. And if we obey God, and accept his promise of eternal life through Christ we will be saved. That is our only hope. There is no hope or promise of eternal life in the law. As we greatly deside eternal life, we reject the law, and obey the gospel.

E. W. KNAPP.

DO YOU PRAY IN SECRET?

I know not how it is with the reader, but I know that many persons are not in the habit of secretprayer. They have no closet, no place of retirement to which they daily resort, and where, when they have shut the door, they pray to their Father which is in secret, and in solitude seek the society of God. I am acquainted with one who for many years neglected this duty, which all religions recognize, and which even nature teaches. Sometimes he read the Bible, and no part of it oftener than the sermon on the mount. Of course, he must have frequently read those words of the great Teacher, in which, taking it for granted that his hearer prays, he tells him what he should do when he prays: "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet"—the person is supposed to have some place called his closet, to which he is accustomed to retire for prayer—"and when thou shut thy door, pray to thy Father which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly." He read this, but he gave no heed to it. During all this period, he asked nothing, though he received much. God did not neglect him, though he neglected God; and as he prayed none, so he praised none. Sometimes, indeed, he said, "Thank God;" but it was said in so much thoughtlessness, that it was set down profaneness rather than praise. It is true, at that time he would never allow that he was ungrateful; but he was, and now he sees that he was. He lived and moved and had his being in God, and yet was without God in the world. Many and precious were the thoughts of God towards him; but in all his thoughts, God was not. Not even when he was in trouble, did he ask, "Where is God my maker?" I wonder the Lord had not become weary of bestowing his bounty on such a one. It is because he is the Lord, and changes not. But for that, the person of whom I speak would have been consumed long ago. There is nothing he admires more than the long suffering of God towards him, and he hopes to spend eternity in admiring it, and exchanging thoughts with his fellow-redeemed on this and kindred subjects.

He supposes that he is not the only one who has neglected secret prayer. He fears that this neglect is even now the habit of many. They are shy of God. I know not why they should be. He is doing every thing to woo and win them, and to secure their confidence. So much has he done, that he asks—and I cannot answer—what he could have done more. He waits on his throne of grace to be gracious to them, but they come not near to him. He even calls to them to come to him, using too the language of most affectionate address, "Son, my son;" but they respond not, "Abba, Father. It is strange they should treat no other father so. What child does not, in the morning, salute his father; and what father does not expect the salutation of each child, as they come into his presence? Oh, yes, we love our father who is on earth; and we remember with gratitude the favors he does us. And does the Father of our spirits, the giver of every good gift, deserve no daily notice from us, no affectionate salutation, no grateful recognition of indebtedness to him? I am certain he expects it, for he says, "A son honoreth his father; if then I be a Father, where is mine honor?" He claims to be a Father; and O, how well he has established that claim. Truly, he is a Father, and "like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth" his. And to the compassion of the father he adds the tender care and untiring mindfulness of the mother. "Can a woman," he asks, "forget her sucking child?" She may, he says, but he will not. How strange it is, that men will not go to the closet to meet and to pray to such a Father.

Surely, it is not for want of encouragement. If they have it not in his very nature, yet in his invitations, his promises, and his past acts of unsolicited kindness, they have all they could desire. Nor is it that they have no need of God. Never one of the prayerless will say that. They all know what would become of them but for that overlooking eye, and that supplying hand, and that supporting arm. And do they not know that God has a heart too—that he can love with all the fervor of a friend? And can they not imagine that in the interchange of affection between God and the soul of man, there may, and indeed must be, ineffable delight? And who that looks but a little way forward, does not perceive an exigency when, in the utter inadequacy of earthly and human resources for comfort, he will want "the consolations of God?"

Ah, it is a sad as well as strange thing, that so many enter no closet—seek daily no retirement, either in their houses or elsewhere, where they may be a little while alone with God; where they may look up, and meet the light of his countenance as he looks down on them; where they may confess their sins, and receive assurance of his pardoning love; where they may thank him for mercies past, and humbly ask for more; where they may take counsel of him, tell him of their griefs, and have their tears wiped away, and with him leave the weighty burden of their cares.

I know not whether this excites more my grief or my wonder. I am not so much surprised that men should neglect a manifest duty; but when I think what a privilege it is, what a happiness, what an honor, to be on terms of intimacy, and in habits of intercourse with God, it amazes me that they should forego it. How will such reflect upon themselves hereafter—how execrate their folly. How will they wonder that they could have deliberately done their souls such a wrong. Then it will be too late to redress the wrong. They sought not the Lord while he might be found, they called not upon him while he was near. Yea, though he called, they refused. Now they may call, but he will not answer. If any one who is living in the neglect of secret prayer shall read this, will he not be persuaded to commence the practice the very day he reads it, aye, that same hour, if it be possible? If it be not convenient, let him make it convenient. Let other things give way for this, rather than this for any thing. Can he think his heart right in the sight of God, or his condition safe in the propect of eternity, while he neglectsprayer? How dare he live without prayer? Without it, can he have courage to die? At the mercy-seat of God, we may decline to appear; but before his judgment-seat we must all stand. How a frequent access to the first would prepare us for final arraignment at the other. How it would familiarize us with the presence of God. How it would serve to break the shock of the entrance into eternity.

Does any one who is not in the habitual and daily practice of secret devotion, pretend to be a Christian? It is but pretence. He may believe the creed of the Christian, be certainly he does not pursue the practice, nor possess the spirit of the Christian. Breathing is essential to living, and prayer is the Christian's vital breath. Does he walk with God who never converses with him?

Some spiritualize the direction of Christ, making the closet to mean the heart, and the duty of private devotion to be discharged in mere mental prayer. But Christ did not so trifle. His closet was not his heart: he could not have meant that ours should be. He selected the still morning, and sought out the solitary place for prayer. May we be less attentive to the circumstances of time and place? Shall we talk about entering into ourselves, and there thinking prayer? Jesus, even in his most retired intercourse with his Father, used his voice. That prayer, "Let this cup pass from me," was vocal; and that petition, "God be merciful to me a sinner," was expressed in words. Shall we reserve the voice exclusively for our intercourse with men, and not with it also supplicate and bless God?—W. N.

RICKETY CHRISTIANS

Philip Henry, the commentator, says: "He who hears sermons and doth not do them is a monster in religion. He is all head and ears, hav-neither hands to work with nor feet to walk with. There is a disease to which children are subject, called the rickets, wherein their heads swell as large as two heads, and their legs are crooked, which hinders their going. We have many rickety Christians; they hear much, and their heads swell with empty notions and undigested opinions, but their legs are crooked, their walking is perverse. Every such person is a mocker of God, a deceiver of himself, a discourager of ministers, a barren soil, a bad servant, a beholder of his natural face in a glass, a builder of his house upon the sand.—Sel.

A blessing beyond wealth, beyond beauty, or even beyond talent, is that cheerful temperament which can rejoice in the sunshine yet be merry in the shade—which can delight in the singing of the birds in spring yet solace itself with the heart's own music when winter is at hand.

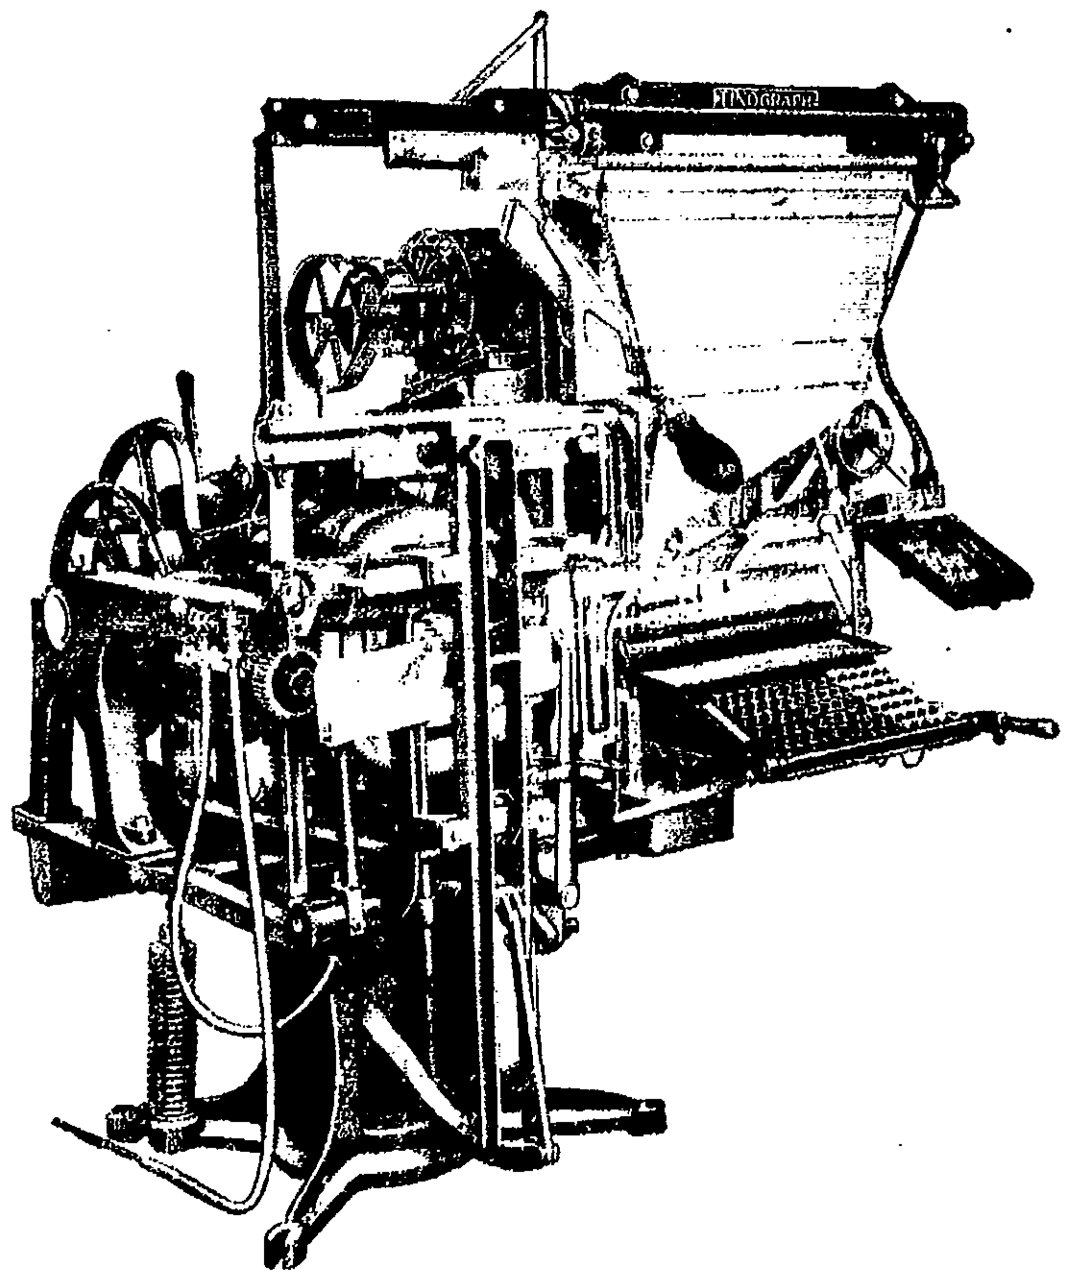
THE LINOGRAPH

Chas. A. Goss, Manager

By the courtesy of The Linograph Company, of Davenport, Iowa, we are permitted to present our readers this week with a picture of the linograph. There are numerous "linotypes," or typesetting machines on the market, but only one "Linograph," and it is the particular machine we are planning to purchase for The Restitution.



From the letters already received we are confident that the brethren, and sisters too, are with us heartily in the effort we are making toward putting the paper on a better basis for continuing its good work for the cause of the truth. Especially have the generous responses to the call for financial help in this great undertaking encouraged us, and while the work has hardly got well under way as yet, the tone of every letter is so optimistic—so confident and hopeful of the result that we are beginning to look upon the matter as an accomplished fact, rather than as a problem. However, to make our confidence a reality, will need something more tangible than optimism. The best and most positive assurance that our plans will shortly materialize would be to have the total amount required actually paid in and on deposit in the bank.

This is not absolutely necessary, however, to the success of the undertaking, as we can take time to pay off the balance after paying down enough to make the manufacturers reasonably secure for the balance, but would have to pay interest upon the unpaid amount.

To save the interest expense, we suggest that all who are able to do so make their contributions in cash now. To those who cannot give a cash donation now, we suggest that they register a pledge with the "Treasurer of Linograph Fund" for a certain sum, to be given in monthly or quarterly payments for one year from date. A very small sum from each lover of the truth who reads the paper would assure the carrying out of our plans.

Do it now is our motto, and we will have that linograph working and you will be sharing in the benefits of a better paper than ever we have been able to furnish before for reason of the numerous handicaps under which we have had to do the work. Brethren, if we are willing to do the work, are you not willing to furnish the money?

We hand folk over to God's mercy, and show none ourselves.—George Eliot.

Of all the dark traits that disfigure the human race that of wishing to belittle or degrade the character of another is the lowest.

ANOTHER KIND OF PREPAREDNESS

Editor The Sun:

Now that the people of Springfield have seen in pictured form something of the horrors of war, and the necessity of preparedness from the invasion of a foreign foe, how is it about being prepared for the second coming of the Lord?

Who is the prophetic "Prince of Peace" (Isa. 9:6)? And who, in the days of his ministry, gave latter day warnings by referring to the days of Noah—that it would bet now as then, i.e., unbelieving lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. (Mat. 24: 37, 38, 39).

In those days Noah warned the people of the impending deluge 120 years, and yet, but—"eight souls were saved," by being "shut in by the Lord," i.e. in the Ark of Safety. "Where unto the like figure doth now save us" (1 Pet. 3:20, 21), viz., water baptism "for the remission of sin" and thus "in the life giver" (Acts 2:38; Rom. 6:3, 4).

"The Lord is coming stealthy, as a snare to all who are not looking for him" (Luke 21:34, 35, 36). Therefore Peter says in Acts 3:19, 20, 21: "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heaven must receive until the time of the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Now in these latter days (Joel 3:9, 10, 11), is being fulfilled in the war of nations. Now hear Daniel the prophet, in Dan. 2:44: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, (not the church), which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people; but it shall break in places and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever. And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most high, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him" (Dan. 7:27). "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom to order it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform this" (Isa. 9:7).

The Lord himself said to "Watch any pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man" (Luke 21:36).

The preparedness of our now peaceful nation is all right, for she will be drawn into the vortex according to prophecy—and, with England, as brothers, in the taking of Palestine. And from Jerusalem, capital city of the kingdom, the law shall go forth from Mount Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem (Isa. 2:3). Listen: "For it shall come to pass in the last days that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the tops of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow into it." "And he (the Lord) shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into prunning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more" Isa. 2:4). "Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour, as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh" (Matt. 24:44).

Solemn warning—who is prepared? Abraham believed in the Lord, and he counted it to him for righteousness. (Gen. 15:6; Rom. 4:20). Please read Jer. 31:37, to 35th verse; Isa. 35.

A Watching Believer,
MATILDA WOODBURY.

BEWARE!

"Beware of evil workers" (Phil. 3:2). Who are evil workers? False Apostles, deceitful workers (2 Cor. 11:13). There are many unruly and vain talkers (Titus 1:10). There be some that pervert the gospel of Christ (Gal. 1:7). We are not as many which corrupt the word (2 Cor. 2:17). With feigned words make merchandise of you (2 Pet. 2:13). Certain went out from us and troubled you (Acts 15:24). Because of false brethren unawares brought in (Gal. 2:4). By good words and fair speeches they deceive the simple (Rom. 16:18). I know thy works, and thy labor, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them which are evil: and thou hast tried them which say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars; and hast borne, and hast patience, and for my name's sake hast labored, and hast not fainted (Rev. 2:2, 3). He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment: and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels.

Then depart from evil, and do good and the God of heaven will reward you with eternal life.

E. W. KNAPP.

NORTH-WEST CONFERENCE

Dear Brothers and Sisters: The North-West Conference of the Church of God will be held at Corwallis, Oregon, June 15th, this year.

When we know what is going on in this old world, it often brings to my mind what Paul said in 1 Cor. 15:51-56: "Behold I shew you a mystery (what a glorious mistery): we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed; in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible; and we shall be changed. (Grand thought.) For this corruptable must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."

Oh what a glorious time that will be for those that are accounted worthy when death is swallowed up in victory, and they are made equal to the angels, neither can they die any more, and may have the pleasure with Christ of blessing the nations of earth, as was promised to Abraham: "In thee and thy seed shall all the families be blessed" (Gen. 12:3; 18:18).

So let us meet and study and be prepared, for the time seems near.

H. B. HATHAWAY, Secretary.

Grief and pain come to all, and can not be escaped by any; broken hearts are to be found in palaces as well as in cottages, and the bond of brotherhood seems strongest when love and pity unite all hearts and reverence for what is good lifts up our souls.

EDITORIAL

We have lost by removal to Buffalo, N. Y., Bro. and Sister Jas. Thompson. We commend them to the brethren in Buffalo as a brother and sister sound in the faith and obedient to the commands of the gospel.

May 20th Sister Hazel Hettinger and Bro. Fred Blyth, two of our highly esteemed young people, took upon themselves the mutual vows of holy matrimony. The wedding ceremonies were solemnized in the church, and were attended by a large number of brethren, sisters and friends. Our prayers go with Bro. and Sister Blyth in their new relationship of life. May they finally be found among the bridal party at the marriage of the Lamb.

Wednesday evening, May 17th, Mr. and Mrs. J. Finlayson, formerly Presbyterians, were baptized into Christ. Bro. Watt introduced the truth to their attention several months ago. Bro. and Sister Finlayson were both apt students, and made a very inteligent confession of the faith prior to their baptism. We wish our new brother and sister every blessing as they bear the cross of Christ.

LUTHER'S CITADEL

In addressing Charles V. and the great princes of the German Empire at Worms in 1521 Luther said: "Since, great Caesar and illustrious princes, you require a specific answer, this is my decision: Unless I am convinced by proof from the sacred writings or evident reason, I can not recall anything that I have written or taught, for I can not do anything that would wound my conscience. On the other hand, I have no faith in the Roman Pontiff and mere councils, and do not regard them as of authority, for they have frequently erred and contradicted themselves in their decrees, and are liable to misjudge and be deceived." Strange that anyone should ever have doubted so obvious a liability. Luther was right to yield only to testimony and reason. These were the citadel of his strength, as they are ours. They were the apostolic weapons, as it is written: "Paul, as his manner was, went into the synagogue to the Jews, and reasoned with them out of the scripture, opening and alleging." Human authority, lay or clerical, is not to be regarded as an inquiry after truth. If all who profess to admire Luther would work by the rule he adopted it would be more creditable to their understandings and more profitable to their hearers than the present mar-text expositions by which they stultify themselves.—Herald of the King and Age to Come.

THE PROGRESS AND CLIMAX OF SIN

Psa. 1:1

"Blessed (ashre, happy) is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful" (Psa. 1:1). The "counsel," "way" and "seat," with their corresponding verbs, indicate the way of evil, the gradations of sin. Sin is usually slow in its progress, but like the gentle zephyr; as time goes on it increases in strength and velocity until a dangerous and destructive cyclone marks its climax. The sluggard only says and only means "A little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep" (Prov. 6:10). But this "little folding of the hands to sleep" is protracted until the "little" becomes great. Poverty "as an armed (strong) man" (verse 11) developed from this "little slumber." Sin is the most deceitful thing in the world (Heb. 3:13). Beginning with "little" offenses in which there are "pleasures" (11:25), sin, "as an armed man," carries its victims rapidly along the "way of transgressors" (Prov. 13:15) until it lands them in irretrievable ruin and endless destruction (Matt. 25:46; 2 Thess. 1:9). Therefore in this Psalm, in giving us the program of sin, David, by select, choice expression, gracefully ascends from the beginning of sin to its consummation; from its incipient, "little," trivial offense to its unblushing impiety. The progress and climax of sin is described by him, first by three degrees of habit, in the verbs "walketh," "standeth," and "sitteth;" secondly, by three degrees in the character, the "wicked," "sinner," and "scornful;" thirdly, by three degrees of wicked action, "counsel," "way" and "seat." The man who walks in sin is an evildoer; when he stand with sinners he becomes a degree worse. When he walked in sin he acted on the principles of unrighteousness; but when he "standeth in the way of sinners" he became more closely identified with them—cultivated their society. After walking and standing a while witn sinners he goes farther toward the bad—"he sitteth in the seat of the scornful." He now permanently conforms to the conduct of the wicked. He was first a "wicked" man, then transgressing the law (1 John 3:4) he became a sinner (1 Peter 4:18); and then, getting worse still, he became "scornful"—the worst kind of a sinner, full of unnameable impieties (Psa. 26:3, 5; Jer. 15:17; 2 Pet. 3:3, 4). He first walked, then stood, and finally sat with a homelike feeling and spirit of perfect contentment, with the unrighteous. Beware of sin, dear brother, beware!

THE GREAT TRIBULATION "SHORTENED"

Does Matt xxiv: 21 refer to the destruction of Jerusalem; if so, what does Daniel mean in Dan. xii: 1?—Mrs. Flora A. Wood.

Editor's Reply

"There shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be." The calamities and miseries which befell the Jews are without a parallel in history. Their unparalleled sin was recompensed with an unparalleled punishment. Our Lord wept at the foresight of their calamities (Matt xxiii: 36, 37, 38). Emphatically "days of vengeance, that all things which were written might be fulfilled" (Lk. xxi: 22). Days in which all the calamities predicted by Moses, Joel, Daniel and other seers, as well as those foretold by Christ, met in one event, and was fulfilled in a most literal and terrible manner on that generation. The horrors of the time went back into history and collected the miseries of the past, and duplicated them; for the temple was burnt by the Romans on the same month and day of the month, on which it had been burned by the Babylonians (Josephus' War, book vi, 4).

But terrible as was God's judgments at this time, unparalleled in history, yet in view of Daniel xii:1 putting the coming of Christ and the resurrection at a time of trouble "such as never was," we are made to ask: If the epoch of resurrection is the greatest time of trouble, the "such as never was," how can the destruction of Jerusalem be so described? The answer is obvious when we notice the modification the Lord makes in Matt. xxiv: 21, 22. The great Jewish tribulation was unparalleled, but, adds the Master, "Those days shall be shortened!" Daniel's "time of tróuble" is unparalleled and unmodified, while our Savior's is unparalleled but localized, limited, and modified. Josephus computes the number who perished at the seige of Jerusalem at eleven hundred thousand (War, bk. 6, ch.9). If the Romans had gone on destroying in this way, the whole Israelitish nation would soon have perished. But for the sake of God's elect, the Jews, but more particularly the Christians, those awful days were "shortened." This merciful "shortening" gave opportunity for a remnant to afterwards be gathered out. "They shall fall by the edge of the sword, and I shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled" Lk. xxi: 24). What is the meaning of this statement? Well, it implies that a time is coming when Jerusalem shall cease to be "trodden down by the Gentiles;" which it was then by pagans, and since then by Mohammedans. Again, it implies that this treading down of Jerusalem is to cease when the "times of the Gentiles are fulfilled." The meaning of this appears from Rom. xi chapter. In the 25th verse the statement of our Lord in Lk. xxi:24 is reproduced. The "fulness of the Gentiles be come in," and the "times of the Gentiles be fulfilled," does not mean, as generally understood, "till the Gentiles are all converted;" but, "till the Gentiles have had their full time of that place in the Church which the Jews had before them." After that period of Gentilism, as before of Judiasm. Jerusalem and her people, no longer "trodden down by the Gentiles," but "grafted into their own live tree," shall constitute, with the believing Gentiles, one united people in the Kingdom of God. This blessed result is made possible by the shortening of the days of Jewish vengeance.

COMMUNICATIONS

From Sister H. E. Russell

Dear Sister Wince:

"I am enclosing ten dollars to add to your linotype fund. Hope you will be very successful.

Yours fraternally.

From Brother B. J. Woods

Dear Sister Wince: I see in The Restitution that there is a move on foot to install a linotype machine for the use of The Restitution. Enclose find five dollars for this cause. The Restitution has been a weekly visitor in my home for twenty-five years. My children have grown up under its instruction, and five out of the six have become obedient. I feel in debt to the good paper for its help. We must not let the paper stop on account of a few subscribers falling off. My mite is little, so is my income; but if it is necessary, call again, and I will try to send you a little more.

Looking for the return of the King.

From Sister Laura Skeels

The church at Brumfield, Ky., have had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of Brother and Sister Robison, of Salem, Ohio, as they stopped off with us, as they were on their homeward journey from spending the winter in the South. We had a pleasant time together; good meetings, well attended, considering the busy season. Meetings continued over two Sundays. May the Lord keep them strong in faith and health, that they, with, us, may meet the Lord with joy at his coming.

We are so thankful that Brother Huggins has the strength and courage to keep The Restitution up to the high standard in these perilous times. I hope Brother Donaldson will reconsider what he has written, and think of the seriousness of a brother in Christ giving a moment of his time, or a fragment of his influence, in defence of Sodomitish amusements. Brothers and sisters, let us be watchful and faithful, for we know we are nearing the time of the end of temporal things, and the ushering in of the eternal. May we be ready.

Your sister in hope.

From Brother J. F. Wagoner

R. S. Wince—Dear Sister in Christ: Let me congratulate you upon being set apart to fill a most important position. Please accept enclosed order to assist in God's work, and may each one who has entered God's service realize that "we are workers together with him." The most humble child of God should rejoice to be counted worthy of the honor of assisting in accomplishing the "Eternal Purpose of God." May his blessings attend you in this noble endeavor. Let our "Battle Cry" be "Jesus is Coming!" Let us work as the golden moments fly. Now I need only say let that "ready pen" of yours have full swing; cry out earnestly, and spare not. It takes hard blows to hammer hard iron! Wanted to write a long letter, but am not able until I am stronger. Hope to be able to do some work for Jesus, if health will permit. Shall write again when health is improved. As ever in the Blessed Hope.

From Sister Emily Tilton

Dear Restitution: I have been reading Brother Donaldson's views on dancing. He says that he was shocked at the crudeness of an editorial on this subject. Well, I am shocked at his article. If God's people are going to take part in all of the world's amusements, how are we to know them from the world? We have to deny ourselves the pleasures of this world. James tells us what pure and undefied religion is. I tell you we must work as well as have faith, for James says in Chapter 2 that faith with out works is dead. The time has come when we have too many pleasure seekers. We hear it every day from some worldly one, "I am just as good as Mrs. and Mr. So and So, for they attend all the worldly amusements. I think we as God's chosen ones, have to set a godly example.

From a sister who is waiting for the Master.

From Sister C. Campbell

Dear Editor, and Brothers and Sisters in Christ: I am in sore need. I will write, although it is hard for me to write. I am an old women 66 years old. I and my two sons desire to be baptized, but are isolated from all of like precious faith. There is plenty of water, but who will baptize us? If you see fit to print this, some one of God's ministers may see fit to come to us. We are poor people, but will do what we can to pay expense. I also enclose a letter from one of my sons who is a member of the Dunkard Church, asking for light on the mode of baptism. I also enclose one dollar and a half. Please send The Restitution to this same son for six months. Use the rest for the cause. It is but a mite, but will help a little. The Restitution must stand till Jesus comes. I hope to send more to help soon. This is from your sister in Christ, who desires to follow Jesus.

(We cannot pass by in silence such a heart-rending appeal as this. Dear Sister Campbell, write to Bro. Almus Adams, 3914 Hartman Ave., Ames Station, Omaho, Nebr., and we believe he will be sent to you by the Nebraska State Conference, if means cannot be obtained in any other way. Write to him to-day.—Editor.)

THE RESTITUTION LINOTYPE MACHINE

By S. Roxana Wince

No need to pray, no need to work, unles we pray and work in faith. Great things are wrought by prayer, not by a made prayer, coming only from the lips, but by such petitions as Elijah and Daniel, sent up to God.

Do we really want that linograph machine, that God may be glorified thereby? It is a real need, and we know that God has promised to supply all our need. Why not go in faith to him, believing that we shall get that for which we ask? He is able to grant our request; he can prosper us in our efforts.

He surely does not want The Restitution to die. It has witnessed so many years for his truth. It has been such, O such a comfort to his lonely children! It has won so many sinners to the way of life and peace.

Steadily is he answering our prayers for our dear paper in the loyal gifts that are being poured into its treasure box. Surely the light of his countenance is shining upon us, and is he not in this way, commanding us to go forward?

Red seas count for nothing, when the pillar of cloud and fire beckon.

"Ye that fear the Lord, trust in the Lord.
He is their help and their shield."

A man came to a hotel-keeper and asked him if he would buy two carloads of frog legs. "Two carloads!" exclaimed the astonished landlord. "Why, I couldn't use them in twenty years." "Well, will you buy a half-carload?" "No." "Twenty or thirty dozen?" "No." "Two dozen?" "Yes." A few days later the man returned with three pairs of legs. "Is that all?" said the landlord. "Yes." "The fact is, I live near a pond, and the frogs made so much noise that I thought there were millions of them; but I dragged and raked the pond, and there were only three frogs in the whole thing." Do not be alarmed at the noise of the Philistines. The future of God's kingdom is secure.

BEREAN COLUMN NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

Edited by Leota B. Hanson, 3401 Magnolia Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

"I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek" (Rom. 1:16).

Christ said: "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels" (Mar. 8:38). "Also I say unto you, whosoever confess me before men, him shall the Son of Man also confess before the angels of God" (Lu. 12:8).

Let us strive to send abroad the message of the gospel of Christ with tongue and pen, for we are told: "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid" (Matt. 5:14). "Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Vss. 15, 16).

"That ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world; holding forth the word of life; that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither labored in vain" (Phil. 2:15, 16).

May we be able to say, as did Paul of old: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing" (2 Tim. 4:7, 8).

ANNA M. WERTZ.

THE NECESSITY AND GLORY OF THE RESURRECTION

"When David fell asleep this side the borderland, he awoke on the other with changed vision and fuller opportunities of service." Such is a remark I heard recently, but the thought seems to me to do away with the necessity and the glory of the resurrection of the dead. When Lazarus died, or slept, as our Master termed it, Jesus did not say he was awake on the other side, but "I go that I may awake him out of sleep." When the Lord reached the graveside, he did not say, "Lazarus, come down," but "Come forth," and he that was dead came forth (John 11). Then, so far as David is concerned, Peter in his wonderful Pentecostal sermon did not say David was awake on the other side, but "David is not ascended into the heavens;" but he saith himself, "The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand until I make thy foes thy footstool" (Acts 2:34, 35). Praise God, that day will come. Jesus himself said: "No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of God" (Jno. 3:13).

When Jesus fell asleep, he did not ascend, but descended into the grave; and when Mary would have touched him after his resurrection, he said, "Touch me not, for I have not yet ascended" (Jno. 20:17). Paul (1 Cor. 15:17, 18) says: "And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."

Do not the Scriptures of truth all through teach that the disciples who have fallen on sleep shall awake when the Lord comes again? That inasmuch as it was necessary for the Lord to go to awaken Lazarus from his sleep, so it will be necessary for him to come again to awaken all the sleeping dead. In Job (14:10-15) we read: "But man dieth and wasteth away: yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he? So man lieth down, and riseth not till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep. If a man die, shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come. Thou shalt call and I will answer thee." The same writer says (19:25, 26): "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Writing of man, the Psalmist says: "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to the earth, in that very day his thoughts perish." And the Lord tells us that "The hour is coming in the which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice."

Since seeing these truths, my whole hope has been centred on the return of our blessed Lord, who will destroy the great enemy, "death." All the way through God's word, death is called an enemy, not a friend. Praise God, the day will come when death shall be no more.—Selected by REGINA BOYER.

THE WISE MAN ON PRIDE

The wise man King Solomon says: "Pride goeth before destruction and an haughty spirit before a fall. "Better it is to be an humble spirit with the lowly than to divide the spoil with the proud." Many people sought King Solomon for advice owing to his great wisdom. How fitting then that we should profit by his great sayings.

We read of a great many in the Holy Scriptures who in pride and haughtiness of spirit were brought low. We find in the 2 Chron. 26 that Uzziah prospered and his fame as a strong man was known far and wide, but pride led him astray. He transgressed against the Lord by going into the temple to burn incense upon the altar. Uzziah was striken a leper for this sin. This sacred duty was only to be performed by Aaron and his sons.

In the second chapter of First John we read: "For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever."

THE CLEVELAND YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN

Not long since our knowledge was brought to a test in a novel way by Sister Mary Knowles, our leader for the evening. Each one was given a piece of paper and a pencil. Upon the paper were written the numbers one to fifteen. About the rooms were hung verses of four lines descriptive of some Bible character. We were expected to go around and read the verses, then decide to whom they referred, and write our inference on the paper. Each verse had a number, so at the end, fifteen answers were written equivalent to the same number of verses on the walls.

Here are three examples with their respective answers;

The "Gospel Prophet" cried aloud,
"You'll die unless you turn;
This nation shall to bondage go,
But a remnant shall return."

The prophet meant is Isaiah.

First of a line of mighty kings
Who ruled fair Canaan's land,
He disobeyed and met defeat,
Then died by his own hand.

Answer: Saul.

He was a prince of Judah's line,
A king he longed to be;
But death came to him while he hung,
His head caught in a tree.

Answer: Absalom.

It was a half hour well spent; and although we had different answers, our leader made it clear just why her answer was the best. There followed a fifteen minute quiz of Bible facts, which were rousing, and led to study right there.

Along with the knowledge of how much we do not know, has come the satisfaction of how much we do remember. The after-study and questionings have revealed this to our young people, and we trust will be an added inducement to go on in scriptural research.

HEROISM

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it" (Prov. 22:6). What is a hero? A man, or boy, of distinguished bravery; any illustrious person. It is a great desire among boys to do something grand and brave, and so become a hero, for all boys despise a coward, one that is faint-hearted, lacks courage when danger is near. Now, boys, there is many opportunities for you to become a hero. How? Tell us! Well, your parents and your teacher are trying to teach you how to live a good, moral life, to be temperate, not use bad anguage, nor use tobacco in any form, neither drink anything that will make you drunk.

You have promised them you never will. You in your school days come in contact with bad boys, those who do not mind their parents and call their father "the old man." They generally have a pack of cards in their pockets, and plenty of tobacco and cigarette papers, and sometimes a bottle of beer. They use very bad language. They coax you to one side where the teacher will not see you; they prepare for a smoke, and want you to smoke with them; they are very generous, they will furnish the smoking material and will prepare it for you, and expect to have some fun with you and laugh at you when the smoke makes you sick. But when they offer it to you you very properly refuse it. Then they will tease you to smoke and be a man! You still refuse; then they want to know why. You tell them of your promise to your mother. Then how they will laugh and call you mamma's little darling, almost an angel! And they will feel of your shoulders to see if your wings are sprouted yet when they find you will not yield. Then they resort to the last ordeal that always tries a boy the most severely: "I dare you to smoke, chew, drink or play cards," as the case may be. They say anyone that will take a dare is a coward. No boy wants to be a coward.

Now, right here is a grand chance for you to become a hero. Boys, let's look at this matter a little and see if taking a dare is cowardly. Mother knows best, and O how it would grieve her to find out that her boy had broken his promise to her just to please those wicked boys. No, you did not yield to them, and you are a hero worthy of a Carnegie medal. O how proud mother is of you! We think more boys go wrong through a dare than in any other way. If you had yielded and taken the smoke, and let them had their laugh when you became sick, you would have pleased those bad boys and would have been a true coward, and O how you would dread to meet mother! But when you endured their jeers and cries of coward! coward! you became a hero, and went home happy. And those very boys that tempted you, when they grow to manhood's estate, and view their own degraded condition, and see your fine moral life, will honor you and call you a hero for not yielding to their silly enticements. Boys, learn to say No.

Yours for the boys that are heroes,

E. W. KNAPP.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58): the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17) and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13: 3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:28), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31). THE TRUE NATURE OF BAPTISM

Triune Immersion Considered Ecclesiastically and Scripturally

There are those who contend that the baptism established by the apostles consisted of three immersions—one each for the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit; and that all who are not so baptised in three immersions, are without Christ and have no hope.

Their first argument is founded on the word "baptize." They contend that ending in zo. baptize is necessarily a "frequentative verb," that is, a verb expressing a performance that cannot be executed without repeated action, as when we say a man "swims," or "rows a boat," which cannot be done without repeated movement of the arms. They say baptize means repeated dippings, and that a man who is only dipped once is not baptized. In support of this there is a considerable quotation of learned authorities.

But discrimination is needful. Lexicographers merely collect and arrange words as they find them used. If they find "baptism" used among ecclesiastics in a frequentative sense, they could do no less than testify to the use of the word as a frequentative verb; but who made it by usage a frequentative verb? This is the question. Investigation will show it originated in that corruption of the ordinances of God, which began in the very lives of the apostles, by those deceitful workers and false apostles, whose word Paul foretold would eat as doth a canker.

There is evidence of the foolishness of the "frequentative theory in the very arguments employed to uphold it. The contention is that bapto means to dip once, and baptize to dip several times. In proof of this, Hippocrates is quoted, the ancient physician, who in a prescription says: "Having dipped (bapto) it into the oil of roses, let it be applied during the day; but if it should be too painful, baptize it again." The comment on this is: "Hippocrates in speaking of one dip used the word bapto, but if this is to be repeated, then dropping the word bapto, he employs the word baptizo." This is a pure gloss. Hippocrates uses bapto for one dip and baptizo for one dip—the one word being a mere variation of the other. As one of the quoted authorities states, "bapto and baptizo agree in one common original meaning, viz., that of immersion or plunging." The distinction between them is not the number, but the nature of the dipping signified. Bapto is to dip simply, while baptize is to dip with the object of producing a result, as in dyeing. But even this distinction is more one of conventional usage than of radical significance. Hippocrates in the very instance quoted, uses them synonymously. "Baptize it again," says he: this means, "Do again what you did before; you dipped it once: dip it once again." Baptize applies to the second dip, but the second dip is only one dip, so that Hippocrates proves baptize to mean one dip though quoted to prove that it means a plurality of dips.

The origin of the frequentative notion is visible in the quotation of Professor Stuart to the following effect: "It would appear that a feeling existed among some of the Latin fathers, when they rendered baptizo (Greek) by mergito (Latin), that baptizo is in its appropriate sense what the grammarians and lexicographers call a frequentative verb: i.e., one which denotes repetition of the action which it indicates. Nor are they alone in this; some of the best Greek scholars of the present or past age have expressed the same opinion in a more definite shape." "Some" of the Latin fathers—why not all? Some of the Latin fathers were on the other side of the question. They did not share the "feeling" that the verb was frequentative. So far as argument goes, one set of Latin "fathers" is as weighty in the scale as another. The Latin fathers who had "a feeling" that baptizo was "frequentative" had a very good reason. They practised trine immersion—of the Scripturalness of which we shall presently enquire; and as in their practice, baptism was unquestionably a frequentative act, no wonder they should "feel" that it ought, contrary to the usual views of the case, to be classed as a frequentative verb. Of the nature of baptism, the Scriptures must be the witness, and not the writings of men, however reputedly "learned," who lived in and perpetuated the long age of apostasy and corruption which set in while the apostles were alive, and soon shrouded the world in night.

Let us try this "frequentative" notion by the Scriptures. Jesus said to his disciples just before he left them, "Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit not many days hence" (Acts 1:5). The promise was fulfilled ten days afterwards. The Spirit came on the day of Pentecost and "filled all the house where they were sitting" (Acts 2:2), "and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit" (verse 4). Did the Spirit descend three or any other number of times? Was it not a single effusion in great plenteousness?

Jesus, alluding to his approaching death, said, "I have a baptism to be baptized with, and how am I straightened till it be accomplished?" (Luke 12: 50). Did Jesus go through three or four deaths? Is it not so that he "died unto sin once?" (Rom. 6:10).

Paul, alluding to the passage of Israel through the Red Sea, and under the cloud (by both of which they were concealed from view), says they were thus "all baptized unto Moses" (1 Cor. 10:2). Did Israel go several times through the sea and several times under the cloud, as the fictitious "frequentative" notion requires?

These illustrations are sufficient. Thurman himself affords several. He admits that John's baptism was not trine immersion. He says the triple formula was "never used in baptizing Jews"—his explanation being that they were already in the Father, and needed not to be baptized in the Name of the Father. The Jews, he argues, had only to be baptized into Christ's death. He dates trine-immersion from the commission of Matt. 28:19, and says it was intended alone for the Gentile nations, who were entirely outside. Without discussing the value of this explanation, the important point to notice is that the "frequentative" notion is upset by its advocates; for if John could "baptize" by a single act of immersion, obviously baptize is not a frequentative verb, but has become so only by ecclesiastical corruption.

The Use Of Three Names

But it is said "Christ has certainly enjoined the use of three names; which, no man can account for but upon the supposition that he meant three actions." This is inconsistent with the facts. Anyone comprehending the truth as it is in Jesus can account for the use of three names, without the assumption of trine-immersion. In Christ, we have the three names in focal combination. He is the Father manifested in the Son by the Holy Spirit. Consequently, in being baptized into him we are at the same time baptized into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit. They are all three presented to us in person—Jesus, who by the Holy Spirit, is the Mystery of Godliness. This is the one name given under heaven for the salvation of men. Peter declares there is none other. It is not three names, but one name made up of three. The three are exhibited in the baptismal formula in order that the one may be understood. By this formula, the great truth is always kept in view that Jesus is not the Savior by his own personal power, but by the power and grace of the Father in him through the Spirit. To dip three times is to hide this unity; and it is to assert that the Son can save by himself, and the Spirit by itself, and the Father by himself. In the wisdom of God, it required the three in combination before a name could be provided for our salvation, and that is, the name of Jesus, to which every knee shall bow and every tongue confess. Here is the Mystery of Godliness, which those do not comprehend who contend for a Trinitarian baptism. Here is a complete explanation of baptism in the three names being used interchangeably in the New Testament with baptism into Christ. And here is an end of the difficulty which compels trine-immersionists to teach one baptism for Jews and another for Gentiles, in opposition to Paul's declaration that there is but one baptism.

Trine-Immersion In History

The great argument upon which trine-immersionists rely, is the ecclesiastical one. They say, "Trine immersion has been used from the earliest ages. It was used by those who lived so near the apostolic age, that they must have known whether it was apostolic or not." The monk Chrysostom, afterwards Bishop of Constantinople, who lived in the fourth century, is quoted to the following effect: "Christ delivered to his disciples one baptism, in three immersions, when he said 'Go teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit.'" Jerome is quoted: "We are thrice dipped in the water." Also Tertullian, who flourished in the third century: "We are thrice immersed as the Lord commanded in the gospel." Then the Council of Carthage (A. D. 256 is quoted: 'The true doctrine of the Holy Mother, the Catholic Church, hath always been with us, and especially in the article of baptism and trine-immersion wherewith it is celebrated." Clement of Alexandria (2nd century) is quoted: "Ye were conduced to a bath just as Christ was carried to the grave, and were thrice immersed to signify the three days of his burial." In A. D. 185, trine-immersion was in vogue. How are we to account for this, ask the trine-immersionists, if it was not apostolic? They go further and declare that for the first five hundred years, trine-immersion was "the one universal custom of all the world, without a single exception." Mr. Thurman says: "I have not yet met with a single author who, writing before the eighteenth century, was of a different opinion' than that "trine-immersion was the most ancient manner." He says still more pointedly, "The new mode of single immersion, which was cradled in the ignorance of the Baptists in A. D. 1522 is not yet 350 years old." He further says "the Baptists' new mode of immersion" was "invented by Thomas Munzer, in March, 1522, not as the original institution of Christ, but only to avoid the necessity of having anything in common with the Catholic Church." He declares it was "unknown on earth before the year 1522." If these assertions are correct trine-immersion has, doubtless, a serious claim at our hands. Are they correct? Let us see.

The Apostolic Age

Did apostolic faith and practice continue unchanged till A. D. 185? The New Testament will afford an answer. Thurman accepts the testimony of Irenaeus that "the churches dispersed throughout the whole world, even to the ends of the earth, have received from the apostles and their disciples, one and the same faith, which has been preserved in the Church from the apostles even till now." But this is in conflict with the testimony of the apostles themselves. So early as A. D. 60—one hundred and twenty-four years before Irenaeus wrote—Paul said there was a set of men among the brethren who were jealously seeking occasion to obstruct the truth in his hands, whom he styles "false prophets, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ" (2 Cor. 11:12-13). In Timothy, he alludes (A. D. 66) to the success of these men among the brethren, saying, "This thou knowest, that all which are in Asia (the very "Churches of Asia" appealed to by Irenaeus for confirmation of his statements), be turned from me; of whom is Phygellus and Hermogenes" (2 Tim. 1:15). In the same strain, he addressed Timothy just before his execution by Nero: "They will increase unto more ungodliness, and their word will eat as doth a canker, of whom is Hymenaeus and Philetus, who concerning the truth have erred. . . . The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts, shall they heap to themselves teachers; having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned into fables" (2 Tim. 2:17; 4:3). Peter also told the brethren to whom he wrote that false teachers should spring up among them; and he adds, "And many shall follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of" (2 Pet. 2:2). Jude refers generally to these and other similar predictions of the apostles, saying: "Beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before, and of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ, how that they told you there should be mockers in the last time" (Jude, verse 17).

Here we have not only apostolic predictions of an early corruption in the community founded by the labours of the apostles in the first century, but actual testimony by the apostles themselves that the mischief had begun in their own lifetime, and had advanced to a considerable stage of success. Not only did Paul say that they would "turn aside to fables," but he testified "the mystery of iniquity doth ALREADY WORK" (2 Thess. 2:7) John, who wrote his Epistle thirty or forty years after Paul's decease, says: "Many false prophets (or teachers) are gone out into the world" (1 John 4:1). Where had they gone out from? John answers the question in 1 Epis., Chap. 2:9: "They went out from us." What was their characteristic with regard to popularity, as contrasted with the world's treatment of the apostolic "little flock" of the narrow way? John answers, "they are of the world; therefore speak they of the world and the word heareth them. We (adds John, meaning the apostles) are of God. He that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. Hereby know we the spirit of truth and the spirit of error" (1 Epis., 4:5-6). But not all even professedly in the narrow-way party submitted to the apostles; for we find John saying, in his third epistle: "I wrote unto the church; but Diotrephes, who loveth to have the pre-eminence among them, receiveth us not. Wherefore, if I come, I will remember his deeds which he doeth, prating against us with malicious words; and not content therewith, neither doth he himself receive the brethren, and forbiddeth them that would and casteth them out of the church" (verse 9).

Here is evidence that long before the close of the first century, the professing Christian community was in a state of seething corruption and antagonism to the apostles, through the ascendancy of ambitious men of a worldly education, who had learnt philosophy and rhetoric in the schools, and "Even now," says John (A. D. 90) "are there many anti-Christs, whereby we know it is the last time" (1 Epis., 2:18).

In view of these incontestable facts, it seems a mockery to assert that "the true apostolic order was continued in all the world, down at least to A. D. 185." It seems amazing that any man should urge such a conclusion on the strength of assertions made more than a century after the corruptions began. What should we expect from the leaders of the "Catholic Church" in the second, third, and fourth centuries, but the assertion that the faith and practice of their church were the veritable articles introduced by the apostles? Are we to take their assertion as evidence? "The simple believeth every word."

Baptism in the Second Century and After.

Was trine-immersion universal in A. D. 185? Even if it were, it would not be evidence that trine-immersion was apostolic baptism, in view of the ascendancy of men of carnal wisdom, who corrupted the world by their traditions, and assumed to have "authority" to decide all questions affecting the faith and practice of the church; and of whom it was predicted, that their traditions should prevail cankerously to the eating out of the truth. The institution of baptism has been the subject of as much perversion and alteration as any of the doctrines of the Gospel.

Robinson, in his "History of Baptism," proves this by many quotations. If this is the case—if there has been perversion and alteration of baptism, true light on the subject is not to be sought for in the practices of any church, but in apostolic teaching alone. If there has been interference and change, we are at liberty to choose that form which is in accordance with the Scriptures, even if it should have been confined to a contemptible and unheard-of few, in defiance of the "canons" and prescriptions of the successful, respectable and overwhelming majority, particularly when the apostolic predictions require that the truth should be found among a despised and oppressed minority. There is ecclesiastical evidence that trine-immersion was not universal from the beginning, and that single immersion was also practised. The following extracts from Robinson's "History of Baptism" furnish such evidences.

"Immersion, single or triune was the ordinary mode of baptizing in the Catholic Church from the beginning till the Reformation: and the Lutheran reformers continued it" (page 441).

"Baptism was universally performed by immersion' single or trine, for the first thirteen hundred years: from thence till after the Reformation, it was generally performed by trine-immersion. Pouring or sprinkling began to be allowed for baptism, only in the eighth century, in cases of necessity" (Page 132).

"In the reign of Charlemagne, the law of baptism was excessively severe. It was death for a man to refuse to be baptised. . . . Baptism was defined immersion, single or trine. Alwin, the Emperor's prime ecclesiastic, contended warmly for trine-immersion: but some bishops practised the Roman mode and dipped only once" (three ancient authorities are referred to by Robinson for this statement) (Page 426).

"The Spaniards, as a nation, used single immersion from the 6th century at least" (Page 435).

"The Greek Dissenters all baptized, and particularly the Eunomians, who denied the Trinity and rejected the baptism of trine-immersion of the Established Church, and administered baptism by single immersion either in the name of Christ, or in the death of Christ" (Page 49).—"The True Nature of Baptism," amended by the Editor.

FRIENDLY EXCHANGE OF THOUGHTS ON THE RESURRECTION AND JUDGMENT

Editor Restitution:

In your issue of May 9th, "Dr. John Thomas Believed in Immortal Resurrection." The quotation that you make from "Herald of the Kingdom," 1851, does not necessarily prove that he believed in immortal emergence at that time. But even if it did, the Doctor gave the subject close study, and afterwards wrote "Anastasis," which clearly sets forth his more mature convictions. The Greek word Anastasis, we are told, means standing again; that is, standing again in an erect posture after having fallen; and is not restricted to the act of rising up from a lying pose, but includes the attainment to the erect position.

If we were instructed, in order to cleanse the system, to drink a cup of hot water when rising in the morning, we would not understond that the water was to be swallowed during the act of rising up, but when we had gotten up and secured the hot water. So resurrection is not only the act of coming out of the grave, but the attainment to that which they are called forth. Jesus taught this when he said: "And shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation," even to the judgment that the Son has the authority to execute (John 5:27, 29). Jesus also explained to the Sadducees, "They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that age, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage" (Luke 20:35). Of course the thought of marrying was not that it occurred during the act of rising; but in the resurrection state.

When Paul wrote, "The dead shall be raised incorruptible," in view of the scripture already cited, we must understand him to refer to the incorruptible state to which the righteous would attain; for he farther says: "When this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory" (1 Cor. 15:52-54). It is after the inspection, decision and separation that the accepted ones are invited, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom" (2 Cor. 5:10; Matt. 25:31). "Enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." See judgment, and awards of the servants to whom were committed the talents (Matt. 25:14 to 30). Also those to whom were given the pounds (Luke 19:15). All these show personal judgment before the award is announced.

Yours desiring to know the truth.
S. T. BLESSING.
